DATE LABEL

7673

Call No._____ Date_____

Acc. No._____

K. UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

This book should be returned on or before the last date stamped above. An over-due charge of .06 P. will be levied for each day if the book is kept beyond that day.

DONATED

By

PANDIT SHAMBOO NATH DAR,

(1901 — 1969)

ADVOCATE,

and former President

SRINAGAR MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

Acc. No. _____ Call No. _____

DATE SLIP

"This book was issued from the Library on the date last stamped. A fine of 10 Paise will be charged for each day the book is kept over - due".

INDIAN CASES

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF DECISIONS

OF

The Privy Council, the High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, the Chief Courts of Lower Burma and the Punjab, the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of Central Provinces, Oudh, Sind and Upper Burma

REPORTED IN

The following 20 Legal Periodicals:

Allahabad (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal; Bombay (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Reporter; Burma (1) Law Times, (2) Lower Burma Rulings, (3) Upper Burma Rulings; Calcutta (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Weekly Notes; Madras (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Times, (4) Weekly Notes; Nagpur Law Reports; Oudh Cases; Punjab (1) Law Reporter, (2) Record, (3) Weekly Reporter; Sind Law Reporter

WITH

A large number of extra Rulings of High Courts not reported elsewhere.

VOLUME XVII, 1912.

EDITOR:

S. D. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL.B.,

PLEADER, CHIEF COURT, PUNJAB, LAHORE.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGER, AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," LAHORE.

Books Checked
CSV2002

UNIVERSITY LIB.
K. DIVISION
Acc No 75386
Date 15-12-1969

CONNECTED CONNECTED CONNECTED

the between the between the between

(B).—6 LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT RULINGS, 1912—concld.

Page of Vol. 6 L. B. R., 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912-13. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 6 L. B. R., 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1913. V.	P.
118	Ma Saw v. Ma Thit ...	18	187	152	Norman Henry Matheson v. Nath Singh Oil Co., Ltd. ...	18	481
119	Moosa Goolam Ariff v. Ebrahim Goolam Ariff ...	16	70	158	Min Dwe v. Shunmugam Chetty	18	510
123	Hing Nam Hip Kee v. Batavia Sea and Fire Insurance Co. ...	18	476	160	Po Lan v. King-Emperor ...	19	167
127	Nan Saw Shwe v. Maung Hpone .	18	658	164	Kan Gyi v. Ma Pyu ...	18	497
129	King-Emperor v. Channing Arnold	17	813	166	Kader Hoosein v. Mudaliar ...	18	505
142	Ismail Mamoon Dawoodji, In the matter of ...	16	87	167	Ma Yi v. Ma Gale ...	19	85
144	Maung Sein v. Ngwe Nu ...	19	2	170	Chockalingam Chetty v. Yaung Ni	18	524
146	Tin Ya v. Subya Pillay ...	18	500	172	Henderson v. King-Emperor ...	19	171
150	Rangoon Botatoung Co., Ltd. v. Collector, Rangoon ...	16	188	174	Ram Bullab Rhirkawala v. Babu Bickraj ...	19	88

Table 2

BURMA (UPPER) JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

1 UPPER BURMA RULINGS, FROM APRIL TO SEPTEMBER, 1912.

Page of Vol. 1 U. B. R., 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1913. V.	P.	Page of Vol. 1 U. B. R., 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1913. V.	P.
136	Abdul Rahman v. King-Emperor	18	669	148	King-Emperor v. Nga San Wein...	19	177
141	U Thondaya v. Nga Ni ...	18	568	149	Nga Po Tein v. King-Emperor ...	19	175
146	Nga Po Yin v. Mi Shan Nu ...	18	574

S. N. Das
Advocate High Court

S. N. DAR, B.A.C
SRINAGAR

(B).—47 PUNJAB RECORD, FOR DECEMBER, 1912.

No. of Vol. 47 P. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912-13. V.	P.
	Civil.
114	Lachhman Das v. Dyal Das ...	14	558
115	Dhan Singh v. Kahn Singh ...	15	140
116	Ralla v. Manglan ...	15	559
117	Haria v. Basant Kaur ...	16	491
118	Ganga Ram v. Dina Nath ...	18	528
119	Chhubu Mian v. Harcharn Das ...	18	529
120	Mohar Singh v. Taj Mohamed ...	18	532
121	Abdul Karim v. Haji Allah Bakhsh	17	208
122	Deoki Nandan v. Harnam Das ...	16	983

No. of Vol. 47 P. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912-13. V.	P.
	Civil—concld.
123	Ram Ditti v. Amar Singh ...	10	512
124	Achar Singh v. Badhawa Singh ...	15	285
125	Budh Singh v. Ram Nath ...	17	388
126	Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan ...	13	344
	Criminal.
10	Crown v. Waryam ...	18	886

(C).—7 PUNJAB WEEKLY REPORTER, FROM 16TH OCTOBER TO DECEMBER, 1912.

No. of Vol. 7 P. W. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912-13. V.	P.
	Civil.
238	Nur Khan v. Sarfraz ...	16	21
239	Man Singh v. Rasul ...	18	750
240	Sheru v. Jawahir Singh ...	13	662
241	Hari Shanker v. Babu Ram ...	18	746
242	Ram Narain v. Durga Dat ...	13	568
243	Tota Singh v. Partap Singh ...	13	670
244	Sahib Jan v. Amiran ...	17	214
245	Devi Ditta v. Nathu ...	15	930
246	Tulsa Singh v. Natha Singh ...	15	469
247	Nihal Chand v. Abdullah ...	13	563
248	Raja Ram v. Fatteh Chand ...	17	216
249	Barkat Ram v. Jagat Ram ...	17	379
250	Kishen Singh v. Narindar Singh...	14	516
251	Budh Singh v. Ram Nath ...	17	388
252	Lala Mohan Lal v. Bhagu Shah ...	14	513
253	Ala Singh v. Khark Singh ...	17	392
254	Ram Chand v. Ram Jowaya ...	14	494
255	Megha Ram v. Makhan Lal ...	13	667
256	Deoki Nandan v. Harnam Das ...	16	983
257	Karam Chand v. Lehna ...	15	708
258	Karori Mal v. Jawala Devi ...	17	510
259	Jai Ram v. Khan Bahadur ...	16	797
260	Sham Singh v. Prem Singh ...	17	508
261	Mathra Das v. Hakim Singh ...	16	752
262	Niamat Ullah v. Aisha Bibi ...	17	21
263	Lal Chand v. Nand Lal ...	16	838
264	Bishen Singh v. Ganda Singh ...	16	959
265	Hardhian Singh v. Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co., Ld. ...	16	804
266	Stephenson, Major v. Municipal Committee of Lahore ...	17	149

No. of Vol. 7 P. W. R. 1912.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas. 1912-13. V.	P.
	Civil—concld.
267	Sahib Dial v. Lajpat Rai ...	14	510
268	Brij Lal v. Ram Rattan ...	17	581
269	Kallu Mal v. Shams-ud-din ...	17	196
270	Zainab Bibi v. Badr-ud-din ...	17	187
271	Kishen Chand v. Gopal Singh ...	16	842
272	Sundar Das v. Peoples Bank of India ...	16	834
273	Durga Das v. Kanshi Ram ...	16	769
274	Allah Bakhsh v. Ram Lal ...	16	865
275	Anwar v. Allah Yar ...	16	967
276	Khota Ram v. Mauj Din ...	16	979
277	Jawand Lal v. Sharf Din ...	16	961
278	Yusaf v. Naza ...	16	995
279	Nanak Chand v. Muhammad Afzal	16	950
280	Milkhi v. Bishen Das ...	16	957
281	Banarsi Das v. Nathu Mal ...	16	987
	Criminal.
36	Ishar Das v. Crown ...	17	543
37	Fateh Ali v. Crown ...	16	521
38	Prabhu Dial v. Crown ...	17	406
39	Wadhawa Singh v. Crown ...	17	54
40	Jhandu v. Crown ...	17	575
41	Ujagar Singh v. Crown ...	Not reportable.
42	Baggu Mal v. Crown ...	17	58
43	Crown v. Chanda Singh ...	17	49
44	Ibrahim v. Crown ...	18	265

Acc. No. _____ Call No. _____

DATE SLIP

"This book was issued from the Library on the date last stamped. A fine of 10 Paise will be charged for each day the book is kept over - due".

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports, for the year 1912, with the corresponding pages of Indian Cases Volumes 1 to 19.

Allahabad, I. L. R. Series, Vol. XXXIV.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XI	319
4	...	"	663
8	...	"	476
13	...	"	305
20	...	"	672
22	...	"	710
25	..	"	646
32	...	"	640
36	...	"	474
41	...	XII	183
43	...	XI	705
49	...	"	712
53	...	"	737
57	...	XIII	257
63	...	"	304
65	...	"	269
72	...	IX	700
78	...	XII	837
79	...	"	915
89	...	"	844
91	...	"	990
93	...	"	987
96	...	"	988
98	...	"	920
102	...	"	607
106	...	"	587
109	...	"	604
113	...	XI	768
115	...	XII	836
118	...	XIII	921
121	...	XII	927
123	...	"	603
126	...	XIII	5
129	...	XII	601
135	...	XIII	34
140	...	"	19
143	...	"	80
146	...	"	101
148	...	XII	926
150	...	XIII	79
155	...	XII	922
158	...	XIII	138
165	...	"	83
168	...	"	94
172	...	"	154
184	...	"	185
186	...	"	134
189	...	"	320
192	...	"	778
197	...	"	284
203	...	"	958
205	...	"	384

Allahabad, I. L. R. Series, Vol. XXXIV--contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
207	...	XIII	632
210	...	"	829
213	...	"	976
223	...	XV	177
234	...	XIV	1000
244	...	"	657
246	...	"	505
250	...	XIII	975
253	...	"	531
261	...	"	963
267	...	"	829
268	...	"	619
273	...	"	573
282	...	XIV	472
285	...	XIII	643
289	...	XV	196
296	...	XIV	629
306	...	XIII	625
315	...	XIV	433
319	...	"	666
321	...	"	506
323	...	"	674
331	...	XV	881
340	...	XIV	764
341	...	"	116
345	...	XIII	999
348	...	XIV	507
351	...	"	639
354	...	"	599
355	...	"	812
358	...	"	138
365	...	"	790
371	...	"	132
375	...	"	154
382	...	"	162
385	...	"	814
388	...	"	240
391	...	"	191
393	...	"	766
396	...	"	172
398	...	XV	673
405	...	XVI	92
412	...	"	124
416	...	XV	907
419	...	XIV	181
422	...	"	803
426	...	"	187
429	...	"	244
434	...	"	278
436	...	"	343
442	...	"	589
446	...	XV	435

Allahabad, I. L. R. Series, Vol. XXXIV--concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
449	...	XV	798
451	...	"	991
455	...	XVI	197
464	...	"	146
465	...	XIV	587
468	...	"	698
474	...	XVI	85
478	...	"	105
482	...	XIV	744
487	...	XV	319
490	...	"	49
493	...	XVI	157
496	...	"	149
505	...	"	88
511	...	XVII	396
518	...	XVI	677
522	...	"	510
528	...	"	179
530	...	XV	50
533	...	"	84
538	...	"	227
542	...	"	174
545	...	XVI	455
549	...	XV	126
572	...	"	138
579	...	XVI	67
587	...	"	631
589	...	"	513
592	...	"	1
596	...	XV	337
597	...	XVI	524
599	...	"	8
602	...	"	525
604	...	XVII	89
606	...	XVI	401
612	...	XVII	94
615	...	XVI	392
620	...	"	78
628	...	"	183
631	...	XVII	19
636	...	XVI	190
640	...	XVII	632
649	...	XVI	191
654	...	XVII	799
656	...	XVI	369
658	...	"	181
659	...	XVII	340
663	...	XVI	529

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. IX.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XIII	80
4	...	"	83
8	...	"	94
12	...	"	404
15	...	"	943
17	...	"	929
19	...	"	134
23	...	"	944
29	...	"	939
33	...	"	331
37	...	"	304
40	...	"	269
48	...	XI	768
51	...	XIII	921
54	...	"	34
59	...	"	131
63	...	"	945
67	...	"	951
72	...	"	138
79	...	"	187
84	...	"	954
86	...	"	197
95	...	"	384
97	...	"	778
103	...	"	956
105	...	"	320
108	...	"	958
111	...	"	154
124	...	"	284
131	...	"	963
137	...	"	344
148	...	"	961
152	...	"	975
156	...	"	1006
158	...	"	632
162	...	"	829
165	...	XIV	463
170	...	"	652
173	...	XIII	417
180	...	XIV	649
183	...	"	472
188	...	XIII	531
198	...	"	573
207	...	XIV	414
211	...	XIII	645
215	...	"	976
226	...	"	619
231	...	"	829
233	...	XIV	416
234	...	"	433
238	...	XIII	643
244	...	"	535

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. IX--contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
253	...	XIII	506
258	...	XIV	455
260	...	„	657
262	...	„	658
263	...	„	1000
276	...	„	475
285	...	„	135
288	...	„	666
290	...	„	506
292	...	„	59
294	...	„	507
297	...	„	505
300	...	„	61
307	...	„	764
308	...	„	599
310	...	„	607
311	...	XIII	625
323	...	XIV	674
332	...	„	496
348	...	„	810
351	...	„	116
355	...	„	999
358	...	„	97
362	...	„	812
365	...	„	172
367	...	„	639
370	...	„	606
371	...	„	162
375	...	„	814
378	...	„	175
381	...	„	240
383	...	„	191
386	...	„	132
390	...	XIII	695
401	...	XV	177
410	...	XIV	35
420	...	XV	881
431	...	XIV	138
439	...	„	154
448	...	„	203
450	...	XV	196
462	...	„	219
474	...	XIV	790
481	...	„	766
485	...	„	799
488	...	„	181
492	...	„	803
496	...	XIII	191
499	...	XIV	179
504	...	XV	222
509	...	XIV	629
525	...	XV	659
534	...	XIV	244
538	...	XV	496
540	...	XIV	343
547	...	XV	438
550	...	„	435
555	...	XIV	587
558	...	XV	729
565	...	X	23
569	...	XIV	591
574	...	XIII	59
577	...	XIV	589
581	...	XV	733
582	...	„	798

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. IX—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
585	...	XIII	965
653	...	XV	903
661	...	„	907
666	...	XIV	187
670	...	„	278
672	...	„	582
676	...	XV	72
693	...	„	932
694	...	XIV	602
696	...	XV	991
699	...	XIV	570
701	...	XVI	81
707	...	„	84
709	...	XIV	698
730	...	XV	673
738	...	XVI	85
743	...	XIV	744
749	...	XVI	88
756	...	„	97
759	...	„	102
763	...	XIV	119
766	...	XVI	108
769	...	„	109
771	...	„	120
774	...	„	126
776	...	XV	32
778	...	XIV	125
784	...	XVI	124
788	...	XIV	746
794	...	„	747
798	...	XVI	105
802	...	„	92
811	...	„	98
819	...	XV	126
844	...	„	138

Vol. X.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	XVI	146
3	...	„	149
15	...	XV	10
19	...	XVI	157
23	...	„	177
25	...	„	179
27	...	XV	84
33	...	XVI	337
36	...	XV	15
41	...	„	34
45	...	„	319
48	...	„	49
51	...	„	51
52	...	XVI	339
56	...	XV	50
59	...	XVI	342
61	...	„	510
66	...	XV	227
70	...	„	174
73	...	XVI	455
78	...	XV	566
79	...	XVI	512
82	...	„	513
85	...	XV	303
87	...	XVI	483
89	...	XV	862
92	...	XVI	485

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. X—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
95	...	XVI	487
97	...	„	489
101	...	XV	297
106	...	XVI	496
108	...	XV	121
112	...	XVI	629
114	...	„	625
117	...	„	631
118	...	„	633
120	...	„	638
124	...	„	635
130	...	„	1
134	...	„	674
136	...	XIV	322
140	...	XVI	677
144	...	XV	75
149	...	„	611
153	...	„	337
154	...	XVI	679
157	...	XV	880
159	...	XVI	1004
162	...	„	982
165	...	XV	677
167	...	„	853
169	...	XVI	524
171	...	XV	849
174	...	XVI	525
176	...	„	981
178	...	„	1007
181	...	„	222
183	...	XVII	89
185	...	XVI	13
188	...	XVII	92
190	...	„	94
193	...	XVI	501
211	...	„	401
217	...	„	392
222	...	XVII	19
227	...	„	22
234	...	„	25
244	...	XVI	8
247	...	„	515
251	...	„	516
252	...	„	183
256	...	„	190
259	...	XVI	250
271	...	„	188
278	...	XVII	632
286	...	„	713
289	...	XVI	191
294	...	XVII	799
297	...	XVI	369
299	...	„	181
300	...	„	406
303	...	„	529
330	...	XVII	340
335	...	XVI	67
344	...	„	78
351	...	XVII	571
353	...	„	716
354	...	„	575
355	...	„	576
357	...	„	567
361	...	„	573
362	...	„	574

Allahabad Law Journal, Vol. X—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
364	...	XVI	197
373	...	XVII	396
379	...	XVI	830
383	...	XVII	404
387	...	„	641
390	...	„	644
393	...	„	647
395	...	„	658
396	...	„	661
399	...	„	292
401	...	„	669
403	...	„	672
408	...	„	376
413	...	„	675
416	...	XVI	422
421	...	XVII	868
423	...	„	879
426	...	XVI	333
429	...	XVII	791
431	...	„	792
435	...	„	795
437	...	XVI	399
440	...	XVII	274
452	...	XVI	821
462	...	XVII	401
465	...	„	409
468	...	„	799
469	...	„	833
473	...	„	797
475	...	„	783
478	...	„	836
480	...	XV	854
486	...	XVI	70
498	...	XVII	732
501	...	„	471
506	...	„	486
510	...	„	465
513	...	„	520
516	...	„	910
518	...	„	469
520	...	„	912
522	...	„	467
527	...	XVIII	146
529	...	XVII	914
531	...	XVIII	146
533	...	XVII	915
535	...	„	653
538	...	XV	240

Bombay, I. L. R. Series, Vol. XXXVI.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	XII	117
20	...	XI	554
29	...	XII	577
37	...	„	532
42	...	„	549
47	...	„	540
53	...	„	543
58	...	„	547
61	...	„	551
68	...	„	949
77	...	XI	568

Bombay Law Reporter, Vol. XIV—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
970	...	XVII	717
972	...	"	705
987	...	"	689
1007	...	"	696
1020	...	"	722
1031	...	"	730
1034	...	XVI	250
1046	...	"	210
1055	...	"	197
1063	...	"	821
1073	...	XVII	396
1079	...	XVI	328
1090	...	"	67
1098	...	"	78
1106	...	XVII	739
1109	...	"	741
1121	...	"	746
1129	...	"	834
1135	...	"	779
1142	...	"	866
1148	...	"	876
1154	...	"	891
1160	...	"	1000
1163	...	"	1008
1166	...	XVIII	145
1169	...	"	267
1173	...	XVII	943
1178	...	"	946
1182	...	"	949
1190	...	"	964
1194	...	"	952
1198	...	"	955
1204	...	"	969
1207	...	"	972
1211	...	XVI	70
1223	...	"	830
1226	...	"	239

—

Burma Law Times, Vol. V.

1	...	XII	797
5	...	XIV	508
9	...	"	651
11	...	"	653
13	...	"	626
15	...	"	628
17	...	"	656
20	...	"	643
30	...	"	637
33	...	"	801
36	...	"	809
37	...	"	765
38	...	"	763
39	...	"	804
45	...	"	811
47	...	"	813
49	...	"	815
52	...	"	818
55	...	"	978
57	...	"	837
61	...	"	843

Burma Law Times, Vol. V—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
72	...	XV	358
73	...	"	360
75	...	"	361
77	...	"	366
79	...	"	368
80	...	"	276
81	...	"	363
85	...	"	353
87	...	"	355
92	...	"	305
95	...	"	374
98	...	XIII	380
99	...	XV	423
101	...	"	482
101	...	"	485
102	...	"	425
104	...	"	429
106	...	"	431
107	...	"	492
108	...	"	433
111	...	"	981
113	...	"	984
116	...	"	945
123	...	XVI	83
125	...	XV	959
127	...	XVI	87
129	...	XV	994
133	...	"	996
137	...	"	1000
140	...	XVI	90
143	...	XVII	824
155	...	"	902
156	...	"	906
157	...	"	909
159	...	"	911
161	...	"	913
162	...	"	915
163	...	"	916
164	...	"	926
165	...	"	930
166	...	"	918
167	...	"	900
169	...	"	954
170	...	"	956
171	...	"	962
173	...	"	951
175	...	"	800
191	...	"	811
193	...	"	853
199	...	"	860
205	...	XVI	188
207	...	"	188
211	...	"	70
221	...	XVIII	105
233	...	"	144
234	...	"	181
235	...	"	187
236	...	"	183
239	...	XVII	813
255	...	"	868
268	...	"	878
269	...	"	898
271	...	XVIII	481
277	...	"	500
281	...	"	505

Burma Law Times, Vol. V—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
283	...	XVIII	497
285	...	"	487
288	...	"	510
290	...	"	544
291	...	"	466
294	...	"	518
296	...	"	524
298	...	"	476

—

Burma (Lower) Rulings, Vol. VI.

34	...	XIV	508
38	...	XIII	386
41	...	XIV	651
43	...	"	437
44	...	"	447
46	...	"	653
48	...	XV	990
49	...	"	492
50	...	"	981
52	...	"	366
53	...	"	353
55	...	"	959
57	...	"	984
60	...	XVII	930
61	...	"	911
62	...	"	824
74	...	"	900
75	...	"	906
77	...	XVIII	466
85	...	XV	945
88	...	XVII	902
89	...	XV	996
93	...	XVII	860
98	...	"	954
100	...	"	800
116	...	"	926
117	...	XVI	83
118	...	XVIII	187
119	...	XVI	70
123	...	XVIII	476
127	...	"	658
129	...	XVII	813
142	...	XVI	87
144	...	XIX	2
146	...	XVIII	500
150	...	XVI	188
152	...	XVIII	481
158	...	"	510
160	...	XIX	167
164	...	XVIII	497
166	...	"	505
167	...	XIX	85
170	...	XVIII	524
172	...	XIX	171
174	...	"	88

—

Burma (Upper) Rulings, Vol. I, (1912).

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
96	...	XIV	968
98	...	"	973
100	...	XV	89
105	...	"	311
108	...	"	915
111	...	XIV	475
114	...	XII	191
123	...	XV	985
125	...	"	919
134	...	"	992
136	...	XVIII	669
141	...	"	568
146	...	"	574
148	...	XIX	177
149	...	"	175

—

Calcutta, I. L. R. Series, Vol. XXXIX.

1	...	XII	114
26	...	"	174
33	...	X	491
53	...	XI	180
59	...	XII	60
84	...	XI	997
87	...	"	67
104	...	"	417
119	...	XV	65
138	...	XIV	991
141	...	XII	32
146	...	XIII	243
150	...	XII	833
157	...	"	297
164	...	"	273
220	...	XI	939
227	...	"	884
232	...	XIII	331
238	...	XIV	768
241	...	XIII	193
245	...	"	577
265	...	XII	151
278	...	"	161
284	...	"	723
298	...	"	163
304	...	"	147
311	...	"	596
319	...	XI	872
341	...	XIV	823
344	...	XV	1007
348	...	XIII	925
353	...	"	353
377	...	"	993
393	...	XV	925
395	...	"	886
403	...	XIII	1002
409	...	XIV	641
418	...	XIII	344
439	...	"	513
453	...	"	518
456	...	"	913
463	...	XIV	201
469	...	XIII	830
473	...	XV	547

Calcutta, I. L. R. Series, Vol. XXXIX—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
476	...	XIII	844
487	...	XIV	598
492	...	„	475
506	...	XV	551
510	...	„	497
513	...	XIII	698
522	...	XVI	327
527	...	XIV	496
560	...	XIII	1000
563	...	„	690
568	...	„	705
582	...	XIV	17
587	...	„	4
598	...	„	682
606	...	„	753
615	...	XIII	965
663	...	XIV	701
669	...	XVI	153
682	...	XIV	205
687	...	„	67
696	...	XV	219
704	...	„	427
711	...	XIII	695
739	...	XVII	500
754	...	XV	441
766	...	„	59
774	...	XIII	1007
781	...	XIV	314
789	...	XV	279
802	...	XVII	973
810	...	„	976
822	...	XVIII	69
828	...	XV	287
834	...	XIV	317
839	...	XV	256
843	...	XIV	147
848	...	„	124
855	...	„	195
862	...	XII	609
881	...	XV	176
885	...	XVII	408
887	...	XIV	142
896	...	XV	481
903	...	„	620
906	...	XIV	724
915	...	XV	659
925	...	XIV	299
931	...	XVII	71
933	...	XVI	110
953	...	„	501
968	...	„	171
981	...	„	821
995	...	XVIII	61
1005	...	XV	284
1010	...	XIV	227
1016	...	„	540
1029	...	„	726
1037	...	XVII	221
1041	...	XV	484
1048	...	XVI	118
1050	...	„	176
1053	...	XV	961

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XV.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XIII	407
3	...	„	414
6	...	XI	183
7	...	XIII	120
12	...	XI	971
14	...	XIII	434
17	...	„	440
23	...	XI	872
40	...	„	820
49	...	XIII	907
52	...	XI	123
54	...	XIII	959
57	...	VII	214
61	...	XIII	653
68	...	„	304
69	...	„	331
72	...	„	269
78	...	„	257
80	...	„	1004
82	...	XI	255
83	...	X	880
88	...	XIII	944
89	...	„	265
97	...	VII	427
110	...	XIII	118
114	...	IX	806
120	...	XIII	900
122	...	„	912
123	...	VIII	22
128	...	VI	414
132	...	XIV	368
137	...	XI	464
138	...	XIV	377
142	...	XIII	898
145	...	„	193
147	...	XIV	380
151	...	XIII	993
160	...	VII	775
162	...	XIV	458
167	...	VIII	77
170	...	XIV	453
172	...	XIII	344
180	...	XIV	463
184	...	XI	592
186	...	„	593
187	...	XIV	456
191	...	„	461
194	...	XIII	513
203	...	„	518
204	...	„	23
211	...	„	509
215	...	„	529
217	...	X	355
219	...	IX	623
220	...	XIII	606
224	...	XIV	208
225	...	„	478
227	...	XIII	596
228	...	XII	609
239	...	XIII	605
241	...	„	377
251	...	„	702
254	...	X	898
256	...	XIII	349
258	...	XII	684

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XV—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
263	...	XIV	641
267	...	X	615
270	...	XIII	976
276	...	XIV	475
281	...	„	609
305	...	V	395
308	...	VI	121
510	...	„	206
312	...	XIV	981
323	...	„	667
325	...	XI	591
327	...	XV	177
332	...	XIV	820
334	...	„	823
335	...	„	808
337	...	XIV	755
339	...	XI	102
344	...	XIV	1000
352	...	XIII	695
360	...	„	161
369	...	„	698
376	...	XIV	677
382	...	XIII	690
384	...	XII	593
388	...	XIII	487
391	...	II	85
396	...	XIII	913
399	...	„	925
401	...	XV	1007
403	...	XIII	844
408	...	X	894
410	...	„	525
411	...	XIV	496
423	...	„	839
428	...	„	177
432	...	XII	669
436	...	XIV	219
439	...	XIII	128
443	...	X	463
446	...	XIV	845
451	...	XIII	326
453	...	X	359
457	...	XIV	980
458	...	X	560
461	...	XV	219
466	...	„	222
468	...	„	196
475	...	XIV	629
483	...	XV	659
488	...	„	441
494	...	XIV	682
498	...	„	1006
500	...	XV	452
501	...	XIV	230
505	...	XV	455
507	...	„	458
509	...	XIV	201
512	...	„	195
515	...	XV	656
517	...	XVI	257
621	...	XIII	678
631	...	XV	870
633	...	XIII	965
639	...	XV	72
647	...	XIII	598

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XV—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
649	...	XIV	715
653	...	XIII	40
658	...	XV	910
660	...	XIII	43
665	...	XIV	540
672	...	XIII	364
675	...	XIV	93
678	...	XIII	88
683	...	„	694
684	...	XV	911
689	...	„	909
690	...	XI	382
692	...	XIV	607

Vol. XVI.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XVI	84
3	...	XV	709
7	...	XVI	441
9	...	XV	453
14	...	XVI	349
19	...	XIII	498
20*n*	...	XVI	457
24	...	„	467
26	...	„	351
28	...	XIII	184
30	...	XI	368
34	...	XVI	443
38	...	XI	74
41	...	XVI	447
45	...	„	386
47	...	„	92
53	...	„	98
60	...	XV	673
67	...	XVI	935
71	...	XIV	701
74	...	XVI	937
77	...	„	940
83	...	„	966
85	...	„	970
86	...	XVI	345
89	...	X	382
93	...	„	312
96	...	XVI	975
98	...	„	974
101	...	„	972
103	...	XIV	33
107	...	„	147
111	...	„	56
116	...	XVII	99
119	...	XIII	637
124	...	XVII	111
127	...	„	115
131	...	XV	430
133	...	XVII	129
135	...	„	121
139	...	„	125
141	...	„	126
144	...	XV	476
148	...	XVII	45
154	...	XIV	124
156	...	XIII	144
162	...	XIV	519

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XVI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
165	...	XIII	470
169	...	VII	625
174	...	XIII	63
182	...	XV	332
185	...	XVI	825
194	...	XVII	162
197	...	"	165
202	...	XVI	365
209	...	XVII	168
211	...	"	170
212	...	XIV	166
217	...	XVII	180
225	...	"	173
231	...	XVI	501
245	...	"	188
250	...	"	171
259	...	XVII	224
264	...	XVI	246
271	...	XVII	227
279	...	XV	885
282	...	XVI	742
288	...	"	414
296	...	XVII	177
301	...	"	171
304	...	XVI	817
311	...	XVII	257
318	...	"	263
322	..	XVI	376
328	...	XVII	266
335	...	"	276
339	...	"	279
342	...	"	283
349	...	XVI	927
354	...	XVII	284
360	...	"	343
366	...	XVI	425
371	...	"	575
375	...	"	963
379	...	XVII	207
381	...	"	917
383	...	"	919
385	...	"	921
394	...	"	927
401	...	"	931
404	...	"	936
412	...	XV	291
417	...	XVII	966
422	...	XVI	929
427	...	XVIII	197
431	...	XVII	969
436	...	XVI	440
437	...	"	131
440	..	XVII	1001
453	...	"	993
467	...	XVIII	149
508	...	"	207
515	...	XIV	760
517	...	XV	719
520	...	"	689
524	...	XVI	41
527	...	XVII	957
537	...	XIV	515
539	...	XV	349
542	...	"	436
546	...	"	561

Calcutta Law Journal, Vol. XVI—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
548	...	XVI	977
552	...	XIV	713
555	...	XV	614
557	...	XVI	235
559	...	XV	601
561	...	"	906
564	...	"	572
566	...	"	668
569	...	XVIII	176
571	...	XVI	58
573	...	"	223
575	...	XVII	963
578	...	XVI	255
581	...	XVII	972
582	...	XVI	795
586	...	XV	735
591	...	"	897
596	...	XVI	250
606	...	"	210
613	...	"	197
620	...	"	821
629	...	XVII	396
634	...	XVI	328
640	...	XVII	441
642	...	XVI	70

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XVI.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
122	...	XIII	257
124	...	X	371
126	...	XII	165
129	...	XI	884
132	...	XII	70
137	...	XI	713
143	...	XIII	781
145	...	"	721
217	...	"	269
225	...	"	481
227	...	"	403
231	...	XII	593
235	...	XI	30
237	...	"	997
238	...	XIII	783
241	...	XII	482
247	...	XIII	879
251	...	XI	637
252	...	XII	149
256	...	XIII	118
259	...	"	785
263	...	"	826
265	...	"	577
288	...	X	117
289	...	XIII	868
294	...	"	193
297	...	"	673
299	...	"	23
304	...	"	513
311	...	XI	239
313	...	XII	459
317	...	X	376
322	...	XIII	941
325	...	"	943

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XVI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
327	...	XIII	470
329	...	XII	596
332	...	"	65
336	...	XIII	1002
338	...	"	976
346	...	"	603
347	...	X	41
351	...	XI	465
356	...	XIII	509
360	...	"	529
362	...	"	965
383	...	"	349
384	...	"	830
386	...	XV	72
394	...	VI	300
395	...	XIII	604
396	...	"	424
398	...	XI	164
402	...	"	417
409	...	XIV	1000
417	...	XV	398
418	...	XIII	596
420	...	"	192
421	...	"	487
424	...	XIV	627
426	...	XIII	844
431	...	XV	77
433	...	"	177
440	...	XIV	17
444	...	XIII	898
447	...	XIV	380
451	...	"	641
455	...	"	205
458	...	XIII	344
466	...	XV	184
471	...	XIV	598
472	...	"	682
475	...	XIII	698
480	...	XIV	31
482	...	XV	219
489	...	"	222
493	...	XIII	702
496	...	XIV	817
498	...	XIII	694
499	...	"	913
503	...	"	925
505	...	XIV	496
516	...	"	4
519	...	XII	609
529	...	XIV	475
534	...	"	215
536	...	X	139
540	..	XI	729
549	...	XV	1006
550	...	"	1008
551	...	"	1007
553	...	"	659
558	...	XIV	230
561	...	"	145
564	...	"	152
567	...	XIII	606
570	...	XIV	67
574	...	IX	6
577	...	XIV	629
585	...	XV	460

Calcutta Weekly Notes, Vol. XVI—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
587	...	XIV	219
590	...	"	461
593	...	XIII	705
600	...	XV	650
603	...	XIV	463
606	...	"	540
612	...	XIII	653
618	...	"	364
620	...	"	912
621	...	XIV	124
623	...	"	201
625	...	XIII	695
634	...	XIV	212
636	...	"	133
639	...	XIII	123
641	...	XIV	297
643	...	XV	554
645	...	XIII	1007
649	...	XVI	110
658	...	XIV	299
662	...	XIII	690
664	...	XVI	118
666	...	XIV	720
669	...	XV	987
675	..	"	673
683	...	"	691
693	...	"	701
696	...	XIV	320
697	...	XVI	147
701	...	XIV	568
704	...	XI	438
710	...	XIV	166
715	...	"	515
717	...	"	715
721	...	"	173
725	...	"	729
730	...	"	719
731	...	XV	23
733	...	XIV	576
736	...	XIII	365
742	...	XIV	707
745	...	XVI	92
747	...	XV	955
753	...	XI	820
762	...	XIV	218
763	...	"	290
766	...	XV	56
768	...	XIV	317
769	...	XVI	98
774	...	XIV	292
777	...	VII	919
779	...	XV	30
783	...	"	657
785	..	"	961
793	...	XVI	830
798	...	"	453
802	...	XIV	227
804	...	"	728
805	...	X	90
811	...	XVI	176
812	...	XIV	753
817	...	XIII	353
831	...	XIV	349
834	...	XIII	611
838	...	XV	427

Underwriter Tabulation Report

Volume XXVI—Number 1

Number	Value Insured
71084	XXXVI 2868
71087	VIXIV 61078
71088	XXVII 70178
71094	XXV 60828
71097	XXXVII 34886
10806	VXXVI 7082
10805	IX 6208
10875	VIXXV 6388
10887	XXV 6888
10890	VIII 7808
10893	Lew JXIWal 6688
10895	XVIXVI 4088
11860	XXVI 23807
12804	XIIV 40804
12807	Tel XVIII 40808
12903	IXIV 78708
12904	XIX 40888
12907	XXVI 62828
12908	XXIV 60888
12909	XXXIVI 30808
13880	XIXXVI 78808
13881	XXXIV 60888
13884	XXXVI 70888
13887	XXXIII 40888
13890	XIXXVI 78808
13893	XIIXVII 78808
13895	XVIII 60888
13898	XXIV 60888
13901	XXXVII 40888
13904	XIXXIV 78808
13907	IXXVII 60888
13908	XVII 60888
13909	XIXVI 60888
13910	XXXVII 60888
13913	XXXVI 60888
13914	XXXIV 60888
13917	XXXIII 60888
13918	XXXVII 60888
13921	XXXIV 60888
13924	XXXIV 60888
13927	XXXIV 60888
13928	XXXIV 60888
13931	XXXIV 60888
13934	XXXIV 60888
13937	XXXIV 60888
13938	XXXIV 60888
13941	XXXIV 60888
13944	XXXIV 60888
13947	XXXIV 60888
13948	XXXIV 60888

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XXII—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
204	...	XIII	152
207	...	X	320
212	...	XIII	463
217	...	XIV	394
219	...	XIII	71
221	...	XII	765
225	...	XIII	788
228	...	"	795
231	...	"	458
240	...	"	344
247	...	"	453
251	...	"	831
253	...	XIV	396
257	...	XIII	471
260	...	"	870
265	...	"	866
270	...	XIV	418
276	...	"	965
284	...	"	823
309	...	"	383
321	...	XIII	475
333	...	"	833
354	...	XIV	511
355	...	"	669
357	...	XV	79
360	...	XIV	475
364	...	XV	206
375	...	"	213
377	...	XIV	157
379	...	"	270
393	...	"	1007
394	...	"	285
395	...	"	209
404	...	XV	365
406	...	XIV	189
409	...	XV	367
411	...	"	223
413	...	XIV	255
419	...	"	205
439	...	XV	369
441	...	"	371
445	...	"	376
447	...	"	378
451	...	"	393
453	...	"	308
456	...	"	388
457	...	"	177
462	...	XIV	1000
468	...	"	496
478	...	XIII	695
485	...	XIV	254
488	...	X	421
490	...	XIV	849

Vol. XXIII.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XIII	269
6	...	"	976
11	...	XV	196
16	...	"	222
18	...	XIV	629
26	...	XV	219
28	...	"	659
32	...	XVI	501
38	...	"	92
39	...	XIV	659

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XXIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
50	...	XV	652
54	...	XIV	550
59	...	"	563
61	...	"	705
64	...	"	524
77	...	XVI	98
79	...	XV	412
97	...	XIV	286
104	...	XV	723
108	...	"	109
109	...	"	594
114	...	XVI	328
118	...	"	630
119	...	XV	711
131	...	XVI	209
134	...	"	225
161	...	"	458
162	...	XV	257
165	...	"	100
168	...	"	17
177	...	XVI	147
181	...	"	947
187	...	"	843
189	...	XV	299
193	...	XVI	201
194	...	XV	72
200	...	"	673
206	...	XVI	821
210	...	"	197
215	...	"	70
219	...	"	486
221	...	XIV	579
223	...	XVI	139
236	...	XV	738
241	...	"	124
244	...	"	576
255	...	XVII	226
256	...	XVI	835
260	...	"	53
269	...	"	839
273	...	"	96
276	...	"	188
278	...	XIV	520
282	...	XVI	542
284	...	XVII	291
287	...	"	293
288	...	"	308
289	...	XVI	389
290	...	"	478
301	...	"	30
306	...	XVII	4
311	...	XVI	210
316	...	XVII	219
321	...	XVI	250
327	...	"	746
330	...	"	67
335	...	XVII	513
339	...	XV	343
347	...	XVII	586
348	...	"	589
352	...	XVI	220
355	...	"	428
360	...	XVI	694
363	...	"	710
368	...	XVII	310
371	...	XVI	518

Madras Law Journal, Vol. XXIII—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
373	...	XVII	425
381	...	"	391
383	...	XVI	239
393	...	"	755
417	...	"	869
430	...	"	601
443	...	"	43
445	...	XVII	75
447	...	"	544
475	...	XV	635
479	...	XVII	158
487	...	"	437
493	...	"	422
496	...	XVI	895
499	...	XVII	65
511	...	"	419
513	...	"	420
516	...	"	48
517	...	"	704
518	...	XVI	939
519	...	"	914
531	...	"	971
535	...	XVII	417
537	...	"	429
539	...	XVI	962
543	...	XVII	445
576	...	"	837
585	...	"	920
588	...	"	368
591	...	XVIII	271
591	...	XVII	945
593	...	"	489
595	...	"	139
599	...	"	597
605	...	"	444
607	...	"	337
610	...	"	497
618	...	"	605
620	...	"	185
621	...	XVI	78
624	...	XVII	353
638	...	"	609
649	...	"	754
652	...	"	987
658	...	XVIII	49
670	...	XVII	786
675	...	"	759
676	...	"	762
677	...	"	763
679	...	"	758
680	...	"	894
687	...	XV	871
695	...	XVII	933
699	...	"	940
706	...	"	473
715	...	"	947
719	...	XV	461
722	...	"	85
726	...	XVII	342
728	...	XVI	18
732	...	"	522
732	...	"	400
734	...	"	616
738	...	"	830
741	...	XVII	396
746	...		953

Madras Law Times, Vol. XI.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XIII	269
6	...	"	304
8	...	"	331
11	...	"	322
13	...	"	159
14	...	"	205
15	...	"	324
18	...	"	204
19	...	"	313
20	...	"	282
21	...	"	286
23	...	"	278
24	...	"	216
25	...	"	788
27	...	"	795
30	...	XII	765
32	...	XIII	831
33	...	"	113
38	...	XII	751
53	...	XIII	453
56	...	XIV	389
63	...	XIII	458
69	...	XIV	394
71	...	XI	17
73	...	XIV	463
76	...	XIII	344
84	...	"	463
87	...	"	471
90	...	XIV	396
93	...	"	418
103	...	XIII	475
112	...	XIV	383
121	...	XIII	866
124	...	"	870
127	...	"	833
142	...	XIV	69
144	...	XIII	659
145	...	"	976
155	...	"	903
157	...	"	906
159	...	"	860
160	...	"	651
162	...	"	819
169	...	XIV	475
174	...	XV	206
182	...	XIII	648
184	...	XV	213
186	...	"	315
187	...	"	184
188	...	"	218
190	...	"	221
191	...	XIII	832
192	...	"	315
193	...	XV	177
198	...	"	365
199	...	"	367
201	...	XIII	649
202	...	XV	369
203	...	"	371
207	...	"	376
209	...	"	378
212	...	"	393
213	...	"	306
214	...	"	308
216	...	"	388
217	...	XIV	1000

Madras Law Times, Vol. XI—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
225	...	XIII	695
232	...	XIV	480
240	...	"	491
241	...	"	140
245	...	"	144
246	...	XV	380
248	...	"	383
251	...	"	310
253	...	"	79
256	...	"	397
257	...	"	399
261	...	"	403
262	...	"	193
265	...	XIV	496
276	...	"	184
280	...	"	823
296	...	"	965
301	...	"	255
305	...	"	189
307	...	"	209
312	...	XV	354
313	...	"	222
316	...	"	196
325	...	XIV	254
327	..	"	270
337	...	XV	219
344	...	XIV	629
255	...	"	168
361	...	XV	659
367	...	XIV	305
380	...	XII	169
383	...	XIV	277
384	...	"	303
385	...	"	286
390	...	"	259
391	...	"	593
393	...	"	524
403	...	XV	678
404	...	XIV	600
405	...	"	597
405	...	XV	682
407	...	"	688
407	...	"	800
409	...	XIV	544
416	...	"	659
424	...	"	741
427	...	"	705
429	...	"	580
431	...	"	757
432	...	"	571
Supplement.
1	...	XIV	849
Vol. XII.
1	...	XIV	896
90	...	XVI	98
95	...	XV	673
101	...	XVI	92
106	...	XV	72
117	...	"	124
119	...	"	738
122	...	XVI	96
124	...	XV	711
133	...	XVI	478

Madras Law Times, Vol. XII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
140	...	XV	723
147	...	"	576
155	...	XIV	520
158	...	XV	602
159	...	XVI	626
164	...	XV	109
165	...	"	257
168	...	XVI	630
169	...	XIV	579
170	...	XVI	522
171	...	"	501
183	...	XV	97
186	...	XVI	843
188	...	"	839
192	...	"	835
195	...	"	188
199	...	XV	461
202	...	XVI	224
203	...	XV	85
206	...	XVI	201
207	...	XVII	4
211	...	XVI	30
215	...	XVII	14
218	...	XVI	53
224	...	"	947
229	...	XVII	342
230	...	XVI	139
240	...	XVII	347
245	...	XV	412
259	...	XVII	251
260	...	XVI	486
261	...	XVII	253
262	...	XVI	587
264	...	"	405
266	...	"	18
269	...	"	225
288	...	"	428
292	...	XVII	308
293	...	XV	17
299	...	XVI	400
300	...	"	438
301	...	"	433
305	...	"	616
308	...	"	542
309	...	"	45
311	...	XVII	242
312	...	"	244
313	...	"	246
315	...	XVI	601
325	...	"	710
330	...	"	694
332	...	XVII	278
333	...	"	281
335	...	XVI	520
337	...	XVII	284
338	...	XVI	250
346	...	XVII	389
348	...	"	391
350	...	XVI	518
351	...	XVII	402
352	...	XVI	210
359	...	XVII	400
360	...	"	393
361	...	XVI	197
367	...	"	869
376	...	XVIII	662

Madras Law Times, Vol. XII—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
377	...	XVI	736
383	...	XVII	226
385	...	XVI	821
392	...	XVII	396
396	...	XVI	328
405	...	XVII	158
411	...	XVI	895
413	...	"	67
419	...	"	78
425	...	XV	343
431	...	XVII	437
437	...	XVI	934
439	...	XVII	65
448	...	"	441
449	...	XVI	70
458	...	"	914
467	...	XVII	422
469	...	XVI	971
472	...	"	239
482	...	"	830
484	...	XVII	837
491	...	XVI	962
493	...	XVII	442
496	...	"	444
497	...	"	429
499	...	XVI	939
500	...	XVII	445
528	...	"	139
530	...	"	597
534	...	"	602
535	...	"	337
538	...	"	605
539	...	"	489
541	...	XV	871
547	...	XVII	609
556	...	XVI	571
561	...	XVII	353
571	...	XVIII	49
579	...	XVII	987
585	...	"	473
592	...	"	617
594	...	"	894
600	...	XVI	391
601	...	XVII	786
605	...	"	933
608	...	"	431
610	...	"	619
613	...	"	339
615	...	"	544
637	...	"	648
644	...	XVIII	571
646	...	XVII	663
652	...	"	627
656	...	"	947
659	...	"	759
660	...	"	940
664	...	XVI	865
664	...	XVIII	269

Madras Weekly Notes, 1912.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XIII	324
3	...	"	275

Madras Weekly Notes, 1912—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
7	...	XIII	322
9	...	"	313
9	...	"	204
11	...	"	300
16	...	"	110
16	...	"	269
22	...	"	331
24	...	XI	865
29	...	XIII	257
32	...	"	304
35	...	"	282
36	...	"	159
37	...	"	203
38	...	"	188
39	...	"	205
41	...	"	182
42	...	"	799
42	...	"	278
44	...	"	133
45	...	"	791
47	...	"	831
49	...	"	781
49	...	"	486
50	...	"	777
50	...	"	788
53	...	"	453
56	...	"	795
59	...	"	458
65	...	"	463
68	...	"	467
69	...	"	780
70	...	"	489
72	...	"	469
73	...	XIV	463
77	...	XIII	344
84	...	"	832
85	...	"	927
85	...	XII	184
87	...	XIII	471
89	...	"	475
97	...	"	828
99	...	"	802
100	...	XIV	655
101	...	"	396
105	...	XV	399
109	...	XIV	383
117	...	"	394
119	...	XIII	819
125	...	XIV	418
136	...	XIII	833
150	...	"	860
152	...	"	599
158	...	"	595
158	...	XII	412
161	...	"	170
163	...	XIII	651
164	...	XIV	65
166	...	XIII	618
167	...	"	648
169	...	XV	79
172	...	XIII	649
173	...	XV	184
174	...	"	188
175	...	"	190
176	...	XIII	659
177	...	XV	185

Madras Weekly Notes, 1912—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
178	...	XIII	870
181	...	XV	186
182	...	"	186
183	...	XIII	976
193	...	"	817
196	...	"	640
198	...	"	906
199	...	"	903
201	...	XIV	475
207	...	"	849
311	...	XV	177
316	...	XIII	659
324	...	XIV	1000
332	...	"	823
348	...	"	965
353	...	XV	206
361	..	"	195
361	...	XIII	642
362	...	XV	315
363	...	"	193
366	...	"	202
367	...	XIV	496
378	...	XV	313
379	...	"	354
380	...	"	357
381	...	"	359
382	...	"	369
383	...	"	365
384	...	"	218
386	...	XIV	480
393	...	XV	378
395	...	"	317
396	...	"	306
397	...	"	383
400	...	XIII	832
400	...	XV	362
401	...	"	360
401	...	"	224
402	...	"	223
403	...	"	397
404	...	"	310
405	...	"	308
407	...	"	406
409	...	"	388
410	...	"	367
411	...	"	408
412	...	"	370
413	...	"	382
414	...	"	221
415	...	XIII	315
416	...	XV	377
417	...	"	196
425	...	"	219
433	...	"	222
436	...	XIV	255
441	...	XV	393
442	...	"	213
444	...	XIV	148
445	...	"	168
450	...	"	140
453	...	"	69
455	...	XIII	286
457	...	XIV	157
458	...	XIII	204
460	...	XIV	625

Madras Weekly Notes, 1912—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
461	...	XIV	144
462	...	"	629
473	...	XV	652
476	...	XIV	659
486	...	XV	659
492	...	XIV	189
494	...	"	259
495	...	"	681
496	...	"	261
499	...	"	305
512	...	"	283
513	...	"	836
515	...	XV	403
516	...	XIV	254
519	...	"	209
523	...	XIII	71
524	...	XIV	279
528	...	"	597
529	...	XVI	164
530	...	XIV	394
532	...	"	295
535	...	XVI	109
535	...	XIV	303
536	...	"	593
537	...	XVI	107
538	...	"	166
539	...	XV	487
540	...	XIV	318
541	...	"	571
542	...	XVI	103
545	...	XIV	603
546	...	XV	688
546	...	XII	719
547	...	"	351
549	...	XIV	896
641	...	XV	673
646	...	XVI	92
652	...	XIV	184
657	...	XIII	965
669	...	XV	146
683	...	"	72
691	...	XVI	98
696	...	XV	723
703	...	"	257
707	...	"	97
712	...	XIV	270
721	...	XV	738
725	...	"	85
728	...	"	100
754	...	XIV	580
756	...	"	326
758	...	XVI	493
760	...	"	501
771	...	XV	594
781	...	XVI	188
786	...	"	947
790	...	XV	412
805	...	XVI	843
807	...	"	18
810	...	"	201
811	...	"	1002
812	...	"	522
813	...	XV	711
821	...	"	103
824	...	"	109

Madras Weekly Notes, 1912—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
825	...	XVI	688
825	...	Not reportable.
851	...	XVI	835
854	...	XV	343
860	...	XVI	484
861	...	"	139
870	...	"	53
879	...	"	438
880	...	XVII	253
881	...	XVI	589
881	...	"	520
882	...	"	30
887	...	"	542
888	...	XVII	293
889	...	XV	576
897	...	"	461
899	...	XVII	226
900	...	XV	434
901	...	"	573
902	...	"	457
903	...	XVII	308
904	...	"	261
907	...	"	265
908	...	XVI	428
912	...	"	839
915	...	XVII	273
917	...	XVI	587
918	...	XV	682
919	...	XVI	601
930	...	XVII	256
932	...	XVI	689
934	...	XV	574
935	...	XVI	250
943	...	XVII	284
944	...	"	64
944	...	XVI	210
951	...	"	584
954	...	"	400
956	...	XVII	389
956	...	XVI	692
957	...	XVII	389
959	...	"	251
959	...	XVI	411
960	...	"	934
962	...	"	486
963	...	"	328
967	...	XVII	513
972	...	"	347
974	...	"	342
976	...	XVI	197
982	...	"	518
984	...	"	869
993	...	"	405
995	...	"	694
997	...	XV	852
999	...	XVII	278
1000	...	XV	859
1001	...	XVII	393
1003	...	"	395
1004	...	"	399
1005	...	XVI	821
1011	...	XVII	417
1012	...	XVI	755
1029	...	XVII	544
1052	...	"	396

Madras Weekly Notes, 1912—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1056	...	XVI	14
1059	...	XVII	386
1061	...	XVI	78
1065	...	"	67
1071	...	XVII	434
1076	...	"	33
1080	...	"	158
1086	...	"	425
1091	...	XVI	478
1097	...	XVI	70
1106	...	XVII	441
1107	...	XVIII	662
1108	...	XIX	207
1110	...	"	335
1111	...	XVII	75
1112	...	"	4
1115	...	XVI	224
1116	...	XV	665
1116	...	XIX	144
1117	...	XV	294
1119	...	XVII	291
1121	...	"	572
1122	...	XVI	45
1124	...	"	209
1125	...	XIV	767
1127	...	XV	299
1129	...	"	648
1130	...	XVII	437
1135	...	XVI	803
1136	...	XVII	242
1138	...	"	422
1140	...	XVI	239
1150	...	"	830
1152	...	XVII	420
1154	...	"	65
1162	...	XVI	971
1164	...	XVII	429
1166	...	XVI	939
1168	...	XVII	837
1175	...	"	368
1176	...	"	508
1179	...	XVI	914
1188	...	XVII	497
1193	...	"	353
1204	...	"	48
1204	...	"	139
1206	...	"	569
1207	...	"	580
1208	...	"	583
1212	...	"	894
1217	...	"	337
1220	...	"	527
1222	...	"	185
1223	...	XVI	710
1227	...	XVII	748
1229	...	"	605
1231	...	"	308
1232	...	"	431
1233	...	XVI	178
1235	...	"	686
1237	...	XVII	597
1242	...	"	953
1243	...	"	410
1245	...	"	752
1247	...	"	627

Nagpur Law Reports, Vol. VIII.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
1	...	XIV	428
7	...	"	399
11	...	"	403
13	...	"	407
17	...	XIII	902
18	...	"	904
20	...	"	1005
22	...	"	909
29	...	"	982
34	...	XIV	684
36	...	"	786
39	...	"	788
42	...	"	673
44	...	"	685
50	...	XV	562
51	...	"	565
53	...	"	567
57	...	"	642
62	...	"	570
65	...	"	970
68	...	"	890
73	...	"	895
76	...	"	899
82	...	"	933
84	...	"	975
91	...	"	938
92	...	"	935
97	...	XVI	555
107	...	"	449
113	...	XVII	101
123	...	"	129
128	...	"	133
133	...	"	138
136	...	"	141
139	...	"	144
147	...	XVII	370
150	...	"	363
154	...	"	366
159	...	"	378
161	...	"	616
163	...	"	606
169	...	"	621
172	...	"	624
174	...	"	638
177	...	"	884
179	...	"	886
182	...	"	887
185	...	"	889
188	...	"	893
190	...	"	899

Oudh Cases, Vol. XV.

1	...	XIV	8
7	...	XIII	986
22	...	"	984
25	...	"	979
33	...	XV	181
39	...	XIV	584
43	...	XV	191
45	...	"	189
49	...	XIII	976

Oudh Cases, Vol. XV—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
55	...	XV	2
58	...	"	202
67	...	XIII	613
78	...	XV	212
81	...	"	214
91	...	XV	385
99	...	"	389
111	...	"	394
117	...	XIII	566
122	...	"	495
127	...	XV	747
153	...	XIV	301
159	...	XIII	609
170	...	"	554
177	...	XV	967
183	...	"	972
192	...	XVI	344
202	...	XIV	731
211	...	XV	5
223	...	XVI	471
234	...	XV	523
239	...	XVI	476
244	...	XV	616
253	...	"	250
257	...	XVII	81
263	...	"	72
270	...	XVI	92
271	...	"	197
278	...	XVII	396
285	...	XVI	78
289	...	XVII	420
291	...	"	424
294	...	"	430
295	...	XV	857
301	...	XVI	876
304	...	"	592
311	...	XVII	464
314	...	"	466
317	...	"	469
319	...	"	470
321	...	XVIII	641
345	...	XV	244
351	...	XVIII	653
364	...	XIV	339
373	...	XV	439
380	...	XVIII	977
381	...	XIX	38
386	...	"	170
389	...	XVI	800
397	...	"	882

Punjab Law Reporter, Vol. XIII.

No.
1	...	XII	576
2	...	"	605
3	...	"	530
4	...	"	532
5	...	"	625
6	...	"	616
7	...	"	617
8	...	"	623
	...		623

Punjab Law Reporetr, Vol. XIII, 1912—contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
10	...	XII	624
11	...	"	515
12	...	XIII	344
13	...	"	405
14	...	"	6
15	...	"	20
16	...	"	32
17	...	"	27
18	...	"	28
19	...	"	50
20	...	"	109
21	...	"	58
22	...	"	62
23	...	"	167
24	...	"	171
25	...	"	172
26	...	"	68
27	...	"	18
28	...	"	92
29	...	XIV	494
30	...	XIII	305
31	...	XIV	799
32	...	XIII	960
33	...	XIV	674
34	...	XIII	957
35	...	XIV	793
36	...	XIII	955
37	...	"	924
38	...	"	330
39	...	"	348
40	...	"	326
41	...	"	177
42	...	XII	871
43	...	XIV	604
44	...	XIII	180
45	...	XII	857
46	...	XIII	220
47	...	"	877
48	...	XII	859
49	...	"	850
50	...	XIII	72
51	...	"	298
52	..	"	73
53	...	"	77
54	...	XV	467
55	...	XII	595
56	...	XIII	209
57	...	"	873
58	...	XV	469
59	...	XIII	930
60	...	"	928
61	...	"	511
62	...	XIV	468
63	...	XV	478
64	...	XIV	758
65	...	XIII	812
66	...	XV	314
67	...	"	316
68	...	"	318
69	...	XIII	312
70	...	"	433
71	...	"	421
72	...	"	343
73	...	"	401
74	...	XIV	510

Punjab Law Reporter, Vol. XIII, 1912—contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
75	...	XIV	512
76	...	"	624
77	...	XIII	444
78	...	XIV	479
79	...	XIII	319
80	...	XIV	463
81	...	"	477
82	...	XIII	859
83	...	"	824
84	...	"	816
85	...	"	863
86	...	XIV	492
87	...	XIII	861
88	...	XIV	495
89	...	"	351
90	...	XV	507
91	...	XIII	647
92	...	"	650
93	...	"	408
94	...	"	409
95	...	"	427
96	...	"	428
97	...	"	430
98	...	"	316
99	...	"	571
100	...	"	539
101	...	"	447
102	...	"	448
103	...	"	526
104	...	XII	862
105	...	XIII	790
106	...	XIV	247
107	...	XIII	714
108	...	"	665
109	...	XV	195
110	...	"	192
111	...	"	92
112	...	"	307
113	...	"	95
114	...	"	88
115	...	XIII	927
116	...	XV	309
117	...	XIII	998
118	...	XIV	284
119	...	XIII	719
120	...	"	720
121	...	"	621
122	...	"	711
123	...	"	563
124	...	XIV	45
125	...	XIII	782
126	...	"	667
127	...	"	482
128	...	"	709
129	...	XVI	116
130	...	"	119
131	...	"	122
132	...	"	125
133	...	XV	62
134	...	XIII	445
135	...	"	549
136	...	XIV	16
137	...	"	789
138	...	XIII	852
139	...	XIV	779

Punjab Law Reporter, Vol. XIII, 1912 - contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
140	...	XIII	855
141	...	XIV	751
142	...	"	66
143	...	"	47
144	...	XIII	857
145	...	"	561
146	...	XIV	1008
147	...	XV	979
148	...	XIII	559
149	...	XV	404
150	...	XIII	953
151	...	"	661
152	...	XV	721
153	...	XIV	783
154	...	XVI	127
155	...	XIV	335
156	...	XV	725
157	...	XIV	486
158	...	XVI	867
159	...	"	889
160	...	XIV	562
161	...	"	523
162	...	"	561
163	...	XVI	891
164	...	XIV	532
165	...	"	232
166	...	XVI	769
167	...	"	855
168	...	XIII	695
169	...	XVI	834
170	...	XVII	223
171	...	XVI	838
172	...	"	842
173	...	XV	866
174	...	"	559
175	...	"	83
176	...	XVII	254
177	...	XVI	844
178	...	XV	658
179	...	"	555
180	...	XVI	847
181	...	"	851
182	...	"	24
183	...	"	884
184	...	XVII	245
185	...	XVI	29
186	...	"	886
187	...	XVII	216
188	...	XVI	80
189	...	XV	845
190	...	XVII	243
191	...	XV	563
192	...	XVII	235
193	...	XVI	527
194	...	"	528
195	...	"	528
196	...	XVII	214
197	...	XVI	232
198	...	Not reportable.
199	...	"
200	...	"
201	...	"
202	...	XV	122
203	...	Not reportable.
204	...	XV	708

Punjab Law Reporter, Vol. XIII, 1912—concld.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
205	...	XV	734
206	...	Not reportable.
207	...	XV	839
208	...	XVII	503
209	...	"	208
210	...	XVI	463
211	...	"	466
212	...	"	475
213	...	"	468
214	...	XVII	251
215	...	XVI	254
216	...	"	270
217	...	"	247
218	...	XVII	36
219	...	XVI	775
220	...	"	779
221	...	"	772
222	...	"	777
223	...	Not reportable.
224	...	XVII	406
225	...	XV	407
226	...	"	272
227	...	"	917
228	...	"	25
229	...	"	28
230	...	"	83
231	...	XIV	535
232	...	XVII	395
233	...	XV	12
234	...	"	187
235	...	"	266
236	...	"	928
237	...	"	275
238	...	XIV	752
239	...	XVIII	883
240	...	XIV	379
241	...	XV	939
242	...	Not reportable.
243	...	XVII	54
244	...	XV	494
245	...	XVI	521
246	...	XVII	390
247	...	XVI	752
248	...	"	797
249	...	"	21
250	...	XVII	21
251	...	XV	930
252	...	XIV	375
253	...	Not reportable.
254	...	XVII	58
255	...	XIV	737
256	...	Not reportable.
257	...	XVII	392
258	...	"	543
259	...	XVI	804
260	...	XIV	426

Supplement.

1	...	XV	708
2	...	"	102
3	...	"	106
4	...	"	108
5	...	"	116
6	...	"	140
7	...	XVI	488

Punjab Record, Vol. XLVII, 1912, Civil—contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	XIII	930
2	...	XI	523
3	...	XIII	873
4	...	XI	35
5	...	XII	595
6	...	"	453
7	...	XI	708
8	...	X	141
9	...	XI	404
10	...	XIV	510
11	...	X	207
12	...	XIV	624
13	...	X	236
14	...	XIV	486
15	...	XI	76
16	...	XIV	492
17	...	"	495
18	...	"	512
19	...	XIII	27
20	...	X	130
21	...	XI	443
22	...	"	880
23	...	XIV	776
24	...	XIII	180
25	...	"	177
26	...	"	167
27	...	XIV	779
28	...	"	782
29	...	XIII	316
30	...	"	343
31	...	XIV	783
32	...	VIII	666
33	...	XIV	787
34	...	"	789
35	...	XI	317
36	...	XIII	28
37	...	XV	402
38	...	XIII	50
39	...	"	405
40	...	"	409
41	...	XV	404
42	...	XVI	127
43	...	XIII	430
44	...	"	427
45	...	"	421
46	...	"	482
47	...	"	526
48	...	"	561
49	...	"	549
50	...	"	539
51	...	"	564
52	...	XIV	71
53	...	XIII	665
54	...	XIV	78
55	...	XIII	568
56	...	XV	930
57	...	"	507
58	...	XIII	662
59	...	"	621
60	...	XIV	468
61	...	XV	934
62	...	XIII	719
63	...	XIV	23
64	...	"	40
65	...	XIII	571

Punjab Record, Vol. XLVII, 1912, Civil—concld.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
66	...	XIII	559
67	...	"	667
68	...	XVI	463
69	...	"	475
70	...	XIV	45
71	...	XVI	466
72	...	XIV	70
73	...	"	252
74	...	"	232
75	...	XVI	468
76	...	XIV	523
77	...	"	122
78	...	"	247
79	...	XVI	772
80	...	XIV	328
81	...	"	239
82	...	XVI	775
83	...	XV	347
84	...	XIV	566
85	...	"	532
86	...	XVI	777
87	...	XIV	240
88	...	XVII	36
89	...	XVI	779
90	...	XVII	21
91	...	XIV	751
92	...	"	749
93	...	"	737
94	...	XV	275
95	...	"	161
96	...	"	773
97	...	"	62
98	...	"	106
99	...	"	941
100	...	XVI	21
101	...	XV	845
102	...	"	839
103	...	XVI	80
104	...	"	24
105	...	"	29
106	...	XVII	857
107	...	"	901
108	...	"	864
109	...	XV	463
110	...	XVII	907
111	...	XV	12
112	...	XVII	903
113	...	XIV	752
114	...	XIV	558
115	...	XV	140
116	...	"	559
117	...	XVI	491
118	...	XVIII	528
119	...	"	529
120	...	"	532
121	...	XVII	208
122	...	XVI	983
123	...	X	512
124	...	XV	285
125	...	XVII	388
126	...	XIII	344

Criminal.

1	...	XIII	924

Punjab Record, Vol. XLVII, 1912—Criminal—concld.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
2	...	XII	515
3	...	XIII	209
4	...	"	782
5	...	XIV	194
6	...	"	197
7	...	XVII	54
8	...	XVI	521
9	...	XVIII	265
10	...	"	886

Revenue.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	XIII	18
2	...	XV	925
3	...	"	937
4	...	"	942
5	...	XVII	979
6	...	"	991
7	...	XVIII	56

Punjab Weekly Reporter, Vol. VII*, 1912—Civil.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
1	...	XIII	290
2	...	"	863
3	...	"	859
4	...	"	816
5	...	"	861
6	...	"	344
7	...	"	405
8	...	"	857
9	...	"	852
10	...	"	855
11	...	"	850
12	...	"	314
13	...	"	947
14	...	"	953
15	...	"	28
16	...	XIV	375
17	...	"	379
18	...	XIII	68
19	...	"	77
20	...	"	92
21	...	"	167
22	...	"	180
23	...	"	58
24	...	"	445
25	...	"	955
26	...	"	957
27	...	"	960
28	...	"	6
29	...	"	171
30	...	"	62
31	...	"	877
32	...	"	50
33	...	"	930
34	...	"	73
35	...	XIV	468
36	...	XIII	20
37	...	"	172
38	...	XIV	463
39	...	XIII	27

Punjab Weekly Reporter, Vol. VII*, 1912—Civil—contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
40	...	XIV	477
41	...	"	479
42	...	XI	523
43	...	XIII	32
44	...	"	873
45	...	"	401
46	...	XI	35
47	...	XIII	348
48	...	"	298
49	...	"	447
50	...	"	695
51	...	"	312
52	...	"	408
53	...	"	539
54	...	XIV	352
55	...	XIII	647
56	...	XIV	495
57	...	XIII	448
58	...	XIV	624
59	...	XIII	720
60	...	"	319
61	...	"	665
62	...	"	709
63	...	XIV	247
64	...	XIII	719
65	...	XIV	512
66	...	XIII	714
67	...	"	511
68	...	"	428
69	...	"	621
70	...	"	427
71	...	XV	195
72	...	XIII	650
73	...	XV	192
74	...	XIII	430
75	...	"	444
76	...	"	561
77	...	"	661
78	...	"	433
79	...	"	409
80	...	XIV	335
81	...	"	1008
82	...	XIII	559
83	...	XV	721
84	...	"	725
85	...	XIII	421
86	...	XIV	782
87	...	XV	187
88	...	XIV	783
89	...	XIII	556
90	...	XIV	789
91	...	"	45
92	...	"	751
93	...	"	776
94	...	XV	876
95	...	"	877
96	...	XIV	486
97	...	"	749
98	...	XIII	711
99	...	XVI	116
100	...	"	119
101	...	"	122
102	...	"	125
103	...	XIII	549

Punjab Weekly Reporter, Vol. VII*, 1912—Civil contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
104	...	XIV	779
105	...	"	66
106	...	XV	62
107	...	XIV	73
108	...	XV	122
109	...	XIV	332
110	...	XV	878
111	...	"	560
112	...	XIV	674
113	...	"	40
114	...	XIII	316
115	...	"	326
116	...	XIV	16
117	...	XV	404
118	...	XIV	799
119	...	"	252
120	...	"	284
121	...	XV	941
122	...	XIV	78
123	...	XVI	127
124	...	XV	556
125	...	XIII	177
126	...	XVI	488
127	...	XIV	150
128	...	XVI	491
129	...	XIV	70
130	...	XV	402
131	...	XIII	318
132	...	XV	285
133	...	XIII	343
134	...	XVI	495
135	...	XV	266
136	...	"	463
137	...	XIV	566
138	...	XVI	684
139	...	XIII	564
140	...	XIV	492
141	...	"	523
142	...	XV	478
143	...	XIV	561
144	...	XIII	812
145	...	"	526
146	...	XVI	855
147	...	"	867
148	...	XIV	232
149	...	XVI	889
150	...	XIV	562
151	...	XVI	891
152	...	XIV	532
153	...	XVI	29
154	...	"	884
155	...	"	886
156	...	"	24
157	...	"	80
158	...	XV	845
159	...	"	161
160	...	"	866
161	...	"	507
162	...	XIV	752
163	...	XVII	223
164	...	XIV	737
165	...	XVII	235
166	...	XV	116
167	...	XVII	243

Punjab Weekly Reporter, Vol. VII*, 1912—Civil contd.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
168	...	XIV	793
169	...	XVII	245
170	...	XV	347
171	...	XVII	254
172	...	"	504
173	...	XIV	60
174	...	XVII	247
175	...	XV	25
176	...	XVII	251
177	...	XIV	71
178	...	XV	275
179	...	"	102
180	...	XIII	482
181	...	XVII	270
182	...	XV	272
183	...	XVII	232
184	...	XIII	330
185	...	XV	934
186	...	XIV	328
187	...	XVII	254
188	...	XIV	236
189	...	"	244
190	...	"	331
191	...	XV	140
192	...	XVI	468
193	...	XIV	240
194	...	XVI	463
195	...	XIV	56
196	...	"	47
197	...	XVII	208
198	...	XIV	558
199	...	"	122
200	...	XVI	466
201	...	XV	407
202	...	XVI	475
203	...	XIV	537
204	...	"	465
205	...	XV	170
206	...	XIV	409
207	...	Not reportable.
208	...	XIV	19
209	...	XIII	571
210	...	XV	658
211	...	"	559
212	...	"	734
213	...	"	839
214	...	"	555
215	...	XVIII	218
216	...	XIV	539
217	...	XVI	772
218	...	XV	563
219	...	XVI	775
220	...	XIV	535
221	...	XV	773
222	...	XIV	23
223	...	"	239
224	...	XV	12
225	...	XVI	777
226	...	XV	108
227	...	XVI	779
228	...	XV	99
229	...	"	57
230	...	XVII	36
231	...	XV	28

Punjab Weekly Reporter, Vol. VII, 1912—Civil—concld.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
232	...	XVI	851
233	...	XV	106
234	...	XVI	847
235	...	XIV	330
236	...	XVI	844
237	...	XIII	550
238	...	XVI	21
239	...	XVIII	750
240	...	XIII	662
241	...	XVIII	746
242	...	XIII	568
243	...	"	670
244	...	XVII	214
245	...	XV	930
246	...	"	469
247	...	XIII	563
248	...	XVII	216
249	...	"	379
250	...	XIV	516
251	...	XVII	388
252	...	XIV	513
253	...	XVII	392
254	...	XIV	494
255	...	XIII	667
256	...	XVI	983
257	...	XV	708
258	...	XVII	510
259	...	XVI	797
260	...	XVII	508
261	...	XVI	752
262	...	XVII	21
263	...	XVI	838
264	...	XVI	959
265	...	"	804
266	...	XVII	149
267	...	XIV	510
268	...	XVII	581
269	...	"	196
270	...	"	187
271	...	XVI	842
272	...	"	834
273	...	"	769
274	...	"	865
275	...	"	967
276	...	"	979
277	...	"	961
278	...	"	995
279	...	"	950
280	...	"	957
281	...	"	987

Criminal.

1	...	XIII	824
2	...	Not reportable.
3	...	XIII	928
4	...	XV	314
5	...	XIV	758
6	...	XV	318
7	...	"	316
8	...	"	95
9	...	XIII	209
10	...	XV	88
11	...	XIII	782

Punjab Weekly Reporter, Vol. VII, 1912—Criminal—concld.

No.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
12	...	XV	307
13	...	XIII	109
14	...	XV	92
15	...	XIII	924
16	...	XV	309
17	...	XIV	604
18	...	XV	979
19	...	XIII	998
20	...	XV	966
21	...	XIII	927
22	...	XV	971
23	...	XV	983
24	...	XIV	197
25	...	XVI	162
26	...	"	169
27	...	XIV	194
28	...	XVI	520
29	...	XIII	220
30	...	XV	83
31	...	"	494
32	...	XVI	526
33	...	"	527
34	...	"	528
35	...	"	528
36	...	XVII	543
37	...	XVI	521
38	...	XVII	406
39	...	"	54
40	...	"	575
41	...	Not reportable.
42	...	XVII	58
43	..	"	49
44	...	XVIII	265

Revenue.

1	...	XIII	815
2	...	"	865
3	...	XV	927
4	...	"	914
5	...	XIII	18
6	...	XV	937
7	...	"	925
8	...	"	942

—

Sind Law Reporter, Vol. V.

Page.
107	...	XIII	225
122	...	"	214
123	...	"	210
125	...	"	234
129	...	"	215
130	...	XII	987
131	...	"	986
133	...	XIII	217
135	...	"	219
136	...	"	220
137	...	"	222
140	...	"	237
153	...	"	213
155	...	"	244

Sind Law Reporter, Vol. V—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
168	...	XIII	255
173	...	"	284
174	...	"	273
179	...	"	223
181	...	"	260
184	...	"	264
190	...	"	224
192	...	XV	757
220	...	"	794
222	...	"	785
237	...	"	805
240	...	"	819
245	...	"	824
247	...	"	810
249	...	"	825
254	...	"	828
256	...	"	807
257	...	"	801
259	...	"	830
860	...	"	832
263	...	"	808
264	...	"	804
265	...	"	803
266	...	"	802
267	...	"	836
270	...	"	813

Vol. VI.

1	...	XVI	641
65	...	"	678
67	...	"	675
71	...	"	768
72	...	"	773
74*n*	...	"	771
76	...	"	753
81	...	XVII	80
82	...	"	64
83	...	"	61
85	...	XVI	868
86	...	"	845
89	...	"	861
97	...	XVII	31
101	...	"	412
101	...	"	408
103	...	"	37
106	...	"	79
107	...	"	39
114	...	"	44
116	...	"	62
120	.	"	403
121	...	"	78

—

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII.

1	...	XIII	111
3	...	"	109
4	...	"	97
6	...	"	99
8	...	"	101
9	...	"	102
15	...	"	108

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
16	...	XIII	110
17	...	"	209
18	...	"	210
19	...	"	211
21	...	"	213
21	...	"	213
22	...	"	214
23	...	"	215
23	...	"	215
24	...	"	216
25	...	"	217
26	...	"	218
27	...	"	219
28	...	"	220
28	...	"	220
29	...	"	221
30	...	"	222
31	...	"	223
32	...	"	224
33	...	"	273
35	...	"	275
38	...	"	278
39	...	"	279
42	...	"	282
43	...	"	283
44	...	"	284
44	...	"	284
46	...	"	286
48	...	"	288
49	...	"	385
50	...	"	386
52	...	"	388
53	...	"	389
54	...	"	390
55	...	"	391
56	...	"	392
58	...	"	394
59	...	"	395
61	...	"	397
62	...	"	398
62	...	"	398
65	...	"	721
120	...	"	776
121	...	"	777
122	...	"	778
122	...	"	778
124	...	"	780
125	...	"	781
125	...	"	781
126	...	"	782
126	...	"	782
127	...	"	783
129	...	"	817
131	...	"	819
136	...	"	824
137	...	"	825
138	...	"	826
139	...	"	827
140	...	"	828
141	...	"	829
141	...	"	829
142	...	"	830
143	...	"	831
144	...	"	832
144	...	"	832

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
145	...	XIII	833
156	...	,,	844
159	...	,,	847
161	...	,,	913
162	...	,,	914
164	...	,,	916
167	...	,,	919
169	...	,,	921
170	...	,,	922
172	...	,,	924
173	...	,,	925
175	...	,,	927
175	...	,,	927
176	...	,,	928
177	..	,,	993
182	...	,,	998
183	...	,,	999
184	...	,,	1000
185	...	,,	1001
186	...	,,	1002
188	...	,,	1004
188	...	,,	1004
189	...	,,	1005
190	...	,,	1006
191	...	,,	1007
193	...	XIV	193
194	...	,,	194
195	...	,,	195
197	...	,,	197
199	...	,,	199
201	...	,,	201
203	...	,,	203
203	...	,,	203
204	...	,,	204
205	...	,,	205
206	...	,,	206
207	...	,,	207
208	...	,,	208
209	...	,,	305
218	...	,,	314
221	...	,,	317
222	...	,,	318
223	...	,,	319
224	...	,,	320
225	...	,,	417
226	...	,,	418
234	...	,,	426
236	...	,,	428
239	...	,,	431
240	...	,,	432
241	...	,,	593
244	...	,,	596
245	...	,,	597
246	...	,,	598
246	...	,,	598
247	...	,,	599
248	...	,,	600
249	...	,,	601
250	...	,,	602
251	...	,,	603
252	...	,,	604
254	...	,,	606
255	...	,,	607
255	...	,,	607
257	...	,,	641

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
259	...	XIV	643
265	...	,,	649
267	...	,,	651
268	...	,,	652
269	...	,,	653
271	...	,,	655
272	...	,,	656
273	...	,,	657
274	...	,,	658
275	...	,,	659
282	...	,,	666
283	...	,,	667
285	...	,,	669
285	...	,,	669
287	...	,,	671
288	...	,,	672
289	...	,,	753
291	...	,,	755
293	...	,,	757
293	...	,,	757
294	...	,,	758
295	...	,,	759
296	...	,,	760
296	...	,,	760
297	...	,,	761
298	...	,,	762
299	...	,,	763
300	...	,,	764
300	...	,,	764
301	...	,,	765
302	...	,,	766
303	...	,,	767
304	...	,,	768
305	...	,,	849
352	...	,,	896
421	...	,,	965
424	...	,,	968
426	...	,,	970
429	...	,,	973
430	...	,,	974
433	...	XV	65
440	...	,,	72
443	...	,,	75
445	...	,,	77
447	...	,,	79
449	...	,,	81
451	...	,,	83
452	...	,,	84
453	...	,,	85
456	...	,,	88
457	...	,,	89
460	...	,,	92
461	...	,,	93
463	...	,,	95
464	...	,,	96
465	...	,,	305
466	...	,,	306
467	...	,,	307
468	...	,,	308
469	...	,,	309
470	...	,,	310
471	...	,,	311
473	...	,,	313
474	...	,,	314
475	...	,,	314

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
476	...	XV	316
477	...	,,	317
478	...	,,	318
479	...	,,	319
480	...	,,	320
481	...	,,	481
482	...	,,	482
482	...	,,	482
484	...	,,	484
485	...	,,	485
486	...	,,	486
487	...	,,	487
488	...	,,	488
488	...	,,	488
489	...	,,	489
491	...	,,	491
492	...	,,	492
492	...	,,	492
493	...	,,	493
494	...	,,	494
495	...	,,	495
496	...	,,	496
497	...	,,	641
498	...	,,	642
501	...	,,	645
502	...	,,	646
503	...	,,	647
504	...	,,	648
505	...	,,	649
506	...	,,	650
508	...	,,	652
510	...	,,	654
511	...	,,	655
512	...	,,	656
513	...	,,	785
513	...	,,	785
521	...	,,	793
522	...	,,	794
523	..	,,	795
524	...	,,	796
525	...	,,	797
526	...	,,	798
527	...	,,	799
528	...	,,	800
529	...	,,	801
530	...	,,	802
530	...	,,	802
531	...	,,	803
531	...	,,	803
532	...	,,	804
533	...	,,	805
534	...	,,	806
535	...	,,	807
536	...	,,	808
536	...	,,	808
537	...	,,	809
538	...	,,	810
539	...	,,	811
541	...	,,	813
542	...	,,	814
545	...	,,	961
550	...	,,	966
551	...	,,	967
554	...	,,	970
555	...	,,	971

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Page.
556	...	XV	972
559	...	,,	975
563	...	,,	979
565	...	,,	981
566	...	,,	982
567	...	,,	983
568	...	,,	984
569	...	,,	985
571	...	,,	987
574	...	,,	990
575	...	,,	991
576	...	,,	992
578	...	,,	994
580	...	,,	996
580	...	,,	996
583	...	,,	999
584	...	,,	1000
586	...	,,	1002
588	...	,,	1004
590	...	,,	1006
591	...	,,	1007
592	...	,,	1008
593	...	XVI	161
594	...	,,	162
595	...	,,	163
596	...	,,	164
597	...	,,	165
598	...	,,	166
599	...	,,	167
601	...	,,	169
603	...	,,	171
608	...	,,	176
609	...	,,	257
677	...	,,	325
679	...	,,	327
680	...	,,	328
684	...	,,	332
685	...	,,	333
687	...	,,	335
688	..	,,	336
689	...	,,	497
691	...	,,	499
693	...	,,	501
701	...	,,	509
702	...	,,	510
703	...	,,	511
704	...	,,	512
705	...	,,	513
707	...	,,	515
708	...	,,	516
709	...	,,	517
710	...	,,	518
712	...	,,	520
712	...	,,	520
713	...	,,	521
714	...	,,	522
715	...	,,	523
716	...	,,	524
717	...	,,	525
718	...	,,	526
719	...	,,	527
720	...	,,	528
720	...	,,	528
721	...	,,	753
723	...	,,	755

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
736	...	XVI	768
737	...	XVII	49
739	...	"	51
742	...	"	54
746	...	"	58
748	...	"	60
749	...	"	61
750	...	"	62
751	...	"	63
752	...	"	64
752	...	"	64
753	...	"	65
759	...	"	71
760	...	"	72
763	...	"	75
764	...	"	76
766	...	"	78
766	...	"	78
767	...	"	79
768	...	"	80
769	...	"	401
770	...	"	402
771	...	"	403
772	...	"	404

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
774	...	XVII	406
774	...	"	406
776	...	"	408
776	...	"	408
777	...	"	409
778	...	"	410
780	...	"	412
781	...	"	413
782	...	"	414
782	...	"	414
783	...	"	415
784	...	"	416
785	...	"	529
786	...	"	530
787	...	"	531
787	...	"	531
788	...	"	532
789	...	"	533
790	...	"	534
792	...	"	536
793	...	"	537
795	...	"	539
796	...	"	540
797	...	"	541

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—contd.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
798	...	XVII	542
799	...	"	543
800	...	"	544
815	...	"	559
821	...	"	565
823	...	"	567
825	...	"	569
826	...	"	570
827	...	"	571
828	...	"	572
829	...	"	573
830	...	"	574
831	...	"	575
831	...	"	575
832	...	"	576
833	...	"	705
841	...	"	713
842	...	"	714
844	...	"	716
845	...	"	717
846	...	"	718
848	...	"	720
849	...	"	785
850	...	"	786

Criminal Law Journal, Vol. XIII—concld.

Page.		Ind. Cas. Vol.	Ind. Cas. Page.
853	...	XVII	789
855	...	"	791
855	...	"	791
856	...	"	792
858	...	"	794
859	...	"	795
860	...	"	796
860	...	"	796
861	...	"	797
862	...	"	798
863	...	"	799
863	...	"	799
864	...	"	800
875	...	"	811
877	...	"	813
877	...	"	813
888	...	"	824
897	...	"	993
904	...	"	1000
905	...	"	1001
912	...	"	1008
913	...	XVI	788
916	...	"	780

I
TABLE
OF
Cases reported in Volume XVII of Indian Cases, 1912.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Abdul Aziz v. Basdeo Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 183; 34 A. 604 ...	89
Abdul Ghafur v. Shiam Sundar Das ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	303
Abdul Karim v. Allah Bakhsh ...	s. c. 197 P. W. R. 1912; 209 P. L. R. 1912; 121 P. R. 1912 ...	208
Abdul Khadir v. Nagasarupu ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1004 ...	399
Abdul Khalek v. Emperor ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 72; 13 Cr. L. J. 877 ...	813
Abdulla v. Mirthur ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 537; 12 M. L. T. 497; (1912) M. W. N. 1164 ...	429
Abdullah Khan v. Basharat Hussain ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 233; 13 M. L. T. 182; (1913) M. W. N. 131; 35 A. 48 P. C. ...	737
Achhru v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 860; 8 P. W. R. 1913 Cr. ...	796
Adabala Muthiyalu, In re ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 739 ...	51
Adusumilli Singarayadu v. Sayani Narayanasami ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 915 ...	273
Agyaram v. Deorao ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 161 ...	616
Ahmadji v. Shahanchi ...	s. c. 12 P. L. R. 1913 ...	378
Ahmedbhoy v. Bombay Fire and Marine Insurance Co., Ltd. ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 11; 11 A. L. J. 42; 15 Bom. L. R. 19; (1913) M. W. N. 64; 17 C. W. N. 269; 17 C. L. J. 154; 24 M. L. J. 328 P. C. ...	755
Ajumal v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 103 ...	37
Aktowli v. Tarak Nath Ghose ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 328 ...	266
Ala Singh v. Khark Singh ...	s. c. 253 P. W. R. 1912; 257 P. L. R. 1912 ...	392
Ali Mardan v. Bakar Khan ...	s. c. 7 P. W. R. 1913; 27 P. L. R. 1913 ...	680
Allahdad Khan v. Sant Ram ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 506; 35 A. 74 ...	486
Amolak Shah v. Charan Das ...	s. c. 16 P. W. R. 1913 ...	634
Anglo-Indian Trading Co., Ld. v. Gerald Frank	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 930 ...	256
Annamalay Chetty v. Na U Ma ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 157 ...	909

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Ardeshir Kavasji Karanjavalla, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 970; 13 Cr. L. J. 845 ...	717
Armugha Mudeliar v. Yagamba Bai Ammani	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 227 ...	323
Arunachella Chetti v. Muthu Chettiar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 347 ...	586
Arunachella Chettiar v. Muthiah Chettiar ...	*Mad. High Court ...	758
Arunachellam Chetty v Prabhayya Chetty ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1207 ...	580
Arunagiri Mudaliar v. Uthando Mudali ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 311; (1912) M. W. N. 1136 ...	242
Aulia Khan v. Kaushi Ram ...	e. c. 25 P. W. R. 1913 ...	677
Azima Bibi v. Shamalanand ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 121; 13 M. L. T. 159; (1913) M. W. N. 125; 11 A. L. J. 169 P. C. ...	758
Aziz-ud-din v. Bhagwan Das ...	s. c. 6 P. R. 1912 Rev.; 36 P. L. R. 1913 ...	991
Babaji Akoba v. Dattu Laxman ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 923; 37 B. 64...	642
Babui Bacha Kumar v. Babui Suraj Kala Kumar ...	P. C. ...	763
Badri Pershad v. Civil Nazir of Ambala ...	*Panjab Chief Court ...	751
Badri Prasad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 473; 13 Cr. L. J. 861; 35 A. 63 ...	797
Baggu Mal v. Emperor ...	s. c. 254 P. L. R. 1912; 42 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 746 ...	58
Baggu Simmanna v. Itragulu Chinnaya ...	*Mad. High Court ...	375
Bai Fatma v. Ali Mahomed ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1178 ...	946
Bai Gulab v. Thakorlal ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 748; 36 B. 622	86
Bai Ramkore v. Jamnadas ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 766; 37 B. 18...	95
Bajirao v Gulabsingh ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R 136 ...	141
Balaji v. Hastimal ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 188 ...	893
Balakrishna Pillay v. Narayanasawmy Naidu...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 215 ...	14
Balmukund Sahai v. Tarini Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 360 ...	343
Balthazar and Sons v. Burma Engineering and Trading Co. ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 163 ...	916
Bando Krishna Kanbargi v. Narsinha Konher Deshpande ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 861; 37 B. 42...	210
Bank of Bombay v. Nandlal Thackerseydas ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 646; (1913) M. W. N. 29; 15 Bom. L. R. 1; 24 M. L. J. 177; 17 C. L. J. 146; 17 C. W. N. 358 P. C. ...	663
Banwari Lal v. Musammat Rama ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 533 ...	915
Barkat Ram v. Jagat Ram ...	s. c. 249 P. W. R. 1912 ...	379
Barkatullah v. Sadho Kalwar ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 429; 13 Cr. L. J. 855 ...	791
Basaveswaraswami v. Bellary Municipal Council	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 405; 23 M. L. J. 479; (1912) M. W. N. 1080 ...	158
Basawa Singh v. Bhagwan Kaur ...	s. c. 181 P. W. R. 1912; 216 P. L. R. 1912 ...	270

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Batuk Nath Mandal v. Bepin Bihari Chaudhuri	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 975; 17 C. L. J. 179 ...	90
Behram Jung v. Sultanali ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1106 ...	739
Beni Pershad Keori v. Raj Kumar Chowbey...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 124 ...	111
Bhagavatty Perumal Pillay, In re ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 862 ...	798
Bhagvandas v. Burjorji ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 807 ...	152
Bhagwati Prasad v. Bhagwati Prosad ...	s. c. 11 A. L. J. 76 ...	846
Bhicha Ram v. Bishambhar Nath ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 527 ...	957
Bhogirath Chandra Mandal v. Sital Chandra Sarkar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 955 ...	15
Bhojohari Das Adhikari v. Bhagabati Dasi ...	*Cal. High Court ...	494
Bhuki Koeri v. Ram Khelwan Prosad ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 311 ...	646
Bhura v. Ramrao ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 154 ...	366
Bhurchand Hunsraj Doshi v. Vira Champa Khachar ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 787; 37 B. 32...	142
Binapani Debi v. Sashibhushan Sinha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 133 ...	119
Bindhachal Rai v. Gaya Rai ...	*All. High Court ...	290
Biprodas Pal Chaudhri v. Sarat Chandra Singha	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 209 ...	168
Birj Lal v. Bua Ram ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 399 ...	292
Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh v. Debi Bakhsh Singh	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	329
Bissonath Prosad Malita v. Brindesri Prosad Singh ...	*Cal. High Court ...	577
Bommidi Bayyan Naidu v. Bommidi Suryanarayana ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 500; 23 M. L. J. 543; (1913) M. W. N. 1 F. B.	445
Brahamdeo Narain v. Ramdown Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 139 ...	125
Brij Indar Singh v. Bansi Lal ...	s. c. 88 P. R. 1912; 218 P. L. R. 1912; 230 P. W. R. 1912 ...	36
Brij Lal v. Ram Rattan ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	581
Budh Singh v. Ram Nath ...	s. c. 251 P. W. R. 1912; 125 P. R. 1912 ...	388
Chan Tha U v. Naw Bi ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 170 ...	956
Chand Mal v. Sansar Chand ...	s. c. 16 P. L. R. 1913 ...	311
Charnock Collieries Co. Ld. v. Bholanath Dhar	s. c. 39 C. 810 ...	976
Chatturbhuj Patnaik v. Krishna Chandra Patnaik ...	s. c, 16 C. L. J. 335; 17 C. W. N. 442 ...	276
Chhatku Rai v. Baldeo Shukul ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 330; 34 A. 659 ...	340
Chidambara Mudali v. Kozhandavelu Mudali	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1003 ...	395
Chillamuthu v. Muthudayar Servai ...	*Mad. High Court ...	740
Chimman Lal v. Sikandar Khan ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 387 ...	641
Choghatta v. Aso Mal ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	371
Chokalingam Mudaliar v. Mahomed Sheriff ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1212; 12 M. L. T. 594; 23 M. L. J. 680 ...	894
Chuttan Lal v. Kanhaya Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 478 ...	836
Collector of Ghazipur v. Balbhaddar Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 234 ...	25

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Coopoosami Chetty v. Duraisamy Chetty ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1220 ...	527
Cotha Krishnasawmy Chetty v. Sitaram Chetty	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 335; (1912) M. W. N. 967 ...	513
Court of Wards v. Ilahi Bakhsh ...	s. c. 1 P. W. R. 1913 P. C. ...	744
Crowdy v. O'Reilly ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 417 ...	966
D'Silva, Miss M. J. v. Minizis, Miss D. J. S.	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1207 ...	972
Daji v. Rukhma ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 159 ...	378
Dalip Narayan Singh v. Chait Narayan Singh	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 395 ...	927
Dalip Narayan Singh v. Chait Narain Singh...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 401 ...	931
Dar Bux v. Dar Meah ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 165; 6 L. B. R. 60	930
Debi Prosad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 361; 13 Cr. L. J. 829; 35 A. 8 ...	573
Deokinandan Pershad v. Bindeshwari Parshad	*All. High Court ...	523
Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad v. Gur Dayal Singh ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 311 ...	464
Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Kadir Mirza	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 784; 17 C. W. N. 831 ...	416
Dharani Mudali v. Meenamba Bai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 592 ...	617
Dhondu Dagdu Patil v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 949; 37 B. 101	673
Dhuramsi Morarji Goculdas, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1031 ...	730
Digambar Nanda v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 381 ...	917
Dilan Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 826 ...	570
Dinabandhu Nandi v. Mashuda Khatun ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 318 ...	263
Dost Muhammad v. Altaf Husain Khan ...	*All. High Court ...	512
Durai Rajah Mudaliar v. Vadivelu ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 159; 6 L. B. R. 61 ...	911
Dutt, K. B. v. Gostha Behary Bhuiya ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1006; 16 C. L. J. 379 ...	207
Dwarkanath Amrit v. Mahadev Balkrishna ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 938; 37 B. 91	661
Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co. Ld. v. Fakuruddin Mahomed Chowdhury ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 1 ...	849
Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co., Ld. v. Rakea Khatun ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 997 ...	202
Eknath Pandoba Kosti v. Dagduram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 750; 36 B. 624	87
Emperor v. Abdul Rahiman Momin ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 891; 13 Cr. L. J. 786 ...	530
——— v. Alibhai Miabhai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 875; 13 Cr. L. J. 787 ...	531
——— v. Allahrakhio ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 101; 13 Cr. L. J. 780	412
——— v. Brian Bonham Carter ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 815; 9 P. W. R. 1913 Cr. F. B. ...	559
——— v. Budhankhan ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 893; 13 Cr. L. J. 793 ...	537
——— v. Chagan Rajaram ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 116; 13 Cr. L. J. 750	62
——— v. Chanda Singh ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 737; 7 P. L. R. 1913; 43 P. W. R. 1913 Cr. ...	49

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Emperor v. Chandabhai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1160; 13 Cr. L. J. 904 ...	1000
——— v. Channing Arnold ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 239; 13 Cr. L. J. 877; 6 L. B. R. 129 F. B. ...	813
——— v. Chimanlal Jagjivan ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 876; 13 Cr. L. J. 790 ...	534
——— v. Dadabhai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 882; 13 Cr. L. J. 788 ...	532
——— v. Ganesh Narayan Dikshit ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 972; 13 Cr. L. J. 833 ...	705
——— v. Gangaram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1163; 13 Cr. L. J. 912 ...	1008
——— v. Gulshah ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 121; 13 Cr. L. J. 766	78
——— v. Intya Salabatkhan ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 897; 13 Cr. L. J. 842 ...	714
——— v. Isardas ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 106; 13 Cr. L. J. 767	79
——— v. Istlingapa ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 887; 13 Cr. L. J. 798 ...	542
——— v. Kisan Kevji ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 713; 13 Cr. L. J. 748 ...	60
——— v. Koya Hansji ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 964; 13 Cr. L. J. 860 ...	796
——— v. Lallubhai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 960; 13 Cr. L. J. 855 ...	791
——— v. Naga Tima ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 956; 13 Cr. L. J. 853 ...	739
——— v. Paimal Nai ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 351; 13 Cr. L. J. 827 ...	571
——— v. Tatia Mahadev ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 961; 13 Cr. L. J. 858 ...	794
——— v. Tirithdas ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 120; 13 Cr. L. J. 771	403
——— v. Vishnu Balkrishna Ram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 965; 13 Cr. L. J. 849 ...	785
Era Apena v. Era Swami ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 575 ...	963
Faiz Muhammad v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 107 P. R. 1912; 34 P. L. R. 1913 ...	901
Fateh Bahadur v. Lalta Pershad ...	*All. High Court ...	488
Gadadhar Ghose v. Midnapur Zemindari Co., Ld.	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 141 ...	126
Gaffur Saheb v. Moosa Saheb ...	*Mad. High Court ...	124
Gaji v. Jumanshah ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 83; 13 Cr. L. J. 749	61
Ganapathi Aiyar v. Sivamalai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 207; 23 M. L. J. 306; (1912) M. W. N. 1112 ...	4
Ganeshdas v. Musammat Nimbi ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 174 ...	638
Ganeshlal v. Dhondiba ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 169 ...	621
Ganga Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 383; 13 Cr. L. J. 772	404

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Ganpat Rai v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 792; 17 C. W. N. 207 ...	536
Ganpat Singh v. Moti Chand ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 301 ...	171
Garikipati Paparayudu v. Garikipati Rattamma	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1176; 24 M. L. J. 62; 13 M. L. T. 110 ...	508
Gauri Rai v Manohar Teli ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 513 ...	520
Gaya Kunwar v. Dal Singh ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	296
George Langridge v. Grace Atkins ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 431; 13 Cr. L. J. 856; 35 A. 29 ...	792
Ghazaffar Hussain v. Mahabir Prasad ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	309
Ghelabhai v. Bai Javer ...	s. c 14 Bom. L. R. 1142 ...	866
Ghulam Muhammad v. Musammat Zewaro ...	s. c. 5 P. R. 1912 Rev.; 35 P. L. R. 1913 ...	979
Giga v. Muhammad Amin ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 468; 13 Cr. L. J. 863; 35 A. 61 ...	799
Giles Seddon v. Deputy Collector of Madras ...	*Mad. High Court ...	117
Gilmore v. State of Travancore ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 496; 23 M. L. J. 605 ...	444
Girdharlal v. Naranlal ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1135 ...	779
Girhi Rani Misrani v. Chandra Lal Kanth ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 62 ...	885
Gobinda Chandra Basu v. Kamijuddi Soyal ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 127 ...	115
Gokhai Padhan v. Gones Lal Pandit ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 404 ...	936
Gollapudi v. Lakshmi Narasimham ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1001 ...	393
Gopal Das v. Chedi Lal ...	*All. High Court ...	591
Gopala Iyengar v. Venkatakrishna Iyengar ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1127 ...	748
Gopalakrishnamaraju v. Venkatanarasa Raju	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 288; 12 M. L. T. 292; (1912) M. W. N. 903 and 1231 ...	308
Gopalasami Vastad v. Govindasami Vastad ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1071 ...	434
Govinda Mudeley v. Muthusawmy Pillay ...	*Mad. High Court ...	169
Govindan Nair v. Narayanan Nair ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 706; 12 M. L. T. 585; (1913) M. W. N. 79 ...	473
Govindappa v. Hanumanthappa ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 513; (1912) M. W. N. 1152 ...	420
Guddati Reddi Obala v. Ganapati Kandanna	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 493; 12 M. L. T. 467; (1912) M. W. N. 1138 ...	422
Gulla Mal v. Chunni Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 498 ...	732
Habibullah Khan v. Lalta Prasad ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 190; 34 A. 612 ...	94
Haji Ahmed v. Essaji Tajbhoy ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1007 ...	696
Har Narain v. Umrai ...	s c. 10 A. L. J. 396 ...	661
Har Prasad Singh, In the matter of ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 794 F. B. ...	539
Hargobind v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 355; 13 Cr. L. J. 832; 35 A. 1 ...	576
Haridas v. Vithaldas ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 765; 36 B. 638	30
Hasan Raza v. Basti Begam ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 257 ...	81
Hasanali v. Popatlal Parbhudas ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 782 ...	17

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Hasin-ud-din v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 354; 13 Cr. L. J. 831 ..	575
Hem Chandra Bakshi v. Judub Chandra Bakshi	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 116 ...	99
Hem Chandra Kar v. Mathur Santhal ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1031; 13 Cr. L. J. 766 ...	78
Hiatunnessa Bibi v. Kailash Chandra Saha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 259 ...	224
Hira v. Hansji Pema ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R 1182 ...	949
Hira Naikin v. Radha Naikin ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1129; 37 B. 116	834
Hira Singh v. Lahori Mal ...	s. c. 174 P. W. R. 1912; 217 P. L. R. 1912 ...	247
Hirdey Narain v. M. J. Powell ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 403; 35 A. 9 ...	672
Iltaf Husain v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 782 ...	414
Immudipattam Vijaya Gandipa v. Annasawmy Aiyar ...	*Mad. High Court ...	106
Imperator v. Khamiso ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 101; 13 Cr. L. J. 776	408
——— v. Khushaldas ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 82; 13 Cr. L. J. 752	64
——— v. Tyebali Curimji ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 885; 13 Cr. L. J. 785 ...	529
Indar Sahai v. Shiam Bahadur ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 156; (1913) M. W. N. 122 P. C. ...	760
Indro Deb Das v. Azizur Rahman Sarkar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 957 ...	9
Ishar Das v. Emperor ...	s. c 36 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 799; 258 P. L. R. 1912 ...	543
Ishri Pershad v. Gopi Nath ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 222; 34 A. 631 ...	19
Itticheri Edathis Samantham v. Ananda Pisharoti ...	*Mad. High Court ...	179
Jabbar Sheikh v. Tomiz Sheikh ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 984; 39 C. 931; 13 Cr. L J. 759 ...	71
Jabbar Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 797; 11 A. L. J. 39 ...	541
Jagadambal Ammal v. Ramaswamy Iyengar...	* Mad. High Court ...	126
Jagar Nath v. Ajudhya Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 408; 35 A. 14 ...	376
Jagdamba Prasad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 353; 13 Cr. L. J. 844 ...	716
Jagu Babaji Varang v. Balu Laxman Varang	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1198 ...	955
Jai Govind v. Emperor ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 263; 13 Cr. L. J. 760	72
Jaisari Singh v. Jaisari Singh ...	*All. High Court ...	294
Jaitum Bi v. Nabi Saheb ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 346; (1912) M. W. N. 957; 24 M. L. J. 15 ...	389
Jawahri Mal v. Dhaupat ...	s. c. 163 P. W. R. 1912; 170 P. L. R. 1912 ...	223
Jetha Bhima and Co. v. Lady Janbai ..	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 904 ...	625
Jethibai v. Putlibai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1020 ...	722
Jhakri Chamar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 440; 13 Cr. L. J. 905 ...	1001

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Jhandu v. Emperor ...	s. c. 40 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 831 ...	575
Jiwa v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 286; 13 Cr. L. J. 841 ...	713
Jogendra Nath Mookherji v. Moti Lal Chakravarti ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1155; 39 C. 885; 13 Cr. L. J. 774 ...	406
Jogendra Nath Singh v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 385 ...	921
Kadambi Srinivasacharlu v. Durlabha Subuddhi	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 348 ...	589
Kalanand Singh v. Jarao Kumari ...	s. c. 17 C. L. J. 96 ...	238
Kalawanti v. Bukhan ...	s. c. 187 P. W. R. 1912; 215 P. L. R. 1912 ...	254
Kali Prosanna Das v. Bhagaban Mali ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 348 ...	587
Kallu Mal v. Shams-ud-din ...	s. c. 269 P. W. R. 1912; 14 P. L. R. 1913 ...	196
Kamal Kutty v. Udayavarma Raja ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 439; 23 M. L. J. 499; 13 Cr. L. J. 753; (1912) M. W. N. 1154 ...	65
Kamira v. Lalu ...	s. c. 110 P. R. 1912; 30 P. L. R. 1913 ...	907
Kamla Prasad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 362; 13 Cr. L. J. 830 ...	574
Kanhai Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 435; 13 Cr. L. J. 698 ...	795
Kanhayalal v. Dularsingh ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 163 ...	606
Kanniappan Chetti v. Manikavasagam Chetti	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 677 ...	763
Kanta Laik v. Lachman Ojha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 197 ...	165
Kanumoory Niladri Razu v. Kasa Subbiah ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 332; (1912) M. W. N. 999 ...	278
Karetti Brahmanaikudu v. Kareti Mahalakshmi	*Mad. High Court ...	487
Karnam Narasimhulu v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 360 ...	393
Karori Mal v. Jawala Devi ...	s. c. 253 P. W. R. 1912 ...	510
Karray Mangiah Chetty v. Kanachi Ramiah Chetty ...	*Mad. High Court ...	164
Kashibai v. Laduram ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 185 ...	889
Katwaru Chamar v. Ram Adhin Upadhia ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 516 ...	910
Kayakool Natuvlapurayil Moidin Kutti v. Pottarkular Koman Nair ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 538; (1912) M. W. N. 1229; 23 M. L. J. 618 ...	605
Kedar Nath Roy v. Amritalal Mookerjee ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 342. ...	283
Kelu Achan v. Umala Achan ...	*Mad. High Court ...	704
Keshav Narayan Manolkar, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 968; 13 Cr. L. J. 848 ...	720
Kesho Parshad v. Ram Kishen Das ...	*All. High Court ...	316
Kesri Chand v. National Jute Mills, Co., Ld....	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 968; 40 C. 119 ...	87

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Khalil-ud-din Ahmed v. Banni Bibi ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 440; 35 A. 34 F. B. ...	274
Khettermoni Dassi v. Kadambini Dassi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 964 ...	83
Khidmat Rai v. Anant Rai ...	s. c. 169 P. W. R. 1912; 184 P. L. R. 1912 ...	245
Khurshed-un-nissa v. Alim-un-nissa ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 421 ...	868
Kirpal Singh v. Balwant Singh ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 5: 11 A. L. J. 1; 9 P. W. R. 1913; 17 C. L. J. 137; 15 Bom. L. R. 79; 17 C. W. N. 302; 28 P. L. R. 1913; 24 M. L. J. 318; (1913) M. W. N. 58 P. C. ...	666
Kirta Kishen v. Harnam Chand ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 510; 35 A. 72 ...	465
Kodi Venkatappa Row v. Barnala Suryanarayana ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 493 ...	442
Kollipara Venkamma, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 348 ...	391
Komandur Kamalammal v. Komandur Narasimhacharlu ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 312; (1913) M. W. N. 139 ...	244
Konda Reddi v. Ramasawmi Reddi ...	*Mad. High Court ...	112
Kondu Kanhuji Dhavde v. Vishnu Moreshwar Bhat ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 801; 37 B. 53...	176
Koolappa Rowther v. Appu Asari ...	*Mad. High Court ...	736
Kora Rangan, In re ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 535; 13 Cr. L. J. 781 ...	413
Kotagiri Venkataramarayanim v. Patibanda Basawayya ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 620; (1912) M. W. N. 1222 ...	185
Kothiram v. Ganpati ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 179 ...	836
Krishna Aiyar v. Shamanna ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 610; (1912) M. W. N. 1188 ...	497
Krishna Doss Paramananda v. Frederick William Emery ...	*Mad. High Court ...	93
Krishnan Nair v. Damodaran Nair ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 166 F. B. ...	769
Kulada Prosad Pandey v. Haripada Chattopadhyaya ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 311; 17 C. W. N. 102 ...	257
Lachmi Narain v. Dhanukdhari Prosad Singh	*Cal. High Court ...	351
Lodd Govindoss v. Ramdoss ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1245; 24 M. L. J. 88 ...	752
Lodna Colliery Co., Ld. v. Bipin Bihary Bose...	s. c. 39 C. 739 ...	500
Lakshmammal v. Narasimharaghava Iyengar	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 333 ...	281
Lakshminarayana Naidu v. Somasundaram Pillai... ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 534 ...	602
Lala v. Abdus Samed ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	320
Lalji Nensey Ludha v. Keshowji Punja ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 840 ...	193

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Pgae of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Lallu Sahi v. Rajbans Bharthi ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 191; (1913) M. W. N. 155; 24 M. L. J. 355; 17 C. L. J. 284 P. C. ...	842
Lalta Prosad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 294; 13 Cr. L. J. 863; 34 A. 654 ...	799
Lalu v. Gurdasmal ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 81; 13 Cr. L. J. 763	80
M. M. J., In the matter of ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 191; 13 Cr. L. J. 875 ...	811
M. N. P. L. Firm v. Kirwan Gyan ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 162 ...	9:5
Ma Mya v. Felix Slym ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 164; 6 L. B. R. 116 ...	926
Ma Thet v. Mg Po Tun ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 171 ...	962
Madan Mohan Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari...	* Cal. High Court ...	1
Madhavaiya Chetty v. Damodaram Chetty ...	s. c 12 M. L. T. 240; (1912) M. W. N. 972 ...	347
Madho v. Akaji ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 190 ...	899
Madho v. Umrao ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 147 ...	370
Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Co., Ltd. v. Bhimappa ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 511 ...	419
Maganchand v. Vithalrao ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 793; 37 B. 37...	148
Mahabir Pershad v. Ram Lochan Tewari ...	*All. High Court ...	521
Mahadei v. Bhikhan ...	s c. 15 O. C. 291 ...	424
Mahadev Yadneshwar Joshi, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 715; 13 Cr. L. J. 751 ...	63
Mahamed Kasim v. Panchapakesa Chetti ...	s. c. 35 M. 578 ...	233
Mahomed Ibrahim v. Abdul Latif ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 987 ...	689
Mahomed Ismail Rowther, In re ...	s. c. 35 M. 596; 13 Cr. L. J. 776 ...	408
Mahomed Mehdi Faya Tharia v. Sakinabai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 903 ...	629
Malgauda Paragowda Patil v. Babaji Dattu Bhakare ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1121; 37 B. 107	746
Malhar Bhagwant Kulkarni v. Narsinh Krishna Majli ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 941; 37 B. 95...	665
Malkappa Dod Chanbasapagowda v. Mudkappa Basappa Mudigavdar ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 931; 37 B. 84...	657
Mamabi v. Acharath Parakat ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 535; 23 M. L. J. 607; (1912) M. W. N. 1217 ...	337
Mandaya v. Ma E ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 166 ...	918
Manik Chandra Chakravarti v. Preo Nath Kuar	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 789; 17 C. W. N. 205 ...	533
Manjeshwar Padmanabha Batta, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 359 ...	400
Manohar Ramchandra Hinge v. Collector of Nasik ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 943; 37 B. 97...	670
Manohar Ramchandra Hinge v. Collector of Nasik ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1190 ...	964
Marulasidda Raja v. Siddalinga Raja ...	*Mad. High Court ...	16
Mathura Prasad v. Sheikh Muhammad ...	P. C. ...	844

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Mathura Prasad v. Tota Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 296 ...	177
Maung Chit Ton v. Maung Aung Gyaw ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 161 ...	913
Maung Lu Maung v. Maung Pe ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 255 ...	868
Maung Pu v. Ma Gyauk Thay ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 269 ...	898
McIntosh v. Bidhu Bhusan Sen ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 959 ...	12
Meajan v. Sharafatullah Khan ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1007; 13 Cr. L. J. 783 ...	415
Mg. San U v. Ma Hmyin ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 169; 6 L. B. R. 98	954
Miran Bakhsh v. Feroze Din ...	s. c. 232 P. L. R. 1912 ...	395
Mithan Lal v. Mizaji Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 529 ...	914
Mohammad Mehdi Hasan Khan v. Mandir Das	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 392; 15 O. C. 278; 34 A. 511; 14 Bom. L. R. 1073; 10 A. L. J. 373; 17 C. W. N. 49; 16 C. L. J. 629; (1912) M. W. N. 1052; 23 M. L. J. 741; 39 I. A. 68 P. C. ...	396
Mohan Lal v. Musammat Jumerat ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 395 ...	658
Mohideen Ibrahim v. Mahamed Meera Levvai	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 431; 23 M. L. J. 487; (1912) M. W. N. 1130 ...	437
Moolinti Veerana Gowd v. Devarinti Bhima Reddy ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 261; (1912) M. W. N. 830	253
Motichand v. Bajrang Sahai ...	s c. 16 C. L. J. 148 ...	45
Mouna, A. v. Mouna, J. E. ...	s c. 14 Bom. L. R. 872; 37 B. 57	215
Mubarak Ali Shah v. Adittya Prasad ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	288
Muhammad Abdul Aziz v. Rafi-un-nissa Bibi	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 469 ...	833
Muhammad Husain v. Ilahi Bakhsh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 198 ...	92
Muhammad Husain v. Laltu ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 294 ...	430
Muhammad Ismail Khan v. Mithu Lal ...	*All. High Court ...	656
Muhammad Sarfaraz Begam v. Munna ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	315
Mulpuru Lakshmayya v. Varadaraja Apparow	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 624; (1912) M. W. N. 1193; 12 M. L. T. 561 ...	353
Mulraj Khatau v. Vishwanath ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1247; 12 M. L. T. 652; 11 A. L. J. 7; 24 M. L. J. 60; 17 C. W. N. 209; 15 Bom. L. R. 9: 17 C. L. J. 162 P. C. ...	627
Munireddi v. Venkata Rao ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 447; 12 M. L. T. 615; (1912) M. W. N. 1029; 13 Cr. L. J. 800 F. B. ...	544
Munshi Lal v. Ram Narain ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 475; 35 A. 65 ...	783
Murugappa Chettiar v. Narayanasamy Pillai	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 956 ...	389
Musammat Ralli v. Sundar Singh ...	s. c. 108 P. R. 1912; 29 P. L. R. 1913 ...	864
Musammat Sundar v. Saraswati ...	*All. High Court ...	518
Muthala Kandi v. Palli Veetil Abu Baker ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1059 ...	386

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Mutta Venkatachalapathy v. Pyinda Venkatachalapathy Garu ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 652; 12 M. L. T. 579	987
Nabi Bakhsh v. Bhagat Singh ...	s. c. 176 P. W. R. 1912; 214 P. L. R. 1912 ...	251
Nachiappa Goundan v. Ponnusamy Naicker ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 287; (1912) M. W. N. 888 ...	293
Nagar Ali Joardar v. Kala Chand Sardar ...	*Cal. High Court ...	654
Nagendra Lal Chowdhury v. Raja Bibi ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 374 ...	504
Nagiulal v. Official Assignee ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1146 ...	876
Naud Kishore Singh v. Ram Gulam Sahu ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1089; 39 C. 1037	221
Nanda Gopal Sinha Roy v. Pareshmoni Debi	*Cal. High Court ...	478
Nandan Singh v. Jumman ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 272; 34 A. 640 ...	632
Narayana Aiyar v. Anai Aiyar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 649; (1913) M. W. N. 189 ...	754
Narayana Rao v. President of the Corporation of Madras ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 591 ...	945
Narayanasami Aiyar v. Janaki Ammal ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 904 ...	261
Narottam Rajaram v. Mohanlal ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1154 ...	891
Nasir-ud-din v. Ballabh Das ...	s. c 10 A. L. J. 501; 35 A. 68 ...	471
Nathu Mal v. Mul Chand ...	s. c. 183 P. W. R. 1912; 197 P. L. R. 1912 ...	232
Nawal Kunwar v. Bakhtawar Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 390 ...	644
Neelagara Lingamma v. Kinnahal Hampiah ...	*Mad. High Court ...	167
Neelakandan Nambudri v. Narayan Nambudri	*Mad. High Court ...	128
Neelam Tirupathirayudu Naidu Garu v. Vinjamuri Lakshminarasamma ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1237; 12 M. L. T. 550; 23 M. L. J. 599 ...	597
Nga Po Seik v. Emperor ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 143; 13 Cr. L. J. 888; 6 L. B. R. 62 F. B. ...	824
Nga Tun Baw v. Emperor ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 175; 13 Cr. L. J. 864; 6 L. B. R. 100 F. B. ...	800
Niamat Ullah v. Aisha Bibi ...	s. c. 90 P. R. 1912; 250 P. L. R. 1912; 262 P. W. R. 1912 ...	21
Nidhan Singh v. Sham Singh ...	s. c. 24 P. L. R. 1913 ...	524
Noble v. Bank of Burma, Ld. ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 193 ...	853
Nur Muhammad v. Bhagwan Das ...	s. c. 106 P. R. 1912; 31 P. L. R. 1913 ...	857
Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramasamy Iyergar ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 229; (1912) M. W. N. 974; 23 M. L. J. 726 ...	342
Padarath v. Dulam ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 423 ...	879
Padmanand Singh v. Rama Prasad Malvi ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 354 ...	284
Paga v. Sadasheo ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 172 ...	624
Pajiruddin v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 383 ...	919
Palaniappa Chettiar v. Arunachellam Chettiar ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 528; 23 M. L. J. 595; (1912) M. W. N. 1204 ...	139

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Panch Duar Thakur v. Mani Raut ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 970 ...	88
Pandurang v. Nagoji ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R 133 ...	138
Parumal v. Mahomedali ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 107 ...	39
Parumal Ailmal v. Motumal ...	s. c 6 S. L. R. 114 ...	44
Parvataneni Venkatramiah v. Parvataneni Narayudu ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 313 ...	246
Periathambi Gowndan v. Periya Gownden ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 593; 12 M. L. T. 539 ...	489
Pichai Rowthan v. Emperor ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1206; 13 Cr. L. J. 825 ...	569
Pooran Singh v. Jai Singh ...	*All. High Court ...	524
Ponnambala Chetti v. Muthusami Pillai ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 284; (1912) M. W. N. 1119 ...	291
Ponnaya Tirumalai Vandaya Thevar v. Kandasami Vendaya Thevar ...	*Mad. High Court ...	136
Prabhu Dial v. Emperor ...	s. c. 224 P. L. R. 1912; 38 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 774 ...	406
Prag v. Ram Niranjan ...	s. c. 11 A. L. J. 36 ...	734
Prankhang v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1078; 13 Cr. L. J. 764 ...	76
Prosonno Kumari Debi v. Ram Chandra Singha	s. c. 17 C. L. J. 66 ...	155
Public Prosecutor v. Arumugam Chetty ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 752 ...	64
———— v. Sadananda Patnaik ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 670; 12 M. L. T. 601; 13 Cr. L. J. 850 ...	786
Purna Chandra Chatterjee, In the matter of ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 846; 17 C. W. N. 328 ...	718
Purshottam Janardan v. Mahadu Pandu Turmalkar ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 947; 37 B. 114	676
Purushotama Das Pragji Sait v. Jeta Bhai Nagji Sait ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1076 ...	33
Radha Rawan v. Tulan Ram ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 393 ...	647
Radhe Kishen v. Bholu Mal ...	s. c. 171 P. W. R. 1912; 176 P. L. R. 1912 ...	254
Raghava Aiyar v. Murugesa Mudali ...	*Mad. High Court ...	97
Raghu Singh v. Shew Prosad Rai ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 135 ...	121
Raghubir Singh v. Moti Kunwar ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 162; (1913) M. W. N. 127; 11 A. L. J. 146; 35 A. 41; 17 C. W. N. 453 P. C. ...	766
Raghuraj Singh v. Sahib Din ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 319 ...	470
Raj Krishna Dey v. Bepin Behary Dey ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 194 ...	162
Raj Mohan Guha v. Alam Gazi Patwari ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 339 ...	279
Raja Ram v. Fatteh Chand ...	s. c. 187 P. L. R. 1912; 248 P. W. R. 1912 ...	216
Rajab Ali Shah v. Upper India Couper (Paper) Mills Co. Ld. ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 289 ...	420

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Rajagopala Pandarithar v. Muthu Kumara Chettiar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 676; 13 M. L. T. 19 ...	762
Rajani Kant Mukerji v. Ram Dulal Das ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N 55 ...	881
Rajaram Rao v. Tuljaram Rao ...	* Mad. High Court ...	43
Rajnagar Spinning, Weaving and Manufacturing Co., Ld. v. Manilal Maganlal ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 919 ...	640
Ram Autar Dube v. Badal Pandey ...	*All. High Court ...	586
Ram Chandra Pal v. Krishna Lal Pal ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 351 ...	600
Ram Ditta Mal v. Karam Devi ...	s. c. 167 P. W. R. 1912; 190 P. L. R. 1912 ...	243
Ram Jar Singh v. Bhagalu Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 401 ...	669
Ram Kishan Das v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 357; 13 Cr. L. J. 823; 35 A. 5 ...	567
Ram Lal v. Amar Chand ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 535 ...	653
Ram Narayan Singh v. Krishna Chandra Ghose	s. c. 17 C W. N. 408; 17 C. L. J. 239 ...	490
Ram Nath v. Bulaqi Ram ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	735
Ram Parshad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 769; 10 A. L. J. 462; 35 A. 58 ...	401
Ram Prosad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 455; 13 Cr. L. J. 897; 17 C. W. N. 379 ...	993
Ram Ranjan Chakravarti v. Bunwari Lal Mitter	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 211 ...	170
Raman Chetty v. Mutuveerappa Chetty ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 199; 6 L. B. R. 93	860
Ramdin v. Raj Rani ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 113 ...	101
Ramji Das v. Janki Das ...	s. c. 39 C. 802 ...	973
Ramjibhai, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 889; 13 Cr. L. J. 796 ...	540
Ramkrishna Mallay v. Baburaya ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 715; 12 M. L. T. 656 ...	947
Ramoni Mohan Roy v. Kalimuddi ...	*Cal. High Court ...	682
Randipurazil Kunhisow v. Alukandiyil Parkum Mulloli Chathu ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 695 ...	933
Ratanlal v. Bhaskar ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 139 ...	144
Rathna Mudali v. Perumal Reddy ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 484; (1912) M. W. N. 1168 ...	837
Reddy Venkayya, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 351; 13 Cr. L. J. 770 ...	402
Ripley v. Nahapiet ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 155; 6 L. B. R. 88	902
Rohan Singh v. Ahsani Begam ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 518 ...	469
Roshnai Khanam v. Nawab Khan ...	s. c. 112 P. R. 1912; 32 P. L. R. 1913 ...	903
Sachindra Nath Roy v. Secretary of State ...	P. C. ...	733
Sahib Jan v. Amiran ...	s. c. 196 P. L. R. 1912; 244 P. W. R. 1912 ...	214
Samaruddin v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 821 ...	565

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Sampat Rai v. Ram Pershad ...	*All. High Court ...	517
Sankarama Aiyar v. Padmanabha Aiyar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 373; (1912) M. W. N. 1086 ...	425
Sant Singh v. Mula ...	s. c. 23 P. L. R. 1913 ...	250
Sarat Chandra Roy v. Ratubuddin ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 271 ...	227
Sardha Prasad v. Pitamber Lal ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 777; 10 A. L. J. 465 ...	409
Satagopala Charlu v. Satrughna Behara ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 445; (1912) M. W. N. 1111; 13 Cr. L. J. 763 ...	75
Satya Shankar v. Maharaj Narain ...	s. c. 11 A. L. J. 83 ...	728
Secretary of State v. Basawa Singh ...	s. c. 19 P. W. R. 1913 ...	764
——— v. Chinnapragada Bhanumurty ...	*Mad. High Court ...	373
——— v. Forbes ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 217 ...	180
——— v. Penumacha Venkatapatha Raju ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 746; (1912) M. W. N. 1242 ...	953
Seetharama Chetty v. Seshiah Chetty ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1011 ...	417
Sekh Chand v. Romoni Mohan Roy ...	*Cal. High Court ...	603
Sepahdar Khan Santhoji v. Badi Bi ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 337; (1912) M. W. N. 943 ...	284
Seshagiri Aiyar v. Tirumalai Ambalam ...	*Mad. High Court ...	481
Sessions Judge of Coimbatore v. Immudi Kumara Kangaya ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 368; 13 Cr. L. J. 778; (1912) M. W. N. 1243; 13 M. L. T. 116 ...	410
Sevak Kirpa Shankar Daji v. Gopal Rao Manohar Tambakar ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 448; (1912) M. W. N. 1106; 16 C. L. J. 640; 15 Bom. L. R. 13; 24 M. L. J. 199 P. C. ...	441
Shahab Din v. Siraj-ud-din ...	s. c. 25 P. W. R. 1913 ...	418
Sham Singh v. Prem Singh ...	s. c. 260 P. W. R. 1912 ...	508
Shaman v. Ari Jang ...	s. c. 172 P. W. R. 1912; 208 P. L. R. 1912 ...	503
Shananda Chandra Pal v. Sri Nath Roy Chowdhury ...	*Cal. High Court ...	432
Shankar Vishnu Gokhale v. Raghunath Hari Dharap ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 854 ...	205
Sheo Sahai v. Shib Singh ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	318
Sheshdasacharya v. Bhimacharya ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L R. 1204 ...	969
Sheopher Singh v. Deo Narain Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 413 ...	675
Sher Muhammad v. Nikka Mal ...	s. c. 21 P. L. R. 1913 ...	362
Shiam Lal v. Anant Ram ...	*All. High Court ...	302
Shiolal v. Nanhelal ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 123 ...	129
Shivram v. Mahadev Narayan ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 797; 37 B. 381	170

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Shyam Chandra Singh v. Baldeo ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 522 ...	467
Sidhanath Dhonddev Garud v. Ganesh Govind Garud ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 916; 37 B. 60	637
Sita Ram v. Jagan Nath ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 317 ...	469
Sitaram v. Laxman ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 128 ...	133
Sithambaram Chetty v. U Kha Gyi ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 156; 6 L. B. R. 75	906
Sito Mahton v. F. F. Christien ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 318 ...	361
Sivini Appalanarasimhulu v. Murada Sanyasi	*Mad. High Court ...	120
Somasundaram Chetty v. Lakshman Chetty ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 173 ...	951
Somayajulu Ramamurthi, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 259; (1912) M. W. N. 959 ...	251
Sonba v. Ganesha ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 182 ...	887
Special Officer, Salsette Building Sites v. Dosabhai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1194 ...	952
Sree Kanta Pershad v. Irshad Ali Sarkar ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 225 ...	173
Sri Narain v. Raghubans Rai ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 124 P. C. ...	729
Stephenson v. Municipal Committee, Lahore...	s. c. 266 P. W. R. 1912; 15 P. L. R. 1913 ...	149
Stewart v. New Zealand Insurance Co., Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 991 ...	188
Stewart v. Simon Gonsalves ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 167; 6 L. B. R. 74	900
Subramania Iyer v. Muthulakshmiammal ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1208 ...	583
Subramanian Chetty v. Muthia Chetty ...	s. c. 35 M. 630 ...	721
Subraya Kini v. Ramappa Adige ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 907 ...	265
Suknandan Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 787 ...	531
Sultan Ahmad v. Walliullah ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 227 ...	22
Sultan Singh v. Bahadur Singh ...	s. c. 246 P. L. R. 1912 ...	390
Suraj Bikram Singh v. Chandrabhan Singh ...	*Oudh Judl. Commr.'s Court ...	334
Suranjan Singh v. Ram Bahal Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 520 ...	912
Surapparaju v. Narayanaraju ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1252 ...	431
Suratsingh v. Baldeo ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 150 ...	363
Surya Narain Jha v. Banwari Jha ...	* Cal. High Court ...	7
Suryanarayana Jagapati Raju v. Gopala Surya Rao ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 699; 12 M. L. T. 660	940
Thekkumthatathil Kelukutti v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 782 ...	414
Thukku Goundan v. Kuppauda Goundan ...	*Mad. High Court ...	339
Thuppati Veeri Chetti v. Moluguvam Renganayakulu Aiyar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 516 ...	48
Thupran v. Mamad Kasim Sait ...	*Mad. High Court ...	433
Tookoomoni Dasi v. Dwarka Nath ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 581; 17 C. W. N. 478 ...	972
Tripurari Pal v. Jagat Tarini Dasi ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 145; 13 M. L. T. 1; (1913) M. W. N. 34; 17 C. L. J. 159; 15 Bom. L. R. 72 P. C....	696
Tummala Nagabhushanam v. Sri Rajah Venkatadri Apparow ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 255; (1912) M. W. N. 899; 12 M. L. T. 383 ...	226

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page of Ind. Cas. Vol. XVII.
Umar Amnaji Miaji v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 934; 37 B. 87	659
Umeshananda Dut Jha v. Ravaneswar Prosad Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 431 ...	969
Uttam Singh v. Hira ...	*Punjab Chief Court ...	365
Vaithinatha Iyer v. Kuppu Thevan ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1121; 13 Cr. L. J. 828 ...	572
Vathiar Ramanuja Aiyangar v. Aiyanachariar	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 316 ...	219
Veera Raghava Aiyangar v. Vellai Mooppai ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 517 ...	704
Veera Raghavan Pattar v. Vatasseri Para Mannadissier ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 585 ...	920
Veerappa Chetty v. Kannappa Chetty ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 268 ...	878
Veerarayan v. Parakal Gopal Menon ...	*Mad. High Court ...	623
Velayudam Pillai v. Vaithyalingam Pillai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 610; 24 M. L. J. 66	619
Velchand v. Bourchier ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 777; 37 B. 26...	13
Veluthemana v. Pathuma ...	*Mad. High Court ...	131
Vembu Iyer v. Srinivasa Iyengar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 638; 12 M. L. T. 547 ...	609
Vencatrama Aiyar v. Rangasawmi Aiyangar...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1175 ...	368
Venkata Perumal Raju v. Audikesavalu Reddi	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 675; 12 M. L. T. 659 ...	759
Venkatappa Nayanivaru v. Rami Reddi ...	*Mad. High Court ...	39
Venkatragayya Appa Row v. Murala Sriramulu	*Mad. High Court ...	593
Villuri Adinarayana v. Polimera Ramudu ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 637; 24 M. L. J. 17	648
Vinayak Balkrishna v. Sitaram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1173 ...	943
Vithappa Devappa Patil v. Basagowda Devappa Patil ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 771 ...	10
Vyasacharya Narayanacharya v. Venkubai Rangacharya Upadya ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1109 F. B. ...	741
Wadhawa Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 7 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 39 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 243 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 742 ...	54
Wasudeo v. Hiralal ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 177 ...	884
Wyse, Re v. Chowksey, Ex parte ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 97 ...	31
Yakub Khan v. Raghpat Rai ...	s. c. 165 P. W. R. 1912; 192 P. L. R. 1912 ...	235
Zainab Bibi v. Badar-ud-din ...	s. c. 270 P. W. R. 1912; 20 P. L. R. 1913 ...	187
Zakir Ali v. Gulab Rai ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 314 ...	466
Zalim Singh v. Radha Bai ...	*All. High Court ...	594
Zulekabai v. Ebrahim ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 846 ...	198

II
Comparative Table
OF
Cases Reported in Volume XVII of Indian Cases, 1912.

Cases marked with an asterisk (*) have not yet been reported elsewhere.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
1	Madan Mohan Singh v. Raj Kishori Kumari ...	*
4	Ganapathi Aiyar v. Sivamalai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 207; 23 M. L. J. 306; (1912) M. W. N. 1112.
7	Surya Narain Jha v. Banwari Jha ...	*
9	Indro Deb Das v. Azizur Rahman Sarkar ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 957.
10	Vithappa Devappa Patil v. Basagowda Devappa Patil ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 771.
12	McIntosh v. Bidhu Bhusan Sen ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 959.
13	Velchand v. Bourchier ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 777; 37 B. 26.
14	Balakrishna Pillay v. Narayanasawmy Naidu ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 215.
15	Bhogirath Chandra Mandal v. Sital Chandra Sarkar	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 955.
16	Marulasidda Raja v. Siddalinga Raja ...	*
17	Hasanalli v. Popatlal Parbhudas ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 782.
19	Ishri Pershad v. Gopi Nath ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 222; 34 A. 631.
21	Niamat Ullah v. Aisha Bibi ...	s. c. 90 P. R. 1912; 250 P. L. R. 1912; 262 P. W. R. 1912.
22	Sultan Ahmad v. Walliullah ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 227.
25	Collector of Ghazipur v. Balbhaddar Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 234.
30	Haridas v. Vithaldas ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 765; 36 B. 638.
31	Wyse, Re v. Chowksey, Ex parte ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 97.
33	Purushotama Das Pragji Sait v. Jeta Bhai Nagji Sait	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1076.
36	Brij Indar Singh v. Bansi Lal ...	s. c. 88 P. R. 1912; 218 P. L. R. 1912; 230 P. W. R. 1912.
37	Ajumal v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 103.
39	Venkatappa Nayanivaru v. Rami Reddi ...	*
39	Parumal v. Mahomedali ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 107.
43	Rajaram Rao v. Tuljaram Rao ...	*
44	Parumal Ailmal v. Motumal ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 114.
45	Motichand v. Bajrang Sahai ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 148.
48	Thuppati Veeri Chetti v. Moluguvam Renganayakulu Aiyar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 516.
49	Emperor v. Chanda Singh ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 737; 7 P. L. R. 1913; 43 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.
51	Adabala Muthiyalu, In re ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 739.
54	Wadhawa Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 7 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 39 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 243 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 742.
58	Baggu Mal v. Emperor ...	s. c. 254 P. L. R. 1912; 42 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 746.
60	Emperor v. Kisan Kevji ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 713; 13 Cr. L. J. 748.
61	Gaji v. Jumanshah ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 83; 13 Cr. L. J. 749.
62	Emperor v. Chagan Rajaram ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 116; 13 Cr. L. J. 750.
63	Mahadev Yadneshwar Joshi, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 715; 13 Cr. L. J. 751.
64	Public Prosecutor v. Arumugam Chetty ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 752.
64	Imperator v. Khushaldas ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 82; 13 Cr. L. J. 752.
65	Kamal Kutty v. Udayavarma Raja ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 439; 23 M. L. J. 499; (1912) M. W. N. 1154; 13 Cr. L. J. 753.
71	Jabbar Sheikh v. Tomiz Sheikh ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 984; 39 C. 931; 13 Cr. L. J. 759.
72	Jai Govind v. Emperor ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 263; 13 Cr. L. J. 760.
75	Satagopala Charlu v. Satrughna Behara ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 445; (1912) M. W. N. 1111; 13 Cr. L. J. 763.
76	Prankhang v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1078; 13 Cr. L. J. 764.
78	Emperor v. Gulshah ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 121; 13 Cr. L. J. 766.
78	Hem Chandra Kar v. Mathur Santhal ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1031; 13 Cr. L. J. 766.
79	Emperor v. Isardas ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 106; 13 Cr. L. J. 767.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
80	Lalu v. Gurdasmal ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 81; 13 Cr. L. J. 768.
81	Hasan Raza v. Basti Begam ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 257.
83	Khettermoni Dassi v. Kadambini Dassi ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 964.
86	Bai Gulab v. Thakorlal ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 748; 36 B. 622.
87	Kesri Chand v. National Jute Mills, Co., Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 968; 40 C. 119.
87	Eknath Pandoba Kosti v. Dagduram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 750; 36 B. 264.
88	Panch Duar Thakur v. Mani Raut ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 970.
89	Abdul Aziz v. Basdeo Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 183; 34 A. 604.
90	Batuk Nath Mandal v. Bepin Bihari Chaudhuri ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 975; 17 C. L. J. 179.
92	Muhammad Husain v. Ilahi Bakhsh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 188.
93	Krishna Doss Paramananda v. Frederick William Emery ...	*
94	Habibullah Khan v. Lalta Prasad ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 190; 34 A. 612.
95	Bai Ramkore v. Jamnadas ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 766; 37 B. 18.
97	Raghava Aiyar v. Murugesa Mudali ...	*
99	Hem Chandra Bakshi v. Jadub Chandra Bakshi ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 116.
101	Ramdin v. Raj Rani ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 113.
106	Immudipattam Vijaya Gandipa v. Annasawmy Aiyar	*
111	Beni Pershad Koeri v. Raj Kumar Chowbey ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 124.
112	Konda Reddi v. Ramasawmi Reddi ...	*
115	Gobinda Chandra Basu v. Kamijuddi Soyal ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 127.
117	Giles Seddon v. Deputy Collector of Madras ...	*
119	Binapani Debi v. Shashibhushan Sinha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 133.
120	Sivini Appalanarasimhulu v. Murada Sanyasi ...	*
121	Raghu Singh v. Shew Prosad Rai ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 135.
124	Gaffur Saheb v. Moosa Saheb ...	*
125	Brahamdeo Narain Singh v. Ramdown Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 139.
126	Jagadambal Ammal v. Ramaswamy Iyengar ...	*
126	Gadadhar Ghose v. Midnapur Zemindari Co., Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 141.
128	Neelakandan Nambudri v. Narayanan Nambudri ...	*
129	Shiolal v. Nanhelal ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 123.
131	Veluthemana v. Pathuma ...	*
133	Sitaram v. Laxman ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 128.
136	Ponnaya Tirumalai Vandaya Thevar v. Kandasami Vendaya Thevar ...	*
138	Pandurang v. Nagji ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 133.
139	Palaniappa Chettiar v. Arunachelam Chettiar ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 528; 23 M. L. J. 595; (1912) M. W. N. 1204.
141	Bajirao v. Gulabsingh ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 136.
142	Bhurchand Hunsraj Doshi v. Vira Champa Khachar	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 787; 37 B. 32.
144	Ratanlal v. Bhaskar ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 139.
148	Maganchand v. Vithalrao ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 793; 37 B. 37.
149	Stephenson v. Municipal Committee, Lahore ...	s. c. 266 P. W. R. 1912; 15 P. L. R. 1913.
152	Bhagwandas v. Burjorji ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 807.
155	Prosonno Kumari Debi v. Ram Chandra Singha ...	s. c. 17 C. L J. 66.
158	Basaveswaraswami v. Bellary Municipal Council ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 405; 23 M. L. J. 479; (1912) M. W. N. 1080.
162	Raj Krishna Dey v. Bepin Behary Dey ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 194.
164	Karray Mangiah Chetty v. Kanachi Ramiah Chetty	*
165	Kanta Laik v. Lachman Ojha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 197.
167	Neelagara Lingamma v. Kinnahal Hampiah ...	*
168	Biprodas Pal Chaudhri v. Sarat Chandra Singha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 209.
169	Govinda Mudeley v. Muthusawmy Pillay ...	*
170	Ram Ranjan Chakravarti v. Bunwari Lal Mitter ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 211.
170	Shivram v. Mahadev Narayan Kulkarni ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 797; 37 B. 81.
171	Ganpat Singh v. Moti Chand ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 301.
173	Sree Kanta Pershad Hajari v. Irshad Ali Sarkar ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 225.
176	Kondu Kanhuji Dhavde v. Vishnu Moreshvar Bhat...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 801; 37 B. 53.
177	Mathura Prasad v. Tota Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 296.
179	Itticheri Edathis Samanthan v. Ananda Pisharoti ...	*

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
180	Secretary of State v. Forbes ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 217.
185	Kotagiri Venkataramarayanim v. Patibanda Basawayya ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 620; (1912) M. W. N. 1222.
187	Zainab Bibi v. Badar-ud-din ...	s. c. 270 P. W. R. 1912; 20 P. L. R. 1913.
188	Stewart v. New Zealand Insurance Co., Ld. ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 991.
193	Lalji Nensey Ludha v. Keshowji Punja ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 840.
196	Kalu Mal v. Shams-ud-din ...	s. c. 269 P. W. R. 1912; 14 P. L. R. 1913.
198	Zulekabai v. Ebrahim ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 846.
202	Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co., Ld. v. Rakea Khatun ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 997.
205	Shankar Vishnu Gokhale v. Raghunath Hari Dharap	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 854.
207	Dutt, K. B. v. Gostha Behary Bhuiya ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1006; 16 C. L. J. 379.
208	Abdul Karim v. Allah Bakhsh ...	s. c. 197 P. W. R. 1912; 209 P. L. R. 1912; 121 P. R. 1912.
210	Bando Krishna Kanbargi v. Narsinha Konher Deshpande ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 861; 37 B. 42.
214	Sahib Jan v. Amiran ...	s. c. 196 P. L. R. 1912; 244 P. W. R. 1912.
215	Monna, A. v. Monna, G. E. ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 872; 37 B. 57.
216	Raja Ram v. Fatteh Chand ...	s. c. 187 P. L. R. 1912; 248 P. W. R. 1912.
219	Vathiar Ramanuja Aiyangar v. Aiyanachariar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 316.
221	Nand Kishore Singh v. Ram Gulam Sahu ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1089; 39 C. 1037.
223	Jawahri Mal v. Dhanpat ...	s. c. 163 P. W. R. 1912; 170 P. L. R. 1912.
224	Hiatunnessa Bibi v. Kailash Chandra Saha ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 259.
226	Tummala Nagabhushanam v. Sri Rajah Venkatadri Apparow ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 255; (1912) M. W. N. 899; 12 M. L. T. 383.
227	Sarat Chandra Roy v. Ratubuddin ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 271.
232	Nathu Mal v. Mul Chand ...	s. c. 183 P. W. R. 1912; 197 P. L. R. 1912.
233	Mahamed Kasim v. Panchapakesa Chetti ...	s. c. 35 M. 578.
235	Yakub Khan v. Raghpat Rai ...	s. c. 165 P. W. R. 1912; 192 P. L. R. 1912.
238	Kalanand Singh v. Jarao Kumari ...	s. c. 17 C. L. J. 96.
242	Arunagiri Mudaliar v. Uthando Mudali ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 311; (1912) M. W. N. 1136.
243	Ram Ditta Mal v. Karam Devi ...	s. c. 167 P. W. R. 1912; 190 P. L. R. 1912.
244	Komandur Kamalammal v. Komandur Narasimhacharlu ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 312; (1913) M. W. N. 139.
245	Khidmat Rai v. Anant Ram ...	s. c. 169 P. W. R. 1912; 184 P. L. R. 1912.
246	Parvataneni Venkataramiah v. Parvataneni Narayudu	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 313.
247	Hira Singh v. Lahori Mal ...	s. c. 174 P. W. R. 1912; 217 P. L. R. 1912.
251	Somayajulu Ramamurthi, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 259; (1912) M. W. N. 959.
251	Nabi Bakhsh v. Bhagat Singh ...	s. c. 176 P. W. R. 1912; 214 P. L. R. 1912.
253	Moolinti Veerana Gowd v. Devarinti Bhima Reddy	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 261; (1912) M. W. N. 880.
254	Radhe Kishen v. Bholu Mal ...	s. c. 171 P. W. R. 1912; 176 P. L. R. 1912.
254	Kalawanti v. Bukhan ...	s. c. 187 P. W. R. 1912; 215 P. L. R. 1912.
256	Anglo-Indian Trading Co., Ld. v. Gerald Frank ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 930.
257	Kulada Prosad Pandey v. Haripada Chattopadhyaya	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 311; 17 C. W. N. 102.
261	Narayanasami Aiyar v. Janaki Ammal ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 904.
263	Dinabandhu Nandi v. Mashuda Khatun ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 318.
265	Subraya Kini v. Ramappa Adige ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 907.
266	Aktowli v. Tarak Nath Ghose ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 328.
270	Basawa Singh v. Bhagwan Kaur ...	s. c. 181 P. W. R. 1912; 216 P. L. R. 1912.
273	Adusumilli Singarayadu v. Sayani Narayanasami ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 915.
274	Khalil-ud-din Ahmed v. Banni Bibi ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 440; 35 A. 34.
276	Chatturbhuj Patnaik v. Krishna Chandra Patnaik ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 335; 17 C. W. N. 442.
278	Kanumoory Niladri Razu v. Kasa Subbiah ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 332; (1912) M. W. N. 999.
279	Raj Mohan Guha v. Alam Gazi Patwari ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 339.
281	Lakshmammal v. Narasimharaghava Iyengar ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 333.
283	Kedar Nath Roy v. Amritalal Mookerjee ...	s. c. 16 M. L. J. 342.
284	Sepahdar Khan Santhoji v. Badi Bi ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 337; (1912) M. W. N. 943.
284	Padmanand Singh v. Rama Prasad Malvi ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 354.
288	Mubarak Ali Shah v. Adittya Prasad ...	*

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
290	Bindhachal Rai v. Gaya Rai ...	*
291	Ponnambala Chetty v. Muthusami Pillai ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 284; (1912) M. W. N. 1119.
292	Birj Lal v. Bua Ram ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 399.
293	Nachiappa Goundan v. Ponnusamy Naicker ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 287; (1912) M. W. N. 888.
294	Jaisari Singh v. Jaisari Singh ...	*
296	Gaya Kunwar v. Dal Singh ...	*
302	Shiam Lal v. Anant Ram ...	*
303	Abdul Ghafur v. Shiam Sundar Das ...	*
308	Gopalakrishnamaraju v. Venkatanarasa Raju ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 288; 12 M. L. T. 292; (1912) M. W. N. 903 and 1231.
309	Ghazaffar Hussain v. Mahabir Prasad ...	*
311	Chand Mal v. Sansar Chand ...	s. c. 16 P. L. R. 1913.
315	Muhammad Sarfaraz Begam v. Munna ...	*
316	Kesho Parshad v. Ram Kishen Das ...	*
318	Sheo Sahai v. Shib Singh ...	*
320	Lala v. Abdus Samed ...	*
323	Armugha Mudeliar v. Yagamba Bai Ammani ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 227.
329	Bisheshar Bakhsh Singh v. Debi Bakhsh Singh ...	*
334	Surja Bikram Singh v. Chandrabhan Singh ...	*
337	Mamabi v. Acharath Parakat ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 565; 23 M. L. J. 607; (1912) M. W. N. 1217.
339	Thukku Goundan v. Kuppauda Goundan ...	*
340	Chhatku Rai v. Baldeo Shukul ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 330; 34 A. 659.
342	Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramasamy Iyengar...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 229; (1912) M. W. N. 974; 23 M. L. J. 726.
343	Balmukund Sahai v. Tarini Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 360.
347	Madhavaiya Chetty v. Damodaram Chetty ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 240; (1912) M. W. N. 972.
350	Sant Singh v. Mula ...	s. c. 23 P. L. R. 1913.
351	Lachmi Narain v. Dhanukdhari Prosad Singh ...	*
353	Mulpuru Lakshmayya v. Varadaraja Apparow ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 624; (1912) M. W. N. 1193; 12 M. L. T 561.
361	Sito Mahton v. F. F. Christien ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 318.
362	Sher Muhammad v. Nikka Mal ...	s. c. 21 P. L. R. 1913.
363	Suratsingh v. Baldeo ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 150.
365	Uttam Singh v. Hira ...	*
366	Bhura v. Ramrao ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 154.
368	Vencatrama Aiyar v. Rangasawmi Aiyangar ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1175.
370	Madho v. Umrao ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 147.
371	Choghatta v. Aso Mal ...	*
373	Secretary of State v. Chinnapragada Bhanumurty...	*
375	Baggu Simmanna v. Itragulu Chinnaya ...	*
376	Jagar Nath v. Ajudhya Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 408; 35 A. 14.
378	Ahmadji v. Shahanchi ...	s. c. 12 P. L. R. 1913.
378	Daji v. Rukhma ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 159.
379	Barkat Ram v. Jagat Ram ...	s. c. 249 P. W. R. 1912.
386	Muthala Kandi v. Palli Veetil Abu Baker ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1059.
388	Budh Singh v. Ram Nath ...	s. c. 251 P. W. R. 1912; 125 P. R. 1912.
389	Murugappa Chettiar v. Narayanasamy Pillai ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 956.
389	Jaitum Bi v. Nabi Saheb ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 346; (1912) M. W. N. 957; 24 M. L. J. 15.
390	Sultan Singh v. Bahadur Singh ...	s. c. 246 P. L. R. 1912.
391	Kollipara Venkamma, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 348.
392	Ala Singh v. Khark Singh ...	s. c. 253 P. W. R. 1912, 257 P. L. R. 1912.
393	Karnam Narasimhulu v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 360.
393	Gollapudi v. Lakshmi Narasimham ...	s. c (1912) M. W. N. 1001.
395	Miran Bakhsh v. Feroze Din ...	s. c. 232 P. L. R. 1912.
395	Chidambara Mudali v. Kozhandavelu Mudali ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1003.
396	Mohammad Mehdi Hasan Khan v. Mandir Das ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 392; 15 O. C. 278; 34 A. 511; 14 Bom. L. R. 1073; 10 A. L. J. 373; 17 C. W. N. 49; 16 C. L. J. 629; (1912) M. W. N. 105'; 23 M. L. J. 741; 39 I. A. 68.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
399	Abdul Khadir v. Nagasarupu ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1004.
400	Manjeshwar Padmanabha Batta, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 359.
401	Ram Parshad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 769; 10 A. L. J. 462; 35 A. 53.
402	Reddy Venkayya, In re ...	s. c. 12 M. L. J. 351; 13 Cr. L. J. 770.
403	Emperor v. Tirithdas ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 120; 13 Cr. L. J. 771.
404	Ganga Singh v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 383; 13 Cr. L. J. 772.
406	Jogendra Nath Mookherji v. Moti Lal Chakravarti...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1155; 39 C. 885; 13 Cr. L. J. 774.
406	Prabhu Dial v. Emperor ...	s. c. 224 P. L. R. 1912; 38 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 774.
408	Imperator v. Khamiso ...	s c. 6 S. L. R. 101; 13 Cr. L. L. J. 776.
408	Mahomed Ismail Rowther, In re ...	s. c. 35 M. 596; 13 Cr. L. J. 776.
409	Sardha Prased v. Pitamber Lal ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 777; 10 A. L. J. 465.
410	Sessions Judge of Coimbatore v. Immudi Kumara Kangaya ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 368; 13 Cr. L. J. 778; (1912) M. W. N. 1243; 13 M. L. T. 116.
412	Emperor v. Allahrakhio ...	s. c. 6 S. L. R. 101; 13 Cr. L. J. 780.
413	Kora Rangan, In re ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 535; 13 Cr. L. J. 781.
414	Iltaf Husain v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 782.
414	Thekkumthatathil Kelukutti v. Emperor ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 782.
415	Meajan v. Sharafatullah Khan ...	s. c. 16 C. W. N. 1007; 13 Cr. L. J. 783.
416	Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Kadir Mirza ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 784; 17 C. W. N. 31.
417	Shetharama Chetty v. Seshiah Chetty ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1011.
418	Shahab Din v. Siraj-ud-din ...	s. c. 25 P. W. R. 1913.
419	Madras and Southern Mahratta Ry. Co., Ld. v. Bhimappa ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 511.
420	Rajab Ali Shah v. Upper India Couper (Paper) Mills Co., Ld. ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 289.
420	Govindappa v. Hanumanthappa ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 513; (1912) M. W. N. 1152.
422	Guddati Reddi Obala v. Ganapati Kandanna ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 493; 12 M. L. T. 467; (1912) M. W. N. 1138.
424	Mahadei v. Bhikhan ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 291.
425	Sankarama Aiyar v. Padmanabha Aiyar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 373; (1912) M. W. N. 1086.
429	Abdulla v. Mirthur ...	s. c 23 M. L. J. 537; 12 M. L. T. 497; (1912) M. W. N. 1164.
430	Muhammad Husain v. Laltu ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 294.
431	Suraparaju v. Narayanaraju ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1232.
432	Shananda Chandra Pal v. Sri Nath Roy Chowdhury ...	*
433	Thupran v. Mamad Kasim Sait ...	*
434	Gopalasami Vastad v. Govindasami Vastad ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1071.
437	Mohideen Ibrahim v. Mahamed Meera Levvai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 431; 23 M. L. J. 487; (1912) M. W. N. 1130.
441	Sevak Kirpa Shankar Daji v. Gopal Rao Manohar Tambakar ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 448; (1912) M. W. N. 1106; 16 C. L. J. 640; 15 Bom. L. R. 13; 24 M. L. J. 199.
442	Kodi Venkatappa Row v. Barnala Suryanarayana...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 493.
444	Gilmore v. State of Travancore ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 426; 23 M. L. J. 605.
445	Bommidi Bayyan Naidu v. Bommidi Suryanarayana	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 500; 23 M. L. J. 543; (1913) M. W. N. 1.
464	Deputy Commissioner, Fyzabad v. Gur Dayal Singh ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 311.
465	Kirta Kishen v. Harnam Chand ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 510; 35 A. 72.
466	Zakir Ali v. Gulab Rai ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 314.
467	Shyam Chandra Singh v. Baldeo ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 522.
469	Sita Ram v. Jagan Nath ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 317.
469	Rohan Singh v. Ahsani Begam ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 518.
470	Raghuraj Singh v. Sahib Din ...	s. c. 15 O. C. 319.
471	Nasir-ud-din v. Ballabh Das ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 501; 35 A. 68.

S. N. PAR... LL. B.
Vakil High Court.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.		Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
473	Govindan Nair v. Narayanan Nair	...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 706; 12 M. L. T. 585; (1913) M. W. N. 79.
478	Nanda Gopal Sinha Roy v. Pareshmoni Debi	...	*
481	Seshagiri Aiyar v. Tirumalai Ambalam	...	*
486	Allahdad Khan v. Sant Ram	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 506; 35 A. 74.
487	Karetti Brahmanaikudu v. Kareti Mahalakshmi	...	*
488	Fateh Bahadur v. Lalta Pershad	...	*
489	Periathambi Gowndan v. Periya Gowndan	...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 593; 12 M. L. T. 539.
490	Ram Narayan Singh v. Krishna Chandra Ghose	...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 408: 17 C. L. J. 239.
494	Bhojohari Das v.Adhikari Bhagabati Dasi	...	*
497	Krishna Aiyar v. Shamanna	...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 610; (1912) M. W. N. 1188.
500	Lodna Colliery Co., Ld. v. Bipin Bihari Bose	...	s. c. 39 C. 739.
503	Shaman v. Ari Jang	...	s. c. 172 P. W. R. 1912; 208 P. L. R. 1912.
504	Nagendra Lal Chowdhury v. Raja Bibi	...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 374.
508	Sham Singh v. Prem Singh	...	s. c. 260 P. W. R. 1912.
508	Garikipati Paparayudu v. Garikipati Rattamma	...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1176; 24 M. L. J. 62; 13 M. L. T. 110.
510	Karori Mal v. Jawala Devi	...	s. c. 258 P. W. R. 1912.
512	Dost Muhammad v. Altaf Husain Khan	...	*
513	Cotha Krishnasawmy Chetty v. Sitaram Chetty	...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 335; (1912) M. W. N. 967.
517	Sampat Rai v. Ram Pershad	...	*
518	Musammat Sundar v. Saraswati	...	*
520	Gauri Rai v. Manohar Teli	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 513.
521	Mahabir Pershad v. Ram Lochan Tewari	...	*
522	Pooran Singh v. Jai Singh	...	*
523	Deokinandan Pershad v. Bindeshwari Parshad	...	*
524	Nidhan Singh v. Sham Singh	...	s. c. 24 P. L. R. 1913.
527	Coopoosami Chetty v. Duraisamy Chetty	...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1220.
529	Imperator v. Tyebali Curimji	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 885; 13 Cr. L. J. 785.
530	Emperor v. Abdul Rahiman Momin	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 891; 13 Cr. L. J. 786.
531	——— v. Alibhai Miabhai	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 875; 13 Cr. L. J. 787.
531	Suknandan Singh v. Emperor	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 787.
532	Emperor v. Dadabhai	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 882; 13 Cr. L. J. 788.
533	Manik Chandra Chakravarti v. Preo Nath Kuar	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 789; 17 C. W. N. 205.
534	Emperor v. Chimanlal Jagjivan	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 876; 13 Cr. L. J. 790.
536	Ganpat Rai v. Emperor	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 792; 17 C. W. N. 207.
537	Emperor v. Budhankhan	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 893; 13 Cr. L. J. 793.
539	Har Prasad Singh, In the matter of	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 794.
540	Ramjibhai, In re	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 889; 13 Cr. L. J. 796.
541	Jabbar Singh v. Emperor	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 797; 11 A. L. J. 39.
542	Emperor v. Istlingapa	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 887; 13 Cr. L. J. 798.
543	Ishar Das v. Emperor	...	s. c. 36 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 799; 258 P. L. R. 1912.
544	Munireddi v. Venkata Rao	...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 447; 12 M. L. T. 615; (1912) M. W. N. 1029; 13 Cr. L. J. 800.
559	Emperor v. Brian Bonham Carter	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 815; 9 P. W. R. 1913 Cr.
565	Samaruddin v. Emperor	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 821.
567	Ram Kishan Das v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 357; 13 Cr. L. J. 823; 35 A. 5.
569	Pichai Rowthan v. Emperor	...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1206; 13 Cr. L. J. 825.
570	Dilan Singh v. Emperor	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 826.
571	Emperor v. Paimal Nai	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 351; 13 Cr. L. J. 827.
572	Vaithinatha Iyer v. Kuppu Thevan	...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1121; 13 Cr. L. J. 828.
573	Debi Prosad v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 361; 13 Cr. L. J. 829; 35 A. 8.
574	Kamla Prasad v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 362; 13 Cr. L. J. 830.
575	Jhandu v. Emperor	...	s. c. 40 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.; 13 Cr. L. J. 831.
575	Hasin-ud-din v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 354; 13 Cr. L. J. 831.
576	Hargobind v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 355; 13 Cr. L. J. 832; 35 A. 1.
577	Bissonath Prosad Malita v. Brindesri Prosad Singh		*
580	Arunachellam Chetty v. Prabhayya Chetty	...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1207.
581	Brij Lal v. Ram Rattan	...	*

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
583	Subramania Iyer v. Muthulakshmiammal ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1203.
586	Ram Autar Dube v. Badal Pandey ...	*
586	Arunachella Chetti v. Muthu Chettiar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 347.
587	Kali Prosanna Das v. Bhagaban Mali ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 348.
589	Kadambi Srinivasacharlu v. Durlabha Subuddhi ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 348.
591	Gopal Das v. Chedi Lal ...	*
593	Venkatragayya Appa Row v. Murala Sriramulu ...	*
594	Zalim Singh v. Radha Bai ...	*
597	Neelam Tirupathirayudu Naidu Garu v. Vinjamuri Lakshminarasamma ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1237; 12 M. L. T. 530; 23 M. L. J. 599.
600	Ram Chandra Pal v. Krishna Lal Pal ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 351.
602	Lakshminarayana Naidu v. Somasundaram Pillai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 534.
603	Sekh Chand v. Romoni Mohan Roy ...	*
605	Kayakool Natuvlapurayil Moidin Kutti v. Pottarkular Koman Nair ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 538; (1912) M. W. N. 1229; 23 M. L. J. 618.
603	Kanhayalal v. Dularsingh ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 163.
609	Vembu Iyer v. Srinivasa Iyengar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 638; 12 M. L T. 547.
616	Agyaram v. Deorao ...	s. c 8 N. L. R. 161.
617	Dharani Mudali v. Meenamba Bai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 592.
619	Velayudam Pillai v. Vaithyalingam Pillai ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 610; 24 M. L. J. 66.
621	Ganeshlal v. Dhondiba ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 169.
623	Veerarayan v. Parakal Gopal Menon ...	*
624	Paga v. Sadasheo ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 172.
625	Jetha Bhima and Co. v. Lady Janbai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 904.
627	Mulraj Khatau v. Wishwanath ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1247; 12 M. L. T. 652; 11 A. L. J. 7; 24 M. L. J. 60; 17 C. W. N. 209; 15 Bom. L. R. 9; 17 C. L. J. 162.
629	Mahomed Mehdi Faya Tharia v. Sakinabai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 908.
632	Nandan Singh v. Jumman ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 278; 34 A. 640.
637	Sidhanath Dhonddev Garud v. Ganesh Govind Garud	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 916; 37 B. 60.
638	Ganeshdas v. Musammat Nimbi ...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 174.
640	Rajnagar Spinning, Weaving and Manufacturing Co., Ld. v. Manilal Maganlal ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 919.
641	Chimman Lal v. Sikandar Khan ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 387.
642	Babaji Akoba v. Dattu Laxman ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 923; 37 B. 64.
644	Nawal Kunwar v. Bakhtawar Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 390.
646	Bhukhi Koeri v. Ram Khelwan Prosad ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 311.
647	Radha Rawan v. Tula Ram ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 393.
648	Villuri Adinarayana v. Polimera Ramudu ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 637; 24 M. L. J. 17.
653	Ram Lal v. Amar Chand ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 535.
654	Nagar Ali Joardar v. Kala Chand Sardar ...	*
656	Muhammad Ismail Khan v. Mithu Lal ...	*
657	Malkappa Dod Chanbasapagowda v. Mudkapa Basappa Mudigavdar ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 931; 37 B. 84.
658	Mohan Lal v. Musammat Jumerat ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 395.
659	Umar Amnaji Miaji v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 934; 37 B. 87.
661	Har Narain v. Umrai ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 396.
661	Dwarkanath Amrit v. Mahadev Balkrishna ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 938; 37 B. 91.
663	Bank of Bombay v. Nandlal Thackerseydas ...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 646; (1913) M. W. N. 29; 15 Bom. L R. 1; 24 M. L. J. 177; 17 C. L. J. 146; 17 C. W. N. 358.
665	Malhar Bhagwant Kulkarni v. Narsinh Krishna Majli ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 941; 37 B. 95.
666	Kirpal Singh v. Balwant Singh ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 5; 11 A. L. J. 1; 9 P. W. R. 1913; 17 C. L. J. 137; 15 Bom. L. R. 79; 17 C. W. N. 302; 28 P. L. R. 1913; 24 M. L. J. 318; (1913) M. W. N. 58.
669	Ram Jar Singh v. Bhagalu Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 401.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
670	Manohar Ramchandra Hinge v. Collector of Nasik...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 943; 37 B. 97.
672	Hirdey Narain v. M. J. Powell ...	s c. 10 A. L. J. 403; 35 A. 9.
673	Dhondu Dagdu Patil v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 949; 37 B. 101.
675	Sheopher Singh v. Deo Narain Singh ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 413.
676	Purshottam Janardan v. Mahadu Pandu Turmalkar...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 947; 37 B. 114.
677	Aulia Khan v. Kanshi Ram ...	s. c. 25 P. W. R. 1913.
680	Ali Mardan v. Bakar Khan ...	s. c. 7 P. W. R. 1913; 27 P. L. R. 1913.
682	Ramoni Mohan Roy v. Kalimuddi ...	*
684	Amolak Shah v. Charan Das ...	s. c. 16 P. W. R 1913.
689	Mahomed Ibrahim v. Abdul Latif ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 987.
696	Tripurari Pal v. Jagat Tarini Dasi ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 145; 13 M. L. T. 1; (1913) M. W. N. 34; 17 C. L. J. 159; 15 Bom. L. R. 72.
696	Haji Ahmed v. Essaji Tajbhoy ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1007.
704	Kelu Achan v. Umala Achan ...	*
704	Veera Raghava Aiyangar v. Vellai Mooppai ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 517.
705	Emperor v. Ganesh Narayan Dikshit ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 972; 13 Cr. L. J. 833.
713	Jiwa v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 286; 13 Cr. L. J. 841.
714	Emperor v. Intya Salabatkhan ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 897; 13 Cr. L. J. 842.
716	Jagdamba Prasad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 353; 13 Cr. L. J. 844.
717	Ardeshir Kavasji Karanjavalla, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 970; 13 Cr. L. J. 845.
718	Purna Chandra Chatterjee, In the matter of ...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 846; 17 C. W. N. 327.
720	Keshav Narayan Manolkar, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 968, 13 Cr. L. J. 848.
721	Subramanian Chetty v. Muthia Chetty ...	s. c. 35 M. 639.
722	Jethibai v. Putlibai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1020.
728	Satya Shankar v. Maharaj Narain ...	s. c. 11 A. L. J. 83.
729	Sri Narain v. Raghubans Rai ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 124.
730	Dhuramsi Morarji Goculdas, In re ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1031.
732	Gulla Mal v. Chunni Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 498.
733	Sachindra Nath Roy v. Secretary of State ...	*
734	Prag v. Ram Niranjan ...	s. c. 11. A. L. J. 36.
735	Ram Nath v. Bulaqi Ram ...	*
736	Koolappa Rowthar v. Appu Asari ...	*
737	Abdullah Khan v. Basharat Hussain ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 233; 13 M. L. T. 182; (1913) M. W. N. 131; 35 A. 48.
739	Behram Jung v. Sultanali ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1106.
740	Chillamuthu v. Muthudayar Servai ...	*
741	Vyasacharya Narayanacharya v. Venkubai Rangacharya Upadya ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1109.
744	Court of Wards v. Ilahi Bakhsh ...	s. c. 1 P. W. R. 1913.
746	Malgauda Paragowda Patil v. Babaji Dattu Bhakare	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1121; 37 B. 107.
748	Gopala Iyengar v. Venkatakrishna Iyengar ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1127.
751	Badri Pershad v. Civil Nazir of Ambala ...	*
752	Lodd Govindoss v. Ramdoss ...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1245; 24 M L. J. 88.
754	Narayana Aiyar v. Anai Aiyar ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 649; (1913) M. W. N. 189.
755	Ahmedbhoy v. Bombay Fire and Marine Insurance Co., Ltd. ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 11; 11 A. L. J. 42; 15 Bom. L. R. 19; (1913) M. W. N. 64; 17 C. W. N. 269; 17 C. L. J. 154; 24 M. L. J. 328.
758	Arunachella Chettiar v. Muthiah Chettiar ...	*
758	Azima Bibi v. Shamalanand ...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 121; 13 M. L. T. 159; (1913) M. W. N. 125; 11 A. L. J. 169.
759	Venkata Perumal Raju v. Audikesavalu Reddi ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 675; 12 M. L. T. 659.
760	Indar Sahai v. Shiam Bahadur ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 156; (1913) M. W. N. 122.
762	Rajagopala Pandarithar v. Muthu Kumara Chettiar	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 676; 13 M. L. T. 19.
763	Babui Bacha Kumar v. Babui Suraj Kala Kumar ...	*
763	Kanniappan Chetti v. Manikavasagam Chetti ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 677.
764	Secretary of State v. Basawa Singh ...	s. c. 19 P. W. R. 1913.
766	Raghubir Singh v. Moti Kunwar ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 162; (1913) M. W. N. 127; 11 A. L. J. 146; 35 A. 41; 17 C. W. N. 453.
769	Krishnan Nair v. Damodaran Nair ...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 166.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.		Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
779	Girdharlal v. Naranlal	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1135.
783	Munshi Lal v. Ram Narain	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 475; 35 A. 65.
785	Emperor v. Vishnu Balkrishna Ram	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 965; 13 Cr. L. J. 849.
786	Public Prosecutor v. Sadananda Patnaik	...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 670; 12 M. L. T. 601; 13 Cr. L. J. 850.
789	Emperor v. Naga Tima	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 956; 13 Cr. L. J. 853.
791	Barkatullah v. Sadho Kalwar	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 429; 13 Cr. L. J. 855.
791	Emperor v. Lallubhai	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 960; 13 Cr. L. J. 855.
792	George Langridge v. Grace Atkins	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 431; 13 Cr. L. J. 856; 35 A. 29.
794	Emperor v. Tatia Mahadev	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 961; 13 Cr. L. J. 858.
795	Kanhai Singh v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 435; 13 Cr. L. J. 698.
796	Emperor v. Koya Hansji	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 964; 13 Cr. L. J. 860.
796	Achhru v. Emperor	...	s. c. 13 Cr. L. J. 860; 8 P. W. R. 1913 Cr.
797	Badri Prasad v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 473; 13 Cr. L. J. 861; 35 A. 63
798	Bhagavatty Perumal Pillay, In re	...	s. c. 13 Cr L. J. 862.
799	Giga v. Muhammad Amin	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 468; 13 Cr. L. J. 863. 35 A. 61.
799	Lalta Prosad v. Emperor	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 294; 13 Cr. L. J. 863; 34 A. 654.
800	Nga Tun Baw v. Emperor	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 175; 13 Cr. L. J. 864; 6 L. B. R. 700.
811	M. M. J., In the matter of	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 191; 13 Cr. L. J. 875.
813	Abdul Khalek v. Emperor	...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 72; 13 Cr. L. J. 877.
813	Emperor v. Channing Arnold	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 239; 13 Cr. L. J. 877; 6 L. B. R. 129.
824	Nga Po Seik v. Emperor	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 143; 13 Cr. L. J. 888; 6 L. B. R. 62.
833	Muhammad Abdul Aziz v. Rafi-un-nisa Bibi	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 469.
834	Hira Naikin v. Radha Naikin	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1129; 37 B. 116.
836	Chuttan Lal v. Kanhaya Lal	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 478.
837	Rathna Mudali v. Perumal Reddy	...	s. c. 12 M. L. T. 484; (1912) M. W. N. 1168.
842	Lallu Sahi v. Rajbans Bharthi	...	s. c. 13 M. L. T. 191; (1913) M. W. N. 155; 24 M. L. J. 355; 17 C. L. J. 284.
844	Mathura Prasad v. Sheikh Muhammad	...	*
846	Bhagwati Prasad v. Bhagwati Prosad	...	s. c. 11 A. L. J. 76.
849	Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co., Ld. v. Fakuruddin Mahomed Chowdhury	...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 1.
853	Noble v. Bank of Burma, Ld.	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 193.
857	Nur Muhammad v. Bhagwan Das	...	s. c. 106 P. R. 1912; 31 P. L. R. 1913.
860	Raman Chetty v. Mutuveerappa Chetty	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 199; 6 L. B. R. 93.
864	Musammat Ralli v. Sundar Singh	...	s. c. 108 P. R. 1912: 29 P. L. R. 1913.
866	Ghelabhai v. Bai Javer	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1142.
868	Khurshed-un-nissa v. Alim-un-nissa	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 421.
868	Maung Lu Maung v. Maung Pe	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 255.
876	Naginlal v. Official Assiguee	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1146.
878	Veerappa Chetty v. Kannappa Chetty	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 268.
879	Padarath v. Dulam	...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 423.
881	Rajani Kant Mukerji v. Ram Dulal Das	...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 55.
884	Wasudeo v. Hiralal	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 177.
885	Girhi Rani Misrani v. Chandra Lal Kanth	...	s. c. 17 C. W. N. 62.
886	Kothiram v. Ganpati	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 179.
887	Sonba v. Ganesha	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 182.
889	Kashibai v. Laduram	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 185.
891	Narottam Rajaram v. Mohanlal	...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1154.
893	Balaji v. Hastimal	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 188.
894	Chokalingam Mudaliar v. Mahomed Sheriff	...	s. c. (1912) M. W. N. 1212; 12 M. L. T. 594; 23 M. L. J. 680.
898	Maung Pu v. Ma Gyauk Thay	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 269.
899	Madho v. Akaji	...	s. c. 8 N. L. R. 190.
900	Stewart v. Simon Gonsalves	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 167; 6 L. B. R. 74.
901	Faiz Muhammad v. Secretary of State	...	s. c. 107 P. R. 1912; 34 P. L. R. 1913.
902	Ripley v. Nahapiet	...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 155; 6 L. B. R. 88.

Pages of Vol. XVII of Ind. Cas.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding pages of other Reports and Journals.
903	Roshnai Khanam v. Nawab Khan ...	s. c. 112 P. R. 1912; 32 P. L. R. 1913.
906	Sithambaram Chetty v. U Kha Gyi ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 156; 6 L. B. R. 75.
907	Kamira v. Lalu ...	s c. 110 P. R. 1912; 30 P. L. R. 1913.
909	Annamalay Chetty v. Na U Ma ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 157.
910	Katwaru Chamar v. Ram Adhin Upadhia ..	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 516.
911	Durai Rajah Mudaliar v. Vadivelu ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 159; 6 L. B. R. 61.
912	Suranjan Singh v. Ram Bahal Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 520.
913	Maung Chit Ton v. Maung Aung Gyaw ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 161.
914	Mithan Lal v. Mizaji Lal ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 529.
915	M. N. P. L. Firm v. Kirwan Gyan ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 162.
915	Banwari Lal v. Musammat Rama ...	s. c. 10 A. L. J. 533.
916	Balthazar and Sons v. Burma Engineering and Trading Co. ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 163.
917	Digambar Nanda v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 381.
918	Mandaya v. Ma E ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 166.
919	Pajiruddin v. Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 383.
920	Veera Raghavan Pattar v. Vatasseri Para Mannadissier ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 585.
921	Jogendra Nath Singh v Secretary of State ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 385.
926	Ma Mya v. Felix Slym ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 164; 6 L. B. R. 116.
927	Dalip Narayan Singh v. Chait Narayan Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 395.
930	Dar Bux v. Dar Meah ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 165; 6 L. B. R. 60.
931	Dalip Narayan Singh v. Chait Narain Singh ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 401.
933	Randipurazil Kunhisow v. Alukandiyil Parkum Mulloli Chathu ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 695.
936	Gokhai Padhan v. Gones Lal Pandit ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 404.
940	Surya Narayana Jagapati Raju v. Gopala Surya Rao	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 699; 12 M. L. T. 660.
943	Vinayak Balkrishna v. Sitaram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1173.
945	Narayana Rao v. President of the Corporation of Madras ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 591.
946	Bai Fatma v. Ali Mahomed ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1178.
947	Ramakrishna Mallay v. Baburaya ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 715; 12 M. L. T. 656.
949	Hira v. Hansji Pema ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1182.
951	Somasundaram Chetty v. Lakshman Chetty ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 173.
952	Special Officer, Salsette Building Sites v. Dosabhai...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1194.
953	Secretary of State v. Penumacha Venkatapatha Raju	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 746; (1912) M. W. N. 1242.
954	Mg San U v. Ma Hmyin ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 169; 6 L. B. R. 98.
955	Jagu Babaji Varang v. Balu Laxman Varang ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1198.
956	Chan Tha U v. Naw Bi ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 170.
957	Bhicha Ram v. Bishambhar Nath ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 527.
962	Ma Thet v. Mg Po Tun ...	s. c. 5 Bur. L. T. 171.
963	Era Apena v. Era Swami ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 575.
964	Manohar Ramchandra Hinge v. Collector of Nasik...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1190.
966	Crowdy, C. H. v. L. O'Reilly ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 417.
969	Sheshdasacharya v. Bhimacharya ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1204.
969	Umeshananda Dut Jha v. Ravaneswar Prosad Singh	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 431.
972	D'Silva, Miss M. J. v. Minizis, Miss D. J. S. ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1207.
972	Tookoomoni Dasi v. Dwarka Nath Dinda ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 581; 17 C. W. N. 478.
973	Ramji Das v. Janki Das ...	s. c. 39 C. 802.
976	Charnock Collieries Co.. Ld. v. Bholanath Dhar ...	s. c. 39 C. 810.
979	Ghulam Muhammad v. Zewaro ...	s. c. 5 P. R. 1912 Rev.; 35 P. L. R. 1913.
987	Mutta Venkatachalapathy v. Pyinda Venkatachalapathy Garu ...	s. c. 23 M. L. J. 652; 12 M. L. T. 579.
991	Aziz-ud-din v. Bhagwan Das ...	s. c. 6 P. R. 1912 Rev.; 36 P. L. R. 1913.
993	Ram Prosad v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 455; 13 Cr. L. J. 897; 17 C. W. N. 379.
1000	Emperor v. Chandabhai ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1160; 13 Cr. L. J. 904.
1001	Jhakri Chamar v. Emperor ...	s. c. 16 C. L. J. 440; 13 Cr. L. J. 905.
1008	Emperor v. Gangaram ...	s. c. 14 Bom. L. R. 1163; 13 Cr. L. J. 912.

TABLE
OF
Cases Cited in Volume XVII of Indian Cases, 1912.

A

Page.

A debtor, In re, (1908) L. R. 1. K. B. 344 at p. 350; 98 L. T. 652; 15 Manson 1; 77 L. J. K. B. 409 ... 722
Abbakke v. Krishnayya, 32 M. 534, 5 M. L. T. 246, 4 Ind. Cas. 1120 264, 942
Abdul Gafur v. Nizamudin, 17 B. 1; 19 I. A. 170 ... 693
Abdul Kadir v Hamdu Miah, 12 C. W. N. 910... 883
Abdul Kareem Sahib v. Official Assignee of Madras, 28 M. 168 at p. 171 ... 15
Abdul Majid v. Krishna Lal Nag, 20 C. 724 ... 402
Abdul Rahiman v. Kutti Ahmed, 10 M. 68 ... 430
Abdul Rahman v. Charag Din, 19 P. R. 1908; 38 P. W. R. 1908. ... 246
Abdul Rahman v. Emperor, 7 C. L. J. 371; 7 Cr. L. J. 388 ... 570
Abdul Rasul, In re, 13 Bom. L. R. 548; 11 Ind. Cas. 586; 12 Cr. L. J. 402 ... 790
Abdul Sattar v. Satya Bhushan Das, 35 C. 767 ... 264
Abdulla v. Amir-ud-Din, 76 P. R. 1902 ... 254
Abdulla Sahib v. Doctor Oosman Sahib, 28 M. 224 ... 941
Abinash Chandra v. Hari Nath, 32 C. 62 at p. 72; 9 C. W. N. 25 ... 105
Abraham v. Abraham, 9 M. I. A. 195 at p. 241; 1 W. R. (P. C.) 1. ... 259
Achutan Nayar v. Cheriotti Nayar, 22 M. 9 ... 771
Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324; 13 L. J. Ex. 289; 67 R. R. 361 ... 649
Adhar Chandra Das v. Lal Mohan Dass, 24 C. 778; 1 C. W. N. 676 ... 325
Adhibai v. Cursandas Nathu, 11 B. 199 ... 601
Adiraya Shetty v. Billa Tyampu, 20 M. L. J. 944; 8 M. L. T. 108; (1910) M. W. N. 419; 6 Ind. Cas. 438 ... 948
Advocate-General v. Karmali, 6 Bom. L. R. 601; 29 B. 133 ... 18
Afridi v. Emperor, 9 P. R. 1880 Cr. ... 544
Aghore Nath Mookerjee v. Kamuni Debi, 11 C. L. J. 461; 6 Ind. Cas. 554 ... 457
Ahmad Ali v. Waris Husain, 15 A. 123 ... 639
Ahmed bin Shaik Essa Khaliffa v. Shaik Essa bin Khaliffa, 13 B. 458 ... 740
Ahmedkhan v. Emperor, 5 S. L. R. 1; 9 Ind. Cas. 492; 12 Cr. L. J. 92 ... 65
Aimadar Mandul v. Makhan Lal Dey, 33 C. 1015; 10 C. W. N. 904 ... 636
Aiyakannu Pillai v. Emperor, 32 M. 49; 4 M. L. T. 404; 19 M. L. J. 42; 9 Cr. L J. 41; 1 Ind. Cas. 597 ... 569
Ajhola Kooeree v. Babu Digambur Singh, 23 W. R. 206 ... 477
Ajodhya Nath Chowdhury v. Keshub Chandra Mukerjee, 11 C. W. N. 1127 ... 957

A—contd.

Page.

Akbar Khan v. Turaban, 5 A. L. J. 637; A. W. N. (1908) 252; 4 M. L. T. 444; 1 Ind. Cas. 557; 31 A. 9 ... 675
Akhil Chandra Chowdhry v. Nayu, 10 C. 248 ... 268
Akhju Singh v. Jagannath Prasad Singh, 13 Ind. Cas. 1 ... 355
Akshay Kumar Shaha v. Hira Ram Dosad, 35 C. 677; 7 C. L. J. 407 ... 428
Akshaya Coomar Dutt v. Shama Charan Patitanda, 16 C. 586 ... 268
Alami v. Komu, 12 M. 126 ... 771
Alathoor Budr-ud-deen v. Golam Moideen, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 473; 10 M. L. T. 396; 12 Ind. Cas. 562 ... 753
Ali Khan Bahadur v. Indar Parshad, 23 C. 950; 23 I. A. 92 ... 218
Alimuddin Khan v. Hira Lal Sen, 23 C. 87 ... 493
Allah Ditta v. Shahna, 12 P. R. 1908; 22 P. W. R. 1908; 175 P. L. R. 1908 ... 188
Allison v. Frisby, 43 Ch. D. 106; 59 L. J. Ch. 94; 61 L. T. 632; 38 W. R. 65 ... 621
Amanat Begam v. Bhajan Lal, 8 A. 438 at p. 445 887
Amanat Bibi v. Imdad Hosain, 15 I. A. 106; 15 C. 800 ... 450
Amani Begam v. Muhammad Karim-ullah, 16 A. 226; (1894) A. W. N. 52 ... 81
Amar Chandra v. Sebak Chand, 34 C. 642 at p. 652; 11 C. W. N. 593; 5 C. L. J. 491; 2 M. L. T. 207 (F. B.) ... 106
Amichand v. Ghasita Mal, 143 P. R. 1882 ... 512
Amir v. Sharf Nur, 49 P. R. 1910; 6 Ind. Cas. 929; 87 P. W. R. 1910; 137 P. L. R. 1910 ... 188
Amir Hasan v. Rahim Baksh, 19 A. 466; A. W. N. (1897) 118 ... 42
Ammotti Haji v. Kunhayen Kutti, 15 M. 480; 2 M. L. J. 231 ... 338
Amrita Ravji v. Shridhar Narayan, 33 B. 317; 11 Bom. L. R. 51; 1 Ind. Cas. 322 ... 644
Anand Das v. Ram Perkash Das, 14 C. W. N. 183; 5 Ind. Cas. 69 ... 851
Anant Ram v. Nazir Hussain, 141 P. R. 1883 ... 372
Anderson, In re, Pegler v. Gilliatt, (1905) 2 Ch. 70; 74 L. J. Ch. 433; 92 L. T. 725; 53 W. R. 510 ... 694
Anderson v. Morice, (1874) 10 Com. Pleas. 58 ... 192
Angadipeddi Koyil Erath Kunhamina Umma v. Valluntakala Ibrahim Haji, 12 M. L. T. 264; 16 Ind. Cas. 405; (1912) M. W. N. 993 ... 988
Annamalai Chetty v. Veerabadram Chetty, 26 M. 111 ... 517
Annayyan v. Chinnami, 33 M. 366; 7 M. L. T. 140; 20 M. L. J. 355; 5 Ind. Cas. 84 ... 277
Anroop Misr v. Kedar Pande, 15 Ind. Cas. 338... 524
Anusoori Sanyasi, In the matter of, 28 M. 37; 2 Cr. L. J. 149 (F. B.) 790, 799
Anusuyabai v. Sakharam Pandurang, 7 B. 464... 867
Appaji Bapuji v. Keshav Shamrav, 15 B. 13 ... 171

A—concld.

Page.

Appasami Odayar v. Subramanya Odayar, 15 I. A. 167 at p. 168; 12 M. 26 ... 632
Appovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan, 11 M. I. A. 75; 8 W. R. (P. C.) 1 297, 769
Arunachala Reddy v. Chidambara Reddy, 13 M. L. J. 223 ... 613
Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyyappa Chetty, 21 M. 91 at p. 99 ... 455
Aryodaya S. and W. Co. v. Siva Virchand, 13 Bom. L. R. 19; 9 Ind. Cas. 348 ... 895
Asad Ali Molla v. Haider Ali, 12 C. L. J. 130; 38 C. 13; 14 C. W. N. 918; 6 Ind. Cas 826 ... 286
Asadullah v. Muhammad Nur, 27 A. 459; 2 A. L. J. 201; A. W. N. (1905) 47 ... 321
Asgar Ali v. Asaboddin Kazi, 9 C. W. N. 134 ... 127
Asghar Reza Khan v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan, 30 C. 556; 7 C. W. N. 482; 30 I. A. 71 (P. C.) ... 131
Ashfaq Hussain v. Gauri Sahai, 33 A. 264; 9 Ind. Cas. 975; 15 C. W. N. 370; 21 M. L. J. 1140; 8 A. L. J. 332; 13 C. L. J. 351; 9 M. L. T. 380; 13 Bom. L. R. 367; 4 Bur. L. T. 121 (P. C.) ... 759
Asiruddi Ahmed v. King-Emperor, 8 C. W. N. 714, 1 Cr. L. J. 708 ... 1002
Atal Rishi v. Lakshmi Narain Ghose, 10 C. L. J. 55; 2 Ind. Cas. 417 ... 2
Atar Singh v. Thakar Singh, 42 P. R. 1910; 128 P. W. R. 1908; 6 Ind. Cas. 721; 12 C. W. N. 1049; 35 C. 1039; 8 C. L. J. 359; 17 M. L. J. 379; 35 I. A. 206 ... 392
Attorney-General v. Hackney Local Board, (1875) 20 Eq. 626; 44 L. J. Ch. 545; 33 L. T. 244 ... 877
Austin v. Newham, (1916) 2 K. B. 167; 75 L. J. K. B. 563; 95 L. T. 490 ... 183
Authikasavulu Chetty v. Ramanujam Chetty, 32 M. 512; 6 M. L. T. 183; 3 Ind. Cas. 541 ... 950
Ayyadorai Pillai v. Solai Ammal, 24 M. 405 ... 103
Azim Sirdar v. Ram Lall Shaha, 25 C. 324 588, 647
Azmat Ali v. Lalli Begum, 8 C. 422 ... 493

B

Babaji Hari v. Rajaram Ballal, 1 B. 75 ... 662
Babaji Mahadaji v. Kristnaji Devaji, 2 B. 666 ... 613
Babaji Parshram v. Kashibai, 4 B. 157 ... 956
Baboo Dhunput Singh v. Baboo Gooman Singh, W. R. Gap. No., 1864 Act X Rulings, 61 ... 230
Babu Lal v. Ghansham Das, A. W. N. (1908) 115; 5 A. L. J. 333; 7 Cr. L J. 394 ... 793
Babulal v. Ishri Parsad Narain Singh, 2 A. 582 453
Badamoo Koer v. Wazeer Singh, 5 W. R. 78; 1 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 144 ... 297
Badan Chandra v. Rajeswari Debya, 2 C. L. J. 570 ... 683
Badri Das v. Inayat Khan, 22 A. 404 ... 264
Bahadur Singh v. Desraj Parmanand, 53 P. R. 1901 667, 736
Bahoran Updhaya v. Uttamgir, 8 A. L. J. 931; 33 A. 779; 12 Ind. Cas. 112 ... 522
Bai Divali v. Vishnav Manordas, 11 Bom. L. R. 1326; 4 Ind. Cas. 829 ... 637

B—contd.

Page.

Bai Hirakore v. Trikamdas Hirachand, 32 B. 103; 10 Bom. L. R. 23; 3 M. L. T 141 ... 284
Bai Motivahoo v. Purushotam Dayal, 29 B. 306; 6 Bom. L. R. 975 ... 741
Baijanath Pandey v. Gauri Kanta Mandal, 20 C. 633 ... 55
Baijnath Singh v. Mahomed Ibrahim Hossein, 2 C. L. J. 574 ... 929
Baikanta Nath Roy v. Thakur Debendro Nath Sahi, 11 C. W. N. 676 ... 167
Baikunt Kumar, In re, 3 C. L. R. 134 ... 410
Bajrangi Gope v. King-Emperor, 15 C. W. N. 343; 38 C. 304; 13 C. L. J. 639; 9 Ind. Cas. 64; 12 Cr. L. J. 8 ... 76
Bakhtawar Mal v. Abdul Latif, 29 A. 567; A. W. N. (1907) 170 ... 878
Bala Bax Ladhuram v. Rukhambai, 30 I. A. 130 at p. 137; 5 Bom. L. R. 462; 7 C. W. N. 642; 30 C. 729 (P. C.) 260, 643
Balak Puri v. Durga, 30 A. 49; A. W. N. (1908) 6; 4 A. L. J. 783; 3 M. L. T. 181 ... 103
Balak Ram v. Dadu, 76 P. R. 1910; 7 Ind. Cas. 1000; 112 P. W. R. 1910; 98 P. L. R. 1910 ... 372
Balaram v. Mangta Dass, 34 C. 941; 6 C. L. J. 237; 11 C. W. N. 959 ... 639
Balaram v. The S. M. Railway Company, 19 B. 159 ... 38
Balaram Bharamaratar Roy v. Sham Sunder Narendra, 23 C. 526 ... 119
Baldeo Parshad v. Baldeo, A. W. N. (1901) 112 20
Balkishan v. Kishan Lal, 11 A. 148 ... 862
Balkishen v. Ram Narain, 30 C. 738; 30 I. A. 139; 5 Bom. L. R. 46; 7 C. W N. 578 260, 767
Balwant Rao v. Puran Mal Chaube, 10 I. A. 90 at p. 96; 6 A. 1 ... 695
Balwant Singh v. Rockwell Clancy, 34 A. 296; (1912) M. W. N. 462; 11 M. L. T. 344; 9 A. L. J. 509; 15 C. L. J. 475; 16 C. W. N. 577; 14 Bom. L. R. 422; 23 M. L. J. 18; 14 Ind. Cas. Cas. 629 ... 498
Bandhu Prasad v. Dhiraji Kuar, 20 A. 400 ... 474
Bandu v. Jambu, 12 Bom. L. R. 801; 7 Ind. Cas. 986 ... 493
Banga Hadua v. King-Emperor, 11 C. L. J. 270; 5 Ind. Cas. 771; 11 Cr. L. J. 245 ... 566
Bani Pershad v. Reet Bhunjun Singh, 10 W. R. 325 ... 3
Bank of Syria, In re, (1901) 1 Ch. 115; 70 L. J. Ch. 82; 49 W. R. 100; 83 L. T. 547; 17 T. L. R. 84; 8 Manson 105 ... 978
Banwari Das v. Muhammad Mashiat, 9 A. 690 at p 702, A. W. N. (1887) 254 ... 938
Barkat Ram v. Jagat Ram, 249 P. W. R. 1912; 17 Ind. Cas. 379 ... 512
Barnardo v. Mc Hugh, (1891) L. R. A. C. 388; 61 L. J. Q. B. 721, 65 L. T. 423, 40 W. R. 97; 55 J. P. 628 ... 926
Barrow v. Gaya Prasad, 9 A. L. J. 558; 15 Ind. Cas. 729 ... 29
Barton v. Briscoe, (1812) Jac. 603 ... 287
Barton v. Knight, (1705) 2 Vern. 514 ... 702
Basava v. Lingangauda, 19 B. 428 ... 742
Bechi v. Ahsan-ullah Khan, 12 A. 461 ... 639
Bechu Singh v. Bichharam Sahu, 10 C. L. J. 91; 1 Ind. Cas. 677 ... 285

B—contd.

Page.

Beejoy Gobind Burral v. Bheekoo Roy, 10 W. R. 291 ... 268
Beer Chunder Manikya v. Raj Coomar Nobodeep Chunder Deb Burmono, 9 C. 585; 12 C. L. R. 465 ... 445
Behari v. Sadwar, 7 C. P. L. R. 25 ... 131
Behari Malwai v. Bhondu, 8 C. P. L. R. 25 ... 139
Bejoy Chunder Banerjee v. Kally Prosonno Mookerjee, 4 C. 327 ... 634
Belaet Khan v. Rash Beharee Mookerjee, 22 W. R. 549 ... 268
Belagal Ramacharlu v. Emperor, 26 M. 471 ... 534
Belding v. Read, (1865) 34 L. J. Ex. 212; 3 H. & C. 955; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 547; 13 L. T. 66; 13 W. R. 867 ... 32
Belilios v. Queen, 12 B. L. R. 249, 20 W. R. 61 Cr. ... 999
Beni Madho Singh v. Pran Singh, 15 C. L. J. 187; 14 Ind. Cas. 456 ... 123
Beni Ram v. Kundan Lal, 21 A. 496 (P. C.); 26 I. A. 58; 3 C. W. N. 502 ... 209
Bennett v. Bayes, (1860) 29 L. J. Ex. 224; 5 H. & N. 391; 2 L. T. 156; 8 W. R. 320 ... 379
Benode Behari Bose v. Nistarini Dassi, 33 C. 180 at p. 191; 15 M. L. J. 331; 9 C. W. N. 961; 2 C. L. J. 189; 7 Bom. L. R. 887 (P.C.); 32 I. A. 193 ... 758
Bevan v. London Portland Cement Company Limited, (1893) 67 L. T. 615; 3 R. 47 ... 160
Bhabrayya Gulapalli, In re, 21 M. L. J. 803, 10 M. L. T. 54; 11 Ind. Cas 545 ... 247
Bhag Mal v. Talia, 6 P. L. R. 1907; 44 P. W. R. 1907 ... 678
Bhagbut Persad Singh v. Girija Koer, 15 I. A. 99 at p. 103; 15 C. 717 ... 667
Bhagwan Dayalji v. Balu, 8 B. 230 ... 428
Bhagwan Devi v. Bunyadi Khanum, 85 P. R. 1902 ... 992
Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 21 A. 412 (P. C.); 26 I. A. 153; 3 C. W. N. 454 ... 37
Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 A. 33 ... 105
Bhagwat Dayal Singh v. Debi Dayal Sahu, 35 C. 420 (P. C.); 12 C. W. N. 393; 10 Bom. L. R. 230; 7 C. L. J. 335; 5 A. L. J. 184; 18 M. L. J. 100; 3 M. L. T. 344; 14 Bur. L. R. 49 ... 509
Bhan v. Sadoo, 1 C. P. L. R. 58 ... 6 8
Bhasbat Rabidat Singh v. Maharani Indar Kunwar, 16 C. 556; 16 I. A. 53 ... 742
Bhaskaruni Kesavarayadu v. Bhaskaruni Chalapatriyadu, 31 M. 318; 18 M. L. J. 343; 8 Cr. L. J. 205; 4 M. L. T. 301 ... 69
Bhau v. Ramchandrarao, 20 B. 423 at p. 427 ... 171
Bhawani v. Mahtab Kuar, 2 A. 171 ... 135
Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu, 17 A. 537 at p. 553; A. W. N. (1895) 212 ... 100
Bhawani Prasad v. Saheb Din, 9 O. C. 44 ... 333
Bhikaji Apaji v. Jaggan Nath Vithal, 10 B. H. C. R. 351 ... 382
Bhikham Singh v. Har Prasad, 19 A. 35; A. W. N. (1896) 167 ... 522
Bhola Nath v. Musammat Sabitra, 6 S. D. 62 at p. 71 ... 85
Bholanath Chatterjee v. Inder Chand Doogur, 14 W. R. 373 ... 46
Bhoobun Mohini Debia v. Hurrish Chunder Chowdhry, 5 I. A. 138 at p. 144; 4 C. 23; 3 C. L. R. 339 ... 480

B—contd.

Page.

Bhoopendra Narain Roy, In the matter of the petition of, 6 C. 539; 8 C. L. R. 30 ... 474
Bhoopendro Nath v. Kalee Prosunno, 24 W. R. 205 ... 939
Bhugwan Dutt Jha v. Sheo Mungal Singh, 22 W. R. 256 ... 268
Bhujanga Rau v. Ramayamma, 7 M. 387 ... 479
Bhup v. Ram Lal, 33 A. 795; 8 A. L. J. 1009; 11 Ind. Cas. 268 ... 377
Bibee Solomon v. Abdool Azeez, 6 C. 687 at p. 706; 8 C. L. R. 169 ... 435
Bibi Bachun v. Sheikh Hamid Hossein, 14 M. I. A 377; 10 B. L. R. 45; 17 W. R. (P. C.) 113... 82
Bibi Jawahir Kumari v. Chatterput Singh, 2 C. L. J. 343 ... 184
Bibijan Bibi v. Sri Sachi Bewah, 31 C. 863; 8 C. W. N. 684 (F. B.) ... 929
Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, 20 C. 708 2, 588, 608, 882
Binapani Debi v. Sashibhusan Sinha, 16 C. L. J. 133; 17 Ind. Cas. 119 ... 156
Bipra Das v. Rajaram, 13 C. W. N. 650; 36 C. 765; 3 Ind. Cas. 306 ... 167
Biprodas Pal Chaudhury v. Sarat Chandra Singha, 16 C. L. J. 209; 11 C. W. N. cli; 17 Ind. Cas. 168 ... 173
Bishnu Singh v. Lal Singh, 55 P. R. 1906; 71 P. L. R. 1906 ... 196
Blackburn v. Liverpool and Brazil Rival Plate Steam Navigation Company, (1901) 1 K. B. 290; 71 L. J. K. B. 177; 50 W. R. 272; 85 L. T. 783; 18 T. L. R. 121; 7 Com. Cas. 10; 9 Asp. M. C. 263. ... 193
Bloxam v. Sanders, 7 D. & R. 396; (1825) 4 B. & C. 941; 28 R. R. 525 ... 964
Board v. Board, (1873) L. R. 9 Q. B. 48; 43 L. J. Q. B. 4; 29 L. T. 459; 22 W. R 206 ... 694
Boidyanath v. Makhanlal, 17 C. 680 ... 163
Bourne v. Gatliff, (1844) 11 Cl & F. 45 at p. 80, 8 Scott (N. R.) 604, 7 M. & G. 850, 44 R. R. 723 ... 938
Bourne v. Swan and Edgar, Ltd., (1903) 1 Ch. D. 211 at p. 225; 72 L. J. Ch. 168; 51 W. R. 213; 87 L. T. 589; 19 T. L. R. 59; 20 R. P. C. 105 ... 357
Boyle v. Boyle, 30 C. 631 ... 399
Boyle v. Tamlyn, 6 B. & C. 329; 9 D. & R. 430; 5 L. J. (o. s.) K. B. 134; 30 R. R. 343 ... 606
Bradford Banking Co. v. Briggs, (1886) 12 A. C. 29, 56 L. J. Ch. 364, 56 L. T. 62, 35 W. R. 521 ... 929
Brahamdeo Narain Singh v. Ramdown Singh, 16 C. L. J. 129; 17 Ind. Cas. 125 ... 127
Branson, G. E. v. Municipal Commissioners, Madras, 2 M. 362 ... 151
Brandon v. Robinson, (1811) 18 Ves. 429; 11 R. R. 226 ... 287
Brij Kishore v. Madho Singh, 28 A. 279; (1905) A. W. N. 279; 3 A. L. J. 27 ... 839
Brijlal and Kevalpat v. Musammat Sakrasa, D. C. R., Pt. VIII, Section 7, No. 76 ... 135
Bringfield v. Kynaston, (1887) 3 T. L. R. 279 ... 110
Bristow v. Sequeville, 5 Ex. 275; 19 L. J. Ex. 289. 14 Jur. 674; 82 R. R. 664 ... 232
Broadbent v. Ramsbotham, 11 Ex. 602; 25 L. J. Ex. 115; 4 W. R. 290; 26 L. T. (o. s.) 244; 105 R. R. 673 ... 650

B—concld.

Page.

Brojanath Bose v. Durga Prosad Singh, 34 C. 753 at p. 772, 5 C. L. J. 583 ... 925
Broje Kishoree v. Sreenath Bose, 9 W. R. 463 at p. 465 ... 104
Brojomohun Doss v. Hurrolall Doss, 5 C. 700 ... 590
Brooke v. Bulkely, (1754) 2 Ves Sen. 498 ... 184
Brounsall, In re, (1878) Cowper's Rep. 829 ... 547
Brown, In re, (1861) 29 Beav. 401; 7 Jur. (N. S.) 650; 9 W. R. 430; 131 R. R. 641 ... 925
Brown v. Alabaster, (1887) 37 Ch. D. 490; 57 L. J. Ch. 255; 58; L. T. 265; 36 W. R. 155 ... 967
Brown v. Pocock, (1833) 2 Rus. and M. 210; Coop. t. Borough 10; 4 L. J. Ch. 15 ... 287
Browne v. Tighe (1834) 2 Cal. & Fin. 396; 8 Bligh (N. S.) 272; 37 R. R. 150 ... 183
Brunskill v. Watson, (1868) 3 Q. B. 418; 37 L. M. C. 103; 18 L. T. 432; 16 W. R. 1009 ... 959
Bryant Powis and Bryant v. La Banque dus Peuple, Bryant Powis and Bryant v. Quebeck Bank, (1893) App. Cas. 170: 62 L. J P. C. 68; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600 ... 140
Buckland v. Papillan, (1866) 2 Ch. App. 67; 36 L. J. Ch. 81; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92 ... 183
Budh Singh v. Mula Singh, 40 P. R. 1905; 18 P. L. R. 1905 ... 351
Budree Das Mukim v. Chooni Lall Johurry, 33 C. 789; 10 C. W. N. 581 ... 666
Bukshi v. Nizamuddi, 20 C. 505 ... 112
Bullock, In re, Good v. Lickorish, (1891) 60 L. J. Ch. 341; 64 L. T. 736; 36 W. R. 472 ... 287
Burdett, In re, (1888) 57 L. J. Q. B. 263 at p. 264; 20 Q. B. D. 310; 36 W. R. 345; 5 Morrell 32; 58 L. T. 708 ... 371
Butler v. Knight, 36 L. J. Ex. 66; L. R. 2 Ex. 109; 15 L. T. 621; 15 W. R. 407 ... 391
Buzlal Karim v. Satish Chandra Giri, 15 C. W. N. 752 at p. 756; 13 C. L. J. 418; 10 Ind. Cas. 325 ... 605
Bykant Nath Shaha v. Rajendro Narain Rai, 12 C. 333 ... 921

C

Cable v. Bryant, (1908) 1 Ch. 259; 77 L. J. Ch. 78; 98 L. T. 98 ... 968
Casamally Jairajbhoy v. Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim, 36 B. 214; 13 Bom. L. R. 717; 12 Ind. Cas. 225 ... 695
Caspersz, A. v. Kader Nath Sarbhadikari, 28 C. 738; 5 C. W. N. 858 ... 210
Chajju v. Sheo Sahai, 10 A. 123 ... 862
Challa Subbiah Sastri v. Palury Partabiramayya, 31 M. 446 ... 488
Chamarnee Bibee v. Ayenoollah Sirdar, 9 W. R. 451 ... 268
Chambers v. Gaussen, (1844) 2 Jo. and La To. 99; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 575 ... 183
Chambers v. Smith, (1878) 3 App. Cas. 795 ... 287
Chamela Kuer v. Amir Khan, 16 A. 77; A. W. N. (1893) 223 ... 100
Chand Koer v. Partab Singh, 15 I. A. 156; 16 C. 98 ... 509
Chand Mal v. Angan Lal, 13 A. 368 ... 314

C—contd.

Page.

Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, 22 C. 131 ... 402
Chandra Kanta Das v. Rama Nath Barman, 11 C. L. J. 591; 6 Ind. Cas. 478 ... 240
Chandra Mohun Mookhopadhaya v. Bissesswar Chatterjee, 1 C. W. N. 158 ... 654
Chandradeo Singh v. Mata Prasad, 31 A. 176 (F. B.); 6 A. L. J. 263; 1 Ind. Cas. 479 669, 736
Chandu v. Akbar, 49 P. R. 1909; 70 P. W. R. 1909; 68 P. L. R. 1909; 2 Ind. Cas. 91 ... 351
Chandu Lal v. Awad, 21 B. 351 ... 493
Chapman v. Chapman, (1851) 13 Beav. 308; 20 L. J. Ch. 465; 15 Jur. 265; 17 L. T. (o. s.) 70; 88 R. R. 507 ... 724
Chapman v. Speller, 14 Q. B. 621; 19 L. J. Q. B. 239; 14 Jur 652 ... 439
Chappan v. Moidin Kutti, 22 M. 68 ... 594
Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349; 29 L. J. Ex. 81; 5 Jur. (N. S.) 873; 7 W. R. 685; 115 R. R. 187 ... 651
Chatarbhuj Das v. Ganesh Ram, 20 A. 474 ... 431
Chatturbhooj Meghji v. Dharamsi Naranji, 9 B. 438 ... 348
Chaudhri Kundan Lal v. Sardar Alla Dad Khan, 19 P. R. 1910; 36 P. W. R. 1910; 5 Ind. Cas. 821; 167 P. L. R. 1910 ... 582
Cheda Lal v. Mul Chand, 14 A. 30; A. W. N. (1891) 174 ... 186
Chellayamal v. Muttialamal, 15 W. R. 1 (P. C.) 348
Chenna Reddi v. Peddaobi Reddi, 32 M. 416; 6 M. L. T. 130; 2 Ind. Cas 802; 19 M. L. J. 388 585
Cheria Krishnan v. Vishnu Nambudri, 5 M. 198 ... 338
Chesterfield v. Janssen, (1750) 2 Ves. 125; 1 Atk. 352 ... 42
Chhataraput Singh v. Gopichand Bothra, 26 C. 750; 4 C. W. N. 446 ... 345
Chidambaram Chettiar v. Gauri Nachiar, 6 I. A. 177 at p. 180; 2 M. 83 (P. C.) ... 643
Chidambaram Chettiar v. Samy Iyer, 30 M. 6; 16 M. L. J. 427; 1 M. L. T. 351 324, 603
Chinnappudayan, In the matter of, 37 M. 548; 3 M. L. T. 18; 7 Cr. L. J. 28 ... 70
Chintaman Bajaji Dev v. Dhondo Ganesh Dev, 15 B. 612 ... 781
Chinto v. Janki, 18 B. 51 ... 634
Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan, 19 P. R. 1906; 70 P. L. R. 1906 ... 21
Chiragh Din v. Mamman, 28 P. R. 1893 ... 188
Chiruvolu Punnamma, Chiruvolu Perraju, 29 M. 390; 1 M. L. T. 183; 16 M. L. J. 307 (F. B.) ... 103
Chitko v. Janaki, 11 B. H. C. R. 199 ... 742
Chotalal Lakhmiram v. Manohar Ganesh Tambekar, 26 I. A. 199; 24 B. 50; 4 C. W. N. 23 ... 442
Chowdhury Kesri Sahai v. Geani Roy, 26 C. 626 ... 784
Chowksi Himutlal v. Chawksi Achrutlal, 8 B. 194 ... 726
Chunder Pershad Roy v. Shuvadra Kumari Shaheba, 12 C. 622 ... 172
Chunilal v. Manishankar, 18 B. 616 ... 967
Chunilal v. Surajram, 33 B. 433 at p. 438; 11 Bom. L. R. 708; 3 Ind. Cas. 765 ... 950
Chunilal Fulchand v. Mangaldas Govardandoss, 16 B. 592 114, 186
Chunni v. Thakur Das, 1 A. 126 ... 3

C—concld.

Page.

Churaman Sahu v. Gopi Sahu, 37 C. 1; 13 C. W. N. 994; 1 Ind. Cas. 945; 10 C. L. J. 544 ... 744
Churcher v. Martin, (1889) 42 Ch. D. 312; 58 L. J. Ch. 586; 61 L. T. 113; 37 W. R. 682 ... 695
Chuttan v. Ram Chand, 86 P. R. 1904 ... 37
Clive Durant, In re, (1898) Ratanlal's Unrep. Cr. C. p. 975 ... 814
Coleman; Henry v. Strong, In re, (1888) 39 Ch. D. 443; 58 L. J. Ch. 226; 60 L. T. 127 ... 287
Coley, O. R. v. V. A Dacosta, 17 C. 200 ... 601
Collector of Bijnor v. Munuvar, 3 A. 20 ... 878
Collector of Madura v. Moottoo Ramalinga Sathupathy, 12 M. I. A. 397; 1 B. L. R. 1 (P. C.); 10 W. R. 17 (P. C.) ... 748
Collector of Salem v. Rangappa, 12 M. 404 ... 490
Collector of Thana v. Bhaskar Muhadev Sheth, 8 B. 264 at pp. 267, 268 ... 676
Collector of Trichinopoly v. Sivaramakrishna Sastrigal, 23 M. 73 at p. 81 ... 762
Collett v. Preston, 15 Beav. 458; 92 R. R. 507 ... 165
Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores, (1904) A. C. 179 at p. 189; 73 L. J. Ch. 484; 90 L. T. 687; 53 W. R. 30; 20 T. L. R. 475 ... 25
Colonel Lecky v. Bank of Upper India, Limited, 33 A. 529; 8 A. L. J. 487; 9 Ind. Cas. 1023 ... 13
Corbett v. Plowden, 25 Ch. D. 678 at p. 681; 54 L. J. Ch. 109; 50 L. T. 740; 32 W. R. 667 ... 2
Cotha Krishnasawmy Chetty v. Thatha Seetharam Chetty, (1910) M. W. N. 53; 5 Ind. Cas. 374; 7 M. L. T. 355 ... 513
County Life Assurance Co., In re, (1870) 5 Ch. Ap. 288 at p. 293; 39 L. J. Ch. 471, 22 L. T. 537, 18 W. R. 390 ... 978
County of Gloucester Bank v. Rudry Merthyr Colliery Co., (1895) 1 Ch. 629; 12 R. 183; 72 L. T. 375; 43 W. R. 486; 2 Manson 223; 64 L. J. Ch. 451 ... 978
Cowasji Nowroji Pochkhanawalla v. Rustomji Dossabhoy Setna, 20 B. 511 at p. 587 ... 695
Cox v. Burbidge, (1863) 32 L. J. C. P. 89; 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 970; 11 W. R. 435 899
Crawford v. Rambo, 44 Ohio. St. 287; 7 N. E. 429 ... 652
Crears v. Hunter, 19 Q. B. D. 341; 56 L. J. Q. B. 518; 57 L. T. 554; 35 W. R. 821 ... 467
Criminal Reference No. 105 of 1897, 4 Bom. L. R. 945, note ... 529
Crown v. Tha Sin, 1 L. B. R. 216 ... 803
Cutter v. Powell, 6 Term. Rept. 320; 3 R. R. 185; Smith's Leading Cases, Vol. II, p. 1 ... 894

D

D'Epineuil Tadman, In re, v. D'Epineuil, (1882) 20 Ch. D. 758; 47 L. T. 157; 30 W. R. 702; 51 L. J. Ch. 491 ... 32
D'Silva v. Raj Coomar Dutt, 16 W. R. 153 ... 268
Dad v. Bhag Singh, 34 P. R. 1883 (F. B.) ... 37
Dagdu v. Shekh Saheb, 2 B. H. C. R. 369 at p. 380; 2nd Ed. 348 ... 611
Dakhina Mohan Ray v. Sarodar Mohan Ray, 21 C. 142 (P. C.); 20 I. A. 160 ... 289
Dalip Narayan v. Chait Narayan, 16 C. L. J. 395; 17 Ind. Cas. 927 ... 932

D—contd.

Page.

Damaraju Narasimha Rao v. Thadinada Gangaraju, 31 M. 431; 4 M. L. T. 271 ... 186
Damodar v. Bhogilall, 24 B. 45 ... 972
Damodar Bhataji v. Bhat Bhogilal, 22 B. 493 ... 781
Damodar Das v. Gokal Chand, 7 A. 79 at p. 82... 623
Damodara v. Vyanku, 31 B. 244; 8 Bom. L. R. 199 ... 264
Damodhar v. Birjo, S. D. of 1858 p. 802 ... 667
Dattu v. Kasai, 8 B. 535 ... 639
Davis v. Reilly, (1898) 1 Q. B. 1; 66 L. J. Q. B. 844; 77 L. T. 399; 46 W. R. 96 ... 722
Davis v. Taylor, (1736) 3 Ridgeway P. C. 395 ... 183
Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh, 110 P. R. 1906 (F. B.); 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907 ... 187
Daya Shankar v. Ganga Sahai, 12 O. C. 347 at p. 379; 4 Ind. Cas. 763 ... 337
Dayaram v. Gordhandas, 31 B. 73; 8 Bom. L. R. 885 ... 163
Debendra Narain Roy v. Ramtaran Banerjee, 30 C. 599; 7 C. W. N. 766 ... 751
Debtor, In re, (1907) 2 K. B. 896 ... 165
Defries v. Creed, (1865) 34 L. J. Ch. 607, 11 Jur. (N. S.) 360; 12 L. T. 262; 13 W. 632 ... 234
Delhi and London Bank v. Wordie, 1 C. 249 at p. 263; 25 W. R. 272 ... 200
Deoki Nandan Singh v. Bansi Singh, 16 C. W. N. 124; 14 C. L. J. 35; 10 Ind. Cas. 371 ... 89
Deosthan of Sonegaon v. Mukunda, 14 C. P. L. R. 154 ... 887
Depan Rai v. Ram Khelawan Rai, 7 A. L. J. 330; 5 Ind. Cas. 557; 32 A. 383 ... 522
Deputy Commissioner, Partabgarh, Manager of Baragaon v. Sheoambar, 1 O. C. 29 ... 465
Deutsche Springs Stoff Actien Gesellschaft v. Briscoe, 20 Q. B. D. 177 at p. 180; 57 L. J. Q. B. 4; 36 W. R. 557 ... 390
Devi Ditta v. Saudagar Singh, 65 P. R. 1900 (F. B.); P. L. R. 1900 p. 322 ... 667
Devi Prasad v. Baldeo, 18 A. 123; (1896) A. W. N. 13 ... 2
Devji, In re, 18 B. 581 ... 720
Devulapalli Kumeswara Sastry v. Palavasapu Veeracharlu, 34 M. 422; 8 Ind. Cas. 195; 20 M. L. J. 855; 9 M. L. T. 26 ... 309
Dhanjibhoy Bomanji v. Hirabai, 25 B. 644; 3 Bom. L. R. 371 (F. B.) ... 629
Dhanookdharee v. Toomey, 20 W. R. 142 ... 268
Dharam Das v. Nand Lal, A. W. N. (1889) 78 ... 135
Dhone Kristo Samanta v. Emperor, 6 C. W. N. 717 at p. 719 ... 59
Dhuman v. Syed Abdulla Khan, 6 A. L. J. 381; 31 A. 333; 1 Ind. Cas. 760 ... 517
Dhumee Behara v. Sevenoaks, 13 C. 80 894, 901
Dhunpat Singh v. Saraswati Misrain, 19 C. 267 ... 123
Dhuramsey v. Ahmedbhai, 23 B. 15 ... 897
Dhurrum Singh v. Kishen Singh, 7 C. 767; 9 C. L. R. 410 ... 273
Digambar Nanda v. Secretary of State, 16 C. L. J. 381; 17 Ind. Cas. 917 ... 922
Digumber Roy v. Moti Lal, 9 C. 563; 12 C. L. R. 204 ... 283
Dilsukh Ram v. Nathu Singh, 98 P. R. 1894 (F. B.) ... 188

D—concld.

Page.

Dina v. Nothu, 26 B. 538; 4 Bom. L. R. 253 ... 930
Dina Nath v. Bejoy Krishna, 7 C. W. N. 744 ... 265
Dina Nath Roy v. Krishna Bejoy Saha, 9 C. W. N. 379 ... 655
Dinamoni Chowdhrani v. Elahudad Khan, 8 C. W. N. 843 ... 106
Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee, 30 C. 801 at p. 807; 7 C. W. N. 810 168, 170, 172
Dino Nath v. Chundi Koch, 16 C. L. J. 14; 16 Ind. Cas. 349 ... 283
Dinonath Sen v. Guruchurn Pal, 14 B. L. R. 287, 21 W. R. 310 ... 939
Diwan Zalimsingh v. Chadamilal, 11 C. P. L. R. 133 ... 131
Dixon v. Mackleston, (1872) 8 Ch. 155; 42 L. J. Ch. 210; 27 L. T. 804; 21 W. R. 178 ... 724
Dodd v. Burchall, (1862) 1 H & C. 113; 31 L. J. Ex. 364; 8 Jur. (N. S.) 1180 ... 967
Domi Lal Sahu v. Roshan Dubey, 33 C. 1278; 11 C. W. N. 107 ... 620
Dorab Ally Khan v. Executors of Khajaji Moheeooddeen, 3 C. 806 ... 439
Doraisami Ayyar v. Annasami Ayyar, 23 M. 306 at p. 312 ... 422
Drobomoyee Gupta v. C. T. Davis, 14 C. 323 at pp. 331, 341 ... 751
Duchess of Kingston's case, 2 Smith's L. C. 778 454
Dudden v. Guardians of Clutton Union, 1 H. & N. 627; 26 L. J. Ex. 146; 108 R. R. 752 ... 652
Dukka Mandal v. Grant, 16 C. L. J. 24; 16 Ind. Cas. 467 ... 270
Dulal Chandra Deb v. Ram Narain Deb, 31 C. 1057 ... 427
Duni Chand v. Ram Chand, 28 P. R. 1887 ... 351
Durga Charan Roy v. Pandab Nath, 2 C. W. N. clv ... 683
Durga Charan Sarkar v. Jatindra Mohan Tagore, 27 C. 493 at p. 497 ... 924
Durga Prasad Singh v. Brajanath Bose, 39 I. A. 133; 15 C. L. J. 461; 15 Ind. Cas. 219, 16 C. W. N. 482, (1912) 1 M W. N. 425, 11 M. L. T. 337, 9 A. L. J. 462, 14 Bom. L. R. 445, 23 M. L. J. 26, 39 C. 696 ... 925
Durga Prasad Singh v. Ram Dayal Chaudhuri, 38 C. 153; 10 Ind. Cas. 955 ... 356
Durga Prosad Sen v. Doula Gazee, 1 C. W. N. 160 ... 654
Dursun Sing v. Durbijoy Singh, 9 C. L. J. 623; 1 Ind. Cas. 530 ... 137
Dwarka Das v. Kameshar Prasad, 17 A. 69; A. W. N. (1895) 3 ... 196

E

Ebrahim Ismail Timol v. Provas Chandra Mitter, 36 C. 59; 1 Ind. Cas. 472 ... 200
Edwards v. Edwards, (1876) 2 Ch. D. 291; 45 L. J. Ch. 391; 34 L. T. 472; 24 W. R. 713 ... 234
Ekabar Sheikh v. Hara Bewah, 13 C. L. J. 1; 15 C. W. N. 335; 8 Ind. Cas. 660 ... 458
Ellis v. Loftus Iron Co., (1875) 44 L. J. C. P. 24; L. R. 10 C. P. 10; 31 L. T. 483; 23 W. R. 246 900
Emperor v. Ali Raza Shah, 24 P. L. R. 1904; 1 Cr. L. J. 109 ... 59
——— v. Allahrakhio Bakhshan, 6 S. L. R. 101; 17 Ind. Cas. 412, Infra ... 403

E—concld.

Page.

Emperor v. Arjun Ambo, 12 Bom. L. R. 129; 5 Ind. Cas. 861; 11 Cr. L. J. 271; 34 B. 326 ... 785
——— v. Datto Hanmant Shahapurkar, 30 B. 49; 7 Bom. L. R. 633; 2 Cr. L. J. 578 ... 712
——— v. Dongraya Gangaram Bhil, Cr. Ref. No. 91 of 1911 (Unrep.) ... 785
——— v. Durga Bahirav, 6 Bom. L. R. 1098; 1 Cr. L. J. 1114 ... 785
——— v. Harpal Rai, 24 A. 454; A. W. N. (1902) 123 ... 796
——— v. Kanji Joysingh, 5 Bom. L. R. 26 ... 785
——— v. Mirza Mahomed Shirazi, 4 B. L. R. 943 ... 529
——— v. Muhammad Hadi, 26 A. 177; 1 Cr. L. J. 357; A. W. N. (1903) 215 411, 816
——— v. Muthukumaran, 27 M. 525 ... 785
——— v. Namdeo Sakharam, 12 Bom. L. R. 135; 5 Ind. Cas. 863; 11 Cr. L. J. 273 ... 790
——— v. Parmeshur, 7 O. C. 113; 1 Cr. L. J. 459 ... 74
——— v. Sada, 26 B. 150; 3 Bom. L. R. 586 ... 65
——— v. Seikh Saheb, 3 B. 197 ... 80
——— v. Sundar Sarup, 26 A. 514; A. W. N. (1904) 90; 1 Cr. L. J. 335 ... 574
——— v. Zuji Manu Dibri, 5 Bom. L. R. 125 55
Empress v. Ilahi Baksh, 2 A. 910 ... 412
Enayetoollah v. Nubo Coomar Sircar, 20 W. R. 207 ... 268
Eshan Chunder Singh v. Shama Churn Bhutto, 11 M. I. A. 7 at p. 20; 6 W. R. (P. C.) 57 ... 646
Essoo Bhayaji v. The Steamship 'Savitree', 11 B. 133 ... 906
Esubai v. Damodar, 16 B. 552 ... 967

F

Fakir Chander v. Ram Kumar, 31 C. 909 (P. C.); 8 C. W. N. 721; 1 A. L. J. 420; 6 Bom. L. R. 741; 31 I. A. 195 ... 241
Fakira v. Hari, 6 C. P. L. R. 135 ... 868
Fakurdin Sahib v. Ackeni Sahib, 2 M. 197 ... 590
Fawcus v. Sarsfield, (1856) 6 El. & Bl. 192; 25 L. J. Q. B. 249; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 665; 26 L. T. (O. S.) 323; 106 R. R. 559 ... 192
Farzand Ali v. Hanuman Prasad, 19 A. 64 ... 568
Fateh Singh v. Karm Chand, 56 P. R. 1886 ... 687
Fazarali v. Hazaharullah, 16 C. L. J. 45; 13 Cr. L. J. 688; 16 Ind. Cas. 336 ... 816
Fazul Din v. Narain Singh, 153 P. W. R. 1906; 128 P. R. 1906. ... 254
Featherstone v. Fenwick, (1784) 1 Br. Ch. Cas. 270 note ... 724
Fergusson v. The Government, 8 W. R. 232 ... 925
Fisher and Taylor v. Prosser, (1774) 1 Cowper 217 ... 524
Fitzgerald: Surman v. Fitzgerald, In re, (1904) 1 Ch. 573 at p. 593; 73 L. J. Ch. 46; 90 L. T. 266; 52 W. R. 432; 20 T. L. R. 332 ... 287
Flower v. Local Board of Low Leyton, (1877) 5 Ch. D. 347; 46 L. J. Ch. 621; 36 L. T. 760; 25 W. R. 545 ... 877
Francis Ghosal v. Gabri Ghosal, 31 B. 25; 8 Bom. L. R. 770 ... 259
Frederick Peacock v. Madan Gopal, 29 C. 428; 6 C. W. N. 577 ... 432

G

Page.

Gadadhar Dass v. Dhunput Singh, 7 C. 585; 9 C. L. R. 227 ... 172
Gadi Kunbi v. Ramlal, 16 C. P. L. 36 ... 607
Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh, 18 A. 176 at 182 ... 767
Gajjo Koer v. Syed Ally Ahmed, 14 W. R. 474; 6 B. L. R. Ap. 62 ... 268
Ganeshi Lal v. Nand Kishore, 10 A. L. J. 45; 13 Cr. L. J. 477; 34 A. 487; 15 Ind. Cas. 319 ... 793
Ganga Prasad v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh, 29 A. 415; A. W. N. (1907) 112 ... 889
Ganga Ram v. Abdul Rahman, 28 P. R. 1907; 140 P. W. R. 1907 .. 582
Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj Singh, 9 A. 253 ... 701
Gangadhar v. Parasharam, 29 B. 300; 7 Bom. L. R. 252 ... 524
Gaskell v. Durdin, 2 Ball & Beaty 167 ... 2
Gayratulla Sardar v. Girish Chandra Bhaumik, 12 C. W. N. 175 ... 178
General Stock Exchange v. Bethell, (1886) 2 T. L. R. 683 ... 155
George v. Davies, (1911) 2 K. B. 445 at p. 449; 80 L. J. K. B. 924; 104 L. T. 648; 55 S. J. 481; 27 T. L. R. 415 ... 898
Ghanya v. Ukund Rao, 4 N. L. R. 9 367, 608
Gharib-ullah v. Khalak Singh, 7 C. W. N. 681; 5 Bom. L. R. 478; 30 I. A. 165; 25 A. 407 (P. C.) 474, 499, 578
Ghasiti v. Umrao Jan, 20 I. A. 193 at p. 201; 21 C. 149 423, 835
Ghulaji v. Fakir Shah, 17 C. P. L. R. 139 at p. 143 ... 887
Ghulam Husain v. Dina Nath, 23 A. 467 at p. 470 ... 432
Ghulam Jilani v. Muhammad Hassan, 29 C. 167; 12 M. L. J. 77; 29 I. A. 51; 4 Bom. L. R. 161; 6 C. W. N. 226; 25 P. R. 1902 8, 431
Ghulam Mohy-ud-din v. Faiz Bakhsh, 97 P. R. 1902; 121 P. L. R. 1902 ... 188
Gian Singh v. Mohan Singh, 127 P. R. 1881 ... 362
Gibson v. Small, (1853) 4 H. L. C. 353; 1 C. L. R. 363; 17 Jur. 1131; 94 R. R. 138 ... 192
Girraj Baksh v. Kazi Hamad Ali, 9 A. 340 at p. 345 ... 938
Girwardhari v. Jai Narain, 32 A. 645; 7 A. L. J. 835; 7 Ind. Cas. 39 ... 93
Glass v. Paterson, (1902) 2 Ir. R. 660 ... 935
Gobind Chandra v. Radha Kristo, 31 A. 477; 6 6 A. L. J. 591; 3 Ind. Cas. 583 ... 259
Gobind Chund v. Mun Mohanjha, 14 W. R. 43 ... 242
Gobind Chunder Koondoo v. Taruck Chunder Bose, 3 C. 145; 1 C. L. R. 35 ... 455
Gobind Mohan Das v. Kunja Behari Das, 10 C. L. J. 407 at p. 411; 4 Ind. Cas. 364; 14 C. W. N. 147 ... 492
Gobind Singh v. Baldeo Singh, 25 A. 320; A. W. N. (1903) 57 ... 510
Gobinda Sundar Singh Chowdury v. Srikrishna Chakravarty, 10 C. L. J. 538; 6 M. L. T. 255; 3 Ind. Cas. 346 ... 647
Gokal Ram v. Kahani Ram, 95 P. R. 1900; 6 P. L. R. 1901 ... 273
Gokul Das v. Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, 33 C. 410; 10 C. W. N. 276; 4 C. L. J. 102 ... 725

G—contd.

Page.

Goodwyn v. Cheveley, (1859) 28 L. J. Ex. 298; 4 H. & N. 631; 7 W. R. 631; 118 R. R. 658 ... 900
Gooroo Persad v. Juggut Chunder, 8 M. I. A. 166 at p. 169; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 14 ... 222
Gopal v. Ganpat, 7 N. L. R. 122; 11 Ind. Cas. 911 ... 894
Gopal v. Krishna Rao, 25 B. 275 ... 520
Gopal Daji v. Gopal, 28 B. 248; 5 Bom. L. R. 1020 ... 620
Gopal Dass v. Seetaram, 3 Agra 268 ... 951
Gopal Krishna Jana v. Lakhiram Sardar, 16 C. W. N. 634; 14 Ind. Cas. 212 ... 608
Gopal Mundul v. Nobo Kishen, 5 W. R. Act X Rulings, 83 ... 268
Gopalsami Chetti v. Arunachellam Chetti, 27 M. 32 at p. 35 ... 348
Gopee Mohun Roy v. Sib Chunder Sen, 1 W. R. 68 ... 230
Gopeekristo Gosain v. Ganga Persaud Gosain, 6 M. I. A. 53 ... 216
Gordhandas v. Bai Ramcooverbai, 26 B. 449; 3 Bom L. R. 857 ... 755
Gordon v. Ogilvie, (1899) 15 T. L. R. 239 ... 967
Gossain Mungal Das v. Baboo Roy Dhunput Singh Bahadur, 25 W. R. 152 ... 172
Gour Chandra Gajapati v. Mukunda Deb, 9 C. W. N. 710 ... 496
Gourah Koeri v. Gajadhar Prasad, 5 C. 219; 4 C. L. R. 398 ... 477
Gouree Kamul v. Raj Kishen, 5 W. R. 106 ... 241
Gouree Kamul v. Raj Kristo 14 W. R. 369 ... 241
Gourmoni Debi v. Chairman of Panihati Municipality, 12 C. L. J. 75; 6 Ind. Cas. 864; 14 C. W. N. 1057 ... 139
Govind Krishna v. Abdul Quayyum, 25 A. 546; (1903) A. W. N. 127 ... 260
Govind Krishna v. Khunni Lall, 29 A. 487; 4 A. L. J. 365; A. W. N. (1907) 151 ... 230
Govind Sitaram v. Bapuji Mahadeo, 18 B. 516 ... 662
Govinda Pillai v. Thayammal, 28 M. 57; 14 M. L. J. 209 ... 105
Govindan Nair v. Saukaran Nair, 32 M. 351; 6 M. L. T. 106 (F. B.); 2 Ind. Cas. 83; 19 M. L. J. 350 ... 770
Govindarajulu Narasimham v. Venkatanarasayya, 27 M. 206 ... 309
Grand Junction Canal Company v. Shugar, 6 Ch. Ap 483; 24 L. T. 402; 19 W. R. 569 ... 651
Grant v. Mills, 13 R. R. 101; 2 V. & B. 307 ... 289
Graves v. Dolphin, (1826) 1 Sim. 66; 5 L. J. (o. s.) Ch. 45; 27 R. R. 166 ... 287
Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Amraoti Municipality, 8 N. L. R. 107 at p. 112; 16 Ind. Cas 449 ... 622
Greeman Singh v. Wahari Lall Singh, 8 C. 12; 9 C. L. R. 249 ... 386
Green v. Mules, (1861) 30 L. J. C. P. 343 ... 110
Gregory v. Dooley Chand, 14 W. R. 17 ... 191
Grinnell v. Phillips, 1 Mass. 530 at p. 542 ... 564
Gulam Haidar v. Sikandar Khan, 66 P. R. 1878 380
Gulam Husain v. Mehtab, 57 P. R. 1873 ... 362
Gulzar Ali v. Fida Ali, 6 A. 24 ... 633
Gunga Gobind Mundul v. Ashootosh Dhur, 21 W. R. 255 ... 46
Gunnaiyan v. Kamatchi Ayyar, 26 M. 339 at p. 340 ... 485

G—concld.

Page.

Gurbachan Singh v. Kura Mal, Civil Appeal No. 486 of 1899 decided on 14th October 1910 ... 252
Gurshidawa v. Gangaya, 22 B. 783 ... 438
Guru Gobind v. Anand Lal, 5 B. L. R. 15; 13 W. R. (F. B.) 49 ... 283
Gurudas Pyne v. Ram Narain Sahu, 10 C. 860; 11 I. A. 59 ... 314

H

Habib v. Fattu, 69 P. R. 1908; 125 P. L. R. 1908 667
Habib Bakhsh v. Baldeo Prasad, 23 A. 167; A. W. N. (1901) 39 ... 892
Haibat Khan v. Emperor, 33 C. 30; 10 C. W. N. 30; 3 Cr. L J. 125 ... 570
Hakim Lal v. Ramlal, 6 C. L. J. 46 841, 932
Hall v. Heward, 32 Ch. D. 430; 55 L. J. Ch. 604; 54 L. T. 810; 34 W. R. 571 ... 839
Hamid Ali Shah v. Wilayat Ali, 22 A. 93 ... 377
Hamilton v. Pandorf, (1887) 12 A. C. 518; 57 L. J. Q. B. 24; 57 L. T. 726; 36 W. R. 369; 52 J. P. 196; 6 Asp. M. C. 212 ... 193
Hamira v. Ram Singh, 134 P. R. 1907 (F. B.); 85 P. W. R. 1907; 74 P. L. R. 1908 ... 22
Hannoomanparshad Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koonweree, 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81, note 499, 526, 579, 611, 909
Hanuman Kamat v. Hanuman Mandur, 19 C. 123; 18 I. A. 158 ... 438
Har Narain Singh v. Chaudhrain Bhagwant Kuar, 13 A. 300 at p. 304; 8 I. A. 355 322, 639
Har Saran Das v. Nandi, 11 A. 330 ... 135
Hara Chandra Bairagi v. Bepin Behari Das, 13 C. L. 6. 38; 6 Ind. Cos. 860 ... 458
Hara Lall Banerjee v. Nitambini Debi, 29 C. 315 ... 200
Harduari Lal v. Gomi, 8 A. L. J. 385; 33 A. 525; 9 Ind. Cas. 1017 ... 86
Hardwar Pal v. King-Emperor, 10 A. L. J. 61; 13 Cr. L. J. 702; 34 A. 522; 16 Ind. Cas. 510 ... 791
Hare v. Burges, (1857) 4 Kay & J. 45; 27 L. J. Ch. 86; 3 Jur. (N. s.) 1294; 6 W. R. 144; 116 R. R. 255 ... 183
Harendra Lal Chowdhury v. Salimullah, 12 C. L. J. 336; 7 Ind. Cas. 21 ... 241
Hargobind Kuari v. Dharam Singh, 6 A. 329; A. W. N. (1884) 100 ... 277
Hari Kissin Bhagat v. Valiat Hussain, 30 C. 755; 7 C. W. N. 723 ... 839
Hari Sundari Dasya v. Shashi Bala Dasya, 1 C. W. N. 195 ... 921
Haridas Lalji v. Narotam Raghavji, 14 Ind. Cas. 769; 14 Bom. L. R. 237 ... 348
Haridas Nanabhai v. Vithaldas Kisandas, 14 Bom. L. R. 765; 36 B. 638; 17 Ind. Cas. 30 ... 969
Haridas Ramdas v. Ramdas Mathuradas, 13 B. 677 ... 227
Harjas v. Radha Krishan, 8 A. 256 ... 371
Harnaman v. Atma Ram, 24 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 437 ... 36
Harnand v. Jamna, 1 P. R. 1901 Rev. ... 986
Harnarain Singh v. Choudhrani Bhagwant Kaur, 13 A. 300; 18 I. A. 45 ... 8

H—contd.

Page.

Hatfield v. Phillips, 9 M. & W. 647; 11 L. J. Ex. 425 ... 829
Hatton v. Harris, (1895) App. Cas. 547 at p. 560; 62 L. J. P. C. 24; 1 R. 1; 67 L. T. 722 ... 280
Hatton v. May, (1876) 3 Ch. D. 148; 24 W. R. 754 ... 288
Hayat Shah v. Jawaya, 204 P. R. 1889 ... 908
Heath v. Pugh, (1881) 6 Q. B. D. 345, 50 L. J. Q. B. 573 ... 939
Heera Lall v. Dhunpat Singh, 24 W. R. 282 ... 939
Hem Chandra Bakshi v. Jadub Chandra Bakshi, 16 C. L. J. 116; 17 Ind. Cas. 99 120, 156
Hem Chunder Bhunjo v. Mon Mohini Dassi, 3 C. W. N. 604 ... 345
Hemchand v. Sakar Lal, 33 C. 219; 8 Bom. L. R. 129; 1 M. L. T. 115; 16 M. L. J. 115; 3 C. L. J. 395; 10 C. W. N. 361; 3 A. L. J. 250; 30 I. A. 1 (P. C.) ... 525
Her Highness Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Moottichund, 8 M. P. C. 4 at pp. 35, 38 ... 630
Herman v. Seneschal, (1862) 32 L. J. C. P. 43; 13 C. B. (N. s.) 392; 6 L. T. 646; 11 W. R. 184 674
Hikmatulla Khan v. Imam Ali, 12 A. 203 ... 332
Hira v. Dina, 37 P. R. 1895 ... 388
Hira Chand v. Abdal, 1 A. 455 ... 46
Hira Lal v. Bhairon, 5 A. 602 ... 470
Hira Lal v. Ghasitu, 16 A. 318; A. W. N. (1894) 104 ... 362
Hira Lal Ghose v. Chundra Kanto Ghose, 26 C. 539; 3 C. W. N. 403 ... 884
Hira Nand v. Secretary of State for India, 21 P. R. 1905; 132 P. L. R. 1905 ... 902
Hitchin v. Campbell, 2 W. Bl. 827 at p. 831; 3 Wils. 304; Loft 208 ... 463
Holloway v. Guneshwar Singh, 3 C. L. J. 182 ... 123
Holmes v. Goring, (1824) 2 Bing. 76; 9 Moore 166 ... 967
Holroyd v. Marshall, (1860) 10 H. L. Cas. 191; 32 L. J. Ch. 193; 9 Jur. (N. s.) 213; 7 L. T. 172; 11 W. R. 171 ... 32
Hoolash Kooer v. Kassee Proshad, 7 C. 369 ... 767
Hopkinson v. Rolt, (1861) 9 H. L. C. 514, 74 L. J. Ch. 468, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1209, 5 L T. (N S.) 90, 9 W. R. 900, 131 R R. 313 ... 929
Hori Lal v. Nimman Kunwar, 9 A. L. J. 819; 34 A. 549; 15 Ind. Cas. 126 ... 290
Howard v. Lightfoot, (1907) 1 Ch. 330; 76 L. J. Ch. 310; 96 L. T. 306 ... 620
Howell, In re, Ex parte Mandleberg and Company, (1895) 1 Q. B. 844, 64 L. J. Q. B. 454, 15 R. 372, 72 L. T. 472, 43 W. R. 447, 2 Manson 192 ... 935
Hoymobutty Dossee v. Sree Krissen Nundy, 4 W. R. 58 ... 241
Hridoy Nath Das v. Krishna Prosad Sircar, 34 C. 298; 6 C. L. J. 153; 11 C. W. N. 497 ... 167
Hub Ali v. Wazir-un-nissa, 28 A. 496; 3 C. L. J. 601; 10 C. W. N. 778 (P. C.); 3 A. L. J. 712; 1 M. L. T. 297; 33 I. A. 107 ... 468
Hukam Chand v. Hayat, 121 P. W. R. 1912; 99 P. R. 1912; 15 Ind. Cas. 941 ... 913
Hukam Chand Boid v. Kamalanand Singh, 33 C. 927; 3 C. L. J. 67 ... 585
Humera Bibi v. Najmen-nissa Bibi, 28 A. 147; A. W. N. (1905) 222; 2 A. L. J. 778 ... 859

H—concld.

Page.

Hunt Foulston v. Furber, (1876) 3 Ch. D. 285; 24 W. R. 756 ... 288
Hurbullubh Narain Singh v. Luchmeswar Prosad Singh, 26 C. 188, 3 C. W. N. 49 ... 68
Hurford v. Carpenter, (1785) 1 Br. Ch. Cas. 270 note ... 724
Hurpurshad v. Sheo Dyal, 3 I. A. 259 at p. 282; 26 W. R. 55 ... 356
Hurry Behari Bhagat v. Purgan Ahir, 19 C. 656 112
Husaini Khanam v. Husain Khan, 29 A. 471; A. W. N. (1907) 133; 4 A. L. J. 375 ... 443
Huthasanan Nambudri v. Parameswaran Nambudri, 22 M. 209 ... 839
Hyde v. Skinner, (1723) 2 P. W. 196 ... 183
Hyman v. Van den Bergh, (1908) 1 Ch. 167; 77 L. J. Ch. 154; 98 L. T. 487 ... 25

I

Ibn Husain v. Ramdai, 12 A. 110; A. W. N. (1890) 31 ... 46
Iburamsa Rowthan v. Thiruvenkatasami Naik, (1910) 1 M. W. N. 380; 20 M. L. J. 743 (F. B.); 7 Ind. Cas. 559; 8 M. L. T. 269; 34 M. 269 ... 436
Ichhri v. Jowahira, 18 P. R. 1896 ... 187
Iggulden v. May, (1804) 9 Ves. 325; 7 East 237; 3 Smith 269; 8 R. R. 623; 2 Bos. & P. (N. R.) 449 ... 183
Illikka Pakramar v. Kutti Kunhamed, 17 M. 69 ... 773
Imam Ali v. Baij Nath, 10 C. W. N. 551, 3 C. L. J. 576, 33 C. 613 841, 932
Imperator v. Jina Badhar, 14 Bom. L. R. 163; 14 Ind. Cas. 757; 13 Cr. L. J. 293 ... 541
Imperator v. Tyebali Curimji Barodawalla, 14 Bom. L. R. 885, note; 17 Ind. Cas. 529 ... 533
Inayat Ali Khan v. King-Emperor, decided on the 18th October 1910 ... 568
Inayat Husen v. Ali Husen, 20 A. 182 ... 519
Inderan Valungypuly v. Ramaswamy, 13 M. I. A. 141; 3 B. L. R. 1 (P. C.); 12 W. R. (P. C.) 41 ... 277
Inderdawan Pershad v. Gobind Lal Chowdhry, 23 C. 790 ... 930
Indur Subbaramani Reddy v. Kandadai Rajamanner Ayyangar, 26 M. 47 ... 8
Ishan Chandra Mittter v. Raja Ramranjan Chakarbutty, 2 C. L. J. 125 ... 607
Ishan Chunder Das Sarkar v. Bishu Sardar, 24 C. 825; 1 C. W. N. 665 ... 324
Ismdar Khan v. Ahmad Husain, 30 A. 119; A. W. N. (1908) 25; 5 A. L. J. 85; 3 M. L. T. 125 633
Isri Dut Koer v. Hansbutti Koerain, 10 I. A. 150; 10 C. 324; 13 C. L. R. 418 ... 509
Iswar Chander Guho, In the matter of the petition of, 14 C. 653 ... 402

J

J. M. v. King-Emperor, (1910) U. B. R. 17; 8 Ind. Cas. 469; 11 Cr. L. J. 659 ... 804
Jacobson, Ex parte, Pincoff, In re, (1882) 22 Ch. D. 312; 52 L. J. Ch. 561; 48 L. T. 197; 31 W. R. 554 ... 87

J—contd.

Page.

Jadubar Singh v. Sheo Saran Singh, 21 A. 26 ... 880
Jagan Nath v Tulsi Das, 72 P. R. 1898 ... 667
Jagannath v. Narayan, 34 B. 553; 12 Bom L. R. 545; 7 Ind. Cas. 459 ... 259
Jagapati Mudaliar v. Ekambara Mudaliar, 21 M. 274 ... 392
Jagat Tarini Dasi v. Nabogopal Chaki, 34 C. 305 at p. 311; 5 C. L. J. 270 493, 751
Jagdip Singh v. Narain Singh, 173 P. L. R. 1912; 160 P. W. R. 1912; 15 Ind. Cas. 866 ... 372
Jagomohan Pal v. Ram Kumar Gope, 28 C. 416 68
Jagramdas v. Narain Lal, 7 A. 857; A. W. N. (1885) 285 ... 279
Jaikarn v. Lakhu, 110 P. R. 1906 note at 414 ... 187
Jairam Mahton v. Emperor, 35 C. 103, 7 Cr. L. J. 123 ... 1007
Jalbhai v. Louis Manoel, 19 B. 680 at p. 687 ... 259
Jamadar Singh v. Serajuddin Ahmed Chowdhuri, 35 C. 979; 8 C. L. J. 82; 12 C. W. N. 862 ... 455
Jambu Prasad v. Aftab Ali Khan, 34 A. 331; 9 A. L. J. 420; 15 Ind. Cas. 881 ... 466
Jan Ali v. Ram Nath Mandal, 8 C. 32; 9 C. L. R. 433 ... 272
Janaki Ammal v. Narayanaswami Iyer, 18 M. L. J. 589; 4 M. L. T. 268 ... 584
Janardana v. Anant, 32 B. 386 at p. 390; 10 Bom. L. R. 575 ... 527
Janki Prasad v. Kishen Dat, 16 A. 478, A. W. N. (1894) 151 ... 930
Jatendra Mohun Tagore v. Dabendra Monee, 2 C. L. R. 419 ... 241
Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Gonendra Mohan Tagore, 9 B. L. R. 377; 18 W. R. 359; I. A. Sup. Vol. 47 ... 480
Jeo Lal Singh v Gunga Pershad, 10 C. 996 ... 231
Jervis v. Bruton, (1691) 2 Vern. 251 ... 702
Jhingai Singh v. Ram Partap, 31 A. 155; 6 A. L. J. 113; 9 Cr. L. J. 382; 1 Ind. Cas. 762 ... 68
Jib Lal Gir v. Jaga Mohan Gir, 16 C. W. N. 798; 16 Ind. Cas. 453 ... 157
Jijaji v. Balkrishna, 17 B. 169 ... 493
Jindkaur v. Majlis Rai, 23 P. R. 1876 ... 380
Job v. Banister, (1856) 2 Kay. & J. 374; 110 R. R. 273 ... 183
Joel v. Mills, (1857) 3 K. and J. 458 at p. 468; 112 R. R. 231 ... 287
Jogadindra Nath Roy v. Chundra Nath Poddar, 31 C. 242 ... 467
Jogender Narain v. Temple, 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 234 ... 963
Jogendra Nath Rai v. Baldeo Das, 35 C. 961; 6 C. L. J. 735; 12 C. W. N. 127 260, 435
Jogendro Bhupati v. Nityanand Mansingh, 18 C. 151; 17 I. A. 128 ... 278
Jogendro Bhuputi v. Nittyanund, 11 C. 702 ... 278
Jogesh Chunder Dutt v. Kali Churn Dutt, 3 C. 30; 1 C. L. R. 5 ... 207
Jogeswar Narain Deo v. Ram Chandar Dutt, 23 I. A. 37; 23 C. 670 ... 479
Joghi Konnigan v. Emporer 31 M. 515; 4 M. L. T. 223; 8 Cr. L. J. 402 ... 785
Joharuddin Sarkar v. Emperor, 31 C. 715; 8 C. W. N. 910 ... 59
Johnson, In re, Blackett, Ex parte, (1894) 70 L. T. 381, 10 R. 138, 1 Manson 54 ... 935

J—concld.

Page.

Jonab Ali v. Rakibuddin Mallick, 1 C. L. J. 303; 9 C. W. N. 571 ... 2
Jones v. Salter, (1815) 2 Rus. and M. 208; 34 R. R. 60 ... 287
Jotindra Mohun Tagore v. Shumbhu Chunder Bhattacharjee, 4 C. W. N. 43 ... 112
Joy Dutt Jha v. Bayee Ram Singh, 7 W. R. 40... 495
Joy Gobind Dass v. Gouree Parshad Shah, 7 W. R. 201 ... 924
Joy Gobind Laha v. Manmotha Nath Banerji, 33 C. 580 ... 89
Joy Narain Giri v. Goluck Chundar Mytee, 25 W. R. 355 ... 297
Joykrishna Mukhopadhya v. Sarfannessa, 15 C. 345 ... 172
Jug Ram v. Jewa Ram, 6 A. L. J. 647; 3 Ind. Cas. 497 ... 912
Jugal Kishori Chowdhurani v. Anunda Lal Chowdhuri, 22 C. 545 ... 499
Jugaraj Singh v. Ratan, 1 C. P. L. R. 37 ... 608
Jugdil Narain Suhaye v. Lalla Ram Prokash, 2 W. R. 292 ... 667
Juggalkishore v. Lakshmandas Raghunath Das, 23 B. 659 ... 273
Jumna Das v. Ram Outer Pandey, 15 C. L. J. 68, 39 I. A. 7, 34 A. 63, 13 Ind. Cas. 304, 16 C. W. N. 97, 11 M. L. T. 6, 9 A. L. J. 37, (1912) 1 M. W. N. 32, 14 Bom. L. R 1, 21 M. L. J. 1158 ... 930

K

Kabil Sardar v. Chandra Nath Nag Chowdhry, 20 C. 590 125, 127, 603, 654, 682
Kabiruddin v. Emperor, 35 C. 368, 12 C. W. N. 384, 7 C. L. J. 359, 7 Cr. L. J. 256, 3 M. L. T. 385 ... 1007
Kadakamvalli Kammili Sankaram Moosad v. Mokkath Hussain Haji, 30 M. 388; 2 M. L. T. 354; 17 M. L. J. 329 ... 338
Kadir Bacha Sahib v. Abdul Rahiman Sahib, 24 M. 639 ... 284
Kadumbinee Dossia v. Kasheenauth Biswas, 13 W. R. 338 ... 240
Kaihur Singh v. Roop Singh, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 4 ... 613
Kailash Chandra Mandal v. Ram Narain Giri, 4 C. L. J. 211 ... 455
Kailash Mondul v. Baroda Sundari Dasi, 24 C. 711; 1 C. W. N. 565 ... 455
Kalam Sheikh v. Panchu Mandal, 2 B. L. R. A. C. 252 ... 229
Kali Charan Ghose v. Emperor, 33 C. 1183; 10 C. W. N. 793; 3 C. L. J. 637; 3 Cr. L. J. 477... 59
Kali Kumar v. Bidhu Bhushan, 16 C. L. J. 89; 10 Ind. Cas. 382 ... 458
Kali Kumar Das v. Gopi Krishna Rai, 15 C. W. N. 990; 12 Ind. Cas. 48 ... 93
Kali Nath Singh, In the matter of, 3 C. W. N. 394 ... 796
Kalidas Kevaldas v. Nathu Bhagvar, 7 B. 217 ... 194
Kaliprasad Singh v. Jainarayan Roy, 11 W. R. 361; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 24 ... 924

K—contd.

Page.

Kallani Amma v. Govinda Menon, 22 M. L. J. 23; 12 Ind. Cas. 492; 10 M. L. T. 399; 35 M. 649; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 487 ... 475
Kallati Kunju Menon v. Palat Erracha Menan, 2 M. H. C. R. 162 ... 771
Kallinath Chakravarti v. Upendra Chunder Chowdhry, 24 C. 212; 1 C. W. N. 163 ... 654
Kalu v. Latu, 21 C. 259 ... 419
Kamala Dasi v. Tarapada, 15 C. L. J. 498; 14 Ind. Cas. 1006 ... 120
Kamalakshi v. Ramaswami Chetti, 19 M. 127 ... 423
Kamalammal v. Komandur Narasimhacharlu, 30 M. 464; 17 M. L. J. 317; 2 M. L. T. 359 ... 245
Kamaleswari Persad Singh Bahadur v. Maharaja Harbullab Narain Singh Bahadur, 2 C. L. J. 369 654, 684
Kameshar Prasad v. Bhikhan Narain, 20 C. 609 at p. 623 ... 959
Kamessur Pershad v. Kadir Khan, 20 W. R. 393 385
Kameswar Pershad v. Rajkumari Ruttan Keor, 20 C. 79; 19 I. A. 234 ... 462
Kandasamy v. Annamalai, 28 M. 67; 15 M. L. J. 402 ... 639
Kanharankutti v. Uthotti, 13 M. 490 ... 338
Kannan v. Nilakanta, 7 M. 337 ... 591
Kanti Chunder Goswami v. Bisheswar Goswami, 25 C. 585; 2 C. W. N. 241 ... 438
Kanto Prashad Hazari v. Asad Ali Khan, 5 C. L. R. 452 ... 883
Kanuparti Subbayya v. Madduletiah, 17 M. L. J. 469 ... 990
Karan Singh v. Bakar Ali Khan, 5 A. 1; 9 I. A. 99 ... 635
Karimdad Khan v. Mustaqim Khan, 26 A. 4; A. W. N. (1903) 175 ... 468
Karsandas Dharamsey v. Gangabai, 32 B. 479; 10 Bom. L. R. 184 ... 347
Kartick Nath v. Juggernath, 27 C. 285 30, 939
Karuppannan v. Bulokam, 23 M. 16 ... 277
Karuppayi Nachiyar v. Sankarayanan Chetty, 27 M. 300 at p. 312; 13 M. L. J. 398 ... 348
Kashi v. Sadashiv, 21 B. 229 ... 925
Kashi Nath Roy Chowdhry v. Surbanand Shaha, 12 C. 317 at p. 321 ... 921
Kasimunnissa v. Nilratana Bose, 8 C. 79; 9 C. L. R. 173; 10 C. L. R. 11 ... 3
Kasuri Ramaraju v. Ivalury Ramalingam, 26 M. 74; 12 M. L. J. 400 ... 98
Katama Natchiar v. Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 M. I. A. 539; 2 W. R. 31 (P. C.) 771, 866
Kattlewell v. Watson, 21 Ch. D. 685 at p. 714; 46 L. T. 83; 30 W. R. 402; 51 L. J. Ch. 281 ... 841
Kedar Nath v. Kali Churn, 25 C. 703, 2 C. W. N. 353 ... 939
Kedarnath Dutt v. Shamloll Khettry, 11 B. L. R. 405; 20 W. R. 150 ... 725
Kenath Puthen Vittil Tavazi v. Narayanan, 28 M. 182; 14 M. L. J. 415 ... 476
Keogh's Estate, In re, (1895) 1 I R. 201 ... 929
Kery Kolitany v. Moneram Kolita, 13 B. L. R. (F. B.) 1; 19 W. R. 367 85, 135
Kessowji Issur v. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company, 31 B. 381; 11 C. W. N. 721; 6 C. L. J. 5; 4 A. L. J. 461; 2 M. L. T. 435; 9 Bom. L. R. 671; 17 M. L. J. 347, 34 I. A. 115 ... 357
Ketaboi v. Queen-Empress, 27 C. 993 ... 413

K—contd.

Page.

Khaira v. Maula, 49 P. R. 1911; 136 P. W. R. 1911; 212 P. L. R. 1911; 11 Ind. Cas. 191 ... 250
Khaja Ikram-ullah Khan v. Moti Chand, 8 A. L. J. 826; 33 A. 695; 11 Ind. Cas. 17 ... 522
Khalilul Rahman v. Gobind Pershad, 20 C. 328 736
Khanderao Yeshwant, In re, 14 Bom. L. R. 362; 13 Cr. L. J. 527; 15 Ind. Cas. 9 ... 64
Kheerononee Dassee v. Beejoy Gobind Bural, 7 W. R. 533 ... 268
Khemchand v. Ramkishan, 5 C. P. L. R. 39 ... 608
Kherodemoney Dossee v. Doorgamoney Dossee, 4 C. 455; 2 C. L. R. 112; 3 C. L. R. 315 ... 694
Khetter Kristo Mitter v. Dinendra Narain Roy, 3 C. W. N. 202 ... 172
Khetter Paul Singh v. Luckhee Narain Mitter, 15 W. R. 125 ... 172
Khetra Pal Singh v. Kritartha Moyi Dasi, 33 C. 566; 10 C. W. N. 547 (F. B.); 3 C. L. J. 470 ... 346
Khirode Sundari Debi v. Jnanendra Nath Pal, 6 C. W. N. 283 ... 120
Khoda Bakhsh v. Mowla Bakhsh, 14 W. R. 255 419
Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed, 33 C. 352 (F. B.); 2 C. L. J. 259; 9 C. W. N. 1059; 2 Cr. L. J. 637 ... 68
Khoshal Chandra v. Ukiladdi, 14 C. W. N. 114, 3 Ind. Cas. 47 ... 939
Khuda Bakhsh v. Alim-un-nissa, 27 A. 313; A. W. N. (1904) 273; 1 A. L. J. 715 ... 333
Khuddo v. Durga Prasad, 3 A. L. J. 729; A. W. N. (1906) 299 ... 135
Khunni Lall v. Gobind Krishna, 33 A. 356; 38 I. A. 87; 15 C. W. N. 545 (P. C.); 8 A. L. J. 552; 13 C. L. J. 575; 13 Bom. L. R. 427; 10 M. L. T. 25; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 432; 21 M. L. J. 645; 10 Ind. Cas. 477 ... 260
Khushalchand v. Nandram, 13 Bom. L. R. 977; 33 B. 516; 12 Ind. Cas. 572 ... 889
Khushali v. Rani, 4 A. 195 ... 136
King-Emperor v. Bankatram, 28 B. 533 at p. 566 ... 999
——— v. Buransaheb, 6 Bom. L. R. 1096, 1 Cr. L. J. 1114 ... 999
——— v. Heera Joeeta, 3 Bom. L. R. 394 ... 543
——— v. Jagmohan, 6 A. L. J. 989; 4 Ind. Cas. 812; 11 Cr. L. J. 54 ... 791
——— v. Krishna Ayyar, 24 M. 641 ... 53
——— v. Krishna Rao, 4 Bom. L. R. 53 711
——— v. Pema Ranchod, 4 Bom. L. R. 85 ... 816
Kirpal Narain v. Sukurmoni, 19 C. 91 ... 278
Kisan v. Hira Lal, 8 N. L. R. 76; 15 Ind. Cas. 899 890
Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh, 38 I. A. 45 at p. 53; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 15 C. W. N. 321; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 15 C. L. J. 345; 21 M. L. J. 378 ... 195
Kishore Chunder Sen v. Kally Kinkur, 20 W. R. 333 ... 241
Kishore Doss v. Pursun Mahtoon, 20 W. R. 171 268
Kishore Lal Dey v. Administrator-General of Bengal, 2 C. W. N. 303 ... 112
Kishori Ghose v. Kumudini Kanta Ghose, 15 C. L. J. 138; 14 Ind. Cas. 377 ... 359
Kishun Pershad v. Tipen Pershad Singh, 34 C. 735; 11 C. W. N. 613; 5 C. L. J. 569 ... 579
Koduthi v. Madu, 7 M. 321 ... 135

K—contd.

Page.

Kola Naiken v. Muthyammal, 21 M. L. J. 997; 10 M. L. T. 265; 12 Ind. Cas. 76 ... 137
Kommachi Kather v. Pakker, 20 M. 107, 7 M. L. J 66 ... 941
Kommeneni Chinna Veerayya v. Kommeneni Lakshminarasamma, 22 M. L. J. 375; 11 M. L. T. 184; (1912) M. W. N. 442; 15 Ind. Cas. 213 103
Konna Paniker v. Karunakara, 16 M. 328 ... 444
Konwar Doorganath Roy v. Ram Chunder, 2 C. 341 ... 304
Kooer Gulab Singh v. Rao Kuran Singh, 14 M. I. A. 176 ... 382
Kottal Uppi v. Edavalath Thatham Nambudri, 6 M. H. C. R. 258 ... 948
Kovvuri Basavareddi v. Tallapragada Naganna, 35 M. 39; 8 Ind. Cas. 1087; 9 M. L. T. 467; (1910) M. W. N. 827 ... 438
Koylash Chunder Banerjee v. Kalee Prosunno Chowdry, 16 W. R. 80 ... 241
Krishna v. Balia, 8 N. L. R. 11; 14 Ind. Cas. 403 625
Krishna Aiyan v. Anantarama Aiyan, 2 M. H. C. R. 330 ... 139
Krishna Aiyan v. Raghava Aiyan, 9 M. L. J. 298 ... 436
Krishna Ayyar v. Krishnasami Ayyar, 23 M. 597 500
Krishna Behari Roy v. Bunwaree Lal Roy, 2 I. A. 283; 1 C. 141; 25 W. R. 1 ... 453
Krishna Chandra Saha v. Bhairab Chandra Saha, 32 C. 107; 9 C. W. N. 868 ... 619
Krishna Chandra Sen v. Sushila Soondury Dassee, 26 C. 611; 3 C. W. N. 605 ... 177
Krishna Iyer v. Balammal, 34 M. 398; 8 M. L. T. 314; 8 Ind. Cas. 412 ... 630
Krishna Menon v. Kesavan, 20 M. 305 ... 338
Krishna Nath Tewari v. King-Emperor, decided on the 3rd March 1910 ... 568
Krishna Prosad Singha v. Purnendu Narain Sinha, 15 C. L. J. 40; 16 C. W. N. 753; 11 Ind. Cas. 820 ... 111
Krishnama Chariar v. Srinivasa Ayyangar, 4 M. 339 ... 887
Krishnamarazu v. Marrazu, 28 M. 495; 5 M. L. J. 255 ... 967
Krishnan v. Venkatapathi Chetti, 29 M. 318 ... 942
Krishnarao v. Babaji, 24 B. 31 ... 911
Krishnasami v. Ramasami, 22 M. 519 ... 260
Krishnaswami Aiyar, In the matter of, 23 M. L. J. 114; (1912) M. W. N. 963; 16 Ind. Cas. 328; 16 C. W. N. 1081; 13 Cr. L. J. 680; 12 M. L. T. 396; 35 M. 543; 14 Bom. L. R. 1079; 16 C. L. J. 634 ... 549
Krishnaswami Das Reddi, In re, (1912) M. W. N. 167; 11 M. L. T. 182; 13 Ind. Cas. 648 ... 612
Krishnaswami Pannikonder v. Muthukrishna Panikondar, 24 M. 364 ... 430
Krishnayyan v. Muttasami, 7 M. 407 ... 277
Krishnayyar v. Muthukumaraswami Pillai, 29 M. 217 ... 841
Krishno Kamini v. Gopi Mohun, 15 C 652 ... 91
Kristo Indro Saha v. Huromonee Dossee, 1 I. A. 84 ... 887
Kristocomul Mitter v. Suresh Chunder Deb, 8 C. 556; 12 C. L. R. 253 ... 14
Kshitish Chandra v. Radhica Mohan, 35 C. 276; 3 M. L. T. 147; 12 C. W. N. 237 ... 963

K—concld.

Page.

Kumara Venkata Perumal Raja v. Thatha Ramasami Chetty, (1911) 1 M. W. N. 290; 9 M. L. T. 487; 21 M. L. J. 709; 35 M. 75; 9 Ind. Cas. 875 ... 435
Kundun Lal v. Bansi Dhar, 3 A. 170 ... 314
Kunhi Bivi v. Abdul Aziz, 6 M. 103 ... 124
Kunhi Mannen v. Seshagiri Bhakthan, 5 M. 141 30
Kuray Mal v. Puran Mal, 2 A. 565 ... 840
Kurri Veerareddi v. Kurri Bapireddi, 29 M. 336; 1 M. L. T. 153; 16 M. L. J. 395 ... 338

L

Labhu v. Hira Singh, 41 P. R. 1899 ... 366
Lahori v. Radho, 72 P. R. 1906; 108 P. L. R. 1907 ... 22
Lakmidas Khushal v. Bhaiji Khushal, 35 B. 317; 10 Ind. Cas. 914; 13 Bom. L. R. 313 ... 357
Lakshmandas v. Dasrat, 6 B. 168 ... 930
Lakshmandas Parashram v. Ganpatrav Krishna, 8 B. 365 ... 666
Lakshmi v. Kuttuni, 10 M. 57 ... 920
Lakshmi Narain Chatterjee v. Nanda Rani Debi, 3 Ind. Cas. 287; 9 C. L. J. 116 ... 157
Lakshmi Naranappa v. Meloth Raman Nair, 2 M. 540 ... 934
Lakshmidas Lalji, In re, 32 B. 184; 10 Bom. L. R. 28; 7 Cr. L. J. 35; 3 M. L. T. 46 ... 574
Lakshuman Giriraya Naik v. Madhu Kristian Shervai, 15 B. 186 ... 839
Lal Behary v. Habibur Rahman, 26 C. 166; 3 C. W. N. 8 ... 264
Lal Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Lal, 34 I. A. 65; 29 A. 244; 11 C. W. N. 417; 5 C. L. J. 340; 4 A. L. J. 227; 2 M. L. T. 147; 17 M. L. J. 228; 9 Bom. L. R. 597 ... 760
Lala Suraj Proshad v. Golab Chand, 28 C. 517 ... 580
Laldas Narandas v. Motibai, 10 Bom. L. R. 175 348
Lalit Chandra Chowdhury v. Baikuntha Nath Chaudhri, 5 Ind. Cas. 395; 14 C. W. N. 463; 15 C. L. J. 305 ... 157
Lalit Mohun Singh Roy v. Chukkun Lal Roy, 24 I. A. 76 at p. 88; 24 C. 834; 1 C. W. N. 387 ... 480
Lallubhai Bapubhai v. Mankubarbai, 2 B. 388 at p. 417 ... 658
Lalta Prasad v. Sadiq Hussain, 24 A. 288 ... 421
Lastings v. Gonsalves, 23 B. 539 at p. 543 ... 259
Lawrie v. Lees, (1881) 7 App. Cas 19 at p. 36; 51 L. J. Ch 209; 46 L. T. 210; 30 W. R. 185 ... 280
Laybourn v. Gridley, (1892) 2 Ch. 53; 61 L. J. Ch. 352; 40 W. R. 474 ... 160
Legge v. Ram Barn Singh, 20 A. 35 ... 675
Leeroyd v. Whiteley, (1887) 12 A. C. 77 ... 599
Lewis v. Stephenson, (1898) 67 L. J. Q. B. 296; 78 L. T. 165 ... 183
Lloyd, Llyod, In re, v. Lloyd, (1903) 1 Ch. 385 at p. 398, 72 L. J. Ch. 78, 87 L. T. 541, 51 W. R. 177, 19 T. L. R. 101 ... 939
Loke Nath Saha Chowdhry v. Nidu Biswas, 29 C. 382; 6 C. W. N. 469 ... 68
Lokha v. Hari, 64 P. R. 1893 ... 188
London Corporation v. Riggs, (1880) 13 Ch. D. 798; 49 L. J. Ch. 297; 42 L. T. 580; 28 W. R. 610; 44 J. P. 345 ... 968

L—concld.

Page.

London Omnibus Company Ltd. v. Level, (1901) 1 Ch. D. 135; 70 L. J. Ch. 17; 83 L. T. 453; 17 T. L. R. 61; 18 R. P. C. 74 ... 258
London Quays and Warehouse Company, In re, (1868) 3 Ch. 394; 87 L. J. Ch. 397; 18 L. T. 195; 16 W. R. 530 ... 856
Lott v. Duthwaile, (1893) 10 L. T. R. 76 ... 111
Lubeck, In re, 33 C. 151; 15 M. L. J. 432; 7 Bom. L. R. 894; 10 C. W. N. 57; 32 I. A. 217 (P. C.) .. 547
Lucas v. Harris, (1886) 18 Q. B. D 127; 56 L. J. Q. B. 15; 55 T. L. 658; 35 W. R. 112; 51 J. P. 261 ... 288
Luchmun Das v. Giridhur Chowdhry, 5 C. 855; 6 C. L. R, 473 ... 579
Luckhi Narain Miter v. Khetro Pal Singh Roy, 20 W. R. 380; 24 W. R. 407 note; 13 L. R. (P. C.) 146 ... 172
Lukhee Kanto Dass Chowdhry v. Sumeeruddin Lusker, 13 B. L. R. 243; 21 W. R. 208 588, 646
Lukhimoni Dasi v. Karuna Kant Moitro, 3 C. L. R. 509 ... 606
Lunhichekkan v. Sydia Arukenden, (1912) M. W. N. 386; 4 Ind. Cas. 480; 11 M. L. T. 232 ... 475
Lutchmanen Chetty v. Siva Prokasa Modaliar, 26 C. 349; 3 C. W. N. 190 ... 194
Lutf Ali Khan v. Asgar Reza, 17 C. 455 ... 222

M

Ma Dan Da v. Kyaw Zan, 3 L B. R. 5 ... 913
Ma Shwe v. Ma Kyu, 3 L. B. R. 66 ... 956
Macleod v. Kissan Vithal Singh, 30 B. 250 at p. 269; 6 Bom. L. R. 996 ... 3
Macnamara's Estate, In re, (1883) 13 L. R. Ir. 158 ... 929
Madan Lal v. Kishun Singh, 9 A. L. J. 844; 34 A. 572; 15 Ind. Cas. 138 ... 290
Madayya v. Venkata, 11 M. 193 ... 186
Madhub v. Joy Kumaree, 5 W. R. 201 ... 241
Magaluri Gurudiah v. Narayana Rungiah, 3 M. 339 ... 963
Magniram v. Mehdi Husain, 31 C. 95, 8 C. W. N. 20 ... 930
Maha Ram v. Ram Mahar, 65 P. R. 1903; 139 P. L. R. 1903 ... 188
Mahabir Pershad Singh v. Macnaghten, 16 C. 682; 16 I. A. 107 ... 462
Mahadaji v. Joti, 17 B. 425 ... 333
Mahadaji Hari Limaye v. Genapat Shet Dhond Shet, 15 B. 257 ... 839
Mahadeo v. King-Emperor, 7 A. L. J. 319; 6 Ind. Cas. 563; 11 Cr. L. J. 372; 32 A. 397 ... 793
Mahadeo v. Parshram, 25 B. 358 ... 520
Mahadeo Kunwar v. Biso, 25 A. 537; A. W. N. (1903) 102 ... 69
Mahalakshmi Amma v. Lakshmi, 21 M. L. J. 960; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 385; 12 Ind. Cas. 456 948
Maharaj Bahadur Singh v. Forbes, 35 C. 737; 7 C. L. J. 652 ... 345
Maharaj Tewari v. Harcharan Rai, 26 A. 144; A. W. N. (1903) 212 ... 68

M—contd.

Page.

Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi, 8 A. L. J. 1176; 15 C. W. N. 887; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 101; 10 M. L. T. 157; 13 Bom. L. R. 806; 14 C. L. J. 319; 11 Ind. Cas. 542 ... 95
Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy Bahadur v. Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi, 31 I. A. 203; 8 C. W. N. 809; 1 A. L. J. 588; 6 Bom. L. R. 765; 32 C. 129 (P. C.) ... 412
Maharajah Ramnath Singh v. Huro Lal Pandey, 8 W. R. 188 ... 229
Maharanee Indurjeeit Kooer v. Chandemun Misser, 16 W. R. 99 ... 273
Maharani Beni Parshad Koeri v. Raja Kumar Chowbey, 16 C. L. J. 124; 17 Ind. Cas. 111 ... 458
Mahmud-un-nissa v. Fakhr-ud-din Ahmad, 6 O. C. 26 ... 424
Mahomed Badsha v. Nicol, Fleming & Co., 4 C. 355; 2 C. L. R. 330 ... 917
Mahomed Ghouse Sahib v. Khadir Badshaw, 16 M. L. J. 148; 3 Cr. L. J. 487 ... 70
Mahomed Ibrahim Hossain Khan v. Ambika Prashad Singh, 39 C. 527; 11 M. L. T. 265; (1912) M. W. N. 367; 9 A. L. J. 332; 14 Bom. L. R. 280; 16 C. W. N. 505; 15 C. L. J. 411; 22 M. L. J. 468; 14 Ind Cas. 496 292, 455
Mahomed Mahmood v. Safar Ali, 11 C. 407 ... 269
Mahomed Nasser v. Kishen Mohun, W. R. F. B. 92 ... 241
Mahomed Riasat Ali v. Hasin Banu, 21 C. 157 at p. 163; 21 I. A. 155 ... 313
Mahomed Shamsool Hooda v. Shewakram, 2 I. A. 7; 14 B. L. R. 226; 22 W. R. 499 479, 509
Mahomed Shareef v. Chaitu, 2 N. L. R. 42 ... 893
Mahomed Wahib v. Mahomed Ameer, 32 C. 527; 1 C. L. J. 167 315, 352
Mangal Das v. Mahant Narinjan Das, 56 P. R. 1895 ... 271
Mangal Das v. Mahant Narrinjan Das, 58 P. R. 1893 ... 271
Mangal Sen v. Rup Chand, 13 A. 324 ... 428
Mangun Jha v. Dolhin Golab Koer, 25 C. 692; 2 C. W. N. 265 606, 906
Manohar Das v. Munzur Ali, 5 A. 40 ... 489
Manohar Ganesh Tambekar v. Lakhmiram, 12 B. 247 ... 442
Mansa v. Surta, 99 P. R. 1909; 16 P. L. R. 1910; 170 P. W. R. 1909; 4 Ind. Cas. 853 ... 37
Maqsud-ul-nisa v. Kaniz Zohra, 135 P. R. 1908 21
Marakar Akath Kondara Kayil Mamu v. Punjapatath Kutteu, 6 M. 61 ... 839
Marana Ammanna v. Pendayala Perubotulu, 3 M. 230 ... 838
Marapu Tharulu v. Telukula Neelakanta Behara, 30 M. 502 at p. 503; 2 M. L. T. 470 ... 483
Maria Chinnery v. Eyre Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115; 10 Jur. (N. S.) 855; 11 L. T. 68; 13 W. R. 20; 4 N. R. 520 ... 620
Maria Ellen Howard v. Charlotte Margaret Wilson, 2 C. L. R. 488 at p. 491; 4 C. 31 ... 702
Mariamnessa Bibee v. Joynab Bibee, 33 C. 1101; 4 C. L. J. 149; 10 C. W. N. 934 ... 862
Marriott v. Hampton, (1797) 7 T. R. 269; 2 Esp. 546; 4 R. R. 439 ... 206
Martin v. Kennedy, 2 Bos. & P. 69 ... 463

M—contd.

Page.

Masilamani Pillai v. Tiruvengadam Pillai, 31 M. 385 ... 455
Massey v. Taylor, Wood and Co., 98 Am. Dec. 429; 5 Cold. 447 ... 898
Masta v. Pohlu, 52 P. R. 1896 ... 188
Matangini Choudhurani v. Sreenath Das, 7 C. W. N. 522 ... 172
Mathews v. Munster, 57 L. J. Q. B. 49; 20 Q. B. D. 141; 57 L. T. 922; 36 W. R. 178; 52 J. P. 260 ... 391
Mathewson v. Ram Kanai Singha, 36 C. 675 at p. 710; 9 C. L. J. 523; 1 Ind. Cas. 626 ... 959
Mathura Das, In the matter of the petition of, 16 A. 80 ... 574
Mathura Mandul v. Ganga Charan Gope, 33 C. 1219; 10 C. W. N. 1033 ... 604
Mathura Naiken v. Esu Naicken, 4 B. 545 at p. 549 423, 835
Mathuradas Lavji v. Gocaldas Madhowji, 10 B. 468 ... 6
Matthew, Ex parte, (1884) 12 Q. B. D. 506; 51 L. T. 179; 32 W. R. 813; 1 Morrel 47 ... 722
Matungini Gupta v. Ram Rutton Roy, 19 C. 289 at pp. 292, 293 and 295 ... 136
Maung Po Te v. Maung Po Kyaw, 1 L. B. R. 215 913
Maung Pwa Gyee v. Queen Empress, 2 Bur. L. R. 9 ... 829
Maung Shwe Tha v. Maung Thu Daw, P. J. 461 913
Mavoulu Seetharam Naidu v. Doddi Rami Naidu, 33 M. 208; 6 Ind. Cas. 137; 7 M. L. T. 181; 20 M. L. J. 91 ... 493
Mazhar Husain v. Behari Singh, 28 A. 760; A. W. N. (1906) 234; 3 A. L. J. 567 ... 519
McCheane v. Gyles, (1902) 1 Ch. 911; 71 L. J. Ch. 446; 50 W. R. 387; 86 L. T. 217 ... 924
McNab v. Robertson, (1897) App. Cas. 129; 66 L. J. (P. C.) 27; 57 L. T. 636; 61 J. P. 468 ... 651
Meenakshi v. Appakutti, 33 M. 223; 7 M. L. T. 26; 20 M. L. J. 359; 4 Ind. Cas. 299 ... 277
Meherally v. Sakerkhanoobai, 7 Bom. L. R. 602 946
Mehtab Khan v. Mehtab Bibi, 24 P. R. 1877 ... 380
Mellor v. Swire, (1885) 30 Ch. D. 239 at p. 247; 53 L. T. 205; 33 W. R. 785 ... 280
Mg Myo v. Mg Hme, U. B. R. (1892—96) II, p. 371 ... 899
Mg. Sein v. Ma Mon, U. B. R. (1902-03) II, Budh Law, Adoption 1 ... 963
Mian Khan v. Alim Khan, 1 P. R. 1891 Rev. ... 981
Midland Railway Co. v Wright, (1901) 1 Ch. 738; 70 L. J. Ch. 411; 49 W. R. 474; 84 L. T. 225; 17 T. L. R. 261 ... 159
Miller, A. B. v. Ram Ranjan Chakravarti, 10 C. 1014 751, 916
Minakshi v. Immadi, 16 I. A. 1; 12 M. 142 ... 667
Minakshi Ammal v. Kalianrama Rayer, 20 M. 349 ... 436
Minalal Shadiram v. Kharsetji, 30 B. 395 at p. 408; 8 Bom. L. R. 296 ... 435
Mir Eusuff Ali Haji v. Panchanan Chatterjee, 15 C. W. N. 800, 11 C. L. J. 639, 6 Ind. Cas. 842 840, 932
Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhur-ud-in Mahomed Chowdhuri, 39 C. 232; 21 M. L. J. 1156; 16 C. W. N. 74; (1912) M. W. N. 22; 9 A. L. J. 33; 15 C. L. J. 69; 14 Bom. L. R. 5; 13 Ind. Cas. 331 499

M—contd.

Page.

Mirza Sajjad Husain v. Nawab Wazir Ali Khan, 16 C. W. N. 889; 10 A. L. J. 364; 16 C. L. J. 613; 14 Bom. L. R. 1055; 23 M. L. J. 210; 34 A. 455; 12 M. L. T. 361; (1912) M. W. N. 976; 15 O. C. 271; 16 Ind. Cas. 197 ... 994
Misri Lal v. Muthu Lal, 28 A. 28; A. W. N. (1905) 168 ... 841
Mithibai v. Limji Nowroji Banaji, 5 B. 45 ... 585
Mo Thi v. Tha Kwe, 4 L. B. R. 128 ... 956
Modhusudun Nath v. Hiru Ram, 25 C. 396; 2 C. W. N. 94 ... 231
Modun Mohun Chawdhri v. Ashad Ally Beparee, 10 C. 68; 13 C. L. R. 51 ... 468
Mohammad Ali Naki v. Ahmad-un-nisa, 1 O. C. Sup. Vol. p. 6. ... 81
Mohammad Fazal Ullah v. King-Emperor, decided on the 1st April 1912 ... 568
Mohan Lal Jechand v. Amrat Lal Bechardas, 3 B. 174 ... 160
Mohanund Mondul v. Nafur Mondul, 26 C. 820; 3 C. W. N. 770 ... 613
Mohendra Nath Kalamoree v. Koilash Chandra Dogra, 4 C. W. N. 605 ... 344
Mohendra Nath Mookerjee v. Kali Proshad Johuri, 30 C. 265 at p. 276; 7 C. W. N. 229 ... 399
Mohesh Lal v. Busunt Kumaree, 6 C. 340; 7 C. L. R. 121 ... 630
Mohesh Narain Munshi v. Taruck Nath Moitra, 20 I. A. 30 at p. 38; 20 C. 487 ... 632
Mohesh Sowar v. Narain Bag, 27 C. 981 ... 71
Moheshur Dutt Tewari v. Kishun Singh, 34 C. 184; 5 C. L. J. 441; 11 C. W. N. 294 ... 579
Mohim Chandra Sarkar v. Anil Bandhu Adhikary, 13 C. W. N. 513; 9 C. L. J. 362; 5 M. L. T. 247; 1 Ind. Cas. 66 ... 455
Mohini Mohun Das v. Bungsi Buddan Saha Das, 17 C. 580 ... 581
Mohunt Kishen Geer v. Busgeet Roy, 14 W. R. 379 ... 385
Mohunt Megh Lall Pooree v. Shib Pershad Madi, 7 C. 34 ... 920
Moidin Kutti v. Krishnan, 10 M. 322 ... 475
Momanda v. Farid, 14 P. R. 1901 Rev. ... 980
Mon Mohan v. Dwarka Nath, 12 C. L. J. 312, 7 Ind. Cas. 55 ... 939
Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 M. I. A. 551; 8 W. R. (P. C.) 3 ... 364
Moore v. Foley, (1801) 6 Ves. 232; 5 R. R. 270 ... 183
Mora Joshi v. Ramachandra Dankar Joshi, 15 B. 24 ... 839
Moreland v. Richardson, 24 Beav. 33; 26 L. J. Ch. 690; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 1189; 5 W. R. 672; 116 R. R. 18 ... 3
Morris v. Edgington, (1810) 3 Taunt 24 at p. 31; 12 R. R. 579 ... 967
Moser v. Marsden, (1892) 1 Ch. 487; 61 L. J. Ch. 319; 66 L. T. 570; 40 W. R. 520 ... 924
Moss v. Barton, (1866) L. R. 1 Eq. 174; 35 Beav. 197; 13 L. T. 623 ... 183
Moti Lal v. Karrab-ul-din, 25 C. 179; 24 I. A. 170; 1 C. W. N. 639 ... 432
Motilal Mithalal v. Advocate-General, 35 B. 279; 13 Bom. L. R. 471; 11 Ind. Cas. 547 ... 479
Mouji Premji Sett v. Maliyakel Koyassan Koya Haji, 3 M. 59 ... 431

M—contd.

Page.

Moyan v. Pathu Kutti, 31 M. 1; 3 M. L. T. 98; 17 M. L. J. 545 ... 340
Mubarak Husain v. Kaniz Bano, 27 A. 160; A. W. N. (1904) 201; 1 A. L. J. 569 ... 41
Muhammad Abid v. Muhammad Asghar, 8 A. 64; (1886) A. W. N. 2 ... 8
Muhammad Afzal Khan v. Nand Lal, 16 P. R. 1908; 73 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.); 146 P. L. R. 1908 ... 246
Muhammad Askari v. Radhe Ram Singh, 22 A. 207 ... 90
Muhammad Bakar v. Bahal Singh, 13 A. 277; A. W. N. (1891) 80 ... 471
Muhammad Din v. Jawahir, 69 P. R. 1907; 170 P. L. R. 1906 ... 37
Muhammad Husain v. Mul Chand, 27 A. 395; A. W. N (1905) 4; 1 A. L. J. 725 ... 634
Muhammad Ibrahim v. Ambika, 15 C. L. J. 411; 39 I. A. 68; 39 C. 527; 14 Ind. Cas. 496; 11 M. L. T. 265; (1912) M. W. N. 367; 9 A. L. J. 332; 14 Bom. L. R. 280; 16 C. W. N. 505; 22 M. L. J. 468 ... 929
Muhammad Ismail v. Chattar Singh, 4 A. 69; A. W. N. (1881) 116 ... 453
Muhammad Mumtaz Ahmad v. Zubaida Jan, 11 A. 460; 16 I. A. 195 (P. C.) ... 859
Muhammad Sirajul-Haq v. Imam-ud-Din, 19 A. 104; A. W. N. (1896) 189 ... 273
Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan, 11 A. 267 ... 419
Muhamad Umar v. Kirpal Singh, 78 P. R. 1904 188
Muhammad Yasin v. Ilahi Buksh, 34 A. 545; 10 A. L. J. 73; 16 Ind. Cas. 455 ... 657
Mujib-un-nissa v. Abdur Rahim, 23 A. 233; 28 I. A. 15 (P. C.); 11 M. L. J. 58; 5 C. W. N. 193; 3 Bom. L. R. 154 276, 466
Mulji v. Nathubhai, 15 B. 1 ... 42
Mulluk Chand Das v. Satish Chandra Das, 11 C. L. J. 56; 3 Ind. Cas. 306; 14 C. W. N. 335 ... 167
Mungul Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant, 8 C. 51, 11 C. L. R. 13, 8 I. A. 123 ... 939
Municipal Commissioners for the City of Madras v. Sarangapani Mudeliar, 19 M. 154 ... 161
Municipal Council of Sydney v. Young, (1898) App. Cas. 457; 67 L. J. P. C. 40; 71 L. T. 365; 46 W. R. 561 ... 159
Muniswami Chetty v. Maruthammal, 34 M. 211; (1910) M. W. N. 233; 8 M. L. T. 124; 20 M. L. J. 687; 7 Ind. Cas. 176 ... 348
Munna Singh v. Gajadar Singh, 5 A. 577 ... 438
Munnu v. Nusrat Ullah Khan, A. W. N. (1901) 36 ... 470
Munshi v. Daulat, 29 A. 262; A. W. N. (1907) 49; 4 A. L. J. 74 ... 840
Murad Khatun v. Ahmad Ali, 91 P. R. 1894 ... 860
Murlidhar v. Pem Raj, 22 A. 205 ... 522
Murray v. Murat Singh, 3 N. L. R. 171 ... 888
Murti v. Bhola Ram, 16 A. 165 ... 833
Murugayi v. Viramakali, 1 M. 226 ... 135
Musafir Rai v. Laggan Barta Kuar, 2 A. L. J. 62; A W. N. (1905) 14 .. 519
Musammat Kokan v. Musammat Lakho, 60 P. R. 1910; 92 P. W. R. 1910; 7 Ind. Cas. 470; 109 P. L. R. 1910 ... 22
Musammat Mitna v. Syad Fazl Rub, 13 M. I. A. 573; 15 W. R. (P. C.) 15; 6 B. L. R. 148 ... 457

M—concld.

Page.

Muthu Subbiah Chettiar v. Rungiah Gounden, 7 M. L. J. 191 ... 611
Muthusami Mudaliar v. Masilamani, 33 M. 342; 7 M. L. T. 17; 20 M. L. J. 49; 5 Ind. Cas. 42... 105
Muthuswami Mudaliar v. Veeri Chetti, 30 M. 382; 2 M. L. T. 239; 17 M. L. J. 266 (F. B.); 6 Cr. L. J. 102 ... 80
Mutteeram Kowar v. Gopaul Sahoo, 11 B. L. R. 416; 20 W. R. 187 ... 509
Mutty Lall v. Deshkar Roy, 9 W. R. 1 ... 925

N

Najm-ud-din Ahmed v. Albert Puech, 29 A. 584; 4 A. L. J. 450; A. W. N. (1907) 184 ... 431
Nallamuttu Pillai v. Betha Naickan, 23 M. 37 ... 635
Nalum Lakshimikantham v. Krishnasawmy Mudaliar, 27 M. 157 at p. 161 ... 201
Namasevayam Pillay v. Annammai Ummal, 4 M. H. C. R. 339 ... 96
Nand Kishore v. Anwar Husain, 30 A. 82, A. W. N. (1908) 13, 5 A. L. J. 91, 3 M. L. T. 195 ... 930
Nanda Lal v. Sadhu Charan, 7 C. L. J. 96 ... 167
Nanjappa v. Nanjappa Rao, 23 M. L. J. 290; 12 M. L. T. 133; 16 Ind. Cas. 478; (1912) M. W. N. 1091 ... 35
Nankura Pasi v. Emperor, 27 C. 139 ... 544
Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun, 13 C. 21 (P. C.); 13 I. A. 1 ... 736
Narain Dhara v. Rakhal Gain, 1 C. 1; 23 W. R. 334 ... 278
Naranji v. Mohi Govanji, 9 Bom. L. R. 1126 ... 194
Narayada v. Gopala Krishna, 28 M. 355, 15 M. L. J. 247 ... 939
Narayan v. Ganapat, 21 B. 619 ... 839
Narayana v. Narayana, 13 M. 437 ... 314
Narayana Kamti v. Handu Shetty, 15 M. L. J. 210 ... 948
Narayana Naicka v. Vasudeva Bhatta, 28 M. 389; 15 M. L. J. 208 ... 948
Narayanaswamy Naidu v. Vencata Subaraydu, 9 M. L. T. 315; 9 Ind. Cas. 642 ... 39
Narayani v. Gobinda, 7 M. 352 ... 475
Narendra Bahadur v. Ajudhia Prasad, 13 O. C. 28; 5 Ind. Cas. 443 ... 913
Narendra Lal v. Jogi Hari, 32 C. 1107, 2 C. L. J. 107 ... 938
Narendra Narayan Roy v. Ishun Chundra Sen, 22 W. R. 22; 13 B. L. R. (F. B.) 274 ... 603
Narendra Nath Baruri v. Abhoy Charan Chattopadhya, 34 C. 51; 4 C. L. J. 437; 11 C. W. N. 20; 1 M. L. T. 364 (F. B.) ... 114
Narpat Rai v. Devi Das, 14 Ind. Cas. 375; 16 P. W. R. 1912 ... 36
Narsingh Narain v. Sheikh Jahi Mistry, 15 C. L. J. 3; 13 Ind. Cas. 414 ... 264
Nasratullah v. Mujibullah, 13 A. 309 at p. 313; A. W. N. (1891) 117 ... 956
Natesa Gramani v. Vencatarama Reddi, 30 M. 510; 2 M. L. T. 455; 17 M. L. J. 518 ... 459
Nathumal v. Abdul Wahid Khan, 34 A. 355; 9 A. L. J. 362; 14 Ind. Cas. 812 ... 466
Nathuram v. Kutti Haji, 20 M. 446 ... 963
Nawab Azimat Alikhan v. Jowahir Singh, 13 M. I. A. 404; 14 W. R. 17 (P. C.) ... 840

N—concld.

Page.

Nawab Azimut Ali Khan v. Hurdwaree Mull, 13 M. I. A. 395; 14 W. R. (P. C.) 14 ... 217
Nawab Begam v. A. H. Creet, 27 A. 678; A. W. N. (1905) 147; 2 A. L. J. 405 ... 399
Nawab Sidhee Nuzur Ali Khan v. Oojoodhyaram Khan, 10 M. I. A. 540; 5 W. R. (P. C.) 83 ... 241
Nawaz Khoda v. Surendra Nath Dey, 5 C. L. J. 33; 11 C. W. N. 201; 34 C. 109 .. 2
Nehalo v. Kishen Lal, 2 A. 150 ... 135
Neikajee Sheikh Nazir v. Nanda Dulal Bamkeja, 1 C. W. N. 711 ... 112
Neill v. Devonshire, (1882) 8 A. C. 135 at p. 149; 31 W. R. 622 496, 968
New v. Swain, (1828) D. & L. 193; 34 R. R. 767 964
New Land Development Association, and Gray, In re, (1892) 2 Ch. 138; 61 L. J. Ch. 323; 66 L T. 404; 40 W. R. 295 ... 15
Newbould v. Smith, 33 Ch. D. 127 ... 620
Nichols v. Eaton, (1875) 91 U. S. 715; 1 Otto. 716; 23 Law. Ed. 254 ... 287
Nidhana v. Shaman, 10 P. R. 1908; 7 P. L. R. 1907; 43 P. W. R. 1907 ... 351
Nihal Singh v. Jawala Singh, 26 P. W. R. 1907 252
Nil Madhub Sarkar v. Brojo Nath Singha, 21 C. 236 112, 458
Nilakanta v. Imamsahib, 16 M. 361 ... 438
Nilmoni Chuckerbutti v. Bykant Nath Bera, 17 C. 466 ... 355
Nirbhe Ram v. Kallu Ram, 4 O. C. 376 ... 793
Nita Ram v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 30 A. 176; A. W. N. (1908) 63; 5 A. L. J. 166 ... 119
Nitayi Behari v. Hari Govinda, 26 C. 677 ... 231
Nityanund Ghose v. Kishen Kishore, (1864) W. R. Gap. No. Act X Rulings, 82 ... 588
Nityanund Roy v. Paresh Nath Sen, 32 C. 771; 9 C. W. N. 621; 2 Cr. L. J. 342 ... 71
Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob, 19 C. 52 ... 77
Nobin Kristo Mookerjee v. Russick Lall Laha, 10 C. 268 ... 68
Norendro Nath Sircar v. Kamalbasini Dasi, 23 I. A. 18; 23 C. 563 ... 696
Nugender Chunder Ghose v. Sreemutty Kaminee Dossee, 11 M. I. A. 241; 8 W. R. (P. C.) 17 ... 47
Nulam Lakshmikantham v. Krishnaswamy Mudaliar, 27 M. 157 ... 343
Nundo Pershad v. Gopal, 10 C. 1008 ... 41
Nur-ud-Din v. Emperor, 27 P. R. 1903 Cr.; 21 P. L. R. 1904; 1 Cr. L. J. 99 ... 59
Nur-ul-nissa v. Gauhar-ul-nissa, 61 P. R. 1906... 22
Nurendro Narayan Roy v. Ishen Chandra Sen, 13 B. L. R. 274; 22 W. R. 22 ... 655
Nusserwanjee Pestonjee v. Meer Mynoodeen Khan, 6 M. I. A. 134 ... 70

O

Okhoy Coomar Chatterjee v. Dhiraj Mahtab Chund, The Maharajah of Burdwan, 22 W. R. 299 ... 172

P

Page.

Pachayappan v. Narayana, 11 M. 269 ... 438
Pachkauri v. Queen-Empress, 24 C. 686 at p. 691, 1 C. W. N. 423 ... 1007
Padammah v. Themana Ammah, 17 M. 232 ... 988
Padmanabaya v. Ranga, 34 M. 161; (1910) M. W. N. 462; 20 M. L. J. 930; 6 Ind. Cas. 447; 8 M. L. T. 110 ... 947
Padmanand Singh v. Ramaprosad Malvi, 14 C. L. J. 127; 16 C. W. N. 14; 11 Ind. Cas. 22 285
Pahalwan Singh v. Maharaja Maheshur Buksh Singh Bahadur, 12 B. L. R. 391; 18 W. R. 182 (P. C.) ... 452
Pajiruddin v. Secretary of State, 16 C. L. J. 383; 17 Ind. Cas. 919 ... 922
Pal Singh v. Bur Singh, 65 P. R. 1910; 111 P. W. R. 1910; 7 Ind. Cas. 480; 115 P. L. R. 1910 ... 252
Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa, 24 B. 89 ... 136
Pandab Dowari Das v. Ananda Kishun Chakravarti, 14 C. W. N. 897; 7 Ind. Cas. 102; 12 C. L. J. 195 ... 588
Pandah Gazi v. Jennuddi, 4 C. 665; 2 C. L. R. 526 ... 186
Pandit Gopal Rao v. Gangay, 2 C. P. L. R. 221 142
Pandub Nath v. Durga Churn Roy, 2 C. W. N. clv ... 683
Pandurang Govind, In re, 24 B. 527 ... 68
Pandurang Govind, In re, 25 B. 179 ... 68
Papamma v. Collector of Godavari, 12 M. 341 ... 430
Parbati v. Naunihal Singh, 36 I. A. 71; 10 C. L. J. 121; 6 A. L. J. 597; 13 C. W. N. 983; 19 M. L. J. 517; 11 Bom. L. R. 878; 31 A. 412 (P.C.); 3 Ind. Cas. 195; 5 M. L. T. 427 ... 767
Parbati Kumari v. Jagadis Chunder, 29 C. 433; 29 I. A. 82 (P. C.); 4 Bom. L. R. 365; 6 C. W. N. 490 ... 259
Parbati Nath Dutt v. Raj Mohun Dutt, 29 C. 367; 6 C. W. N. 92 ... 507
Parma Nand v. Municipal Committee, Lahore, 65 P. R. 1905; 130 P. L. R. 1905 ... 254
Parmanand Misr v. Sahib Ali, 11 A. 438; A. W. N. (1889) 155 ... 519
Parsania v. Hari Charan, 16 Ind. Cas. 588 ... 157
Partab Bahadur Singh v. Gajadhar Bakhsh Singh, 24 A. 521; 29 I. A. 148 ... 331
Partab Singh v. Devi Singh, 5 P. R. 1883 ... 687
Partap Bahadur Singh v. Maheshwar Baksh Singh, 12 O. C. 45; 2 Ind. Cas. 52 ... 636
Parthasarathi Naiken v. Lakshmana Naiken, 21 M. L. J. 467; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 201; 9 M. L. T. 399; 35 M. 231; 9 Ind. Cas. 791 ... 635
Parvati v. Bhiku, 4 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 25 at p. 43 ... 135
Patit Sahu v. Hari Mahanti, 5 C. W. N. 126; 27 C. 789 ... 127
Pattikadan Ummoru v. Emperor, 26 M. 243 ... 53
Paya Matathil Appu v. Kovamel Amina, 19 M. 151 ... 3
Payne v. Hogg, (1900) 2 Q. B. 43; 69 L. J. Q. B. 579; 82 L. T. 584; 48 W. R. 417; 16 T. L. R. 298 ... 343
Pearce v. Morris, 5 Ch. 227; 22 L. T. 190; 19 W. R. 196; 39 L. J. Ch. 342 ... 839
Peary Mohan Mandal v. Radhika Mohun Hazra, 5 C. L. J. 9; 8 C. W. N. 315 ... 2

P—contd.

Page.

Pegge v. Neath Tramways Co., Ld., (1898) 1 Ch. 183, 67 L. J. Ch. 17, 77 L. T. 550, 14 T. L. R. 62, 46 W. R. 243 ... 979
Periannan Chetti v. South Indian Railway Co., 22 M. 137 ... 419
Perumbra Nayar v. Subrahmanian Patter, 23 M. 445 ... 892
Pestonjee Nussurwanji v. Manockjee and Co., 12 M. I. A. 112; 10 W. R. 51 (P. C.) ... 601
Pestonji v. Framji, 12 Bom. L. R. 863; 8 Ind. Cas. 180 ... 18
Petherperumal Chetty, T. P. v. R. Muniandy Servai, 35 C. 551 (P. C.); 12 C. W. N. 562; 7 C. L. J. 528; 5 A. L. J. 290; 14 Bur. L. R. 108; 10 Bom. L. R. 590; 18 M. L. J. 277; 4 M. L. T. 12; 4 L. B. R. 266; 35 I. A. 98 ... 918
Petre v. Sutherland, (1887) 3 T. L. R. 275 ... 155
Petumdoss v. Ramdhone Doss, (1848) Taylor 279 ... 195
Phanindra Nath Mitra v. Emperor, 36 C. 48; 12 C. W. N. 1014; 8 Cr. L. 221; 1 Ind. Cas. 469 412, 814
Philips v. Homfray, (1883) 24 Ch. D. 439; 52 L. J. Ch. 833; 49 L. T. 5; 32 W. R. 6 ... 227
Phillips v. Huth, 6 M. & W. 572; 10 L. J. Ex. 65 829
Phool Chund Lall v. Rughoobuns Suhaye, 9 W. R. 107 ... 509
Pilu v. Babaji Naru, 34 B. 165; 11 Bom. L. R. 1291; 4 Ind. Cas. 584 ... 742
Piran Ditta v. Moti, 97 P. R. 1901 ... 667
Pirbhu Narain Singh v. Amir Singh, 29 A. 369; A. W. N. (1907) 83 ... 841
Pirthi Chand Lal v. Basarat Ali, 37 C. 30; 13 C. W. N. 1149; 10 C. L. J. 343; 3 Ind. Cas. 449 267
Pirthipal Kunwar v. Guman Kunwar, 17 C. 933; 17 I. A. 107 ... 586
Pita v. Chuni Lal, 31 B. 207; 9 Bom. L. R. 15 ... 921
Pitchuvier v. Perumal Konan, 13 Ind. Cas. 651; 11 M. L. T. 160; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 163 ... 688
Pittapur Raja v. Buchi Sitayya, 8 M. 219 ... 453
Ponnusawmi Mudaliar v. Sriniva Naiken, 31 M. 333 ... 841
Poona City Municipality v. Ramji Raghunath, 21 B. 250 ... 750
Poornochunder Gangooly v. Kishen Chunder Ghose, 5 W. R. 112 ... 46
Pope v. Biggs, 9 B. & C. 245 at p. 258; 4 Man. & Ry. 193; 7 L. J. (o. s.) K. B. 246; 32 R. R. 665 ... 3
Posuka Kulla v. Chikka Hiria, 4 M. L. T. 213; 8 Cr. L. J. 399 ... 70
Prayag v. Tirumala, 28 M. 319; 15 M. L. J. 133 972
Prayag Das v. Tirumala, 30 M. 138; 11 C. W. N. 442; 2 M. L. T. 119; 17 M. L. J. 236; 34 I. A. 78; 9 Bom. L. R. 588 (P. C.) ... 970
Preonath Chattopadhya v. Ashutosh Ghose, 27 C. 358, 4 C. W. N. 490 ... 930
President and Governors of Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, (1879) 4 App. Cas. 324 at p. 334; 48 L. J. Ch. 579; 40 L. T. 466; 27 W. R. 602 ... 123
Price v. Assheton, (1834) 1 Y & C. 82; 41 R. R. 222; 4 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. Eq. 3 ... 183
Price and Company v. The Union Lighterage Company, (1903) 1 K. B. 750; 72 L. J. K. B. 374; 5 W. R. 477; 88 L. T. 428; 19 T. L. R. 328; 8 Com. Cas. 155; 9 Asp. M. C. 398 ... 38

P—concld.

Page.

Proctor v. Hodgson, (1855) 10 Ex. 824; 3 C. L. R. 755; 24 L. J. Ex. 195 ... 967
Prosonno Coomar v. Koylash Chunder, 8 W. R. 428 at p 436; B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 759; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 327 ... 622
Prosunno Coomarree Debea v. Sheikh Rutton Bepary, 3 C. 696; 1 C. L. R. 577 ... 209
Protap Chander Roy v. Sreemuty Joy Monee Debee, 1 W. R. 98 ... 385
Protap Chandra Misser v. Brojo Nath Misser, 19 C. 275 ... 273
Pugh v. Heath, (1882) 7 Ap. Cas. 235, 51 L. J. Q. 367, 46 L. T. 321, 30 W. R. 553 ... 939
Punjab National Bank v. Salamat Singh, 82 P. R. 1905; 199 P. L. R. 105 ... 254
Purna Chandra v. Radha Nath, 4 C. L. J. 141; 33 C. 867 ... 264
Purnendu Narain v. Dwijendra Narain, 8 C. L. J. 289 ... 968

Q

Queen v. Gour Chunder, 24 W. R. Cr. 5 ... 1007
——— v. Sabed Ali, 20 W. R. Cr. 5; 11 B. L. R. (F. B.) 347 408, 566
Queen-Empress v. Abdul Latib, 10 B. 186 ... 535
——— ——— v. Ahmadi, 20 A. 264 411, 815
——— ——— v. Anga Valayan, 22 M. 15 ... 53
——— ——— v. Basant Lall, 27 C. 320; 4 C. W. N. 311 ... 403
——— ——— v. Bhau, 23 B. 493 ... 716
——— ——— v. Elahi Bux, 2 A. 910 ... 815
——— ——— v. Ganesh Khanderao, 13 B. 506 ... 50
——— ——— v. Morton A. and Morteza Ali, 9 B. 288 ... 571
——— ——— v. Moss, 16 A. 88 ... 829
——— ——— v. Nidamarti, 7 M. H. C. R. 119 543
——— ——— v. O'Brien, 19 A. 111 ... 793
——— ——— v. Pandu Khandu, (1885) Unrep. Cr. C. 774 ... 785
——— ——— v. Raman, 21 M. 83 ... 76
——— ——— v. Sakar Jan Mahomed, 22 B. 934 ... 65
——— ——— v. Tulja, 12 B. 36 . 717
——— ——— v. Virappa Chetti, 20 M. 433 ... 574
——— ——— v. Virasami, 19 M. 375 ... 59
Queensland Land and Coal Co, In re, (1894) 3 Ch. 181, 8 R. 476, 71 L. T. 115, 42 W. R. 600, 1 Manson 355, 63 L. J. Ch. 810 ... 978
Quinn v. Leathem, (1901) A. C. 495 at p. 506; 70 L. J. P. C. 76; 85 L. T. 289; 50 W. R. 139; 65 J. P. 708; 17 T. L. R. 749 ... 968

R

R. v. Hull Dock Co., (1824) 3 B. & C. 516; 5 D. & R. 359 ... 959
Rachhea Singh v. Upendra Chandra Singh, 27 C. 239 ... 647
Radha Bai v. Shamrav, 8 B. 168 ... 3
Radhabai v. Anantrav Bhagvant Deshpande, 9 B. 198 ... 171

R—contd.

Page.

Radha Charan Roy v. Golapchandra Ghose, 31 C. 834; 8 C. W. N. 529 ... 178
Radha Pershad Misser v. Monohur Dass, 6 C. 317; 7 C. L. R. 293 ... 3
Radha Prasad Mallik v. Ranimoni Dassi, 35 C. 596; 8 C. L. J. 48; 12 C. W. N. 729 (P. C.); 10 Bom. L. R. 604; 5 A. L. J. 460; 18 M. L. J. 287; 35 I. A. 118 ... 479
Radha Prosad v. Balkowar Koer, 17 C. 726 ... 179
Raghobardial v. Sheo Baksh Singh, 9 C. 439; 12 C. L. R. 520; 9 I. A. 197 ... 453
Raghunandan Prosad v. Ambika Singh, 29 A. 679; A. W. N. (1907) 227; 4 A. L. J. 703 ... 3
Raghu Nath v. Thakuri, 4 A. 16 ... 380
Raghu Nath Prasad v. Kaniz Rasul, 24 A. 467; A. W. N. (1902) 116 ... 507
Raghu Nath Sahai v. Official Liquidator of the Himalaya Bank, 15 A. 139; A. W. N. (1893) 59 ... 471
Raghu Nath Singh v. Pareshram, 9 C. 635; 13 C. L. R. 89 ... 639
Raghunatha Pandaram v. Emperor, 26 M. 130... 414
Rahi v. Govinda, 1 B. 97 ... 277
Rahima v. Nepal Rai, 14 A. 520; A. W. N. (1892) 99 ... 913
Rahimbhoy Habibbhoy v. Charles Agnew Turner, 17 B. 341: 20 I. A. 1 ... 11
Rahimkhan v. Fatu Bibi, 21 B. 118 ... 747
Rahmat Karim v. Abdul Karaim, 6 C. L. J. 119; 34 C. 672; 11 C. W. N. 674 ... 264
Raj Narain Mitra v. Panna Chand Singh, 7 C. W. N. 203; 30 C. 213 ... 178
Raja v. Krishnabhat, 3 B. 232 ... 139
Raja Ram Ranjin v. Indra Narayan 33 C. 990; 10 C. W. N. 862 ... 264
Raja Ram Ranjan Chakrabarty v. Bunwari Lal Mitter, 16 C. L. J. 211; 17 Ind. Cas. 170; 14 C. W. N. cxxii ... 173
Raja Shaw Bax Boogla v. Pirumal, U. B. R. (1904-06), Civil, Master and Servant, p' 1 ... 901
Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Narayana Reddi, 17 M. 456 ... 989
Rajani Kanto Biswas v. Ekkari Das, 34 C. 689; 11 C. W. N. 811; 7 C. L. J. 48 ... 604
Rajendra Nath Ghose v. Tarangini Dasi, 1 C. L. J. 248 ... 455
Rajendro Nath Mukerji, In the matter of, 22 A. 49; 26 I. A. 242; 3 C. W. N. 736 ... 546
Rajendra Prasad Sahi v. King-Emperor, 1 A. L. J. 611; 1 Cr. L. J. 984 ... 406
Rajeswari Kuar v. Bal Kishan, 9 A. 713; 14 I. A. 142 ... 268
Rajmohun Bose v. East Indian Railway Co., 10 B. L. R. 241 ... 503
Rajunder Narain Rae v. Bijai Gobind Singh, 2 M. I. A. 253 ... 392
Rakhohir Chattaraj v. Bipra Das Dey, 31 C. 975 ... 47
Ram Chandra v. Jogendra Nath Banerji, 4 C. L. J. 399 ... 479
Ram Chunder Ghosaul v. Juggutmonmohiney Dabee, 4 C. 283; 3 C. L. R. 336 ... 630
Ram Gopal Jhoonjhoonwala v. Joharmal Khemka, 39 C. 473; 16 Ind. Cas. 547 ... 471
Ram Kali v. Jamna, 30 A. 508; 5 A. L. J. 629; A. W. N. (1908) 229 ... 277

R—contd.

Page.

Ram Kumar Shaha v. Ram Gour Shaha, 37 C. 67; 13 C. W. N. 1080; 10 C. L. J. 558; 2 Ind. Cas. 559 ... 438
Ram Kumar Singh v. Jagannmohan Singh, 33 A. 315; 8 A. L. J. 66; 9 Ind. Cas. 80 ... 390
Ram Lal v. Thakur Bachha Singh, 10 A. L. J. 114; 16 Ind. Cas. 625 ... 20
Ram Lall v. Debendra, 8 C. 8 ... 241
Ram Lall Chuckerbutty v. Tara Soondari, 8 W. R. 280 ... 268
Ram Lochan Sircar v. Hogg, 10 W. R. 430 234, 751
Ram Narain Koer v. Mahabir Pershad Singh, 13 C. 208 ... 736
Ram Narain Roy v. Baij Nath Malal, 29 C. 36... 322
Ram Narain Sahoo v. Bandi Pershad, 31 C. 737 ... 930
Ram Pershad v. Lakkpati Koer, 30 C. 231; 30 I. A. 1; 7 C. W. N. 162; 5 Bom. L. R. 103 ... 260
Ram Pitam Shah v. Shoobul Chunder Mullick, 15 C. 259 ... 878
Ram Rakha Mal v. Balwant Singh, 58 P. R. 1905; 59 P. L. R. 1905 ... 667
Ram Ranjan Chakrabutty v. Indra Narain Dass, 33 C. 890; 10 C. W. N. 862 841, 932
Ram Runjun v. Jowhurujumah, 23 W. R. 129 ... 939
Ram Saran v. Tek Chand, 28 C. 194 ... 278
Ram Saran Das v. Mohammad Nawaz Khan, 9 Ind. Cas. 38; 7 P. W. R. 1911; 14 P. L. R. 1911 ... 36
Rama Chandra Naiker v. Vijayaragavulu Naidu, 31 M. 349; 4 M. L. T. 198 ... 479
Rama Sawamy v. Neli Hari Krishna, 10 Ind. Cas. 658; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 220; 9 M. L. T. 465; 21 M. L. T. 705 ... 314
Rama Varma Raja v. Kadar, 16 M. 415 ... 444
Ramachandra v. Kondayya, 24 M. 555 ... 261
Ramachandra Aiyar v. Subramanya Chettiar, 14 M. L. J. 393 ... 618
Ramakristna v. Ranga, 7 M. 424 ... 139
Raman v. Wazira, 79 P. R. 1886 ... 582
Raman Menon v. Raman Menon, 24 M. 74 at p. 80 ... 775
Ramanand Singh v. Emperor, 11 O. C. 267; 8 Cr. L. J. 344 ... 74
Ramanadhan Chetty v. Narayanan Chetty, 27 M. 602; 14 M. L. J. 321 ... 585
Ramanath Kalapahar v. King-Emperor, 2 C. L. J. 524, 3 Cr. L. J. 160 ... 999
Ramanathan Chettiar v. Ananthanarayana Iyer, 33 M. 412; 7 M. L. T. 126; 5 Ind. Cas. 291 ... 400
Ramasami Patter v. Chinnan Asari, 24 M. 449; 11 M. L. J. 132 ... 338
Ramasamy Naik v. Ramaswami Chetti, 30 M. 255 at p. 263, 2 M. L. T. 167, 17 M. L. J. 201 ... 939
Ramasawmi Aiyan v. Vencataramiyan, 6 I. A. 196; 5 C. L. R. 337; 2 M. 91 ... 744
Ramaswami Aiyar v. Vythinatha Aiyar, 26 M. 760; 13 M. L. J. 448 ... 463
Ramaswami Chetty v. Ponna Padayachi, 21 M. L. J. 397; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 209; 9 M. L. T. 264; 9 Ind. Cas. 28 ... 635
Ramaswami Sastrulu v. Kameswaramma, 23 M. 361 (F. B.) ... 126
Ramchandra v. Ganesh, 23 B. 382 ... 428

R—contd.

Page.

Ramcoomar Koondoo v. McQueen, 18 W. R. 166; 11 B. L. R. 46; Sup. Vol. I. A. 40 ... 758
Ramdhari Sahu v. Ram Charitar Sahu, 38 C. 143; 7 Ind. Cas. 333 ... 35
Rameshar v. Gobardhan Lal, 7 C. L. J. 202 ... 479
Rameshar Bakhsh Singh v. Arjun Singh, 23 A. 194; 28 I. A. 1 (P. C.) ... 479
Ramgauda v. Gopal Sadashiv, (1898) P. J. 30 ... 171
Ramjee Ram v. Saligram, 14 C. L. J. 188; 11 Ind. Cas. 481 ... 35
Ramji Manor v. F. D. Little, 10 B. H. C. R. 57 895, 901
Ramlal Mukerjee v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 8 I. A. 46 at p. 61; 7 C. 304; 10 C. L. R. 349 ... 480
Ramlal Thakursidai v. Lakhmichand Muniram, 1 B. H. C. R. App. 51 ... 195
Rampershad Tewarry v. Sheo Churn Doss Tewarry, 10 M. I. A. 490 at p. 506 ... 348
Rampyarabai v. Balaji Shridhar, 28 B. 294; 6 Bom. L. R. 50 ... 270
Ramsebuk v. Ramlall Koondoo, 6 C. 815; 8 C. L. R. 457 ... 194
Ramzan Ali Khan v. Asghari Begam, 32 A. 563; 7 A. L. J. 614; 6 Ind Cas. 405 ... 81
Ranchodo Doss v. Rukmany Bhoy, 28 M. 487 ... 227
Ranchod Haribhai v. Secretary of State for India, 22 B 583 at p. 588 ... 622
Ranga Sami v. Muthusami, 11 M. 144 ... 431
Ranga Srinivasa Chari v. Gnanaprakasa Mudaliar, 30 M. 67; 2 M. L. T. 36 ... 879
Rangasami Pillai v. Krishna Pillai, 22 M. 259 ... 464
Rangayya Appa Rao v. Bobba Sriramulu, 27 M. 143 ... 123
Rangayya Goundan v. Nanjappa Rao, 24 M. 491 at p. 503; 3 B. L. R. 299; 6 C. W. N. 17; 28 I. A. 221 P. C. ... 582
Rangoon Botatoung Co. Ltd. v. Collector, Rangoon, 14 Bom. L. R. 833; 16 C. W. N. 961; 12 M. L. T. 195; (1912) M. W. N. 781; 16 C. L. J. 245; 22 M. L. J. 276; 10 A. L. J. 271; 5 Bur. L. T. 205, 207; 16 Ind. Cas. 188 ... 952
Rani Anund Kunwar v. The Court of Wards on behalf of Chandra Shikhar, 8 I. A. 14; 6 C. 764, 8 C. L. R. 381 104, 380
Rani Brohmomoyee v. Raja Anund Lall Roy, 13 B. L. R. 225 (note); 19 W. R. 419 ... 384
Rani Lalun Monee v. Sona Monee Dabee, 22 W. R. 334 ... 588
Ranjit v. Radha Rani, 20 A. 476 ... 135
Ranjit v. Tirkha, 117 P. R. 1885 ... 865
Ranjit Singh v. Jagannath Prosad Gupta, 12 C. 375 ... 157
Ranjit Singh v. Naubat, 24 A. 504; A. W. N. (1902) 161 ... 893
Rash Mohini Dasi v. Debendra Nath Sinha, 16 C. W. N. 395; 13 Ind. Cas. 604 ... 167
Rasseswari v. Sourendra, 11 C. L. J. 601; 5 Ind. Cas. 105 ... 241
Rasul Jehan Begum v. Ram Surun Singh, 22 C. 589 ... 135
Rathna v. Aiyanacharia, 18 M. L. J. 599; 4 M. L. T. 277 ... 260
Rathnasaba Pathi v. Ramasami Iyer, 33 M. 452; 7 M. L. T. 311; 20 M. L. J. 301; 5 Ind. Cas. 630; (1910) M. W. N. 112 ... 45

R—contd.

Page.

Ratnavelu Mudaliar v. Kolandavelu Pillai, 29 M. 511; 16 M. L J. 281 ... 162
Ravji Vinayakrav Jaggannath v. Lakshmibai, 11 B. 381 ... 742
Rawstron v. Taylor, 11 Exch. 369; 25 L. J. Ex. 33; 105 R. R. 567 ... 650
Ray v. Hazeldine, (1904) 2 Ch. 17; 73 L. J. Ch. 537; 90 L. T. 703 ... 967
Raye Kissory Dassee v. Nilcant Day, 20 W. R. 370 ... 173
Read v. Brown, (1888) 22 Q. B. D. 128; 58 L. J. Q. B. 120; 60 L. T. 250; 37 W. R. 131 ... 343
Reazooddeen v. McAlepine, 22 W. R. 540 ... 268
Reg. v. Doherty, (1887) 16 Cox C. C. 306 ... 804
—— v. Townshend, (1884) 15 Cox Cr. C. 466 ... 829
—— v. Vodden, 23 L. J. M. C. 7; Dears C. C. 229; 17 Jur. 1014; 2 W. R. 55; 6 Cox. C. C. 226 ... 562
—— v. Heyworth, (1866) 14 L. T. (N s.) 600 529, 533
Reid v. Richardson, 14 C. 361 ... 69
Reid v. So Hlaing, 5 L. B. R. 241; 3 Bur. L. T. 124; 8 Ind. Cas. 952 ... 827
Rekchand v. Krishna, 11 C. P. L. R. 127 ... 371
Rendall v. Blair, 45 Ch. D. 139 at p. 157; 50 L. J. Ch. 641; 63 L. T. 265; 28 W. R. 689 ... 493
Rewa Prasad Sukal v. Deo Dutt Ram, 27 I. A. 39; 27 C. 515 ... 767
Rex. v. Chandra Dharma, (1905) 2 K. B. 335; 74 L. J. K. B. 450; 92 L. T. 700; 53 W. R. 431; 69 J. P. 198; 21 T. L. R. 353 ... 630
—— v. Grindlay, (1819) 1 Rus. on Crimes (6th Edn.) 144 ... 803
—— v. Lord Grosvenor, (1819) 2 Starkie 511; 20 R. R. 732 ... 574
—— v. Meade, (1909) 1 K. B. 895; 78 L. J. K. B. 476; 73 J. P. 239; 53 S. J. 378; 25 T. L. R. 359 ... 803
—— v. Wooler, 18 R. R. 402; 2 Stark 111 ... 561
Reynolds v. Ashby, (1903) 1 K. B. 87 at p. 102; 72 L. J. K. B. 51; 51 W. R. 405; 87 L. T. 640; 19 T. L. R. 70 ... 3
Rhodes v. Dawson, (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 548 at p. 554; 55 L. J. Q. B. 134; 34 W. R. 240 ... 32
Rickards v. Rickards, (1843) 2 Y. & C. C. C. 419 at p. 427; 7 Jur. 715 ... 183
Robarts v. Buee, 8 Ch. D. 198 at p 200; 47 L. J. Ch. 414; 26 W. R. 393 ... 165
Robinson v. Geisel; (1894) 2 Q. B. 685; 64 L. J. Q. B. 52; 9 R. 555; 71 L. T. 70; 42 W. R. 609 924
Rochford v. Hackman, (1852) 9 Here 475; 21 L. J. Ch. 511; 16 Jur. 212; 89 R R. 539 ... 287
Roddam v. Morley, 1 De. G. & J. 1; 26 L. J. Ch. 438; 3 Jur. (N. s.) 449; 5 W. R. 510 ... 620
Roe v. Hayley, (1810) 12 East 464; 11 R. R. 465 ... 184
Rolls v. Vestry of St. George the Martyr Southwark, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 785 at pp. 795, 796; 43 L. T. 140; 28 W. R. 867; 44 J. P. 680; 49 L. J. Ch. 691 ... 159
Roper v. Roper, (1876) 3 Ch. 714 at p. 721; 35 L. T. 155; 24 W. R. 1013 ... 288
Roshan Lal v. Ram Lall Mullick, 30 C. 262 ... 921
Ross Alston v. Pitambar Das, 25 A. 509; A. W. N. (1903) 104 ... 523
Roushan Bibee v. Hurray Kristo Nath, 8 C. 926 ... 28

R—concld.

Page.

Rowlandson v. Champion, 17 M. 21 at p. 33 ... 15
Royal British Bank v. Turquand, (1856) 6 El. & Bl. 327; 24 L. J. Q. B. 317; 1 Jur. (N. s.) 663; 106 R. R. 623 ... 978
Rughoonath Doss v. Mr. T. Halle, 16 W. R. 60... 895
Rujaput Rai v. Mahomed Ali Khan, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 215 ... 46
Rujjub Ali v. Chandi Churn, 17 C. 543 ... 41
Run Bahadur Singh v. Lucho Koer, 11 C. 301; 12 I. A. 23 454, 867
Runchordas Vandravandas v. Parvatibai, 26 I. A. 71; 23 B. 725; 3 C. W. N. 621 ... 695
Rup Narain v. Gopal Devl, 36 C. 780; 13 C. W. N. 920; 6 A. L. J. 567; 11 Bom. L. R. 833; 10 C. L. J. 58; 19 M. L. J. 548; 36 I. A. 103 (P. C.); 5 M. L. T. 423; 3 Ind. Cas. 382; 93 P. R. 1909; 68 P. L. R. 1910 ... 103
Russell v. Russell, (1783) 1 Br. Ch. Cas. 269 ... 724
Ryrappan Nambiar v. Kelu Kurup, 4 M. 150 ... 771

S

Sacker, ex parte, 22 Q. B. D. 179 at p. 185; 58 L. J. Q. B. 4; 60 L. T. 344; 37 W. R. 204 ... 751
Sadho Singh v. Maharaja of Banares, 29 B. 12; 3 A. L. J. 606; A. W. N. (1906) 251 ... 265
Sadu v. Baiza, 4 B. 37 ... 277
Safaraddi v. Durga Prosad, 16 C. L. J. 83; 16 Ind. Cas. 966 ... 123
Sakhyahari Ingle Rao v. Bhawani Roy, 27 M. 588 ... 103
Saktai Kerulan v. Sakthi Sakthi, 24 Travancore L. R. 102; 1 Cochin L. R. 187 ... 778
Salita v. Sitaram, 6 C. P. L. R. 138 ... 368
Salter v. Cavanagh, (1838) 1 D. & W. 668; 56 R. R. 222 ... 695
Sami Aiyangar v. Laxim, 21 M. L. J. 455; 9 M. L. T. 263; 9 Ind. Cas. 8 ... 621
Sankara Bhatta v. Subraya Bhatta, 30 M. 535; 17 M. L. J. 437 ... 585
Sant Singh v. Sadda Singh, 63 P. R. 1912; 222 P. W. R. 1912; 14 Ind. Cas. 23 ... 392
Sarala Sundari v. Srada Prasad, 2 C. L. J. 602 ... 261
Sarasati v. Mannu, 2 A. 34 ... 277
Sarat Chandra v. Sham Chand Siugh, 16 C. L. J. 71; 39 C. 663; 14 Ind. Cas. 701 ... 184
Sarat Chandra Banerjee v. Bupendra Nath Basu, 25 C. 103 ... 6
Sarat Chandra Banerji v. Apurba Krishna Roy, 14 C. L. J. 55; 15 C. W. N. 925; 11 Ind. Cas. 187 ... 493
Sarat Chandra Bose v. The Secretary of State for India in Council, 10 C. W. N. 250 ... 119
Sardari Mal v. Khan Bahadur Khan, 11 P. R. 1899 ... 667
Saroda Prosaud v. Lutchmeepat, 10 B. L. R. 214 at p. 230 (P. C.), 17 W. R. 289, 14 M. I. A. 529 ... 938
Saroda Sundari v. Kristo Jiban Pal, 5 C. W. N. 300 ... 479
Sathappayyar v. Periasami, 14 M. 1 ... 272
Saunders v. Leslie, 12 R. R. 114; 2 Ball & B. 514 ... 289

S—contd.

Page.

Sawan v. Sahib Khatun, 44 P. R. 1909; 67 P. L. R. 1909; 69 P. W. R. 1909; 2 Ind. Cas. 71 ... 188
Searles v. Sadgrove, 5 E. & B. 639; 103 R. R. 658; 25 L. J. Q. B. 15; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 21; 4 W. R. 53; 26 L. T. (O. S.) 189 ... 369
Secretary of State v. Bhagwan Das, 7 P. R. 1895 Rev. ... 982
Secretary of State v. Bundeppa of Konakondia, 32 M. 300; 5 M. L. T. 31; 19 M. L. J. 206; 1 Ind. Cas. 76 ... 490
Secretary of State v. Gajanan Krishna Marlankar, 35 B. 362; 13 Bom. L. R. 273; 10 Ind. Cas. 639 ... 877
Secretary of State for India v. Krishnamoni Gupta, 29 C. 518 at p. 535; 6 C. W. N. 617; 4 Bom. L. R. 537; 29 I. A. 104 ... 633
Secretary of State for India in Council v. Luchmeswar Singh, 16 C. 223; 16 I. A. 6 ... 209
Sellam v. Chinnamma, 24 M. 441 ... 135
Sellappa Chetty v. Velayutha Tevan, 30 M. 498; 17 M. L. J. 433; 3 M. L. T. 17 ... 459
Seth Mulchand v. Seth Samir Mal, A. W. N. (1882) 59 ... 594
Settappa Goundan v. Muthai Goundan, 31 M. 268; 4 M. L. T. 77 ... 421
Sewdutt Roy Maskara v. Nahapiet, 34 C. 628; 11 C. W. N. 609 ... 974
Shafkat-un-nissa v. Shib Sahai, 4 A. 171 ... 833
Shah Nawaz v. Azamat Ali, 40 P. R. 1907; 163 P. W. R. 1907; 10 P. L. R. 1908 ... 252
Shahebzadee Shahunshah Begum v. Fergusson, 7 C. 499 ... 877
Shaik Alli v. Mahomed, 14 B. 267 ... 893
Shaik Moosa v. Shaik Essa, 8 B. 241 ... 873
Sheikh Mahomed v. The British India Steam Navigation Company, 32 M. 95; 4 M. L. T. 110 (F. B.); 8 M. L. J. 497; 1 Ind. Cas. 977 ... 38
Shailajananda v. Umeshanund, 2 C. L J. 460 ... 970
Sham Chand Kundu v. Brojonath Pal Chowdhry, 21 W. R. 84; 12 B. L. R. 484 ... 167
Sham Kuar v. Mohanunda Sahoy, 19 C. 301 ... 474
Sham Ram v. Musammat Hem Bai, 73 P. R. 1896 ... 188
Shama Parshad Roy Chowdhry v. Hurro Pershad Roy Chowdhry, 10 M. I. A. 203 at p. 211; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 11 ... 206
Shama Soonderee Dossi v. Brindabun Chunder, (1862) Marshall 199; 1 Hay 574 ... 346
Shamji v. Poonja, 26 B. 652; 4 Bom. L. R. 483... 912
Shanmuga Pillai v. Govindasami, 30 M. 459; 17 M. L. J. 452 ... 315
Shapurji v. Bai Ratanbai, 9 Bom. L. R. 287 (note) ... 725
Shashi Kumar Mirbahar v. Seeta Nath Banerjee, 35 C. 744; 7 C. L. J. 425 ... 346
Sheik Budan v. Ramchandra, 11 B. 537 ... 939
Sheik Moosa v. Sheik Essa, 8 B. 241 ... 6
Sheikh Gozaffer Hossein v. E. Dablish, 1 C. W. N. 162 ... 654
Sheikh Munsar v. Loknath Roy, 4 C. W. N. 10... 346
Sheo Dyal Singh v. Ganga, 14 Ind. Cas. 324 ... 524
Sheo Nundun Singh v. Ghunsam Kooree, 21 W. R. 143 ... 477
Sheo Prasad v. Behari Lal, 25 A. 79; A. W. N. (1902) 203 ... 841
Sheo Rattan Rai v. Mohri, 21 A. 354 ... 119

S—contd.

Page.

Sheo Suhaye v. Goodur Roy, 8 W. R. 328 ... 268
Sheo Tahal Ojha v. Sheo Dan Rai, 28 A. 174; 2 A. L. J. 630 (F. B.); A. W. N. (1905) 244 ... 841
Sheodhani Pandey v. Maharani Bani Pershad Keori, 16 C. L. J. 67; 16 Ind. Cas. 935 ... 267
Sheorania v. Bharat Singh, 20 A. 90 ... 581
Sheorattan Kunwari v. Ram Pergash, 18 A. 227; A. W. N. (1896) 37 ... 273
Sheoshankarpuri v. Rakhma, 15 C. P. L. R. 89... 368
Sheppard v. Doolan, (1842) 3 Dr. & War. 1; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 6 ... 183
Sher Ali v. Ahmad Ali, 13 C. P. L. R. 23 ... 139
Sher Ali Shah v. Lachman Das, 94 P. R. 1908; 74 P. W. R. 1908 ... 196
Sher Khan v. Shamsher Khan, 37 P. R. 1905; 35 P. L. R. 1905 ... 687
Sher Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Khan, 5 P. R. 1895 ... 21
Sher Zaman Shah v. Queen-Empress, 10 P. R. 1899 ... 59
Shesgiri v. Girewa 14 B. 282 ... 277
Shib Lal v. Collector of Bareilly, 16 A. 423; A. W. N. (1894) 161 ... 733
Shib Persad Doobey v. Promothonath Ghose, 10 W. R. 193 ... 268
Shirras v. Caige, (1812) 7 Cranch 74 ... 929
Shiv Gowda v. Fernandaz, 34 M. 513; 8 M. L. T. 412; 8 Ind. Cas. 141; (1911) M. W. N. 1; 21 M. L. J. 391 ... 48
Shiva Rao v. Nagappa, 29 M. 117 ... 119
Shridhar v. Hiralal Vithal, 12 B. 480 ... 96
Shwe Yo v. San Bu, S. J. P. 108 ... 956
Shyama Sundari Dasya v. Mahomed Zarip, 9 C. L. J. 91; 3 Ind. Cas. 693 ... 507
Sikandar Khan v. Bahadur Khan, 39 P. R. 1876 ... 380
Silamban Chetty v. Ramanadhan Chetty, 33 M. 256; 7 M. L T. 29; (1910) M. W. N. 141; 21 M. L. J. 152; 4 Ind. Cas. 301 ... 393
Simbhu Nath Pande v. Golap Singh, 14 C. 572; 14 I. A. 77 ... 498
Simpson v. Blues, (1872) L. R. 7 C. P. 290 ... 343
Simpson v. Clayton, (1838) 4 Bingham (N. S.) 758; 44 R. R. 841; 6 Scott 469; 1 Arn. 299; 8 L. J., C. P. 59: 2 Jur. 892 ... 184
Singam Setti Sanjivi Kondayya v. Draupadi Bayanna, 31 M. 153; 3 M. L. T. 251; 18 M. L. J. 11 ... 509
Singhee Ram v. Bhagbat Chandra Nundi, 11 C. L. J. 543; 6 Ind. Cas. 632 ... 184
Sinnu Pandaram v. Santhoji Row, 12 M. L. J. 398; 26 M. 428 ... 228
Sir Maharaja Kissen Pertab Sahi v. J. R. Tripe, 2 C. W. N. cliv ... 683
Sirdar Meru v. Jethabhai Amirbhai, 8 Bom. L. R. 513; 4 Cr. L. J. 54 ... 793
Sita Ram v. Bhawami Din Ram, 26 A. 105; A. W. N. (1904) 205 ... 321
Sitla Bakhsh v. Umed Koer, 1 O. C. 143 ... 300
Skinner v. Shanker Lal, 31 A. 10 (note); 1 Ind. Cas. 556 ... 676
Smith v Lloyd, (1854) 9 Exch. 562; 2 C. R. 1008; 23 L. J. Ex. 194; 2 W. R. 271; 22 L. T. (O. S.) 289; 96 R. R. 8 7 ... 633
Sobha Singh v. Kishore Chand, 65 P. R. 1907; 146 P. W. R. 1907 252, 667

S—contd.

Page.

Sobha Singh v. Thoba Singh, 14 P. R. 1899 ... 667
Sobhagchand Gulabchand v. Bhaichand, 6 B. 193 at p. 208 ... 19
Soman Mull v. Kanh Chand, 15 P. R. 1870 ... 362
Soni Maganlal v. Munshi Himatbhai, 3 Bom. L. R. 94 ... 955
Sonnum Sookul v. Shaikh Elahee Buksh, 7 W. R. 453 ... 178
Soobanse Singh v. Juggeshur Koer, 13 C. L. R. 86 ... 478
Soorjomonee Dayee v. Suddanund Mohapatter, 12 B. L. R. 304; 20 W. R. 377; I. A. Sup. Vol. 212 ... 453
Sorabji v. Rattonji, 22 B. 701 ... 200
Sorabji Edulji Warden v. Govind Ramji, 16 B. 91 ... 626
South Kensington Co-operative Stores, In re, (1881) 17 Ch. D. 161; 50 L. J. Ch. 446, 44 L. T. 471, 29 W. R. 662 ... 935
Sowdamini Chowdrain v. Krishna Kishore Poddar, 12 W. R. (F. B.) 8; 4 B. L. R. (F. B.) 11 ... 439
Speight, In re, Speight v. Gaunt, (1883) 22 Ch. D. 727; 51 L. J. Ch. 715 ... 598
Spooner v. Juddow, 4 M. I. A. 353 at p. 379 ... 674
Sree Venkatachalapati v. Krishna, 13 M. 287 ... 459
Sreekanta Pershad v. Irshad Ali Sarkar 16 C. L. J. 225; 17 Ind. Cas. 173 ... 179
Sreepati Charan v. Shamaldhone, 15 C. L. J. 123, 15 C. W. N. 661, 8 Ind. Cas. 22 ... 940
Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh, 20 A. 110 ... 447
Sri Gopal v. Pirthi Singh, 24 A. 429; 4 Bom. L. R. 827; 6 C. W. N. 889; 29 I. A. 118 (P. C.) 447, 928
Sri Raja Rao Venkata Surya Mahipati v. Court of Wards, 26 I. A. 83 at p. 96; 3 C. W. N. 415; 22 M. 383 ... 283
Srimanta Roy v. Mahadeo Mahata, 8 C. W. N. 531; 31 C. 550 ... 344
Srimut Raja Moottoo Vijava Rajanadha Bodha Gooroo Sawmy Periya Odaya Taver v. Katama Natachiar, 11 M. I. A. 50; 10 W. R. 1 (P. C.) ... 336
Srinath Das v. Khetter Mohun Singh, 16 C. 693; 16 I. A. 85 ... 468
Srinath Ghose v. Haro Nath Dutt, 9 B. L. R. 220 18 W. R. 240 ... 241
Srinivasa Ayyar v. Muthusami Pillai, 24 M. 246 at p. 250 ... 483
Srinivasa Reddy v. Sivarama Reddy, 32 M. 320 98
Srish Chunder Bose v. Nasim Kazi, 4 C. W. N. 357; 27 C. 827 ... 345
Stephens v. Elwall, 16 R. R. 458; 4 M. & S. 259 ... 378
Strinivasa Ayyangar v. Strinivasa Swami, 16 M. 31 ... 666
Strousberg v. Republic Costa Rica, 44 L. T. (N. S.) 199; 29 W. R. 125 ... 445
Subba Reddy v. Kotamma, 14 M. L. J. 442 ... 615
Subbaraya Kamti v. Krishna Kamti, 6 M. 159 ... 947
Subramania Aiyar v. Gopala Aiyar, 33 M. 308; 20 M. L. J. 683; 7 Ind. Cas. 898; 8 M. L. T. 321 ... 893
Subramania Aiyyar v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 233; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 5 C. W. N. 866; 28 I. A. 257 (P. C.) ... 70

S—concld.

Page.

Subramania Pillai v. Seethai Ammal, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 198; 10 M. L. T. 260; 12 Ind. Cas. 38 ... 594
Subramanyan v. Mandayan, 9 M. 453 ... 838
Sucaram Morarji v. Kalidas Kanhayi, 18 B. 631 613
Sudarsanam Maistri v. Narasimhulu Maistri, 25 M. 149 at p. 155; 11 M. L. J. 335 348, 750
Suffield v. Brown, (1864) 4 De G J. & S. 185; 3 N. R. 340; 33 L. J. Ch. 249; 10 Jur. (N S.) 111; 9 L. T. 627; 12 W. R. 356 ... 967
Suja Hossein v. Manohur Das, 24 C. 244 ... 14
Sukhdei v. Kedar Nath, 33 A. 467; 8 A. L. J. 280; 9 Ind. Cas. 628 ... 967
Sundar v. Salig Ram, 26 P. R. 1911; 34 P. L. R. 1911; 33 P. W. R. 1911; 9 Ind. Cas. 300 ... 504
Sundara Bai v. Shiv Narayan, 32 B. 81; 9 Bom. L. R. 1366; 3 M L. T. 46 ... 309
Sundara Bai Saheba v. Thirumal Rao Sahib, 33 M. 131; 6 M. L. T. 263; 20 M. L. J. 103; 3 Ind. Cas. 930 200 343
Sundaram Iyer v. Municipal Corporation of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council, 25 M. 635; 12 M. L. J. 37 ... 159
Sundra Bai v. Shivnarayana, 32 B. 81; 9 Bom. L. R. 1366; 3 M. L. T. 44 ... 367
Suraj Baksh v. Raghuraj Kunwar, 11 O. C. 381 ... 297
Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Prashad, 6 I. A. 88 at p. 106; 4 C. L. R. 226; 5 C. 148 578, 667, 736
Surja Kant Roy Chowdry v. Bihari Bholliachya, (1910) R. A. No. 86 of 1908 ... 157
Suraj Mani v. Rabinath Ojha, 30 A. 84; 5 A. L. J. 67; 18 M. L. J. 7; 12 C. W. N. 231 (P. C.); 10 Bom. L R. 59; 7 C L. J. 131; 3 M. L. T. 144; 35 I. A. 17 ... 480
Surat Lal Mondal v. Umar Haji, 22 C. 877 606, 906
Surendra Narain Singh v. Bhai Lal Thakur, 22 C. 752 ... 647
Surendra Nath v. Hiramanee, 12 M. I. A. 81; 1 B. L. R. (P. C.) 26; 10 W. R. (P. C.) 35 ... 259
Surjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo Persad, 1 C. L. J. 337 ... 928
Surjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo Prasad, 2 C. L. J. 202 at p. 214 ... 929
Surjya Narain Singh, In the matter of, 5 C. W. N. 110 at p. 112 ... 406
Surno Moyee v. Shoeshee Mokhee Burmonia, 12 M. I. A. 244; 11 W. R. (P. C.) 5; 2 B. L. R. (P. C.) 10 ... 123
Surnomoyee v. Denonath Gir, 9 C. 908; 13 C. L. R. 69 588, 647
Surnomoyi v. Johur Mahomed Nashyo, 10 C. L. R. 545 ... 268
Swaminatha Ayyar v. Vaidyanatha Sastri, 28 M. 466; 15 M. L. J. 116 ... 328
Swansea Bank v. Thomas, (1879) 4 Ex. D. 94, 48 L. J. Ex. 344, 40 L. T. 558; 27 W. R. 491 ... 935
Swarnamayi Raur v. Srinibash Koyal, 6 B. L. R. 144 ... 891
Swinburne v. Milburn (1884) 9 App. Cas. 844 at p. 850; 54 L. J. Q. B. 6; 52 L. T. 222; 33 W. R. 325 ... 183
Syad Lutf Ali Khan v. Afzul-un-Nisa Begum, 9 B. L. R. 348; 16 W. R. (P. C.) 20 ... 314

T

Page.

Taiiby v. Official Receiver, (1888) 13 A. C. 523; 58 L. J. Q. B. 75; 60 L. T. 162; 37 W. R. 513... 32
Talukdari Settlement Officer v. Ishwardas, 14 Bom. L. R. 577; 16 Ind. Cas. 445 ... 878
Tangi Joghi v. Hall, 23 M. 203 ... 421
Tara v. Jodha, 57 P. R. 1882 ... 859
Tara Lal v. Sarobar, 27 C. 407; 27 I. A. 33; 4 C. W. N. 533 ... 166
Tara Sundari v. Saroda Charan, 12 C. L. J. 146; 7 Ind. Cas. 80 ... 286
Tarabai v. Venkat Rao, 27 B. 43 at p. 61; 4 Bom. L. R. 721 ... 658
Taru Patur v. Abinash Chunder, 4 C. 76 at p. 79 268
Taylor v. Pollard, (1827) Lyne on Leases App. 62 ... 183
Tejpal v. Ganga, 25 A. 59 ... 615
Tellis v. Saldanha, 10 M. 69 ... 259
Tha Po v. Emperor, 3 L. B. R. 200; 4 Cr. L. J. 466 ... 827
Thakamani Dasi v. Mohendra Nath Dey Sarkar, 10 C. L. J. 463; 3 Ind. Cas. 289 ... 207
Thakur Parshad v. Jamna Kunwar, 31 A. 308; 6 A. L. J. 420; 2 Ind. Cas. 474 ... 480
Thakur Prasad v. Gaya Sahu, 20 A. 349 ... 2
Thakur Prasad v. Partab, 6 A. 442 ... 314
Thakurain Jaipal Kunwar v. Indar Bahadur Singh, 26 A. 238; 8 C. W. N. 465; 14 M. L. J. 149; 6 Bom. L. R. 495; 31 I. A. 67 ... 586
Thamboo Pillay v. Sriramulu Naidu, 17 M. L. J. 300 ... 326
The Xantho, (1887) 12 A. C. 503 at p. 509 ... 192
Thenappa Chettiar v. Marimuthu Nadan, 31 M. 258; 18 M. L. J. 344; 4 M. L. T. 293 ... 291
Thillai Chetti v. Ramanatha Ayyan, 20 M. 295... 839
Thiruvengadam Pillai v. Doredla Subbiah, (1912) M. W. N. 176; 11 M. L. T. 144; 13 Ind. Cas. 659 ... 325
Thompson v. Cohen, (1872) 7 Q. B. 527; 41 L. J. Q. B. 221; 26 L. T. 693 ... 32
Thompson v. Hopper, (1856) 6 El. & Bl. 172; 25 L. J. Q. B. 240; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 608; 4 W. R. 360; 26 L. T. (O. S.) 308; 106 R. R. 547 ... 192
Thrikaikat Madathil Raman v. Thiruthiyil Krishnan Nair, 29 M. 153; 16 M. L. J. 48 ... 464
Throckmarten v. Crowley, 3 Eq. 196 ... 165
Thuchakovil Unni Koya v. Arapayil Pathuthi Umma, (1911) M. W. N. 187; 9 M. L. T. 312; 9 Ind. Cas. 786; 21 M. L. J. 577 ... 325
Tiliett v. Ward, (1883) 52 L. J. Q. B. 61; 10 Q. B. D. 17; 47 L. T. 546; 31 W. R. 197; 47 J. P. 438 ... 900
Tilukdhari Singh v. Chulhan Mahton, 17 C. 131; 16 I. A. 152 ... 179
Tirubhuwan Bahadur Singh v. Rameshar Baksh Singh, 28 A. 727; 4 C. L. J. 405; 10 C. W. N. 1065; 16 M. L. J. 440; 33 I. A. 156 (P. C.); 3 A. L. J. 695; 8 Bom. L. R. 722; 1 M. L. T. 265; 9 O. C. 377 ... 457
Tribeni Sahu v. Bhagwat Bux, 34 C. 1037; 11 C. W. N. 1030; 6 C. L. J. 298 ... 764
Triccam Panachand v. Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Company, 9 B. 244 ... 535
Trimbaklal Govandas v. Hiralal, 20 B. 659 ... 473
Tritton v. Foote, (1789) 2 Brown C. C. 636; 2 Cox. 171 ... 183

T—concld.

Page.

Trustees, Executors and Agency Company v. Short, (1888) 13 A. C. 793; 58 L. J. P. C. 4; 59 L. T. 677; 37 W. R. 433; 53 J. P. 132 ... 633
Tukaram v. Ram Chand Malukchand, 26 B. 252; 3 Bom. L. R. 778 ... 332
Tulsidas v. Virbasapa, 4 B. 624 at p. 628 ... 622
Twopeny v. Peyton, (1840) 10 Sim. 487; 9 L. J. Ch. 172; 4 Jur. 456; 51 R. R. 301 ... 287
Twyne's case, (1601) 3 Coke 212 ... 726
Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason's (American) Reports 401 ... 650

U

Udai Raj Singh v. Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh, 32 A. 227; 7 A. L. J. 274 (P. C.); 14 C. W. N. 641; 11 C. L. J. 387; 12 Bom. L. R. 409; 20 M. L. J. 458; 13 O. C. 172; 7 M. L. T. 410; 6 Ind. Cas. 279 ... 527
Umatul Batul v. Nanji Kuar, 6 C. L. J. 427; 11 C. W. N. 705 at p. 710 ... 163
Umayammai v. Muthiah Nadar, 17 M. L. J. 99... 340
Umes Chander Sircar v. Zahur Fatima, 18 C. 164; 17 I. A. 201 ... 292
Umesh Chandar Kar, In re, 14 C. 656 ... 574
Ummanga v. Appadorai Patter, 24 M. 387; 5 Ind. Cas. 671; 20 M. L. J. 268; (1910) 1 M. W. N. 195 ... 770
Union Lighterage Co. v. London Graving Dock Co., (1902) 2 Ch. 557 at p. 572; 87 L. T. 381; 71 L. J. Ch. 791; 18 T. L. R. 754 ... 967
Universal Stock Exchange Co. v. Crowther, (1892) 8 T. L. R. 650 ... 155
Upendra Chandra Mitter v. Tara Prosanna Mukerjee, 30 C. 794; 7 C. W. N. 609 ... 47
Upendra Narain Bhattacharya v. Protab Chandra Pardhan, 8 C. W. N. 320; 31 C. 703 ... 2
Upton v. Towrnend, 17 C. B. 30; 25 L. J. C. P. 44; 1 Jur. (N. S.) 1098; 4 W. R. 56 ... 241

V

Vachhanni Keshabhai v. Vachhani Nanbha Bawaji, 33 B. 307; 5 M. L. T. 230; 11 Bom. L. R. 30; 1 Ind. Cas. 108 ... 45
Vaghoji v. Camaji, 29 B. 249; 6 Bom. L. R. 958 ... 200
Vaidhinadasamy Aiyar v. Somasundaram Pillai, 28 M. 473; 15 M. L. J. 126 (F. B.) ... 941
Valia Ambu Podaval v. The Emperor, 30 M. 136; 16 M. L. J. 444; 1 M. L. T. 402; 4 Cr. L. J. 443 ... 788
Van Geldar v. Sowerby Bridge Flour Society, (1890) 44 Ch. D. 374, 59 L. J. Ch. 583, 63 L. T. 132, 38 W. R. 625 ... 925
Varadiperumal Udaiyan v. Aradanari Udaiyan, 1 M. H. C. R. 412 ... 776
Varnakot Narayanan Namburi v. Vernakot Narayanan Namburi, 2 M. 328 ... 475
Vasudeva v. Srinivasa, 30 M. 426; 17 M. L. J. 444; 11 C. W. N. 1005; 4 A. L. J. 625; 6 C. L. J. 379; 2 M. L. T. 333; 9 Bom. L. R. 1104 (P. C.); 34 I. A. 187 ... 638

V—concld.

Page.

Vasudevan v. Keshavan, 7 M. 309 ... 338
Vasudevan v. Sunkaran, 20 M. 129; 7 M. L. J. 102 ... 475
Veeranna Pillai v. Muthukumara Asari, 27 M. 102; 13 M. L. J. 439 ... 463
Velu Pillai v. Ghose Mahomed, 17 M. 293; 4 M. L. J. 140 ... 48
Vencataratanam Naidu v. The Collector of Godaveri, 27 M. 350 ... 119
Venkappa v. Fakirgowda, 8 Bom. L. R. 346 ... 744
Venkata Chella v. Srinivasa, 28 M. 555, 15 M. L. J. 442 839, 932
Venkata Narasimha Naidu v. Bhashyakarlu Naidu, 22 M. 538 ... 392
Venkatanarasimha Naidu v. Damdamudikatyya, 20 M. 299 ... 483
Venkatappa Naidu v. Emperor, 17 M. L. J. 323; 6 Cr. L. J. 105 ... 75
Venkataramana Bhatta v. Gundu Raya, 31 M. 403; 4 M. L. T. 221 ... 947
Venku v. Mahalinga, 11 M. 393 ... 835
Venkayyamma Garu v. Venkatrama Nayyamma Bahadur Garu, 25 M. 678; 29 I. A. 156 (P. C.) ... 750
Vinayak Govind v. Babaji, 4 B. 230 ... 629
Virupakshappa v. Nilgangava, 19 B. 309 ... 474
Visalakshmi Ammal v. Sivaraman, 27 M. 577; 14 M. L. J. 310 ... 742
Visvalinga Pillai v. Palaniappa Chetti, 21 M. 1 ... 332
Vithal Krishna Joshi v. Anant Ramchandra, 11 B. H. C. R. 6 ... 139
Vithu v. Govinda, 22 B. 321 ... 136
Vundravandas v. Cursondas, 21 B. 646 ... 694
Vythilinga Mudaliar v. Ramachendra Naicker, 14 M. L. J. 379 ... 453

W

Wafadar Khan v. Queen-Empress, 21 C. 955 ... 566
Waghela Raj Sanji v. Shekh Masludin, 11 B. 551; 14 I. A. 89 ... 499
Walker v. Frobisher, (1801) 6 Ves. 70; 5 R. R. 223 ... 702
Walsh v. Lonsdale, (1882) 21 Ch. D. 9; 52 L. J. Ch. 2; 46 L. T. 858; 31 W. R. 109 ... 184
Wannathan Kandile Chiruthai v. Keyakadath Pydel Kurup, 6 M. H. C. R. 194 ... 775
Ward & Co. v. Wallis, (1900) 1 Q. B. 675 at p. 678; 69 L. J. Q. B. 423; 8 L. T. 261 ... 207
Wasudeo Gharpure v. Ganu Kunbi, 3 N. L. R. 185 ... 608

W—concld.

Page.

Watson and Co. v. Mohendro Nath Paul, 23 W. R. 436 ... 268
Watts v. Kelson, (1870) 6 Ch. Ap. 166 at p. 175; 40 L. J. Ch. 126; 24 L. T. 209; 19 W. R. 833... 957
Wazir Ali v. Moti Chand, 2 A. L. J. 294 ... 2
Wheeldon v. Burrows, (1879) 12 Ch. D. 31; 48 L. J. Ch. 853; 41 L. T. 327; 28 W. R. 196 ... 769
William Robert Fink v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 25 C. 642; 2 C. W. N. 469 ... 751
Wilson, In re, Hastings, Ex parte, (1893) 62 L. J. Q B. 628 at p. 632; 5 R. 455; 10 Morrell 219 935
Wilson v. Balcarres Brook Steamship Co, (1893) 1 Q. B. 422; 62 L. J. Q. B. 245; 4 R. 286; 68 L. T. 312; 41 W. R. 486; 7 Asp. M. C. 321 ... 924
Winter v. Attorney-General, 6 P. C. 378 at p. 380; 44 L. J. P. C. 65; 24 W. R. 327 ... 493
Wong Yone Wain v. Emperor, 5 Bur L. T. 11; 6 L. B. R. 46; 13 Cr. L. J. 269; 14 Ind. Cas. 653 ... 825
Woodmeston v. Walker, (1831) 2 Rus. and M. 197; 9 L. J. (o. s.) Ch. 257; 34 R. R. 56 ... 287
Woomesh Chandra Maitra v. Baroda Das Maitra, 28 C. 17 ... 455
Woopendro Mohun Tagore v. Thanda Dossia, 12 W. R. 263 ... 131
Wutzler v. Sharpe, 15 A. 270 ... 967

Y

Yakoob Ali Chowdry v. Ramdoolal, 13 C. L. R. 272 ... 325
Yashvantrav Holkar v. Dadabhai Cursetji, 14 B. 353 ... 200
Yellammal v. Aiyappa Naick, 12 M. L. T. 458; 23 M. L. J. 519; 16 Ind. Cas. 914 ... 187
Yemani Chinna Seshaya v. Varanasi Pepaya, 15 Ind. Cas. 732 ... 759
Yengu v. Mahalinga, 11 M. 393 at p. 398 ... 423
Yeshwant Rao v. Bhaskar Rao Patwari, 3 N. L. R. 47 ... 139
Young v. Robertson, (1862) 4 Mac. H. L. 314 at p. 325 ... 283

Z

Zaheria v. Debia, 33 A. 51; 7 A. L. J. 861; 7 Ind. Cas. 156 ... 862
Zaman Ali v. Manji, 60 P. R. 1894 ... 365
Zorawar Singh v. Deva, 142 P. R. 1906 ... 196
Zubeda Bibi v. Sheo Charan, 22 A. 83 ... 377

GENERAL INDEX.

VOLUME XVII—1912.

—— :-o-: ——

Abandonment and disclaimer by tenant 603

——— ——— ——— by tenant 682

——— ——— ——— of tenancy 654

Abatement of rent 173

—— ——— —— of suit—Death of wrong-doer—Tort—Suit for damages for wrongful distraint—Action commenced against wrong-doer—Actio personalis moritur cum persona—Scope of doctrine—How far applicable to India—Act XII of 1855, s. 2.

The only cases in which, apart from questions of breach of contract, express or implied, a remedy for a wrongful act can be pursued against the estate of a deceased who has done the act, are those in which the property or proceeds or the value of property belonging to another have been appropriated by the deceased person and added to his own estate or moneys.

An action for damages for distraint illegally levied by a person on certain moveables belonging to the plaintiff, some of which either perished or deteriorated owing to the negligence of the defendant's servants while the rest were misappropriated by the servants, is not in the nature of a suit for the recovery of specific moveables appropriated by the defendant or their value.

To such an action the maxim 'actio personalis moritur cum persona' applies, in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary.

Section 2 of Act XII of 1855 has no application to a suit instituted against the wrong-doer himself in his life-time. Such a suit abates on the death of the wrong-doer. SARAT CHANDRA ROY v. RATUBUDDIN, 16 C. L. J. 271 227 ——— ——— ———Suit for recovery of rent against fixed-rate tenants—Death of one tenant during pendency of appeal—Joint and several liability.

The liability of fixed-rate tenants in respect of the rent of their holding is joint and several. Where a suit is brought against fixed-rate tenants for recovery of rent and one of them dies during the pendency of an appeal against them and no attempt is made to bring the legal representatives of the deceased on the record, the appeal abates only as far as the deceased respondent tenant is concerned and the liability of the others is not affected. ABDUL AZIZ v. BASDEO SINGH, 10 A. L. J. 183; 34 A. 604 89

Absolute occupancy-holding—Widow's estate 366

Abwab 173, 177

Accomplice—Corroboration—Rule of practice 79

Accounts. See PARTNERSHIP.

——— ———Mutual, open and current accounts, test for determining—Limitation.

The test for determining whether accounts are mutual, open and current, is whether there were mutual demands and not mere payment by one party to the other on account of a debt due by the former to the latter. The fact that balances were constantly shifting, sometimes in favour of one party and sometimes in that of the other, affords no real test of mutuality, though this would be an important matter in considering whether there were mutual demands. THUPPATI VEERI CHETTI v. MOLUGUVAM RENGANAYAKULU AIYAR, 23 M. L. J. 516 48

Acknowledgment. See LIMITATION ACT, s. 19.

Acquiescence—Adoption without father's consent 962

——— ———Custom—Alienation 235

Acts—GENERAL.

Act 1841—XIX. See SUCCESSION (PROPERTY PROTECTION) ACT.

—— 1846—I. See PLEADERS ACT.

—— 1855—XII. See ACT.

—— 1856—XV. See HINDU WIDOWS' RE-MARRIAGE ACT.

—— 1858—XXXV. See LUNACY ACT.

—— 1859—XI. See REVENUE SALE LAW.

—— 1859—XIII. See WORKMEN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT.

—— 1860—XLV. See PENAL CODE.

—— 1863—VI. See PUBLIC CONVEYANCES ACT.

—— 1863—XX. See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS ACT.

—— 1865—X. See SUCCESSION ACT.

—— 1867—III. See PUBLIC GAMBLING ACT.

—— 1869—IV. See DIVORCE ACT.

—— 1870—VII. See COURT FEES ACT.

—— 1871—XXIII. See PENSIONS ACT.

—— 1872—I. See EVIDENCE ACT.

—— 1872—IX. See CONTRACT ACT.

—— 1873—X. See OATHS ACT.

—— 1875—IX. See MAJORITY ACT.

—— 1876—X. See REVENUE JURISDICTION ACT.

—— 1877—I. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT.

—— 1877—III. See REGISTRATION ACT.

—— 1877—XV. See LIMITATION ACT.

—— 1878—VII. See FOREST ACT.

—— 1878—XI. See ARMS ACT.

—— 1879—XVIII. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT.

—— 1881—V. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT.

—— 1881—XXVI. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ACT.

—— 1882—II. See TRUSTS ACT.

Acts—GENERAL—concld.

Act 1882—IV. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT.
—— 1882—V. See EASEMENTS ACT.
—— 1882—VI. See COMPANIES ACT.
—— 1882—XIV. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1882—XV. See PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
—— 1887—VII. See SUITS VALUATION ACT.
—— 1887—IX. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT.
—— 1889—VII. See SUCCESSION CERTIFICATE ACT.
—— 1890—VIII. See GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT.
—— 1890—IX. See RAILWAYS ACT.
—— 1893—IV. See PARTITION ACT.
—— 1894—I. See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
—— 1894—IX. See PRISONS ACT.
—— 1897—X. See GENERAL CLAUSES ACT.
—— 1898—V. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1899—VIII. See PETROLEUM ACT.
—— 1899—IX. See ARBITRATION ACT.
—— 1907—III. See PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.
—— 1908—V. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE.
—— 1908—IX. See LIMITATION ACT.
—— 1908—XVI. See REGISTRATION ACT.

Acts—LOCAL.

Act 1859—X. See BENGAL RENT RECOVERY ACT.
—— 1864—II. See ADEN COURTS ACT.
—— 1864—II. See MADRAS REVENUE RECOVERY ACT.
—— 1865—VIII. See MADRAS RENT RECOVERY ACT.
—— 1865—VIII. See SALE OF UNDER-TENURES ACT.
—— 1869—XIV. See BOMBAY CIVIL COURTS ACT.
—— 1874—III. See HEREDITARY VILLAGE OFFICES (VATAN) ACT.
—— 1876—II. See BURMA LAND AND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1876—VI (B. C.). See CHOTA NAGPUR ENCUMBERED ESTATES ACT.
—— 1878—V. See BOMBAY ABKARI ACT.
—— 1879—V. See BOMBAY LAND REVENUE CODE.
—— 1879—XVII. See DEKHAN AGRICULTURISTS' RELIEF ACT.
—— 1881—XII. See N.-W. P. RENT ACT.
—— 1881—XVIII. See CENTRAL PROVINCES LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1883—IX. See CENTRAL PROVINCES TENANCY ACT.
—— 1884—IV. See MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT.
—— 1884—XVIII. See PUNJAB COURTS ACT.
—— 1885—VIII. See BENGAL TENANCY ACT.
—— 1886—V. See BOMBAY VATAN ACT.
—— 1886—XXII. See OUDH RENT ACT.
—— 1887—XVI. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.
—— 1887—XVII. See PUNJAB LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1888—III. See BOMBAY CITY MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1889—I. See KHOTI SETTLEMENT ACT.
—— 1890—IV. See BOMBAY DISTRICT MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1891—XX. See PUNJAB MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1893—III. See GOVERNMENT TENANTS (PUNJAB) ACT.
—— 1894—II. See MADRAS ACT.
—— 1896—... See BERAR LAND REVENUE CODE.
—— 1898—XI. See CENTRAL PROVINCES TENANCY ACT.
—— 1898—XIII. See BURMA LAWS ACT.
—— 1899—III. See U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT.

Acts—LOCAL—concld.

Act 1899—XXIV. See CENTRAL PROVINCES COURT OF WARDS ACT.
—— 1900—I. See MALABAR TENANCY IMPROVEMENTS ACT.
—— 1900—III. See U. P. MUNICIPALITIES ACT.
—— 1901—II. See AGRA TENANCY ACT.
—— 1901—III. See U. P. LAND REVENUE ACT.
—— 1904—II. See CENTRAL PROVINCES COURTS ACT.
—— 1904—III. See MADRAS CITY MUNICIPAL ACT.
—— 1905—I. See BOMBAY COURT OF WARDS ACT.
—— 1905—II. See PUNJAB PRE-EMPTION ACT.
—— 1906—II. See BOMBAY MAMLATDARS' COURTS ACT.
—— 1908—I. See MADRAS ESTATES LAND ACT.
—— 1908—VI (B. C.). See CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT.

Regulations.

Regulation 1804—VIII. See PATNI REGULATION.
——..—— 1806—XVII. See REGULATION.
——..—— 1822—VII. REGULATION.
——..—— 1825—IX. See REGULATION.
——..—— 1827—II. See REGULATION.
——..—— 1827—XII. See BOMBAY REGULATION.

Statutes.

11—12 VIC. C. 21. See INSOLVENCY ACT.
24—25 VIC. C. 104. See CHARTER ACT.
44—45 VIC. C. 58. See ARMY ACT.

Act XII of 1855, s. 2 226
Aden Courts Act (II of 1864), s. 3 215
Adjournment—Sessions case—Practice 797
Administration—Debt due from testator—Legacy of equal sum—Right to debt and legacy—Suit by legatee—Administration of whole estate 17
——————, letters of. See LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION.
——————. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT.
Admissibility. See EVIDENCE ACT, s. 92.
——————— Entries by creditor in samadaskat book of debtor—Admission—Relevancy 722
——————— in evidence—Unstamped promissory-note executed on settlement of accounts 721
——————— Lease granted after 1st July 1898 353
——————— of collection papers 266
——————— of document. See U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT.
——————— of oral evidence—Execution of mortgage-deed by father—Suit for sale against son—Circumstances under which it was executed 669
——————— Oral evidence to explain registered deed 842
——————— Statement by prosecution witness that accused had been bound down, whether admissible 565

Admission—Relevancy 722

Adoption. See CUSTOM—ADOPTION; HINDU LAW—ADOPTION.

——— ———Repudiation of adoption 350

——— ——— of daughter—Naikin 834

——— ——— without father's consent not valid 962

Adverse possession against mortgagor—Whether extinguishes mortgage security 632

——— ——— ———Joint property—Suit for partition by one co-sharer—Decree ascertaining plaintiff's share—Co-parcenary between defendants not destroyed—Exclusion to knowledge of co-parcener 642

——— ——— ———Non-payment of rent 943

——— ——— ———Non-payment of rent for 12 years 523

——— ——— ———Pujari 589

——— ——— ———Possession of after-acquired immoveable property by insolvent—Adverse to Official Assignee 14

——— ——— ———Property held by widow—Suit by reversioner after death of widow 136

——— ——— ———Streets and drains in Municipal towns 158

——— ——— ———Co-sharers — Hindu Law—Joint family property—One co-sharer in possession for all—Alienation by co-sharer in possession—Continuance of alienor in possession—Knowledge of exclusion—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 127, 144.

A. and B. were members of a joint Hindu family. A. held possession on behalf of himself and his co-parcener till 1880, when A. sold the property to a stranger C. A., however, continued in possession and passed a rent-note in favour of his vendee, C. There was nothing in the circumstances to put B. on notice that any change of possession had occurred or that his title was in any way imperilled.

In 1906, B. sued for possession of his share by partition:

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred by limitation;

(2) that before the alienation, the possession of A. was more or less of a fiduciary character and it was the possession of all the co-sharers; it could not begin to be adverse without intimation by the co-parcener in possession conveyed to the other co-parcener that he intended to exclude him.

Per Chandavarkar, J.—The question of adverse possession between co-parceners inter se is governed by Article 127 of the Limitation Act. Article 144 applies where the question is as between a co-parcener in a joint Hindu family and a stranger to it.

If a co-parcener has alienated property belonging to the family, so as to exclude other co-parceners from it, adverse possession in favour of the alienee begins to run from the date of alienation and the consequent exclusion of the co-parceners.

The law is that the Court is always too loth to hold adverse possession proved where the possession is equivocal in character.

Per Batchelor, J.—To constitute an adverse possession against the real owner, possession must be in some way or other ostensibly adverse. MALKAPPA DOD CHANBASAPAGOWDA v. MUDKAPPA BASAPPA MUDIGAVDAR, 14 BOM. L. R. 931; 37 B. 84 657

Adverse possession—concld.

——— ——— ———Plea of limitation—Onus on plaintiff to prove that his suit is within time—Auction-purchaser—Symbolical possession—Limitation to run from date of symbolical possession.

When a suit for possession is met by a plea of adverse possession during the limitation period, the question of limitation becomes a question of title and the plaintiff must first, prima facie, furnish proof of subsisting title at the date of the commencement of his suit before the defendant is required to establish his adverse possession.

Where an auction-purchaser at a Court sale has obtained symbolical possession, he or his assigns may sue the judgment-debtor for actual possession within 12 years from the date of obtaining such symbolical possession. Musammat SUNDAR v. SARASWATI 518

Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 4 656

——— ——— ———ss. 77, 167, 193—Appeal to District Judge—Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 29 (b), Sch. I, Art. 152.

The period of limitation for an appeal to the District Judge under Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, is thirty days.

Such an appeal is governed by the procedure prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure and by the limitation prescribed under Article 152 of the Limitation Act. RAM LAL v. AMAR CHAND, 10 A. L. J. 535 653

——— ——— ———s. 94—Co-sharers declining to join as co-plaintiffs for recovery of rent—Maintainability of suit by one co-sharer alone.

Under the Agra Tenancy Act, one of the several joint co-sharers can bring a suit for the recovery of rent to the extent of his share on the refusal by the other co-sharers to join him as co-plaintiffs. FATEH BAHADUR v. LALTA PERSHAD 488

——— ——— ———s. 95—Suit between rival claimants to occupancy holding—Jurisdiction—Civil or Revenue Court.

The question of title to a tenancy arising between rival claimants to that tenancy is a question which is cognizable by a Civil Court.

Such a question is not a matter which can be determined under section 95 of the Tenancy Act. JAGAR NATH v. AJUDHYA SINGH, 10 A. L. J. 408; 34 A. 14 376

——— ——— ———s. 164—Practice—Burden of proof—Suit by co-sharer against lambardar for share of profits—North-Western Provinces Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 209.

In a suit by a co-sharer for his share of profits against the lambardar under section 164 of the Agra Tenancy Act, the burden of proof is, in the first instance, on the plaintiff, who is required to produce some general evidence of negligence on the part of the lambardar, such as evidence that a very large percentage of the rent has remained uncollected.

If this is proved, it is then for the lambardar to explain why so large a percentage has remained uncollected and, in the absence of a satisfactory explanation, the burden of proving the real profits of the property is shifted on to him.

Where it is proved that a very large percentage of the rent remained uncollected, and the lambardar admitted he had kept no accounts and had not had all the collections entered in the patwari's siaha, the burden of proof is shifted on to the lambardar to show why so large a sum remained uncollected.

Agra Tenancy Act—concld.

The practice in this respect has been the same under the Agra Tenancy Act as it was under the old Rent Act. The meaning of section 164 of the former Act is practically the same as that of section 209 of the Rent Act. MITHAN LAL v. MIZAJI LAL, 10 A. L. J. 529 914

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 167, 193 653

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 202—Defendant to civil suit establishing his tenancy in Revenue Court, during the pendency of civil suit--Civil Court bound by decision of Revenue Court—Sir, whether it loses its character as such by planting groves thereon.

A defendant to a civil suit pleaded tenancy and, while the civil suit was still pending, got his tenancy determined by the Revenue Court by means of a separate suit:

Held, that the decision of the Revenue Court was binding on the Civil Court.

The planting of trees on a sir holding does not necessarily mean that the land loses its character as such. SHIAM LAL v. ANANT RAM 302

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 202, scope of—Procedure—Question not material—Mortgage unregistered.

A. brought a suit for redemption of a particular plot of land mortgaged by an unregistered mortgage-deed. The sum secured under the mortgage was Rs. 100. The defendant pleaded that he was an occupancy-tenant of the land and not a mortgagee.

Held, that in view of the fact that the mortgage was an unregistered one and could not, therefore, be enforced, section 202 of the Agra Tenancy Act had no application. GAURI RAI v. MANOHAR TELI, 10 A. L. J. 513 520

Agriculturist, definition of 670

Alienation. See CUSTOM—ALIENATION; HINDU LAW—ALIENATION; HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY; HINDU LAW—WIDOW.

——— ———Invalid alienation--Right of alienee to sue for possession.

An alienee, who obtains no valid rights under his alienation, cannot maintain a suit for possession of the property. KOOLAPPA ROWTHAR v. APPU ASARI 736

Allahabad General Civil Courts Rules, 1911, Ch. XXI, r. 37 539

Allahabad High Court Rules, Ch. XV, r. 25 539

Alteration, material—Pro-note 281

——— ——— of decree. See DECREE, ALTERATION OF.

Amendment of decree. See DECREE, AMENDMENT OF.

——— ——— of plaint. See PLAINT, AMENDMENT.

——— ——— of record after dismissal of appeal 279

Ancestral property—Burden of proof 392

Animal—Damages done to crops by cattle—Liability of owner—Negligence—Property adjoining highway—Fencing 899

Appeal. See PLEADINGS.

——— ——Appellate Court—Conflicting evidence—Ground of appeal 898

———Appointment of official liquidator—Wishes of creditors — Discretion--Powers of Appellate Court 853

——— by Secretary of State against Court's award —Court-fee 764

———Decision on issues relating to misjoinder, limitation and jurisdiction—Suit for mesne profits —Refusal to draw up preliminary decree 637

———Costs assessed on wrong principle 418

———Court's order under section 49, Land Acquisition Act 117

———Discharge or removal of Receiver—Inherent power of Court—Execution by Appellate Court Practice 583

———Direction by Court to Receiver to pay money to mortgagor to prefer appeal from mortgage-decree--Order of Court, whether justifiable—Order, whether appealable 849

——— dismissed in absence of both parties--Restoration 292

———Extension of time fixed by pre-emption decree 912

———Hindu widow withdrawing appeal—Subsequent suit by reversioners—Effect on question of res judicata 866

——— ——Land Acquisition award—Claim of objector absurdly exorbitant—Ad valorem fee 901

——— in land acquisition case—High Court's decision 952

———No appeal unless given by Law—Order setting aside award 902

———Order granting review 661

———Order to furnish security and submit account 361

———Passing decree in terms of award before expiry of period of 10 days from submission thereof 431

———Plaintiff's suit dismissed by Assistant Collector as not proved 836

——— ——Plea not raised before the first Court—Plea raised but not put in issue by first Court—Point not taken in grounds of appeal 232

——— ——Pleader's fee—Preliminary decree adjudicating a party as agriculturist—Appeal to High Court 964

——— ——Power of Court to make order of remand in appeal 891

———Power of High Court to direct re-trial of appeal 49

——— Provision in decree for payment of purchase-money within certain time—Payment not made 868

——— Res judicata—Object of doctrine—Cross suits —Appeal from decision in one suit only 860

Appeal—contd.

——— ——Sentence of one month's imprisonment under more sections than one—Sentences to run concurrently—Appeal, whether lies to Sessions Court 813

———Sentence of 6 months' imprisonment on each of two counts by Presidency Magistrate—Sentences to run concurrently 531

——— ——Suit found time-barred—Pleadings 638

——— ——Summons returned unserved—Time given to appellant to take further steps—No steps taken within time—Power of Court to proceed to decide appeal 294

——— —— to District Judge—Limitation 653

———Trial of several accused by Magistrate first class—Some acquitted, others convicted—Appeal by convicts to Sessions Judge—Power of Sessions Judge to direct commitment of acquitted persons for murder on same facts—Commitment under direction 54

———Memorandum of appeal not accompanied by copy of decree appealed against, though decree was in existence when appeal filed—Copy of decree given to Vakil but not filed—Subsequent death of Vakil—Appeal ordered to be admitted after time—Sufficient cause—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5.

The omission to file a copy of the decree appealed against, along with the memorandum of appeal, is a fatal defect, and the Court has no power under the Code to exempt the appellant from producing a copy.

Where an appellant obtained a copy of the decree to be appealed against and made it over in proper time to a Vakil who filed the appeal, but by mistake, the precise nature of which could not be explained as the Vakil had since then died, the copy was not filed with the memorandum, the High Court, at the time of the hearing of the appeal, accepted the copy of the decree by extending the time for filing the appeal under section 5 of the Limitation Act. PROSONNO KUMARI DEBI v. RAM CHANDRA SINGHA, 17 C. L. J. 66 155

———Memorandum of appeal not accompanied by copy of decree appealed against, though decree in existence when appeal was filed—Mis-statement at foot of memorandum of appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 541, 590—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 86—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5.

A decree was made in a Probate case by a District Judge on August 9th, 1899. On August 14th, the decree was drawn up. On November 30th a memorandum of appeal, without a copy of the decree, was filed in the High Court but there was a note by the appellant's Vakil that no decree had been prepared. The appeal was admitted by the High Court in consequence of the statement of the Vakil:

Held, that the memorandum of appeal was bad as the provisions of section 541, read with section 590 of the Civil Procedure Code and section 86 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, had not been complied with, because a copy of the decree appealed against was not filed with the memorandum of appeal, and that there was no appeal which could be properly entertained by the High Court, and as no sufficient cause was shown for extending the time for appealing under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the appeal was dismissed. HEM CHANDRA BAKSHI v. JADUB CHANDRA BAKSHI, 16 C. L. J. 116 99

———Memorandum of appeal not accompanied by copy of decree appealed against, though decree was in existence when appeal was filed—Mis-statement in memorandum of appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 1 (1).

Where a copy of the decree appealed against was not attached to the memorandum of appeal as required by Order XLI, rule 1 (1) and the Vakil for the appellant stated that the decree had not been drawn up, although, as a matter of fact, the decree was in existence when the appeal was filed:

Held, that the memorandum of appeal must be rejected. BINAPANI DEBI v. SHASHIBHUSHAN SINHA, 16 C. L. J. 133 119 ———Order determining valuation of immoveable property to be entered in sale proclamation, if appealable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2, 47, O. XXI, r. 66.

An order determining the value of the immoveable properties, to be entered in the sale proclamation by the executing Court, under Order XXI, rule 66 of the Civil Procedure Code, is not appealable. PANCH DUAR THAKAR v. MANI RAUT, 16 C. W. N. 970 88

Appeal, Second. See SMALL CAUSE SUIT.

——— ——— ——— ———Declaratory suit—Power to interfere with discretion of lower Courts 315

——— ——— ———Decision settling fair rent 587

——— ———New plea 243

——— ——— ———Order allowing or rejecting application for setting aside sale 884

——— ——— ———Question of law or fact—Proof of wakf 303

——— ——— ———Question of fact—Reasonable compensation.

The question as to what is reasonable compensation is a question of fact and cannot be interfered with in second appeal by the High Court. SAMPAT RAI v. RAM PERSHAD 517

——— ——— ———Small Cause suit—Suit for recovery of rent with incidental prayer for declaration of right.

Where in a suit for the recovery of rent, there is a prayer for a declaration of right, but no separate Court-fee is paid therefor, such prayer should be treated as merely incidental to the prayer for rent.

Such a suit is of Small Cause nature and no second appeal lies in the case. VEERA RAGHAVA IYENGAR v. VELLAI MOOPPAI, 23 M. L. J. 517 704

——— ——— ———Title suit—Finding of lower Appellate Court that plaintiff's suit is not barred—Sufficiency of finding—Remand by sigle Judge—Appeal coming on for hearing before Division Bench—Disposal of appeal by Division Bench.

In a suit for possession of land, the lower Appellate Court said on the question of limitation: "It does not appear that the plaintiff's claim for possession is barred." On appeal to the High Court, a single Judge held that a mere statement of this sort was not sufficient, but that the lower Appellate Court was bound to give some reasons for the finding. He, therefore, remanded the issue so that a proper finding might be arrived at on the question of limitation, and the appeal was kept on the file of the High Court. On remand, the lower Appellate Court found that the plaintiff was not in possession within 12 years before the suit. The appeal then came on for hearing before the same lerned Judge who referred it to the Division Bench for disposal:

Appeal—concld.

Held, that the first finding of the lower Appellate Court on the question of limitation was sufficient, and that the remand order should not have been made. HIATUNNESSA BIBI v. KAILASH CHANDRA SAHA, 16 C. L. J. 259 224

Approver. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 337.

Arbitration. See ARBITRATION ACT; CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, SCH. II.

——— ———Award—Separable parts of award—Void and valid portions—Court discovering before decree its incompetency to try suit—Dismissal of suit—Amount of compensation—Apportionment—Estoppel 684

——— ———Reference for minor to arbitration—Superseding arbitration 388

——— ———, agreement to refer to—Arbitrators appointed but unwilling to act—Reference to other arbitrators—Award inoperative—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 21—When bars suit.

Certain matters in dispute were referred to three named arbitrators, two of whom were unwilling to act: the agreement to refer to arbitration contained no provision to appoint arbitrators in the room of those unwilling to act:

Held, that the agreement was inoperative and of no effect. JAITUM BI v. NABI SAHEB, 12 M. L. T. 346; (1912) M. W. N. 957; 24 M. L. J. 15 389

——— ———Award of arbitrators made out of Court—Filing of award—Absence of reference in award to a matter in dispute—Duty of Court to remit award—Acting in excess of jurisdiction—Right of arbitrators to ignore any matter—Abandonment of claim.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J., (confirming the order of the lower Court).—An award of arbitrators is not a reasoned judicial decision and the arbitrators need not give reasons for their decision, and may even ignore any position advanced by the parties.

Arbitrators are not bound to decide a point, if the parties showed by their conduct that they did not want a formal decision thereon.

The Court, in filing an award wherein the arbitrators have failed to give a decision on any matter, the subject of dispute, cannot be deemed to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, or to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—Arbitrators are bound to decide all matters in dispute in their award and their failure to do so cannot be condoned because the Court, on the merits, does not sustain the contention which was not dealt with by them.

Arbitration—contd.

The Court, in filing an award, wherein a subject of dispute has not been decided, acts with material irregularity and fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it to remit the award.

If the parties abandon any claim before the arbitrators, that need not appear in the award; the award would not be vitiated by absence of reference thereto, but it may be proved by the evidence of the arbitrators. PURUSHOTAMA DAS PRAGJI SAIT v. JETA BHAI NAGJI, (1912) M. W. N. 1076 33

——— ———Award—Decree—based on award if appealable on ground that there was no valid award—Application to set aside award—Period of limitation, if Court can extend—"If an application has been made to set aside award," meaning of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 522—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5, Sch. I, Art. 158.

A decree based upon an award is not open to appeal on the ground that there was no award valid in law.

Under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the Court has no authority to receive an application to set aside an award after the time prescribed by Article 158 of the Act. It is not competent to the Court to extend the time prescribed by that Article.

The expression "if no application has been made to set aside the award" in section 522 of the Civil Procedure Code is comprehensive enough to recover the case of an application to set aside the award on the ground that there was no award valid in law, and refers to a contingency other than the remission of an award. SURYA NARAIN JHA v. BANWARI JHA, 7 ——— ———Award made within time fixed but reaching Court late—Arbitration superseded before receipt of award—On receipt of award supersession order set aside—Sarpanch, meaning of—Award invalid if not made by all arbitrators—Illegal and void award—Judicial notice by Court of illegal award—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, cl. 8—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 158.

An order of supersession, under paragraph 8 of Schedule II to the Civil Procedure Code, cannot be passed where an award has already been made and completed or, in other words, signed and delivered by arbitrators within the time fixed by the Court, though it may reach the Court afterwards, inasmuch as it is not necessary to the validity of such award that it should actually reach the hands of the Court within such period.

Therefore, where an order of supersession was passed on the date fixed but the award reached the Court the same day after the passing of the order:

Held, that the Court would be justified in setting aside suo motu its order of supersession as erroneous.

On a reference to several arbitrators together, where there is no clause providing for an award made by less than all being valid, each of them must act personally in performance of the duties of his office, as if he were the sole arbitrator; for as the office is joint, if one refuse or omit to act, the others can make no valid award.

The word 'Surpanch' might indicate either an umpire or referee in case of difference of opinion among the arbitrators, or might imply a chief or head arbitrator like the senior Judge of any other tribunal.

Arbitration—concld.

Where a matter was referred to the arbitration of three persons, two of whom were described as panches and the third as Surpanch :

Held, that this did not mean that the two panches alone were to decide the matter and that the third person was to be approached only in case of difference of opinion.

Where an award is illegal and void ab initio and the illegality is apparent on the very face of it, the Court should take judicial notice of it; it is not necessary that parties should file objections to the award within the time prescribed under Article 158 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act. LALA v. ABDUS SAMED 320 ——— ——— ———Reference—Resiling from agreement to refer—Sufficient cause—Delay in commencing arbitration proceedings, whether sufficient cause.

Where a person has agreed with another that all matters in controversy between them should be referred to arbitration, it is not open to that person to resile from the agreement unless for good and sufficient cause.

Delay of six months in commencing the arbitration proceedings, where it is not shown that a party made any effort at all to push forward the proceedings before the arbitrators and that he was not himself responsible for the delay, is not good and sufficient cause for the party to withdraw from the agreement to refer.

Therefore, under section 21 of the Specific Relief Act, the party is not entitled to sue in respect of a debt which he had contracted to refer. RAM CHANDRA PAL v. KRISHNA LAL PAL, 17 C. W. N. 351 600

Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 11 (2)—Award—Appeal from order setting aside award—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 104 (1) (f), 89, 4.

No appeal lies unless it is given by law. There is no provision in the Arbitration Act giving an appeal from an order setting aside an award. Section 89 of the Civil Procedure Code especially excepts the procedure of the Code from arbitrations under the Arbitration Act and section 4 does the same generally. Section 104 (1) (f) applies only to arbitrations under the Code. RIPLEY v. NAHAPIET, 5 BUR. L. T. 155; 6 L. B. R. 88 902

Arms Act (XI of 1878), ss. 13, 19 (e)—Arms — Possession — Servant fetching gun for licensed master.

Mere temporary possession, without a license, of arms for purposes other than their use as such is not an offence within the meaning of section 19 of the Arms Act.

A., who was licensed to keep a gun, went to a village with his servant, B. From there, they came back but A. left his gun behind him. He sent B. to bring back his gun from the village. While B. was bringing back the gun, he was arrested and convicted of an offence under section 19 (e) of the Arms Act for going armed in contravention of section 13 of the Act:

Held, that the accused was not guilty under section 19 (e). EMPEROR v. KOYA HANSJI, 14 BOM. L. R. 964; 13 CR. L. J. 860 796

Arms Act—concld.

——— ——— s. 19 (c)—Offence when complete—Particular intention if necessary.

Under section 19 (c) of the Arms Act, the offence of possessing arms unlawfully by a person entering British India is complete the moment he enters with the arms in his possession. No particular intention in the mind of the offender is requisite.

M. landed in India from Penang: between the landing stage and the Customs Shed, he was detected in the act of handing a parcel to a third person: on inspection, the parcel was found to contain a revolver and 36 cartridges:

Held, that, technically, M. had committed an offence under section 19 (c) of the Arms Act. MAHOMED ISMAIL ROWTHER, In re, 35 M. 596; 13 CR. L. J. 776 408

Army Act (44-45 Vic. C. 58), s. 136 13

Assignee from lessee—Liability for rent—Apportionment—Privity of estate 933

——— ——— of holder of Succession Certificate cannot sue for recovery of debt 486

Assignment—After-acquired property—Covenant to replace goods sold by other goods—Lien—License—Equitable mortgage 31

——— ——— by lessor of his reversion—Kattakonam, whether can be set-off—Assignor or assignee liable for kattakonam 623

——— ——— of actionable claim. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, s. 110.

——— ——— of decree. See DECREE, ASSIGNMENT OF.

——— ——— ——— ———Attachment of decree for mesne profits—Assignment of decree after attachment—Part consideration intended to benefit assignor and defeat creditors—Fraudulent assignment—Right of assignee to execute decree—Determination of equities between assignee and attachers in execution—Assignee entitled to charge for consideration paid by him—Rights of attachers where attachment not made by Court passing decree—Attachment of decree by judgment-debtor—Right to execute 323

——— ——— ———Limitation—Execution of decree—Petition by transferee decree-holder to enter up satisfaction 617

——— ——— of insurance policy by writing 627

——— ——— ———Right of third parties to impeach—Admissibility of oral evidence—Colourable transaction—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Merger in decree—Fraud.

Where an assignment is impeached on the ground that it is colourable and has the effect of defeating the rights of third parties, such third parties have the right to produce evidence to show the real nature of the transaction. Section 92 of the Evidence Act is no bar to the production of oral evidence by such third parties. It makes no difference that the transaction has merged in a decree, for decrees only bind the parties thereto or persons claiming under them.

An assignment can be assailed by third parties on the ground of fraud.

Fraud is an extrinsic and collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of Justice. PARUMAL v. MAHOMEDALI, 6 S. L. R. 107 39

Attachment. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 10; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 87; EXECUTION OF DECREE; MAINTENANCE.

——— ——— of decree by judgment-debtor—Right to execute decree 323

Attempt at robbery 800

Auction-purchaser's right to recover purchase money is a substantive right 437

——— ——— ———Symbolical possession 518

——— ——— sale. See SALE-IN-EXECUTION.

Award. See ARBITRATION.

——— ———Notice of filing to parties essential 430

Bailment—Bailee working as warehouseman and merchant—Pledge of deposited goods—Pledgee having no knowledge of bailor's claim—Return of goods to pledgor—Notice 663

Benami mortgage—Burden of proof 216

——— ——— transaction, allegation of—Position of active confidence—Burden of proof 363

——— ——— sale—Suit for possession—Fraud against creditors.

A. sued to recover possession from B. of certain property under a deed of sale which was found to have been executed in favour of A. by B. "benami" and with a view to defraud the creditors of the vendors:

Held, that A. was not entitled to recover possession and that it did not matter whether the object of the fraudulent transfer was actually effected or not.

Obiter dictum.—The fraudulent grantor or giver loses his right to claim the aid of law in recovering his property only if the contemplated fraud has been carried out. MANDAYA v. MA E, 5 BUR. L. T. 166 918 ——— ———Purchase of property by husband in wife's name—Presumption—Passing of consideration.

There is no presumption that the purchase of property by a husband in his wife's name was benami for the former. The true test of ownership is, who paid the consideration for the purchase. CHILLAMUTHU v. MUTHUDAYAR SERVAI 740

Bengal Rent Recovery Act (X of 1859), s. 105 165

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 5 227

——— ——— ——— s. 51 111

——— ——— ——— ss. 52 cl. (c), 74—Abatement of rent—Land left uncultivated for embankment—Payment of rent in full—Abatemen to be claimed in subsequent years—Stipulation for presents and free labour besides rent, illegality of—Abwab.

A claim for abatement of rent does not come within the purview of section 52, clause (c), of the Bengal Tenancy Act, where the remission is claimed not on account of land not found in the possession of the tenant, but on account of land which, though included in his tenure, he was obliged to leave uncultivated on account of the necessity of having to erect embankments to protect other land, and remission for land so left out is provided for in the written contract between the parties.

Bengal Tenancy Act—contd.

Prima facie, the tenant is entitled to remission for all the years for which the land had been so left uncultivated. But when the tenant has paid the rent in full without any abatement for a certain period, he is not entitled to remission for that period, but is entitled to abatement only in respect of the subsequent years for which rent has been claimed by the plaintiff.

In a kabuliat, the fixed rent mentioned was Rs. 360. Then there was an additional item under the heading of "price of presents and unpaid labour" amounting to Rs. 17-4. These two sums were added together and put down as amounting to Rs. 377-4 under the heading of "total rent." The kabuliat then provided :—

"Besides, I shall every year, at the time of the Durga Puja, give you four goats as presents and shall supply you labour without wages for five days, which if I fail to do, I shall have no objection to your realising the sum of Rs. 17-4, the price of the said presents and labour, in addition to the amount of rent."

Held, that the sum of Rs. 17-4, which was the money equivalent of the presents and labour, was in the nature of an imposition in addition to the actual rent within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and could not be recovered. SREE KANTA PERSHAD v. IRSHAD ALI SARKAR, 16 C. L. J. 225 173

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 74 173

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 74—Abwab—Illegal cess—Construction of kabuliat—Claim whether part of rent.

Whether a sum claimed by the landlord is or is not an illegal cess, must depend upon the construction of the contract before the Court. If upon a fair interpretation of the terms of the contract, the sum claimed can be deemed part of the actual rent, the tenant is bound to pay it; if it can only be regarded as an imposition in addition to the actual rent, the stipulation for its payment is void.

Where throughout a lease, the yearly rent was described a certain sum assessed at a certain sum per bigha, upon the area demised, and at end of the lease, in a clause, entirely distinct from the one wherein the rent was assessed a provision was made for delivery of certain articles or in default their value:

Held, that the articles or their value were in the nature of an illegal cess and not recoverable from the tenant. MATHURA PRASAD v. TOTA SINGH, 16 C. L. J. 296 177

——— ——— ——— s. 75—Limitation, special—"Exacted," meaning of—Suit for refund of excess amount realised by landlord without claiming penalty—Limitation applicable to suit—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 14—Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819), s. 14—Collector's power to determine summarily rent of tenure then payable—No power to determine rent payable in future.

The plaintiffs alleged that they held a patni taluq on payment of certain money rent to the defendants, but that the latter took proceedings under the Patni Regulation for realisation of the value of certain paddy rents which, they said, were payable for the taluq, and the plaintiffs, in order to save their tenure from sale, deposited the amount claimed by the defendants. The plaintiffs accordingly sued for a declaration that the taluq bore money rent and not paddy rent, and for refund of the amount realised from them in excess of the proper rent:

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred by the special limitation prescribed by section 75 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as that section had no application to the suit: first, because the excess rent realised from the plaintiff in proceedings under the Patni Regulations could not be said to have been exacted by the zemindars within the meaning of the section, which evidently contemplated exactions by means other than process of law; and secondly, because the section did not take away the right of a person, from whom rent had been realised in excess, to recover such excess amount from the landlord, apart from the provisions of the section, within the ordinary period of limitation;

(2) that the suit was not barred under Article 14 of the Limitation Act, because under section 14 of the Patni Regulation the Collector could make only a summary investigation if the talukdar contested the zemindar's demand for any arrear, that the determination of what was the rent payable for the tenure in future was beyond the scope of the Collector's power, and that the plaintiffs did not require to set aside any act or order of the Collector.

Section 75 merely enables a tenant to recover from his landlord certain penalty in addition to the amount or value of what is exacted, if the suit is brought within six months from the date of exaction, and the limitation provided by the section does not bar a suit to recover the excess amount where no penalty is claimed. NAGENDRA LAL CHOWDHURY v. RAJA BIBI, 17 C. W. N. 374 504

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 76 115

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 86, 87 (6), (7) 682

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 104-H 919

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 104-H—Scope of section—Relief to be granted—By whom to be instituted—Who should be made defendant—Necessary and proper party, distinction between—Person indirectly or remotely interested, whether necessary party—Secretary of State and under-tenants, whether necessary parties.

The only relief which the plaintiff in a suit under section 104-H can claim, is the alteration of an entry of the rent settled or the insertion of an entry as to the amount of rent to be settled. No doubt, the Court, with a view to determine the question, whether the entry of the rent as settled is erroneous or whether there ought to be an entry of settled rent, must incidentally examine the ground assigned by the plaintiff as set out in the six clauses of sub-section 3. But the Court cannot be called upon, in a suit under section 104-H, to make an express declaration upon any of the six matters mentioned in that sub-section.

The plaintiffs are not competent to seek in a suit under section 104-H a declaration that part of the lands is nij jote or that certain specific tenants have not acquired rights of occupancy therein.

A suit under section 104-H may be instituted either by the landlord or by the tenant, according as the one or the other considers himself aggrieved by the entry in the Record of Rights.

The suit should have as defendant only the person benefited by the rent-entry or by the omission to make a rent-entry, as the case may be. The Secretary of State for India is the proper party to be made defendant. The under-tenants are not necessary parties in the determination of the one question directly in issue, namely, whether the rent-entry showing the amount of rent payable by the plaintiffs to the Secretary of State, is or is not correct. The under-tenants are not necessary parties for as far as the entry relates to their status as under-tenants, it cannot be altered as the result of this suit.

There is a well founded distinction between necessary parties and proper parties to a suit. Two conditions must be satisfied in order that a party may be considered a necessary party defendant, namely, first, there must be a right to some relief against him in respect of the matter involved in the suit; and secondly, his presence is necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all questions involved in the suit.

In each case, it must be determined whether a particular person is or is not a necessary party, that is, necessary for the determination of the question raised by the plaintiff and for the grant of the relief he claims. But it may be laid down as a general rule that a person who is only indirectly or remotely interested, is not a necessary party. JOGENDRA NATH SINGH v. SECRETARY OF STATE 921

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 105—Proceeding may be instituted whether rent is or is not fixed by contract.

A proceeding, under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, can be instituted not only when there is no rent payable by the tenant to the landlord under the terms of a contract between the parties, but also when rent is fixed by a contract. ACTOWLI v. TARAK NATH GHOSE, 16 C. L. J. 328 266

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 105, 109A, 157—Record of Rights—Person settled as raiyat by trespasser—Recorded as raiyat in Record of Right—Settling fair rent—Relationship of landlord and tenant—Whether consent of both parties essential—Decision of Special Judge in s. 105, Bengal Tenancy Act, case, declining jurisdiction—Decision settling fair rent—Second appeal.

A person, who is settled on a certain land as a raiyat by a trespasser, does thereby become a raiyat of some kind, and, therefore, when the zemindari is transferred by operation of law from one zemindar to another, he remains a raiyat on the land; and if he is recorded by the Settlement Authorities in the Record of Rights as a raiyat on the land, the zemindar is entitled to treat him as a raiyat and to ask the Revenue Court to settle a fair rent with him.

In order that the relationship of landlord and tenant might be established between two parties, the consent of both parties is not essential under the law in this country, though it may be so under the English law.

A decision by a Special Judge that he had no jurisdiction as a Revenue Court to fix a fair rent in respect of lands held by the defendants, inasmuch as the latter were trespassers, and that the zemin-

Bengal Tenancy Act—concld.

dar's only remedy was by the institution of a suit, under section 157 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is not a decision settling rent, and a second appeal from that decision is not barred by section 109A. KALI PROSANNA DAS v. BHAGABAN MALI, 17 C. W. N. 348 587

——— ——— ——— s. 108A, scope of —Power of Settlement Officer—Correction of bona fide mistake—Mistake of party—Inherent power of Court to correct obvious errors in record—Amendment of record after dismissal of appeal.

Section 108A of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies only to Revenue Officers specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf. The section entitles the Settlement Officer to correct the record where there has been a bona fide mistake; such mistake need not necessarily be the mistake of the Settlement Officer; it may very well be a mistake made by one of the parties concerned. The section in substance authorises a Settlement Officer to re-consider the matter on the merits.

A Settlement Officer, in the exercise of a power inherent in every Court to correct obvious errors or incidental slips in its own record, may correct a clerical or an arithmetical error in the Record.

After the final publication of a Record of Rights, fair and equitable rent was settled in a proceeding under section 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, at the rate of one rupee per bigha. The tenant's appeal to the Special Judge was dismissed. Subsequently, it was discovered that the area had been erroneously recorded as 5 bighas, 17 cottahs instead of 7 bighas, 5 cottahs. Accordingly, the Settlement Officer amended the record, and a consequential alteration was made in the entry relating to the rent payable. Before the Special Judge on appeal, no question was raised as to the area:

Held, that the Settlement Officer had authority to correct the record. RAJ MOHAN GUHA v. ALAM GAZI PATWARI, 16 C. L. J. 339 279

——— ——— ——— s. 109A 587

——— ——— ——— s. 148A 207

——— ——— ——— s. 157 587

——— ——— ——— s. 158A 207

——— ——— ——— s. 188 115

——— ——— ——— Sch. III, Art. 2 (b) 343

——— ——— ——— Art. 6 207

Berar Land Revenue Code, 1896, ss. 205 to 209, 211 (d)—Pre-emption—Decree for foreclosure against mortgagor's representative—Representative also co-occupant—Subsequent suit for pre-emption.

The right of pre-emption arising in respect of a mortgage under the Berar Land Revenue Code is quite independent of any obligation to redeem the mortgage which may fall on the pre-emptor as a representative of the mortgagor.

A. owned a certain survey number. He partitioned the field equally between his two sons, B. and C., reserving no share for himself. Subsequently, A. and B. mortgaged the half share of B. to D., who sued A. and B. for foreclosure of the mortgage. A decree nisi was passed in the usual form. Before it became absolute, A. died and C. was brought on the record in his place. No redemption took place, and the decree for foreclosure was made absolute. C., thereupon, sued to enforce his right of pre-emption under the Berar Land Revenue Code:

Held, that the decree for foreclosure was no bar to the suit for pre-emption by C. AGYA RAM v. DEORAO, 8 N. L. R. 161 616

——— ——— ——— ss. 206, 207, 208, 209, 211 (d) 616

Bhagdari tenure, nature of—Bhagdari village—Right of bhagdar to village site—Land forming roadway—Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879), s. 37.

Land forming road-ways through the village site of a bhagdari village is the property of the Government.

All the land forming the village site of a bhagdari village is not the property of the bhagdars.

The bhagdari tenure is nothing more than a particular system of collecting the revenues for the Government.

A bhagdar is entitled only to those village fields which are assigned to him, and to that portion of the village site which is assigned to him for residence.

A bhagdar has no higher title to his assigned land in the village site than he has to his assigned land in the village fields. He cannot make any claim to the proprietorship of such lands, as he is liable to pay rent or assessment to the Government for these lands. UMAR AMNAJI MIAJI v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 14 BOM. L. R. 934; 37 B. 87 659

Bombay Abkari Act (V of 1878), ss. 32, 67—License to sell liquor—Collector's order cancelling license—Collector honestly believing licensee guilty of bribing officials—Suit against Government—Limitation—Protection in statutory duties.

If any public or private body charged with the execution of a statute honestly intends to put the law in motion and really and not unreasonably believes in the existence of facts, which, if existent, would justify his acting and acts accordingly, his conduct will be in pursuance of the statute and will be protected.

Where a license for sale of liquor granted to a person was revoked by the Collector under the bona fide belief that the licensee had bribed the Collector's Head Clerk though there was no actual conviction of the licensee:

Held, (1) that the act of the Collector must be regarded as done in pursuance of the statute;

(2) that a suit brought against the Government in respect of the act would be barred if brought after the expiry of four months from the date of the act, even though the licensee unsuccessfully appealed to the Commissioner and the Local Government against the Collector's order of revocation. DHONDU DAGDU PATIL v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 14 BOM. L. R. 949; 37 B. 101 673

——— ——— ——— s. 43 (a) 534

——— ——— ——— s. 67—Limitation—Suit against Government—Collector's order cancelling license to sell liquor 673

Bombay City Municipal Act (III of 1888), s. 394—Keeping bullocks for hire—Bullocks kept by tenants in huts and in open—Liability of owner.

A. was joint owner of a place, part of which was let out to several tenants. The tenants kept bullocks on the place, some in huts and some in the open. The bullocks were plied for hire but the place was not licensed by the Municipal Commissioner under section 394 of the Bombay Municipal Act. A. knew that the bullocks were kept on the land and allowed it:

Held, that A. was guilty of an offence under section 394 of the Bombay Municipal Act, whether the bullocks were kept upon leased land or on waste land not leased out. IMPERATOR v. TYEBALI CURIMJI, 14 BOM. L. R. 885; 13 CR. L. J. 785 529

——————— s. 394—Keeping bullocks for hire by tenant with owner's knowledge—Liability of owner.

A. let out certain premises to B. For several years, to the knowledge of A., the premises were used by B. or his sub-tenants for the purpose of stabling bullocks used for hire in contravention of section 394 of the Bombay Municipal Act. In the lease given by A. to B, there was a clause restraining B. from putting the land to any use not sanctioned by Municipal Regulations:

Held, that A. was guilty of an offence under section 394 of the Act, as despite the terms of the lease, he allowed the unwarranted use of the premises. EMPEROR v. DADABHAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 882; 13 CR. L. J. 788 532

Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), s. 32—Court of Wards Act (I of 1905), s. 3 (c)—Jurisdiction—Suit against Collector as Court of Wards.

A suit brought against a Collector, appointed Court of Wards under section 3 (c) of Bombay Act I of 1905, is a suit against an officer of Government sued in his official capacity and as such is triable only by the District Court by virtue of the provisions of section 32 of Act XIV of 1869. MISS M. J. D'SILVA v. MISS D. J. S. MINIZIS, 14 BOM. L. R. 1207 972

Bombay Court of Wards Act (I of 1905), s. 2 670

——————— s. 3 (c) 972

——————— ss. 4, 25, 32 670

Bombay District Municipal Act (IV of 1890), ss. 51, 68 (a) 64

Bombay High Court, Appellate Side Rules, r. 65 964

——————— Rules, r. 725 739

Bombay Land Revenue Code (V of 1879), s. 37 659

Bombay Regulation (XII of 1827), s. 27 60

Bombay Vatan Act (V of 1886), effect of 746

Bond—Construction—Interest to be paid at certain sum per month—Compound interest at end of every six months to be added to principal—Whether interest to be paid on whole sum per month or per cent., per month.

In a bond the debtor agreed to pay, on the principal amount of Rs. 2,000, interest at the rate of Rs. 1-9 per month. There was a further provision to this effect: "We shall pay the interest every six months. If we fail to do so, the interest and compound interest shall at the end of every six months be added to the principal and we shall go on paying interest thereon at the aforesaid rate:"

Held, that the interest was to be payable at the rate of Rs. 1-9 per cent. per month. INDRO DEB SARKAR v. AZIZUR RAHMAN SARCAR, 16 C. W. N. 957 9

British India—Wadhwan Civil Station—Bombay Abkari Act (Bom. Act V of 1878), s. 43 (a)—Importation of bhang from Wadhwan Civil Station to Viramgam.

Wadhwan Civil Station is not a part of British India.

The importation of twenty tolas of bhang from Wadhwan Civil Station into Viramgam is an importation of bhang from foreign territory into Presidency of Bombay and is, therefore, punishable under section 43 of the Bombay Abkari Act. EMPEROR v. CHIMANLAL JAGJIVAN, 14 BOM. L. R. 876; 13 CR. L. J. 790 534

Buddhist Law—Hnapazon property—Widow's right to alienate—Burden of proving necessity lies on mortgagee.

A widow's interest in hnapazone property is one half with a life-interest in the remainder.

Any mortgage by a widow of such property will be valid to the extent of half of it unless there is evidence to show that the mortgage was for the necessities of the family and the burden of proof of such necessity lies on the mortgagee. CHAN THA U v. NAW BI, 5 BUR. L. T. 170 956

Burden of proof—Alienation of ancestral property—Necessity 666

——————— Ancestral property 392

——————— Benami mortgage 216

——————— Drunkenness—Intention—Knowledge 800

——————— Excavation of tank—Improvement 115

——————— Lease by mortgagor in ordinary course of management 1

——————— Plea of limitation—Plaintiff to prove his suit within time 518

——————— Position of active confidence—Allegation of benami transaction 363

——————— Production of document with endorsement of payment 396

——————— Right of private defence 1001

——————— Suit for alluvial land—Burden of proving title and possession within limitation—Nature of proof—Presumption—Settlement Records, entries in 94

Burden of proof—concld.

——— ——— ——— ———Suit for profits against lambardar 914

——— ——— ——— ———Undue influence 309

——— ——— ——— ———Occupancy rights—Transfer—Transferee in possession—Suit for declaration—Defendant admitting transfer by lease—Plaintiff pleading sale—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 101, 102, 110, 114.

A. transferred certain occupancy rights in unalienated land in Berar to B., who was put in possession. B. sued A. for a declaration that he was entitled to be the registered occupant as A. had sold the occupancy rights to him. A. denied the sale, alleging that the occupancy rights were only leased to B. for a term of years:

Held, that the burden of proving that the transfer was a sale and not a lease, lay on B. KASHIBAI v. LADURAM, 8 N. L. R. 185 889 ——— ——— ——— ———Possession—Mortgagor and mortgagee.

The burden of proof as to the nature of the transaction by which the person in possession obtained that possession is on the person who is out of possession.

This rule, however, is inapplicable when the original relation of the parties was that of mortgagor and mortgagee. It is then on the party who alleges that the said relation has ceased to prove it.

For the purpose of placing the burden of proof, it is immaterial whether possession was given under the original mortgage or not until the time of the subsequent transaction in dispute. MAUNG CHIT TON v. MAUNG AUNG GYAW, 5 BUR. L. T. 161 913

Burma Land and Revenue Act (II of 1876), ss. 37, 44, 80 878

Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. 13 954

Caste, ex-communication from—One section refusing to invite plaintiff without his undergoing some expiatory ceremonies, but not outcasting him—Cause of action—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 9.

An allegation that defendants insisted that the plaintiff should undergo certain expiatory ceremonies, required to be performed by members of a caste after pollutions of certain kinds, before he could be invited to certain functions in defendant's houses, affords no cause of action against the defendants.

Refusal to invite the plaintiff and his friends to auspicious occasions would not in itself give the plaintiff a cause of action, provided his enjoyment of right as a member of the caste has not been obstructed. COOPOOSAMI CHETTY v. DURAISAMY CHETTY, (1912) M. W. N. 1220 527

Cause of action—Contract to transfer negotiable instrument—Failure to perform—Measure of damages 721

——— ——— ——— ———Ex-communication from caste 527

——— ——— ——— ———Recovery of money by person with knowledge of cessation of right 205

——— ——— ——— ———Will by widow—Suit by reversioner to set aside 586

Cause of action—concld.

——— ——— ——— ———Wrongful breaking through mine and carrying away coal—Covenant to keep barrier between lessor and lessee—Privity of contract between lessor and sub-lessee—Suit for damages for erection of buttresses 500

——— ——— ——— Right to sue—Custom—Vatandar Joshi—Suit to recover fees paid to usurper—Liability of yajman—Action against person procuring breach of contract.

A vatandar joshi is entitled to sue for the recovery of fees paid by his yajman to a usurper of the functions of the Joshi.

Both the yajman and the intruder are jointly and severally liable to the Joshi for the amount of his fees.

An action lies not only against a person who breaks a contract but also against any one who wilfully and with notice procures a breach of the contract to the detriment of the plaintiff. PANDURANG v. NAGOJI, 8 N. L. R. 133 138

Central Provinces Courts Act (II of 1904), s. 8 (1) (c), rules under 624

——— ——— ——— — ss. 13, 15 886

Central Provinces Court of Wards Act (XXIV of 1899), ss. 10, 12, 26, 27—Suit pending against defendant—Death of defendant—Representative ward of Court—Continuance of suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, rr. 1, 4 Interpretation of statutes—Statute imposing restrictions—Superfluity.

Section 12 of the Central Provinces Court of Wards Act has no application to a claim already submitted to the arbitrament of a Civil Court before publication of a notification under section 10 and still awaiting the Court's adjudication on the expiry of six months from the date of that publication.

Section 26 of the Act does not apply to a suit already filed against the predecessor-in-title of a Government ward and continued against the ward as legal representative of the original defendant in accordance with Order XXII, rule 4, Civil Procedure Code.

Statutes imposing restrictions upon the subject's right of suit should be construed strictly and such restrictions should not be extended beyond what the words used actually cover.

There is always a presumption against superfluity in a statute.

A restricted sense is the right one to give to words which cut down existing remedies.

The jurisdiction of a Civil Court is not to be construed as excluded in any case beyond the clearly expressed will of the Legislature. GANESHLAL v. DHONDIBA, 8 N. L. R. 169 621

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 12, 26, 27 621

Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), ss. 136-R, 136-S Revenue partition Date of effect Sanction by Commissioner Previous private partition Hindu law.

A revenue partition, under the provisions of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, does not take effect from the date on which it is sanctioned by the Commissioner but from the first day of the agricultural year next after the Deputy Commissioner has published a notification of the Commissioner's sanction under section 136-S. (1) of the Act.

Central Provinces Land Revenue Act—concld.

A private partition was effected between two Hindu brothers and the share of each was ascertained. Subsequently, there was a revenue partition between the brothers which was sanctioned by the Commissioner on 9th April 1894. The notification of sanction was published after 1st June 1894:

Held, (1) that the revenue partition did not take effect till 1st June 1895;

(2) that the revenue partition could only take effect according to Revenue law and the rule of Hindu law that partition dated from ascertainment of shares did not apply to the revenue partition. RATANLAL v. BHASKAR, 8 N. L. R. 139 144

——————— s. 136 S 144

Central Provinces Tenancy Act (IX of 1883), s. 38 (1)—Central Provinces Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), s. 41 (1) — Absolute occupancy-holding—Widow's estate, nature of—Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Alienation—Necessity—Marriage of divided nephew of husband.

An alienation by a Hindu widow of her deceased husband's estate in order to provide the expenses of his divided nephew's marriage is not binding on her husband's reversioners, as such expenses do not constitute legal necessity.

A Hindu widow, upon whom the absolute occupancy-holding of her husband has devolved under section 38 (1) of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1883, or section 41 (1) of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1898, obtains an interest therein analogous in all respects to the estate of a Hindu widow in land inherited by her from her husband subject only to the provisions of the statute as to surrender and alienation. BHURA v. RAMRAO, 8 N. L. R. 154 366

——————— s. 38 (2)—Occupancy holding—Intention to mortgage, notice of—Criterion for determining necessity for notice—Interest—Calculation—Interpretation of statutes—Object of statute.

The criterion for determining whether a landlord is entitled to notice under section 38 (2) of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1883, of an intention to mortgage an occupancy holding, is the annual rent of the entire holding if the entire holding is to be transferred; if only a part of the holding is to be transferred, then only so much of the annual rent as corresponds with that part.

The provisions of a statute should not be evaded by shift or contrivance. To carry out effectually the object of a statute, it must be so construed as to defeat all attempts to do or avoid in an indirect or circuitous manner that which it has prohibited or enjoined.

The mere fact that re-payment in full of mortgage-money is contemplated within a period shorter than five years should not be looked upon as limiting the calculation of interest to that period when applying to the transaction the test prescribed by section 38 (2) of the Tenancy Act. The whole interest payable on the principal during the five years immediately succeeding the mortgage should be taken into consideration. MADHO v. UMRAO, 8 N. L. R. 147 370

Central Provinces Tenancy Act—concld.

——————— s. 42 does not apply to mortgages 129

——————— (XI of 1898), s. 39 606

——————— s. 41 (1) 366

——————— s. 44 606

——————— s. 45 (6) 129

——————— s. 62 (1) 606

Charge against accused framed before cross-examination of prosecution witnesses—Subsequent cross-examination—Cancellation of charge, if legal 406

——————Document executed by Company, incomplete—Creation of charge 976

——————— to Jury. See JURY.

Charitable Trust. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882, s. 539; CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 92.

Charter Act (24 & 25 Vic. C. 104), s. 15—Jurisdiction of High Court to revise proceedings under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code 65

Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876 B. C.), whether applicable to land outside Chota Nagpur—Scope and effect of Act.

The Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act has no application to land lying outside of Chota Nagpur; and, consequently, the privilege enjoyed by a mortgagee from the proprietor in respect of such land to enforce his rights in a Court of ordinary Civil Jurisdiction, has not been abrogated or struck at by any of the provisions of the statute.

Per Mookerjee, J.—The scope of the Act is limited by political or administrative considerations which underlie it. The effect of the statute is to confer special privileges upon a particular class of persons, who are described as holders of land in Chota Nagpur. One of these privileges is that the question of liability for their debts and the mode of their satisfaction is determined not by the regular Courts, but by the Manager. A statute of this description, which abridges the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts, must be strictly construed, and in the absence of a statutory provision, which expressly or by necessary implication, lays down that the Act applies to all lands in British India owned by holders of land in Chota Nagpur, the statute should not be given such extensive an application. BHICHA RAM v. BISHAMBHAR NATH, 16 C. L. J. 527 957

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI B. C. of 1908), ss. 81 cl. (n), 91—Suit by zemindar against jagirdar for possession—Whether suit barred by section 91—Section 81 cl. (n) whether includes coal in mine not opened—Minerals lying on surface of soil—Scope of suit referred to in clause (b) of section 91—Jurisdiction of Civil Court, presumption to be made in favour of—Dismissal of suit under section 91, whether necessary—Stay of suit till final publication of Record of Right—Section 91, sub-section (1) Proviso, relief to be obtained under—No relief by appointment of Receiver or by grant of injunction.

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act—concld.

The first eight defendants were jagirdars under the plaintiff. Defendant No. 9 was the manager of their estate under the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act of 1876. The remaining defendants had obtained a prospecting lease from the manager to open up mines and quarries. The plaintiff, stating that the jagirdars were incompetent to grant a lease in respect of mines and quarries as they had no underground rights, sued for recovery of possession and injunction.

No written statement was filed, but the defendants took exception to the competency of the suit on the ground that it was barred under section 91 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act of 1908.

Held, that the suit was not barred by section 91; that clause(a) of the section was not applicable, first because as the defendants had not yet filed their written statement, it was impossible to ascertain what matters were in issue between the parties to the suit, and secondly, because none of the questions covered by clause (n) of section 81 arose directly or indirectly for determination in the suit as framed; that clause (b) of section 91 was not applicable, because the suit could not be deemed as one for alteration of the rent or the determination of the status of any tenant.

Clause(n) of section 81 does not include coal contained in a mine which has not yet been opened, it refers to minerals lying on the surface of the soil which may be taken by any person, tenant or not. Clause (b) of section 91 does not refer to a suit where the question of the status of the tenant arises only indirectly for consideration.

Every presumption should be made in favour of the jurisdiction of a Civil Court, and it should not be taken away except by express words or by necessary implication.

Section 91 does not mean that the suit, if instituted, shall be dismissed; the proper course to follow in such a contingency is to adjourn the trial of the suit till the final publication of the Record of Rights.

A plaintiff can, under the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 91, obtain relief only when waste or damage had been actually committed. He is entitled merely to prohibit the continuance of waste or damage: he cannot demand a prohibition of the commission of the waste or damage, and under the proviso, no relief can be granted either by the appointment of a Receiver or by the grant of a permanent injunction. RAM NARAYAN SINGH v. KRISHNA CHANDRA GHOSE, 17 C. W. N. 408; 17 C. L. J. 239 490

——————— s. 91 490

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 2 884

——————— s. 13 — Compromise decree 434

——————— ss. 13, 244—Res judicata—Partition suit—Decree declaring right to partition—Actual partition not effected—Execution of decree barred—Subsequent suit for partition.

Where a decree declaring a right to partition has not been given effect to by the parties proceeding to partition in accordance with it, it is competent to the parties or any of them, if they still continue to be interested in the joint property, to bring another suit for partition in case their right to partition is called in question at a time when, by reason of limitation or otherwise, they cannot put into effect the decree first obtained.

Such a decree amounts to nothing more than an inchoate partition insufficient to change the character of the property, which continues a joint estate until there has been an actual partition by metes or bounds, or a division of title. JAGU BABAJI VARANG v. BALU LAXMAN VARANG, 14 BOM. L. R. 1198 955

Civil Procedure Code—(1882)—contd.

——————— s. 43—Parties different 434

——————— ss. 244 884, 955

——————— s. 268—Attachment of debt due to judgment-debtor 420

——————— ss. 275, 276, 295—Execution of decree—Attachment—Private alienation after attachment—Subsequent attachment by another creditor—Debtor declared insolvent—First attachment raised by satisfaction of decree—Claim enforceable under attachment—Validity of private alienation—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 64.

A. obtained a decree against B. and attached the right, title and interest of B. in certain property. On 6th January 1896, B. assigned the whole of his right, title and interest in the property to C. In 1898, D. obtained a decree against B. In 1903, B. was adjudged an insolvent, and in 1904, D. levied an attachment on the same property as was already attached by A. In 1907, the judgment-debt due to A. was paid and his attachment raised. In 1910, C. got an order raising the attachment of D.

Held, (1) that the assignment to C. was not void as against D.;

(2) that as no assets were realized by sale or otherwise in execution of decree which could be divided rateably between the creditors, D. was not the possessor of a claim enforceable under section 295, Civil Procedure Code, or as a consequence enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of section 276. JETHA BHIMA AND CO. v. LADY JANBAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 904 625

——————— s. 275A 936

——————— s. 276, 295 625

——————— s. 295—Rateable distribution—"Money decree"—Mortgage decree expressly exempting from personal liability—Collusion—Corrupt bargain—Right of decree-holder to prove.

A mortgage-decree for sale of the mortgaged property, expressly exempting the defendant from personal liability, is not a money decree within the meaning of section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882.

A decree-holder is entitled to prove that a decree, obtained by another decree-holder claiming rateable distribution, against the judgment-debtor was obtained in collusion with the latter or as a result of a corrupt bargain between the parties. The Court will not allow rateable distribution if it is satisfied of the collusion or the corrupt bargain. SURYA NARAYANA JAGAPATI RAJU v. GOPALA SURYA RAO, 23 M. L. J. 699; 12 M. L. T. 660 940

Civil Procedure Code—(1882)—contd.

——————— s. 311 242

——————— s. 314—Application for delivery of possession three years after confirmation of sale 242

——————— s. 315—Auction-purchaser's right to recover purchase money—Substantive right—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 93, effect of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 62 and 120.

Per Ayling, J.—Under section 315 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, a suit lies by an auction-purchaser to recover the sale price from the decree-holder when it is found on a third party's suit that the judgment-debtor had no title whatever to the property sold by the Court.

There is nothing in the present Code (Act V of 1908) which would have the effect of taking away the right of suit which had accrued before it came into force.

Quære:—Whether a similar right of suit exists under the present Code.

Per Napier, J.—Section 315 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, gave a substantive right to recover money paid to a judgment-creditor and that right could be exercised either by suit or by petition in execution proceedings.

Under the present Code (Act V of 1908), the right is no longer a substantive right entitling the auction-purchaser to recover his money, but he has a right to get an order in execution proceedings for re-payment if he discovers the absence of interest before the confirmation of the sale.

Per Ayling and Napier, JJ.—The claim for recovery of sale-money is governed by Article 120 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act and not by Article 62. MOHIDEEN IBRAHIM v. MAHAMED MEERA LEVAI, 12 M. L. T. 431; 23 M. L. J. 487; (1912) M. W. N. 1130 437

——————— s. 317 434

——————— s. 323 887

——————— ss. 325-A, 323——Void transfer—Collector leasing property for premium satisfying decree—Subsequent disposal of property by judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. III, para. 11.

Where a party seeks to have a transfer of property declared void under section 325-A of the old Code, or paragraph 11, Schedule III, of the present Code, he is bound to show that on the date of such transfer, the Collector was exercising or performing in respect of such property some power or duty conferred upon him by the Code for the purpose of executing a decree which was still unsatisfied on that date.

The incompetency created by the section exists only for the period during which the execution of the decree remains in the Collector's hands.

Where the Collector gives a lease of the property on payment of a premium sufficient to satisfy the decree forthwith and satisfaction in full is certified to the Civil Court, the judgment-debtor can dispose of the property subject to the lease. SONBA v. GANESHA, 8 N. L. R. 182 887

Civil Procedure Code—(1882)—contd.

——————— ss. 351, 356, 503 —Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XL, r. 1 (d)—Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 20 (d)—Receiver's power to sue.

A Receiver, appointed under section 351 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, has no locus standi to institute a suit, even with the previous sanction of the Court which appointed him Receiver.

As a general rule, a Receiver is a person appointed by the Court to receive and there is no vesting of any cause of action in him.

The power to sue or the liability to be sued is not necessarily incidental to the general powers of a Receiver, who has the right to institute or defend a suit only with the express permission of the Court. BADRI PERSHAD v. CIVIL NAZIR, AMBALA 751

——————— ss. 356, 503 751

——————— s. 521 684

——————— s. 522 7, 684

——————— s. 539—Public charity—Endowment—Scheme confirmed by High Court—Amendment of scheme—Jurisdiction of District Court—Directions necessary to carry out scheme—Income of endowment uncertain—Audit to be frequent—Committee of management—Person having pecuniary interest in endowment properties or creditor of endowment, whether should serve on Committee.

Where in a suit under section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, a scheme for the administration of a public charity has been framed by the District Court and confirmed by the High Court, an application for modification of the scheme can be entertained only by the High Court, but the District Court is at liberty to give such directions as may be necessary to carry out the modified scheme.

Where the income of a public endowment is of an uncertain and variable character, it is extremely desirable that audits should be fairly frequent and searching.

No one, who has any pecuniary interest in the endowment properties or is a creditor of the endowment, should serve on the Committee of management of the endowment. UMESHANANDA DUT JHA v. RAVANESHWAR PROSAD SINGH, 16 C. L. J. 431 969

——————— s. 539, scope of—Suit against trespasser.

Section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is applicable only in cases of an express or constructive trust created for a public charitable purpose.

The section applies only to a suit against a trustee and not to a suit against a trespasser. ARUNACHELLA CHETTY v. MUTHU CHETTIAR, 23 M. L. J. 347 586

——————— s. 539, scope of—Right to sue—Founder's representatives suing for preventing abuse of trust—Suit in ejectment against trespasser by worshipper—Religious endowment—"Interested", meaning of—Adverse possession—Pujari—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 47, 144.

Section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not repeal or affect the right of a private individual to institute a suit to enforce the proper observance of a religious endowment.

Civil Procedure Code—(1882)—concld.

The representatives of a person, who endowed the property for a religious endowment, are entitled to institute proceedings for the purpose of having abuses in the trust rectified.

Where a religious endowment is founded for carrying on the sectional religious worship of the sect of the founder, persons of the same sect and form of worship as the founder are persons interested in the due performance of the religious worship by a duly qualified person and are entitled to ask for the ejectment of an intruder.

The possession or enjoyment of a Pujari for the time being cannot become adverse to the worshipper.

In the case of a sale of the endowed property, the possession becomes adverse to a worshipper or the representative of the founder from the date of the sale-deed.

Article 47 of the Limitation Act, 1877, can be no bar to a person who was no party to the criminal proceedings which terminated in the order. KADAMBI SRINIVASACHARLU v. DURLABHA SUBUDDHI, 23 M. L. J. 348 589

——— ——— ——— s. 541 99

——— ——— ——— s. 564 891

——— ——— ——— s. 583—Assignment of decree—Assignee realising amount from judgment-debtor—Restitution—Lis pendens—Party—Pleadings—Practice—Party not allowed to set up procedure successfully objected by him.

Where the assignee of a decree has realised the decretal amount from the judgment-debtor in execution, the judgment-debtor, in the event of the decree being reversed on appeal, is entitled to recover back the money, even though the assignee was not brought on the record on appeal.

A judgment-debtor wishing to appeal against the decree is not bound to make the assignee of the decree a party to his appeal. In the absence of fraud, the assignee of the decree is bound by the order of the Appellate Court.

The doctrine of lis pendens applies to an intermediate assignment of the original decree. The fact that the assignment was made before the appeal was filed cannot make any difference in this respect nor the fact that the judgment-debtor had knowledge of the assignment before he lodged his appeal.

A party cannot be heard to say that a procedure, to which he himself successfully objected in a former proceeding between himself and his adversary, was the proper procedure to be adopted by the latter. GOVINDAPPA v. HANUMANTHAPPA, 23 M. L. J. 513; (1912) M. W. N. 1152 420

——— ——— ——— s. 588 884

——— ——— ——— s. 590 99

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 2 88

——— ——— ——— ss. 2, 47, 104, 121, O. XLIII, r. 1—Decree—Sale in execution—Order allowing or rejecting application for setting aside sale—Appeal, second—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 166—Starting point—Date of sale

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 2, 244, 588.

No order, appealable as such, under section 588 of the former Civil Procedure Code, or under Order XLIII, rule 1, of the present Code, is a decree even though it may be an order which also falls within the purview of section 244 of the former, or section 47 of the latter Code, or is otherwise within the general definition of a decree contained in section 2 of either Code.

No second appeal lies from an appellate order passed on appeal from an order allowing or rejecting an application for setting aside a sale in execution.

Under Article 166 of the Limitation Act, time begins to run from the date of sale and not from the date of the confirmation of sale. WASUDEO v. HIRALAL, 8 N. L. R. 177 884

——— ——— ——— ss. 2, 115—Preliminary decree—Decision on issues relating to misjoinder, limitation and jurisdiction—Suit for mesne profits—Refusal to draw up preliminary decree—Material irregularity—Appeal—Revision.

In a suit for mesne profits, the trying Judge first gave a decision on some issues relating to misjoinder, limitation and jurisdiction, and after finding on these issues, he directed the parties to adduce evidence on the remaining issues, which were issues of accounts. He was then asked to draw up a preliminary decree in accordance with his findings but he declined to do so:

Held, (1) that in so declining, the Judge committed a material irregularity in the exercise of his jurisdiction;

(2) that the decision of the issues conclusively determined the rights of parties regarding some matters in controversy so far as his Court was concerned; consequently, the decision on each of those issues was sufficient to constitute a preliminary decree;

(3) that the Judge should be forthwith directed to draw up a preliminary decree upon the questions decided and that an appeal would then lie against the decision.

A party has a right to appeal from a decision of the Court amounting to a preliminary decree but he can only appeal if the decree is existent in formal shape.

It is the duty of the Court, where it is applied to after the passing of a preliminary decree, to have the decree drawn up so as to enable the party aggrieved to appeal. SIDHANATH DHONDDEV GARUD v. GANESH GOVIND GARUD, 14 BOM. L. R. 916; 37 B. 60 637

——— ——— ——— s. 3 676

——— ——— ——— s. 4 89

——— ——— ——— s. 9—Ex-communication from caste 527

——— ——— ——— s. 11—Landlord and tenant—Suit for rent for a certain fasli—Issue as to propriety of patta tendered—Adjudication—Subsequent suit for rent for another fasli—Issue as to extent of holding—Res judicata—Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865).

In a suit by a landlord against a tenant for rent for a certain fasli under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, the defendant pleaded that the patta tendered was not proper and that the extent of defendant's jeroyati land had been very much overstated. The Court found that the terms of the patta did not contain any objectionable matter and that the patta was a proper one. In a suit for rent by the same plaintiff against the defendant for a subsequent fasli, the defendant pleaded that the extent of the land referred to in the patta was incorrect:

Held, that the question of the extent of defendant's holding was res judicata by reason of the decision in the previous suit as to the propriety of the patta, as it was an available ground of attack in the previous suit, and the judgment in the previous suit must be taken to be an adjudication that the terms of the patta were correct in every respect.

Scope of section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, and the doctrine of res judicata discussed.

Case-law on the subject commented upon. BOMMIDI BAYYAN NAIDU v. BOMMIDI SURYANARAYANA, 12 M. L. T. 500; 23 M. L. J. 543; (1913) M. W. N. 1 445

——————— S. 11—Res judicata—Object of doctrine—Cross suits—Appeal from decision in one suit only.

The main object of the doctrine of res judicata is to prevent multiplicity of suits and interminable disputes between litigants. The rule of res judicata is not limited to the Courts of first instance but it applies equally to the procedure of the first and second Appellate Courts and indeed even to miscellaneous proceedings. The doctrine, so far as it relates to prohibiting the re-trial of an issue, refers not to the date of the commencement of the litigation, but to the time when the Judge decides the issue.

Where there are two cross-suits and a certain issue is common to both suits and no appeal is brought against the decision in the one suit, the finding on the issue cannot be attacked in an appeal from the decision in the other suit.

A decision on a point which is not substantially in issue in a suit cannot operate as res judicata in any later suit in which it may be substantially in issue. RAMAN CHETTY v. MUTHUVEERAPPA CHETTY, 5 BUR. L. T. 199; 6 L. B. R. 93 860

——————— S. 11—Res judicata—"Ought"—Under-proprietary rights in Oudh, meaning of—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886*), s.* 3, cl. 6—Proprietary rights, claim as to, does not affect under-proprietary rights—Pleas in defence which ought to be raised—Inconsistent pleas when barred.

A. sued B. for the recovery of the estate of a deceased Talukdar C. and obtained a decree for possession of the estate. In execution of his decree, A. obtained possession of the said property. B. objected that the under-proprietary rights in the property were held by A. and B. under previous Settlement Court decrees and that these rights were not affected by the decree for the proprietary rights obtained by A. On this ground, B. claimed restitution of the property. In the decree obtained by A. against B., no reservation was made in respect of the under-proprietry rights in favour of B.; no question was in issue as to under-proprietary rights in the suit:

Held, (1) that the decree related to the proprietary rights of C.'s estate and did not affect the under-proprietary rights held by A. and B. jointly and independently of C.;

(2) that the under-proprietary rights were no part of the property of C.;

(3) that as A. and B. litigated as rival claimants to the estate of C., under a title different from the one claimed as under-proprietors, section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code could have no application.

A party may join two or more alternative claims for relief based on inconsistent allegations but is not bound to join them in a claim unless such joinder is possible without confusion or embarassment and without impleading others as additional parties. The word "ought" in explanation IV, section 11, Civil Procedure Code, should be interpreted with reference to the array of parties to the previous litigation and the nature of the estate or claim then claimed or set up.

Under-proprietary rights are independent and distinct from proprietary rights. They do not form a part and parcel of talukdari rights. An under-proprietor has as complete an ownership over his land as that possessed by a superior proprietor, subject only to the payment, in certain cases, of rent or malikana to the superior proprietor. An under-proprietor can deal with his property as freely as a superior proprietor can deal with his, and an under-proprietor's interests are heritable and transferable. The main distinction between a proprietor and an under-proprietor, is that the former is not only the owner or part-owner of the mahal, but is also entitled to engage directly with Government for land revenue, while the latter, though owner of the land within the mahal is not entitled to engage directly with Government but pays his assessment to the proprietor of the mahal. SURAJ BIKRAM SINGH v. CHANDRABHAN SINGH 334

——————— S. 11—Res judicata—Suit for possession—Defence of adoption set up—Finding that adoption not established—Subsequent suit by alleged adopted son.

A. sued B., C. and D. for possession of land mortgaged to C. by one E. The defence set up, inter alia, was that B. had been adopted by E. The Court found the adoption not established and decreed the claim. B. thereupon sued A., C. and D. for possession on the ground that he was the adopted son of E.:

Held, that the suit was barred by section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, as in the previous suit the question of adoption was directly and substantially in issue between A. and B. and in that suit there was a real adjudication of the question of title as between the parties. UTTAM SINGH v. HIRA 365

——————— S. 11—Res judicata—Hindu widow representing estate of her husband in first suit—Heirs of her husband bound in subsequent litigation—Withdrawal of appeal in first suit—Effect on question of res judicata.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

On the death of one A., his widow brought a suit against his brother for possession of the property on the allegation that it was the separate property of her husband. The principal issue in the suit was whether the property was the joint property of A. and his brother, or whether it was his separate property. The Court held upon the evidence that it was the joint property of the two brothers, but that the widow of A. was entitled to remain in possession during her life-time in virtue of her right to maintenance as the widow of a deceased co-parcener. From that decree, the widow appealed. But instead of prosecuting the appeal, she withdrew from it.

Subsequently, the son of the said brother of A. sued the daughter of A. for possession of the same property. The daughter of A. pleaded that the property was the separate property of her father and not joint as alleged by the plaintiff:

Held, that the previous decision operated as res judicata as it was given against widow as representing the estate of A. and the mere withdrawal of the appeal by the widow was not sufficient to deprive the decision of its operative character in law. GHELABHAI v. BAI JAVER, 14 BOM. L. R. 1142 866

——— ——— ——— ss. 11, 66, O. II, r. 2—Res judicata—Compromise decree—Parties different.

Section 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure which deals with the rule of res judicata is not strictly applicable to compromise suits. Its provisions apply in terms to what has been heard and finally decided by a Court.

Section 43 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (Order II, rule 2 of the Code of 1908) has no application where the parties to the two suits are not the same.

Section 317 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, (section 66 of the Code of 1908), has no application to cases where the manager of a Hindu family or a tenant-in-common makes a purchase with funds belonging to himself aad the other members of the family or other tenant-in-common. GOPALASAMI VASTAD v. GOWINDASAMI VASTAD, (1912) M. W. N. 1071 434

——— ——— ——— s. 16 cl. (d)—Declaration that mortgage is invalid—Mortgaged property situate beyond local limits of Court.

A suit for a declaration that the mortgage of immoveable property is invalid as against plaintiff is governed by clause (d) of section 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A Court, within the limits of whose jurisdiction the property affected by the mortgage is not situate, has no jurisdiction to try the suit. ARUNACHELLA CHETTIAR v. MUTHIAH CHETTIAR 758

——— ——— ——— s. 24 (4)—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 33—Court invested with Small Cause Court powers, whether a Small Cause Court—Transfer from such Court to Court not invested with—Small Cause Court powers—Further transfer to another similar Court—Decree of latter, whether appealable—Direction by transferring Court to try as original suit, effect of.

In section 24 (4), Civil Procedure Code, the expression "a Court of Small Causes" means not only a Court constituted as a Small Cause Court under Act IX of 1887 but also a Court invested with Small Cause jurisdiction. The mere investiture of a Court with Small Cause powers makes it a Small Cause Court for the purposes of the section. Therefore, as soon as a case is transferred from a Court invested with Small Cause Court powers to a Court not so invested, the latter becomes a Small Cause Court for the purposes of the suit, and if the suit is further transferred to another Court, this third Court also is a Small Cause Court for the purposes of the suit and no appeal would lie against its decree in the suit.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—If a District Court in transferring a Small Cause suit from a Court invested with Small Cause Court powers, to a Court not so invested, directs the latter to try the suit as an original suit, the direction is invalid, though it does not affect the validity of the order of transfer itself. SANKARAMA AIYAR v. PADMANABHA AIYAR, 23 M. L. J. 373; (1912) M. W. N. 1086 425

——— ——— ——— s. 42, O. XXI, rr. 16, 53—Attachment of decree for mesne profits—Assignment of decree after attachment—Part consideration intended to benefit assignor and defeat creditors Fraudulent assignment—Right of assignee to execute decree—Determination of equities between assignee and attachers in execution—Assignee entitled to charge for consideration paid by him—Rights of attachers where attachment not made by Court passing decree—Attachment of decree by judgment-debtor—Right to execute.

An assignee of a decree, which has been attached, has, under Order XXI, rule 53, clause 2, the right to execute the decree notwithstanding the attachment.

But the right of the assignee to execute the decree is subject to the rights of the attachers just as the assignor's right itself would be. The assignment will not prevent the assignor's creditors from proceeding against the decree as if it still remained the property of the assignor. The assignment, though valid as between the parties to it, is subject to the rights of the creditors, including both those who may have already attached the decree and other creditors who might proceed against the decree notwithstanding the assignment.

Where the difference between the real value of the decree and the consideration for its assignment is, by a secret agreement between the assignor and the assignee, intended to benefit the assignor and to defeat his creditors, the assignment is fraudulent and invalid against the creditors and will not affect their rights to proceed against the decree as being still the property of the assignor. Neither the assignor, nor the judgment-debtor, can object to it on that ground.

The assignee in such a case is entitled to execute the decree notwithstanding the partial fraud and is entitled to a charge for the consideration actually paid by him, and if the prior attachments are valid, his charge would be subject to the rights of the attachers.

An application for execution by the assignee decree-holder may be resisted by the attaching creditors and all questions of rights of priority, etc., should be determined in the execution proceedings.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—An order of attachment of a decree by the Court actually executing the decree after its transfer to it from the Court which passed it is not altogether void. The defect in the attachment, if any, consequent on its being made by a Court other than that which passed the decree is not such a jurisdictional defect as to make the order void. The defect may be waived by the judgment-debtor, as where the latter does not take objection to the attachment.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Orders of attachment in execution of a decree, though these orders are effected by sending notice to other Courts, are made in exercise of the powers in executing a decree and, therefore, under section 42 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, the Court to which the decree is sent for execution can also itself exercise the power mentioned in Order XXI, rule 53, clause 1 (b) as exercisable by the Court which passed the decree.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—Order XXI, rule 16 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, does not make an assignment of a decree in favour of one of several judgment-debtors invalid in law. The provision for disabling such transferee judgment-debtor from executing the money-decree does not in terms apply to transferees of decrees other than those for money. But, whether the judgment-debtor taking an assignment of a decree against himself for immoveable property can execute it or not, the attachment of the said decree by him is not invalid.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A judgment-debtor who obtains the decree by assignment cannot execute it, but he has the right to apply for a set-off of the amount due to him as decree-holder in a suit against his assignor as against what is due by him and his co-judgment-debtors in the suit wherein he got the decree assigned to himself. His rights and priorities should be determined as if the decree for the larger amount was attached at his instance as soon as either of the decree-holders applies for execution. ARMUGHA MUDELIAR v. YAGAMBA BAI AMMANI, 13 M. L. T. 227 323

——— ——— ——— s. 47 88

——— ——— ——— s. 47—Order allowing or rejecting application for setting aside sale 884

——— ——— ——— ss. 47 (2), 50—Execution—Suit for money due under order against legal representative—Objection by legal representative to procedure—Jurisdiction of execution Court to convert suit against legal representative into execution proceedings.

An order for payment of batta, recoverable as in execution was passed by a Court and the petition in execution for its recovery was transferred to another Court. Subsequently, the party against whom the order was made died. A suit for recovery of the money was then filed in the second Court against his legal representative, who objected that the matter was one for execution and under section 50, Civil Procedure Code, he could only be brought in by the Court which passed the order. The executing Court decided to treat the suit as an execution petition and the legal representative as a party to it, and proceeded to make an order against him:

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

Held, (1) that the order was wrong;

(2) that the legal representative had not been brought in under section 50, Civil Procedure Code, and could not be proceeded against in execution;

(3) that the Court, which passed the order sought to be executed, could only bring the legal representative on the record. NACHIAPPA GOUNDAN v. PONNUSAMY NAICKER, 23 M. L. J. 287; (1912) M. W. N. 888 293

——— ——— ——— s. 50 293

——— ——— ——— s. 57 — Civil prisoner released owing to mistake 911

——— ——— ——— s. 58 (2) 911

——— ——— ——— s. 60—Attachment—Salary of officer of Regular Forces—Army Act (44-45 Vic. Ch. 58), s. 136.

The salary of an Officer of the British Regular Army is not liable to attachment in execution of a decree, under section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Section 60 does not encroach upon the provisions of the Army Act. VELCHAND v. BOURCHIER, 14 BOM. L. R. 777; 37 B. 26 13

——— ——— ——— s. 60 (n) prov. 284

——— ——— ——— s. 64 625

——— ——— ——— s. 66 — Purchase by manager of Hindu family 434

——— ——— ——— ss. 69, 70, Sch. III, s. 7 (1) (b)—Execution of decree—Decree awarding interest till realisation—Application for execution calculating interest to date of application—Execution transferred to Collector—Duty of Collector to calculate interest to date of payment—Nature of Collector's authority—Jurisdiction—Question of satisfaction of decree.

Under section 7 (1) (b) of Schedule III to the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, the Collector has to take into account the decretal amount with the whole of the interest awarded by the decree. That includes not merely interest up to the date of darkhast: but also interest which runs according to the decree up to the date of payment. It is the duty of the Collector to do so, even though the decree-holder has omitted to mention in his application the particular claim for further running interest. The Collector cannot return the decree to the Civil Court as satisfied till after the whole amount, including interest awarded by the decree up to the date of satisfaction has been paid.

Sections 69 and 70 of the Civil Procedure Code give authority to the Collector for the purpose of enabling him to determine the best mode or modes of satisfying the decree, whether it is to be satisfied by management by the Collector himself of the land attached in execution of decree, or whether it is to be by its sale or letting.

So far as the machinery necessary for the satisfaction of the decree is concerned, the Collector is the sole authority. The discretion is his and no Civil Court can interfere with that discretion. But that discretion does not extend to any jurisdiction in the Collector to determine, whether the decree itself has been satisfied or not. The latter jurisdiction is the Civil Court's. It is that Court alone which is competent to determine the question judicially. BHURCHAND HANSRAJ DOSHI v. VIRA CHAMPA KHACHAR, 14 BOM. L. R. 787; 37 B. 32 142

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

——— ——— ——— s. 70 142

——— ——— ——— s. 73—Order for rateable distribution—Whether open to revision by High Court.

An order under section 73 of the Civil Procedure Code deciding that a person is not entitled to rateable distribution, is not open to revision by the High Court, even though the order is wrong, as the person affected has his remedy by suit. MURUGAPPA CHETTIAR v. NARAYANASAMY PILLAI, (1912) M. W. N. 956 389

——— ——— ——— s. 73, O. XXI, r. 89

—Sale in execution—Application for setting aside sale—Deposit of amount specified in sale proclamation—Amounts due to decree-holders applying for rateable distribution.

Where an application is made to set aside a sale under rule 89, Order XXI, it is necessary to deposit, under clause (b) of the rule, besides 5 per cent. of the purchase-money, only the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as due to the decree-holder in execution of whose decree the sale has been held, and not the amounts due by the judgment-debtor to all other decree-holders who have applied under section 73 for rateable distribution. VEERA RAGHAVAN PATTAR v. VATASSERI PARA MANNADISSIER, 23 M. L. J. 585 920

——— ——— ——— s. 73 (2) 254

——— ——— ——— s. 80—Suit for injunction against public officer—Notice not necessary.

Where the object of the suit is to obtain against a public officer, not the Secretary of State in Council, an injunction to restrain what would otherwise be an irreparable injury, the suit is not subject to the notice required by section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure. NAGINLAL v. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE, 14 BOM. L. R. 1146 876

——— ——— ——— ss. 85, 87—Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief, suit against—Consent of Governor-General in Council—Private International Law—Suit against Foreign State.

A suit will not lie against a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief without the consent of the Governor-General in Council.

G. sued the Travancore State or its Dewan as representing the State, for damages for wrongful dismissal from service:

Held, that no such suit would lie, as the Civil Procedure Code made no provision for suits against a State apart from its Prince or Chief. Such a suit would also contravene the well established rules of Private International Law. GILMORE v. STATE OF TRAVANCORE, 12 M. L. T. 496; 23 M. L. J. 605 444

——— ——— ——— s. 87 444

——— ——— ——— s. 89 902

——— ——— ——— s. 92—Public religious trust—Suit by trustees for recovery of trust property from outsiders—Outsiders heirs of late manager.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

A suit by the trustees of a public religious trust for the recovery of property, which has gone wrongfully into the possession of persons who are strangers to the trust, is not governed by the provisions of section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. The mere fact that these persons in possession are heirs of the late manager of the trust property is immaterial. MALHAR BHAGVANT KULKARNI v. NARSINGH KRISHNA MAJLI, 14 BOM. L. R. 941; 37 B. 95 665

——— ——— ——— s. 92—Public charitable trust—Trustee setting up his private right—Plaint—Nature of suit how determined.

The plaintiff's case was that the defendant was a trustee of a particular Mandir, the Mandir itself being public charitable property, that the defendant, both by setting up adverse title of his own and in other ways, had been guilty of breach of trust, and that, therefore, the defendant should be removed from his possession and the Court's direction should be given as to the administration of the trust. The defendant claimed that the property was his own private property:

Held, that the suit fell within the scope of section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the mere circumstance that the defendant set up in himself a private title adverse to the trust would constitute a breach of trust.

The character of a suit is primarily to be ascertained by a reference to the pleadings, and is not dependent upon the plaintiff's success at the trial. GIRDHARLAL v. NARANLAL, 14 BOM. L. R. 1135 779

——— ——— ——— s. 94 (d), O. XL, r. 1—Receiver—Appointment pendente lite—Discretion of Court—Appointment on application of mortgagee in mortgage suit—Interest left in arrear—Right to nominate—Receiver, to whom belongs—Appointment to be made in interests of both mortgagee and mortgagor.

Though the appointment of a Receiver pendente lite is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Court, it must, in the exercise of that discretion, be guided by the circumstances of each particular case. As a general rule, the appointment of a Receiver will be made as a matter of course on the application of a mortgagee, if the interest payable under the security is in arrear.

As a general rule, the right to propose a person for the appointment of Receiver belongs to the party interested in obtaining the appointment, and effect will be given to his nomination. If the Court appoints a Receiver at the instance of a mortgagee, then the Court exercises its discretion as to who shall be appointed Receiver, and appoints the Receiver, whom, having regard to the interests of both the mortgagee and mortgagor, the Court considers the best person. EASTERN MORTGAGE AND AGENCY CO. LD. v. RAKEA KHATUN, 16 C. W. N. 997 202

——— ——— ——— s. 94 (e) 361

——— ——— ——— s. 102 90, 522

——— ——— ——— s. 104 884

——— ——— ——— s. 104 (1) (a), O. XXXII, r. 7, Sch. II, cls. 8 and 15 (1) (a)—Reference for minor to arbitration—Superseding arbitration—Appeal—Revision.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

Unless an award is superseded under Schedule II, para. 8 of the Civil Procedure Code, section 104 (1) (a) bars an appeal; but if the Court has, in superseding an award, adopted a procedure not authorised by law, and there is no other remedy available, the Chief Court will interfere on revision.

Where matters in dispute are referred to arbitration through the Court, and an arbitrator is deliberately selected, a plea that the reference was bad by reason of the parties being minors and sanction of the Court not having been granted under Order XXXII, rule 7 of the Code, has no force. BUDH SINGH v. RAM NATH, 251 P. W. R. 1912; 125 P. L. R. 1912 388

——— ——— ——— s. 104 (1) (f) 902

——— ——— ——— s. 115—Collector's order reversing Mamlatdar's decision 676

——— ——— ——— s. 115 — Interlocutory order for ends of justice 361

——— ——— ——— s. 115—Passing decree in terms of award before expiry of 10 days from date of submission of award—Material irregularity—Appeal—Revision 431

——— ——— ——— s. 115 — Refusal to draw up preliminary decree 637

——— ——— ——— s. 115 -- Revision not competent when there is an appeal—Position of Vakil 391

——— ——— ——— s. 115—Transfer of occupancy tenancy 522

——— ——— ——— s. 121 884

——— ——— ——— s. 129, O. XLI, r. 10—Security for costs—Bombay High Court Rules, r. 725.

A., a resident of Hyderabad who had no immoveable property in British India, filed a suit against B. on the Original Side of the Bombay High Court. The hearing of the suit occupied eight days and B. made no application for security for costs. On the suit having been dismissed, A. filed an appeal and deposited Rs. 500 as security for costs of the appeal in accordance with the rules of the Bombay High Court. B. applied that A. may be required to give security for costs in the lower Court under Order XLI, rule 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure:

Held, (1) that rule 725 of the rules of the Bombay High Court and not Order XLI, rule 10, was the governing rule with reference to appeals from the Original Side;

(2) that A. having complied with rule 725, and B. having abstained, in the original suit, from applying for security of the costs of the original hearing, there was no reason why the Court should exercise its discretion to order security for the said costs. BEHRAM JUNG v. SULTANALI, 14 BOM. L. R. 1106 739

——— ——— ——— s. 144—Forcible possession taken by decree-holder 121

——— ——— ——— s. 146 — Representative of decree-holder—Transferee of decree-holder's interest during pendency of suit, whether can execute decree.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

M. sued for the recovery of some immoveable property. By a compromise, M. was awarded a portion of the property. Before a decree could be passed in terms of the compromise, M. transferred his interest in the property to A. A. did not apply to bring himself on the record. After the decree was passed, A. applied to execute the decree as representative of M.:

Held, that he was not a representative within the meaning of section 146 of the Code of Civil Procedure and, as his name was not on the record, he could not execute the decree. DOST MUHAMMAD v. ALTAF HUSAIN KHAN 512

——— ——— ——— s. 146, O. XXI, r. 16—Assignment of decree—Limitation—Execution of decree—Petition by transferee decree-holder to enter up satisfaction.

A transferee decree-holder may put in a petition to enter up satisfaction of a whole or a part of a decree without putting in an application for execution. There is no necessity, according to the Code, for the assignee getting any previous order recognising his assignment before doing so.

It is open to a decree-holder to certify satisfaction of a decree at any time.

The date of assignment has nothing to do with the question of limitation applicable to execution of decree.

A transferee decree-holder is not precluded from receiving payment from the judgment-debtor of the amount due under the decree by the mere fact that he had not paid some portion of the consideration to his transferor. DHARANI MUDALI v. MEENAMBA BAI, 12 M. L. T. 592 617

——— ——— ——— s. 148—Extension of time fixed by decree—Pre-emption decree—Appeal.

Payment of money into Court within a fixed time in pursuance of a decree is not an act prescribed or allowed by the Civil Procedure Code within the meaning of section 148.

A Court has no power to extend the time fixed by a pre-emption decree for payment of price.

An order extending time fixed for payment of money by a decree is appealable. SURANJAN SINGH v. RAM BAHAL LAL, 10 A. L. J. 520 912

——— ——— ——— s. 151, O. XL, rr. 1 to 4, O. XLIII, r. 1 (s)—Receiver—Power to discharge and remove—Rules—Prayer to be put in possession of properties—Discharge or removal of Receiver—Appeal—Inherent power of Court—Execution by Appellate Court—Practice.

There is no specific provision made in the Civil Procedure Code for the discharge or removal of a Receiver, nor is there any provision for appeals against orders of discharge or removal of Receivers.

The power to discharge and remove or to give directions to a Receiver must be taken to be inherent in the Court which appointed the Receiver and the Appellate Court has got all the powers of the original Court.

A prayer for execution cannot be made to the Appellate Court direct.

The prayer in a petition to discharge the Receiver and put the parties in possession was treated as a prayer for appointment of the petitioners as Receivers of the properties they claimed possession of and was granted. SUBRAMANIA IYER v. MUTHULAKSHMIAMMAL, (1912) M. W. N. 1208 583

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

——— ——— ——— s. 152—Amendment of decree—Costs assessed on wrong principle—Proper remedy—Review—Appeal—Revision.

A decree can only be amended if one of the reasons specified in the Civil Procedure Code as justifying amendment is established.

The revisional powers of the High Court cannot be exercised ultra vires and without authority.

An application was made to have an arbitration award, made out of Court filed, but it was dismissed with costs on 18th June 1904. A decree was drawn up in which Pleader's fee was assessed ad valorem on the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction. On the 12th August 1911, an application was made to amend the decree by substituting a smaller sum as Pleader's fee:

Held, (1) that there was no reason for amendment as the decree was not at variance with the judgment and there was no clerical or arithmetical error nor any error arising from any accidental slip or omission,

(2) that the applicant's proper remedy was by review or by appeal on the ground that a matter of principle was involved and that costs had been assessed on an erroneous principle;

(3) that the applicant could not ask for amendment several years after his proper remedy had been barred by limitation. SHAHAB DIN v. SIRAJ-UD-DIN, 25 P. W. R. 1913 418

——— ——— ——— s. 153, O. VII, r. 11, O. VI, r. 17—Want of verification and signature—Late verification and signature—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 22—New party—Party not signing or verifying pleading.

If one of the plaintiffs is wrongly described in the plaint as a minor and has not himself signed and verified the plaint, he is not on that account to be considered not a party.

Want of signature and verification does not entail the rejection of the plaint as such verification and signature can be supplied at any stage of the proceedings.

The plaintiff who has not signed or verified cannot be considered to be a new party, when he signs or verifies the plaint, so as to attract the application of section 22 of the Limitation Act. ARUNACHELLAM CHETTY v. PRABHAYYA CHETTY, (1912) M. W. N. 1207 580

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 238 969

——— ——— ——— ——— O. 1, r. 3, O. 22, r. 10—Addition of parties.

By a compromise, effected between A. and B., A. was to remain in possession of ⅛th of certain property as her legal share and of the balance in lieu of dower. A. gifted the property to C. who mortgaged it to D.

After the death of A., B. sued C. for possession of ⅞th of the property. After the institution of the suit, C. sold the property to D. D. applied to be made a party to the suit of B. as a defendant:

Held, that as no relief was sought against the applicant and the case against him was not the same as against other defendants already on the record, he could not be made a party to the suit. CHIMMAN LAL v. SIKANDAR KHAN, 10 A. L. J. 387 641

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

——— ——— ——— O. 2, r. 2—Parties different 434

——— ——— ——— O. 2, r. 2—Suit for profits by co-sharers—Pendency of partition proceedings 833

——— ——— ——— O. 2, r. 2—First suit by mortgagee to recover arrears of interest—Subsequent suit to recover both principal and interest or possession against vendee of equity of redemption—Intermediate declaratory decree.

Where a mortgagee, who has, under the terms of the mortgage-deed, a clear option on the happening of a default in regular payment of interest by the mortgagor, of either taking possession at once or of realizing interest or of accumulating interest with principal until possession is taken, sues and obtains a decree only for arrears of interest, his subsequent suit against the vendee of the equity of redemption to recover both principal and interest due or possession of the mortgaged property is barred under rule 2, Order II of Act V of 1908.

Even the fact that the mortgagee had obtained an intermediate declaratory decree against the vendee, declaring his lien against the mortgaged property both for principal and interest, is of no effect and cannot revive his rights which had once been extinguished on the first occasion under the force of the said rule by reason of his suing only for arrear of interest. BRIJ LAL v. RAM RATTAN 581

——— ——— ——— O. 6, r. 17, O. 7, r. 11 580

——— ——— ——— ——— O. 9, r. 5, O. 17, r. 3—Summons returned unserved—Time given to appellant to take further steps—No steps taken within time—Power of Court to proceed to decide appeal.

A second appeal was filed in the High Court. Summonses to the respondents were returned unserved. Time was granted to the appellants to take further steps in the matter. No steps were taken within time. The Court ordered the appeal to be put up in ordinary course for hearing:

Held, (1) that under Order XVII, rule 3, the Court could proceed to decide the appeal, and that Order IX, rule 5, did not apply to the case;

(2) that Order IX, rule 5, did not give appellants the right to apply for a fresh summons at any time within a period of one year from the date of the return made to the Court by the serving officer. JAISARI SINGH v. JAISARI SINGH 294

——— ——— ——— ——— O. 9, r. 8—Plaintiff not giving evidence—Suit to be dismissed—Defendant not entitled to prove his case.

When the plaintiff offers no evidence, the Court has no jurisdiction except to dismiss the suit for want of prosecution. In such a case, the defendant is not entitled to prove his case.

But when the plaintiff has given evidence, in that case, notwithstanding that the Court has formed an opinion in favour of the defendant, the defendant can say that he is entitled to give evidence in proof of the case he has made in his own written statement, so that in the case of an appeal, there may be no remand, but the whole case may be disposed of. KESRI CHAND v. NATIONAL JUTE MILLS, CO. LD. 16 C. W. N. 268; 40 C. 119 87

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

——— ——— ——— O. 9, r. 12—Next friend's disobedience—Party to suit—Order for personal appearance—Power of Court.

It is not correct to say that the Court has no power to order a party to appear in person except when empowered by specific sections found in the Civil Procedure Code. The Court has such power whenever it considers that the interests of justice require any party to appear in person at any stage of the case.

The Court, however, has no power, under Order IX, rule 12, to dismiss a minor's suit for default because of the disobedience of his next friend. The next friend is not a party to the suit, and can be treated as such only for purposes of answering interrogatories or for saddling him with costs. RAJAGOPALA PANDARITHAR v. MUTHU KUMARA CHETTIAR, 23 M. L. J. 676: 13 M. L. T. 19 762

——— ——— ——— O. 17, rr. 2, 3—Plaintiff's suit dismissed by Assistant Collector as not proved—Appeal.

An Assistant Collector dismissed a suit for profits recording the following order:

"As the plaintiff has failed to prove his claim and has failed to prosecute the case, it is ordered that the plaintiff's claim be dismissed for default."

Held, that the Assistant Collector did not take action under rule 2, Order XVII, but that he acted under rule 3 of that Order and, therefore, an appeal lay against that order. CHUTTAN LAL v. KANHAYA LAL, 10 A. L. J. 478 836

——— ——— ——— O. 17, r. 3 294, 836

——— ——— ——— O. 18, r. 15 and O. 20, r. 1—Evidence and Vakil's arguments heard by one officer—Judgment by successor without hearing arguments—Judgment pronounced without notice—Validity.

Where a Munsif recorded the evidence in a case and heard arguments of Counsel, but judgment was written and pronounced by his successor without hearing Counsel, or giving them notice of the date on which the judgment would be announced; held, that under Order XVIII, rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, it was not necessary to hear Counsel again: but that the omission to notify the date on which judgment was to be pronounced, as required by Order XX, rule 1 of the ode, was a serious irregularity, if not an illegality, necessitating the setting aside of the judgment, and directing the Munsif to proceed afresh with the case according to law. KANUMOORY NILADRI RAZU v. KASA SUBBIAH, 12 M. L. T. 332; (1912) M. W. N. 999 278

——— ——— ——— O. 20, r. 1 278

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 2 752

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 16 323, 617

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 53 323

——— ——— ——— O. 21, rr. 58, 61 12

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 66 88

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 73 539

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 89 920

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

——— ——— ——— O. 21, r. 93 437

——— ——— ——— O. 22, r. 1 621

——— ——— ——— O. 22, r. 1—"Legal representative"—Heir—Survival of right to sue—Substitution of sons for father—Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Suit for protecting reversionary estate from waste and rendition of accounts.

In every case, under Order XXII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, the first point to be decided is whether the right to sue survives, and that must be decided with reference to the nature of the suit.

The continuance of a suit depends, not on the qualifications of the representative of the deceased plaintiff but on the nature of the suit. The survival of a right to sue does not depend on the presence, or even the existence, of an heir. The words "legal representative" in Order XXII, have a very wide signification, and are not synonymous with the term "heir" or with the limited class governed by section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code for the purpose of the law of res judicata.

A suit to declare an alienation invalid beyond the life-time of a widow, is a representative suit for the benefit of the eventual reversioner.

Under the terms of an award, a trust estate was managed by a Hindu widow. She was prevented thereby from alienating it. It was declared that on her death, the estate should devolve on the reversionary heirs, who were also given an authority to obtain rendition of accounts. The presumptive representative, asserting malversation and mismanagement of the trust estate in the hands of the widow, sued for the removal of the widow from the office of trustee and the substitution of the plaintiff for her, and further prayed for rendition of accounts and delivery of the balance of income to the newly appointed trustee. Plaintiff died during the pendency of the suit and his sons applied to be substituted in his place as his legal representatives:—

Held, (1) that the right to sue survived, as the right was appurtenant to the reversionary estate;

(2) that the sons of the plaintiff, as being the immediate reversioners charged with the duty of protecting the reversion, were proper legal representatives of the plaintiff for the purposes of Order XXII, rule 1;

(3) that the plaintiff was primarily acting for the benefit of the reversionary estate. RAM DIN v. RAJ RANI, 8 N. L. R. 113 101

——— ——— ——— O. 22, r. 4 621

——— ——— ——— O. 22, r. 10 641

——— ——— ——— O. 23, not applicable to execution proceedings, O. XXI, r. 2—Powers of executing Court on application of judgment-creditor to enquire into terms of compromise.

Order XXIII, Civil Procedure Code, does not apply to execution proceedings.

Order XXI, rule 2 only authorises the recognition by the executing Court of payment or adjustment. An inquiry into the terms of an alleged compromise cannot be made on the application of the judgment-creditor under Order XXI, rule 2 and there is no jurisdiction in the Judge to deal with such matter on such application.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

Neither the fact that in the first instance the creditor asked for an order of inquiry into the terms of the compromise nor the fact that the Judge adjourned the summons for evidence as to the alleged compromise, can give the Judge jurisdiction.

The counter affidavit of the judgment-debtor cannot be recognised as an application under Order XXI, rule 2. LODD GOVINDOSS v. RAMDOSS, (1912) M. W. N. 1245; 24 M. L. J. 88 752

——————— O. 23, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit—Leave to bring fresh suit—Facts set out with no clear conception of nature of rights.

Where, from the plaint and the proceedings in the lower Court, it is apparent that the plaintiff has no clear conception of his rights, the High Court will grant permission to withdraw the suit with leave to bring a fresh suit under Order XXIII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code. CHIDAMBARA MUDALI v. KOZHANDAVELU MUDALI, (1912) M. W. N. 1003 395

——————— O. 23, r. 1 —Application for leave to withdraw suit with liberty to bring fresh suit—Defective judgment—High Court's power to set aside order—Revision—Practice.

A Court allowed a person to withdraw his suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit; there was nothing in the judgment to show that the Court was satisfied that the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect or that there was any other sufficient cause for permitting the suit to be withdrawn:

Held, that the High Court could interfere in revision and set aside the order allowing the suit to be withdrawn. RADHA RAWAN v. TULA RAM, 10 A. L. J. 393 647

——————— O. 32, r. 7 388

——————— O. 34, r. 1 432

——————— O. 34, r. 6—Mortgage suit—Successful party—Pesonal decree for costs.

Under Order XXXIV, rule 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the successful party in a mortgage suit which is contested is entitled to have a personal decree for costs against the persons who contested the suit, when the mortgage property has been sold and found insufficient. KOMANDAR KAMALAMMAL v. KOMANDUR NARASIMHACHARLU, 12 M. L. T. 312; (1913) M. W. N. 139 244

——————— O. 39, r. 1, O. 41, rr. 5 & 6—Stay of execution, reasons for—Annoyance to feelings, whether a ground for stay—Injunction, when to be granted.

In an application for a stay of execution, the Court has to be satisfied that the appellant is likely to sustain substantial injury by execution being allowed to take place before the disposal of the appeal. It is not usual for the Court to grant stay of execution if the appeal itself does not raise fairly arguable questions. Where no pecuniary or tangible loss is shown, it would not be right to grant stay of execution merely on the ground of annoyance to feelings.

In an application for a temporary injunction, the Court will have to be satisfied that the applicant has a prima facie case and further that the protection of his interest requires that an injunction should issue temporarily.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

Quære.—Whether when a party goes to Court claiming an injunction against his opponent to restrain him from doing something wrongful, the opponent should have the right, as a matter of interlocutory relief, to restrain him from doing the very act which he claims to be entitled to do and which he asks the Court to be allowed to be done without obstruction from his opponent? VATHIAR RAMANUJA AIYANGAR v. AIYANACHARIAR, 23 M. L. J. 316 219

——————— O. 39, r. 1 361

——————— O. 40, r. 1 202

——————— O. 40, r. 1—Appointment of Receiver—Properties not comprised in suit.

Rule 1, Order XL, of the Civil Proceduse Code, 1908, does not empower the Court to appoint a Receiver of properties which cannot be dealt with by the Court in the suit. MARULASIDDA RAJI v. SIDDALINGA RAJA 16

——————— O. 40, r. 1—Receiver, functions of—Suit by Receiver to recover value of property sold prior to his appointment.

The functions of a Receiver appointed under Order XL, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 (section 503 of the Code of 1882) are to take possession from the parties to the suit of any moveable and immoveable property in respect of which he has been appointed Receiver, to manage it, to realise its income, and to continue in custody of it until removed by the Court.

He cannot recover from a stranger to the suit property which the latter had acquired anterior to his appointment as Receiver; nor does his appointment affect any rights previously acquired by third persons, nor has he the right to recover property sold away by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the sale is voidable under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, or that the sale was not binding on the creditors of the judgment-debtor. MAHAMED KASIM PANCHAPAKESA CHETTI, 35 M. 578 233

——————— O. 40, rr. 1 to 4—(1) Power to discharge and remove Receiver 583

——————— O. 40, r. 1 (1) (d)—Mortgage-deed providing for appointment of Receiver—Receiver unable to pay interest—Receiver ordered to pay money to mortgagor to appeal against mortgaged decree 849

——————— O. 40, r. 1 (d)—Receiver's power to sue 751

——————— O. 41, r. (1) 119

——————— O. 41, r. 2 638

——————— O. 41, rr. 5, 6, 12—Court to which application for stay of sale should be made.

In view of the alteration of the language in Order XLI, rule 6 (2), which re-produces the old section 546, it is clear that the Legislature intended that the application for stay of an order for sale of immoveable property should be made only to the Court which made the order. KANNIAPPAN CHETTI v. MANIKAVASAGAM CHETTI, 23 M. L. J. 677 763

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

——— ——— ——— O. 41, rr. 5, 6 219
——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 6 763
——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 10 739
——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 12 763
——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 19—Appeal dismissed in absence of both parties—Restoration—Notice to other side, whether necessary.

If an appeal is dismissed on account of both the appellant and respondent being absent on the day of hearing, no notice to the respondent is necessary before passing an order of restoration of appeal. BIRJ LAL v. BUA RAM, 10 A. L. J. 399 292

——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 23—Decision on preliminary issue—Burden of proof wrongly placed—Ground for remand.

It is not a good ground for passing an order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23, to say that the preliminary issue has been decided by the Court of first instance on a wrong view of the burden of proof, unless the Appellate Court also finds that that decision was wrong. HABIBULLAH KHAN v. LALTA PRASAD, 10 A. L. J. 190; 34 A. 612 94

——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 23—Order of remand—Power of the Court of Appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 564, effect of removal—Construction of statutes.

Plaintiffs sued for accounts and redemption of certain mortgaged property; the trial Court after taking accounts decreed possession to the plaintiffs. In appeal, however, the Appellate Court differed from the trial Court's findings as to certain items of the account and as to whether one particular parcel of the land mortgaged had been proved to have been in the mortgagee's possession. Thereupon, the original decree was reversed and the case remanded for taking fresh accounts:

Held, that the order of remand could not be lawfully made.

Order XLI, rule 23, read together with other rules in the same order, clearly shows that the intention of the Legislature is to avoid remands wherever they can be avoided, and to ensure that in all cases where the Court of Appeal is in possession of sufficient materials to form a judgment, that Court shall record its own judgment on the materials before it and shall not waste time and put the parties to further costs by remanding to a Subordinate Court.

The removal of section 564 of the old Civil Procedure Code had no other object but to withdraw those restrictive provisions of that section which in practice had been found so embarrassing, such restrictions occurring for instance in cases where the Appellate Court has allowed an amendment of the pleading or has added a party to the record. NAROTTAM RAJARAM v. MOHANLAL, 14 BOM. L. R. 1154 891

——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 31—Judgment—Appellate Court, duty of—Conflicting evidence—Grounds of appeal.

The memorandum of appeal in the lower Appellate Court contained seven grounds out of which the Court referred to one only in the judgment and as regards that also, all that the Judge said was that he saw no sufficient reason for differing from the first Court's decision; there was conflicting evidence o be discussed;

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—contd.

Held, that the appeal had not been disposed of according to law and that the judgment and decree should be set aside and the lower Court directed to re-hear the appeal and decide it according to law upon such of the seven grounds contained in the memorandum of appeal as might not be specifically abandoned at the hearing.

Where evidence conflicts, it is the duty of the Appellate Court to weigh and discuss it and come to its own conclusion on it and give its own reasons for that conclusion. MAUNG PU v. MA GYAUK THAY, 5 BUR. L. T. 269 898

——— ——— ——— O. 41, r. 33 638
——— ——— ——— O. 43, r. 1 884
——— ——— ——— O. 43, r. 1 (s) 583, 849
——— ——— ——— O. 43, r. 1 (r) 361
——— ——— ——— O. 45—Appeal to Privy Council. See PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL.
——— ——— ——— O. 47, r. 7—Order granting review—Appeal—Dismissal in default—Restoration on review.

A suit was dismissed for default. An application for restoration was also dismissed. The plaintiff then applied for review of judgment. The Court of first instance allowed the application for review and restored the suit to its original number. On appeal, the District Judge reversed the order of the first Court granting the application for review, on the ground that no review could be granted when an application for restoration had been dismissed:

Held, that this was not a ground upon which an appeal could be allowed under the provisions of Order XLVII, rule 7. HAR NARAIN v. UMRAI, 10 A. L. J. 396 661

——— ——— ——— Sch. II, cl. 8 320, 388
——— ——— Sch. II, cl. 10—Award—Notice of filing to parties essential.

The provisions of rule 10, Schedule II of Act V of 1908 are mandatory and the Court must give notice of the filing of the award to the parties. MUHAMMAD HUSAIN v. LALTU, 15 O. C. 294 430

——— ——— Sch. II, cl. 15 (1) (a) 388
——— ——— Sch. II, cl. 15 (a)—Arbitration—Award—Misconduct—Award when to be set aside—Reference to arbitration on the basis of exclusion of certain evidence—Umpire admitting this evidence.

An arbitrator or an umpire is the chosen Judge of the parties; his decision is final and the Court has no power to touch that decision or interfere with it merely on the ground that it is not correct or that it is the result of bias.

It is because the award of an arbitrator or an umpire is final and the party against whom it is made is debarred from appealing to any Court of law, however unjust the award may be, that Courts have been most anxious to see that nothing unfair or irregular is done by the arbitrator or umpire while discharging his duties as such. The Courts have always been most alert to interfere and set aside any award in which it appears that the arbitrator or umpire has not acted with scrupulous fairness towards both parties.

Civil Procedure Code—(1908)—concld.

In cases of reference to arbitration through the Court, the Courts have always exercised a most vigilant supervision over the conduct of the arbitrator to whom at the request of the parties it delegates the duty of deciding disputes between the parties and any irregularity or action, which is not consonant with the general principles of equity and good conscience which ought to govern the conduct of an arbitrator, is resented by immediately brushing aside the award of the arbitrator against whose decision there is no appeal.

A reference to arbitration was made through the Court on the basis and footing that an alleged adjustment was not to be taken into consideration by the arbitrators or the umpire, who were explicitly and imperatively directed by the Court not to take the said adjustment into consideration. In spite of this direction, the umpire admitted, at the request of one of the parties and in face of a protest from the other, the adjustment in evidence and used it as evidence against the latter in deciding an important question of onus of proof:

Held, that the admission of the adjustment, being an obvious breach of the direction of the Court contained in the reference order and a grave error of judgment which prejudiced the case, was a clear case of "misconduct in law" on the part of the umpire. HAJI AHMED v. ESSANJI TAJBHOY, 14 BOM. L. R. 1007 696

——————— Sch. II, cl. 16—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 158—Passing decree in terms of award before expiry of 10 days from date of submission of award—Material irregularity—Appeal—Revision—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115.

A decree passed in terms of an award immediately the award is submitted, without waiting for the expiry of the ten days within which an application, under Schedule II, paragraph 16 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside the award may be made, is invalid.

It is doubtful whether there is an appeal in such a case, but as the decree has been passed notwithstanding the express provision of Schedule II, paragraph 16 of the Code, the Court acts without jurisdiction or with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction, so as to call for interference by the High Court under section 115 of the Code.

Even if an appeal is preferred against such a decree, the High Court can treat it as a revision petition. SURAPPARAJU v. NARAYANARAJU, (1912) M. W. N. 1232 431

——————— Sch. III, s. 7 (1) (b) 142

——————— Sch. III, s. 11 887

Civil and criminal trespass 415

Claim—Collusive sale by judgment-debtor to claimant to defraud creditors—Possession of claimant to be deemed as in trust for judgment-debtor—Trust need not be shown to be capable of enforcement—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 58, 61.

S., a judgment-debtor, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, conveyed certain property to P., who again collusively conveyed it to the claimant who took possession. This property being attached by the creditor of S., the claimant put forward a claim:

Claim—concld.

Held, (1) that the claimant was in possession for the benefit of the judgment-debtor as his trustee and that the claim should be rejected under rule 61, O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code;

(2) that it was not necessary in order to defeat the claim to show that the trust was one capable of enforcement by law. MCINTOSH v. BIDHU BHUSAN SEN, 16 C. W. N. 959 12

Collector is a subordinate Court 676

Commission—Sale of immoveable property—Agreement for payment of commission to person negotiating sale—Completion of contract, payment of commission on—Payment after realization of purchase-money — Document, construction of — Absence of alternative claim for decree—Quantum meruit, effect of 106

Commitment. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 403 (4) 54

——— ——— ——— once made can only be quashed on point of law 813

Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 58—Company—Articles of Association providing for registration of transferee if proper person—Refusal of Agent of Company to register transferee—Transferee's right to go to Court · Jurisdiction of Court.

One of the Articles of Association of a Company provided that if the transferee of a share was a proper person, the share would be transferred to his name. A transferee applied for registration of his name but the Agent of the Company refused peremptorily, without giving any reason, to allow the transferee's name to appear on the register, and the Company merely adopted the action of the Agent. The transferee thereupon applied to the Court for rectification of the Company's register by the substitution of his name in place of his transferor:

Held, that the Court had jurisdiction, even without reference to the Directors or the Company, to determine whether the transferee had a right under the Article to get his name registered or not, and, for that purpose, to determine whether he was a proper person. RAJNAGAR SPINNING, WEAVING AND MANUFACTURING, CO. LD. v. MANILAL MAGANLAL, 14 BOM. L. R. 919 640

——————— ss. 140, 169—Appointment of official liquidator—Wishes of creditors—Discretion—Appeal—Powers of Appellate Court.

The appointment of any person as an official liquidator is so entirely a matter for the discretion of the Judge dealing with the winding-up that an Appellate Court will not review his decision except under very special circumstances or unless it can be shown that the Judge had acted on a wrong principle.

Section 140 of the Indian Companies Act does not make it obligatory on the Court to comply with the wishes of the majority of creditors. NOBLE v. BANK OF BURMA, LD., 5 BUR. L. T. 193 853

——————— s. 169 853

Company. See COMPANIES ACT.

——————— Dealing with stranger—Internal management of Company, whether stranger bound to look into—Stranger whether can assume validity of acts—Loan to Company—Credited by Company—Document Company—concld.

incomplete—Creation of charge—Lease—Landlord's arrears—Possession by liquidator—Landlord's acquiescence—Landlord, whether secured creditor.

A stranger dealing with a Joint Stock Company is not bound to look into the indoor management of the Company; and he may assume that all the acts done by the Company or on its behalf are regular and proper.

A stranger lent money to a Company, which was credited by the Company or its managing agents in the loan account. A document was given to the lender, to which the seal of the Company was affixed, but it was only attested by the signature of the managing agents. It did not appear that the money had been borrowed with the approval of the Directors, and the document was not signed by any of the Directors, as required by the Company's articles of association:

Held, that the lender was entitled to assume that the managing agents had obtained the approval of the Directors to the borrowing of the sum; and that even if the signature of the managing agents was not sufficient, the lender who had advanced money to the Company upon the terms that security should be given to him, was nevertheless entitled under the rules of equity to have a charge on the property of the Company, although if the security was not complete.

The rule that the landlord of a Company is entitled to be paid in full for rent and royalties accruing due subsequent to liquidation should the liquidators remain in possession, cannot be applied to the case where the landlord acquiesces in the liquidator's possession. And the landlord is not entitled to claim as a secured creditor in respect of any rent and royalties which are due before or after the liquidation. CHARNOCK COLLIERIES CO. LD. v. BHOLANATH DHAR, 39 C. 810 976

Compensation. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 250.

——————— for improvements. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

——————Minor seeking equitable relief —Compensation for benefit received 371

——————Security without consideration 842

——————— to work for period of work 894

Complaint, definition of—Letter to District Judge 573

————, meaning of 570

Compromise by Pleader on behalf of client 391

——————— of subject-matter of appeal—Adjustment of 'all matters in dispute'—Oral evidence of independent agreement—Written compromise silent as to certain provisions 43

Conjugal rights. See RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS.

Consideration—Alienation by widow of whole property to next reversioner—Agreement by reversioner to re-convey portion of property 487

——————Contract of management—No personal liability—Consideration for contract cannot be consideration for later pro-note.

Consideration—concld.

One S. and the defendant obtained a manganese concession in Mysore and agreed to admit E. to a share of the profits arising therefrom. In consideration thereof, E. caused the plaintiff Company to undertake the management and development of the rights comprised in the said business and to finance the concern. The sums so advanced were to bear interest at 2 per cent. above the current Bank of Madras rate and were to be paid or deducted from the sale-proceeds of the ore as disposed of or shipped. The plaintiff Company were also entitled by way of remuneration to a commission. The Company found after some time that the mines were not working profitably and refused to make any further advance. E., who was really the plaintiff Company, represented to the defendant that he was bound to pay to the plaintiff Company a share of the monies alleged to be due to the Company and the defendant executed the suit promissory-note:

Held, (1) that there was no consideration for the promissory-note because under the agreement there was no personal liability on the part of the members to pay to the plaintiff Company the monies advanced by it;

(2) that the plaintiff Company did not make any advance on account of any request made by the defendant but only made an advance in consideration of the previous agreement and that the advance could not be treated as consideration for the promissory-note also. ANGLO-INDIAN TRADING CO., LD. v. GERALD FRANK BRIERLY, (1912) M. W. N. 930 256

——————Forbearance to prosecute appeal 466

——————Proof—Registration not conclusive without further proof—Oral evidence to explain registered deed—Securities without consideration—Other compensation.

Mere execution and registration of a bond, without proof what money had passed, without documentary evidence to show what sums were advanced, without production of account books, and without any witnesses to prove that money had been advanced, is not conclusive on the point that consideration passed between the parties.

On the other hand, oral evidence to explain the purpose of a registered deed purporting to be a bond, is admissible.

Securities in respect of which there was no consideration ought not to be made securities for other unconnected expenses defrayed for the obligor by the obligee. LALLU SAHI v. RAJBANS BHARTHI, 13 M. L. T. 191; (1913) M. W. N. 155; 24 M. L. J. 355; 17 C. L. J. 284 842 P. C.

Construction of bond 9

——————— of contract 37

——————— of deed—Deed to be construed in favour of grantee 494

——————Mortgage-deed 671

——————Adoption—Power to widow to adopt son—Reversioner acceding assent for consideration.

The deeds and contracts of the people of India should be liberally construed. The form of expression, the literal sense, is not to be so much regarded as the real meaning of the parties which the transaction discloses.

Construction—contd.

In construing such deeds and contracts, regard must be had to all the attendant circumstances of the transaction.

A. died leaving a widow B. and a mother C. After A.'s death, B. and C. executed a deed of adoption, by which they adopted one D., as the son of A., reciting in the deed that the adoption was in compliance with the expressed wishes of A. E., one of the reversionary heirs of A., sued for a declaration that the deed of adoption was invalid against his reversionary interests and obtained a decree to that effect. Subsequently, E. executed an agreement by which he gave B. and C. authority to adopt any one they liked (mutbanna apna muqarrir kar leven) and, as a consideration for this concession, E. received immediate possession of a large portion of A.'s estate. Accordingly, B. and C. again adopted D., saying "mutbanna apna qarar de kar iqrar karte hain ke D. mazkur hamara mutabanna hai."

After the death of E., B. and C., E.'s grandson, F., sued for possession of his share in the estate of A.:

Held, (1) that the intention of the parties must not be gathered from the strict terms used in the agreement and the deed of adoption but that the circumstances of the case must also be considered;

(2) that the intention of the parties was that the widows should appoint an heir to the last male-holder of the estate, A;

(3) that the adoption was binding on E. and his heirs. NIDHAN SINGH v. SHAM SINGH, 24 P. L. R. 1913 524

——— ——— ——— Transfer—Sale—Contract of sale—Registered deed—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Registration Act (III of 1877), ss. 17 (b) (c), 44.

Whether a registered deed has the effect of creating a sale must depend on the circumstances of the case.

Words of conveyance are not absolutely necessary to create a transfer. All depends on the intention and acts of the parties.

Two persons entered into a transaction which they embodied in a deed of sale. The deed was described as a contract of sale but it was registered and it distinctly provided that on certain events happening, the property should be regarded as sold to the vendee. The vendee was put in possession of the property in consequence of the registered deed:

Held, that there was a transfer in consequence and by operation of the registered deed when the conditions of the deed were fulfilled. KONDU KANAUJI DHAVDE v. VISHNU MAHESHWAR BHAT, 14 BOM. L. R. 801; 37 B. 53 176

——— ——— ——— of document—Evidence of surrounding circumstances 497

——— ——— ——— of grant 37

——— ——— ——— Grant of malevaram right 481

——— ——— ——— Grant to be construed in favour of grantee 180

——— ——— ——— of judicial order 61

Construction—concld.

——— ——— ——— of kabuliyat 177

——— ——— ——— of lease 180

——— ——— ——— of mortgage-deed—Mortgage in which possession is postponed to be delivered on a date subsequent to the mortgage, interpretation of 329

——— ——— of statutes—Power of Court to make order of remand in appeal 891

——— ——— ———. See INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES.

——— ——— of statutory rule 37

——— ——— of wajib-ul-arz. See PREEMPTION 594

——— ——— of will. See WILL.

——— ——— ——— Grant of shebait-ship 696

Contract of management—No personal liability—Consideration for contract cannot be consideration for later pro-note 256

——— ——— Sale of immoveable property—Agreement for payment of commission to person negotiating sale—Completion of contract, payment of commission on—Payment after realization of purchase-money—Document, construction of—Absence of alternative claim for decree—Quantum meruit, effect of.

A contract between plaintiff and defendant, providing for payment to the former of a certain commission on his affecting a sale of the latter's property, was in the following terms:—"We are by this bound to pay you a commission of Rs. . . . as remuneration for the trouble you take, out of the amount that may be realized by means of sale of . . . . our Rettiambadi Mitta for 4½ lakhs within the limited time of two months mentioned in the power-of-attorney executed by us in your favour this day . . . . The aforesaid commission amount shall be paid out of the amount which you may obtain and give for us."

Held, (1) that under the said agreement, the commission was payable to plaintiff not when he concluded the contract of sale of the property, but when the defendant actually obtained the purchase-money or, at any rate, not before he had removed all the obstacles to the defendant receiving the amount;

(2) that it was not competent to the Court to decree any sum for plaintiff quantum meruit as there was no alternative claim in that behalf. IMMUDIPATTAM VIJAYA GANDIPA v. ANNASAWMY AIYAR 106

——— ——— of sale. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

——— ——— to sell—Suit for specific performance—When limitation commences to run—Delay in suit, when fatal to suit 399

——— ——— ——— Liability of vendee to pay interest on consideration money.

An agreement of sale provided for the payment of the consideration on a particular date and for the execution of the conveyance on the date of such payment. By a collateral agreement it was stipulated that if payment was not made on the day specified, interest was to be paid at one per cent. per mensem from the due date. The vendor, however, was not able to give a good title to the property until long after the appointed day as he had to institute a suit for clearing his title:

Contract—concld.

Held, that the vendee's obligation to pay interest and the vendor's obligation to execute a valid sale-deed were mutually dependent and that interest was payable only from the date on which the vendor could give a clear title. ADUSUMILLI SINGARAYADU v. SAYANI NARAYANASAMI, (1912) M. W. N. 915 273

——— of service for definite term--Discontinuance of service by the servant during term --Right to claim compensation for period of work 894

——— to transfer negotiable instrument 721

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 2 (d)—Consideration—Forbearance to prosecute appeal.

A forbearance to continue an appeal against a person on that person's brother agreeing to pay the amount claimed in appeal is a good consideration. ZAKIR ALI v. GULAB RAI, 15 O. C. 314 466

——— ——— s. 11—Contract by minor is void 979

——— ——— s. 16 309

——— ——— s. 23 — Void contract — Public policy—Husband and wife—Agreement for future separation—Muhammadan parties—English Law.

The rule of English Law that an agreement which provides for, and, therefore, encourages future separation between the spouses, is void as being against public policy, applies to Muhammadans. The fact that Muhammadan Law allows polygamy does not make the rule inapplicable. It is as much the policy of the Muhammadan Law as of the English Law, that people who are married should live together and not apart.

Consequently, an agreement made between a Muhammadan husband and his wife, providing for a certain maintenance to be given to the wife in the event of a future separation between them, is void as being opposed to public policy under section 23 of the Contract Act. BAI FATMA v. ALI MAHOMED, 14 BOM. L. R. 1178 946

——— ——— s. 25—Acknowledgment of time-barred debt without promise to pay 722

——— ——— s. 39 37, 894

——— ——— ss. 64, 65 894

——— ——— s. 65 987

——— ——— s. 69—Assessment paid by mortgagee 253

——— ——— s. 69—Mortgagee of other co-sharer paying revenue 45

——— ——— s. 69—Vendor paid by pre-emptor—Vendor again suing vendee for unpaid purchase-money 288

——— ——— s. 69—Decree for rent—Decree against recorded tenant—Sale of tenure of share of recorded tenant—Decretal amount paid by recorded tenant's co-sharer—Co-sharer's right to be reimbursed by recorded tenant—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 41—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 102—Appeal, Second —Small Cause suit.

Contract Act—concld.

Plaintiff was the owner of three-sevenths and defendant No. 1 of two-sevenths of a patni tenure; but the name of the defendant No. 1 alone was recorded in the landlord's books as the holder of the tenure. In 1307, the defendant No. 1 sold his share to a stranger and the share passed to the vendee with effect from the beginning of 1308. Subsequently, the landlord brought a suit for recovery of arrears of rent in respect of 1307 and 1308 against the defendant No. 1, the recorded tenant, and obtained a decree. In execution of the decree, the tenure was sold by auction, but the sale was set aside upon the plaintiff depositing the necessary amount which was less than Rs. 500. The plaintiff brought the present suit against defendant No. 1 for recovery of two-sevenths share of the sum so deposited. Plaintiff did not implead the vendee of defendant No. 1 as a defendant nor did he ask for any relief against him.

Held, (1) that although at the date of the institution of the suit, the defendant No. 1 had no interest in the tenure, yet the suit did not fall outside the scope of Article 41 of Schedule II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act;

(2) that as the suit was not a Small Cause suit a second appeal was competent;

(3) that when a decree was made against defendant No. 1, the recorded tenant, he became "bound by law to pay" the decreed amount to the landlord in the terms of section 69 of the Contract Act;

(4) that the plaintiff was a person interested in the payment of this debt, and he was entitled to be "reimbursed" by the defendant No. 1, although the assignee of the latter was benefited by the payment. BATUK NATH MANDAL v. BIPIN BIHARI CHAUDHURY, 16 C. W. N. 973; 17 C. L. J. 179 90

——— ——— s. 70 288

——— ——— s. 70--Assessment paid by mortgagee 253

——— ——— ss. 73, 74 — Compensation to servant for period of work 894

——— ——— s. 134—Surety, discharge of—Principal debtor sued but not proceeded with owing to want of address.

The inability of a creditor to proceed with his suit against the principal debtor by reason of the disappearance of the latter, and his consequent demand of relief against the surety only, does not operate as a discharge of the surety under section 134 of the Contract Act. BALAJI v. HASTIMAL, 8 N. L. R. 188 893

——— ——— s. 188 139

——— ——— ss. 230 (2), 236—Undisclosed principal 973

Contribution suit, nature of 45

Conversion to Christianity—Effect on personal Law 257

Co-sharer—Adverse possession 657

——— ——— Suit for profits 833

Costs—Mortgage-decree—Successful party—Personal decree for costs 244

Court-fee—Appeal by Secretary of State against Court's award 764

——— ———Pre-emption suit—Value of buildings 245

——— ———Suit to remove Granthi 270

——— ———Declaratory decree—Consequential relief—Suit for declaration that plaintiff is occupancy raiyat and for settling fair rent—Ad valorem Court-fee—Party—Status of plaintiff—Persons recorded as raiyats, whether necessary parties—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 104-H.

A suit under section 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act, for a declaration that the plaintiff is an occupancy raiyat and not a tenure-holder as he has been entered in the Record of Rights, and for settling a fair and equitable rent for his holding, is not a suit for a mere declaratory decree, but one for a consequential relief, and, therefore, ad valorem Court-fee should be paid upon such a plaint.

Any declaration, which is made as regards the status of the plaintiff, must be made in the presence of those who are now recorded as raiyats under him. PAJIRUDDIN v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 16 C. L. J. 383 919 ——— ———Redemption suit—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 cl. 9—Amount claimed by mortgagor.

A suit merely to redeem a mortgage without praying for any additional relief against the mortgagee must be held to fall under section 7, clause 9 of the Court Fees Act.

Where a mortgagor also prays for the payment to him of the amount found due to him on taking accounts, after the discharge of the mortgage debt, he should state the amount so claimed and pay additional Court-fees thereon. KODI VENKATAPPA ROW v. BARNALA SURYANARAYANA, 12 M. L. T. 493 442

——— ———Suit for declaration that plaintiff is sole shebait and for injunction—Valuation for jurisdiction identical with valuation for Court-fees—Plaintiff not to assign arbitrary value on suit—Cour Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (IV) (c) and (d), Sch. I, Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8.

A suit in which the plaintiff seeks for a declaration that he is the sole shebait of a certain idol and also for an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with his possession of the endowed properties, falls within section 7, clause 4, sub-clause (c) of the Court Fees Act, 1870, and the value, as determined for purposes of jurisdiction, must, under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, also determine the value for the purpose of Court-fees.

Where the plaintiff valued his suit for the purpose of jurisdiction at Rs. 11,005, but for the purpose of Court-fees valued the prayer for injunction at Rs. 1,000, and paid Rs. 10 as Court-fees for the declaration under Schedule II, Article 17 (iii) and Rs. 75 for the injunction under Schedule I, read with section 7 (iv) (d) of the Court Fees Act:

Held, that the plaintiff was bound to pay ad valorem Court-fees upon the plaint and memorandum of appeal, on the basis that the value of the relief claimed was Rs. 11,005.

Court-fee—concld.

In cases falling under section 7 (iv) of the Court Fees Act, although the plaintiff is to state the amount at which he values the relief sought, the Legislature never intended that he should be at liberty to assign any arbitrary value and thus be free to choose capriciously the forum of trial or appeal. RAJ KRISHNA DEY v. BEPIN BEHARY DEY, 16 C. L. J. 194 162

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7, cls. I, IV (d)—Suit for rent and declaration of title with injunction—Valuation—Jurisdiction.

A., as the heir of one D., brought a suit against B. and C. As against B., the relief claimed was the recovery of arrears of rent on the basis of a lease of the property in dispute by D. As against C. the relief claimed was a declaration of title and injunction as it was alleged that C. prevented B. from paying rent to A.:

Held, (1) that the suit was based on two distinct causes of action, for money and for declaration of title, with injunction;

(2) that the suit fell within clauses I and IV (d) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act;

(3) that the value for purpose of jurisdiction was the value for computation of Court-fees. PARUMAL AILMAL v. MOTUMAL, 6 S. L. R. 114 44

——— ———— s. 7, (IV) (c) (d) 162

——— ——— ——— s. 7 (IX) 442

——— ———— s. 8 764

——— ——— ——— Sch. I 162

——— ——— ——— Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii) 162

——— ——— ——— art. 17 (4) 764

Covenant for renewal. See LEASE.

Criminal Breach of Trust. See PENAL CODE, ss. 405, 406, 408.

Criminal Cases—Jurisdiction 559

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898)—Ganjam Collectorate—Division into Agency District and non-Agency District—Sessions Court—Agent—Deputy Magistrate—General Deputy Magistrate—Jurisdiction.

For Magisterial as well as for Judicial and Revenue Administration, the old Ganjam Collectorate was long ago divided into an Agency District and a non-Agency District. The Magistrates of the Agency District are not, as such, in any way subordinate to the Sessions Court of the non-Agency Sessions Division of Ganjam, nor does the fact that the same person is a first class Sub-Divisional Magistrate in both Districts, make him subordinate to the Sessions Court of the Ganjam Sessions Division in regard to the Magistrate's jurisdiction in the Agency District. The Agency District is also a Sessions Division, the Sessions Judge of which is the Agent himself.

'Deputy Magistrate' and 'General Deputy Magistrate' are titles unknown to the Code of Criminal Procedure.

An offence was committed within the limits of the Ganjam Agency tracts. The case was transferred by the Agent to the first class Magistrate of Gumsoor Sub-Division, who had local criminal jurisdiction over certain Agency as well as certain non-Agency tracts.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The Sessions Judge of the Ganjam Sessions Division set aside the conviction recorded by the Magistrate:

Held, (1) that the Magistrate tried the case as a Magistrate of the Agency tracts;

(2) that the proper forum of appeal was the Agent and not the Sessions Judge of Ganjam Division. PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. SADANANDA PATNAIK, 23 M. L. J. 670; 12 M. L. T. 601; 13 CR. L. J. 850 786

——— ——— ——— ss. 4 (h), 250—Complaint—Information laid by Police Officer—Police report—Compensation—Bombay District Municipal Act (IV of 1890), ss. 51, 68 (c).

The definition of complaint in section 4 (h) of the Criminal Procedure Code excludes only such Police reports as are made under section 173 after the conclusion of the Police investigation

Where a Police officer lays an information against a person under section 51 or section 68 (c) of the Bombay District Police Act, such information is a complaint within the meaning of section 4 (h), Criminal Procedure Code; compensation can be awarded against the Police Officer, if the case is frivolous or vexatious. IMPERATOR v. KHUSHALDAS, 6 S. L. R. 82; 13 Cr. L. J. 752 64

——— ——— ——— ss. 35, 411—Sentences to run concurrently—Sentence of six months' imprisonment on each of two counts by Presidency Magistrate—Right of appeal—Aggregate sentence.

Two sentences, each of six months' imprisonment, passed simultaneously under section 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and directed to run concurrently, cannot be held to be a single sentence of one year's imprisonment, but would be considered as a single sentence of six months' imprisonment.

If such a sentence is passed by a Presidency Magistrate, it will not be appealable under section 411 of the Criminal Procedure Code. SUKNANDAN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 787 531

——— ——— ——— ss. 35 (3), 413——Appeal—Sentence of one month's imprisonment under more sections than one—Sentences to run concurrently—Appeal, whether lies to Sessions Court.

Concurrent sentences for the purpose of appeal must be taken in the aggregate.

Therefore, where a Deputy Magistrate convicted the accused under sections 143 and 365/114, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them to one month's rigorous imprisonment under each section, the sentences to run concurrently:

Held, that an appeal lay to the Sessions Court. ABDUL KHALEK v. EMPEROR, 17 C. W. N. 72; 13 CR. L. J. 877 813

——— ——— ——— ss. 87, 88, 110, 112, 114—Warrant for arrest of person who had left Court's jurisdiction—Proclamation—Attachment of property.

A Magistrate cannot legally issue a warrant under section 114, Criminal Procedure Code, for the arrest of a person who has already left the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. The person proceeded against must be actually and physically present in the district in which the Magistrate exercises jurisdiction.

Where a warrant under section 114 was issued for the arrest of a person who had left the district and subsequently a proclamation against the person was issued and proceedings taken under sections 87, 88, Criminal Procedure Code:

Held, that the warrant, proclamation and attachment were all illegal. RAMJIBHAI, In re, 14 BOM. L. R. 889; 13 CR. L. J. 796 540

——— ——— ——— s. 88 540

——— ——— ——— ss. 94, 165—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 97, 99—Search of accused's house—Specific article—General search for stolen property, whether authorised by law.

Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99 of the Indian Penal Code, to defend property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling within the definition of criminal trespass.

The law does not empower a Police officer to search an accused's house for anything but the specific article which has been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized, and the law cannot be got over by using such an expression as "stolen property relevant to the case."

A right of private defence exists against such an unauthorized search. PRANKHAHG v. EMPEROR, 16 C. W. N. 1078; 13 Cr. L. J. 761 76

——— ——— ——— ss. 103, 165 (2) & (3)—Search—Failure to call witnesses—Illegality—"Conduct the search in person," meaning of.

Section 165 (2) does not mean that an officer-in-charge of a Police station or Investigating Officer personally conducting a search must himself make the search, e. g., ransack boxes, examine the roof, dig up the floor, or otherwise seek for the property. Nor is it necessary that all these processes must take place under his eye. The meaning of the section is, that the officer should be present on the spot and exercise a general supervision over the search, in contradistinction to the cases where he is unable to go to the spot, and deputes a subordinate by a written order to conduct the search in his place.

The failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses to a search, that is, failure to strictly comply with the provisions of section 103, does not make a search illegal. SATAGOPALA CHARLU v. SATRUGHNA BEHARA, 23 M. L. J. 445; (1912) M. W. N. 1111; 13 Cr. L. J. 763 75

——— ——— ——— s. 107—Security to keep peace—Procedure.

A Magistrate, in ordering a person to furnish security to keep the peace, must follow the directions laid down in Chapter VIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure and give the person bound over an opportunity to show cause. JAGDAMBA PRASAD v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 844 716

——— ——— ——— s. 110 540

——— ——— ——— s. 110, proceedings under, whether can be transferred 58

——— ——— ——— ss. 110, 122—Joint trial of more persons than one—Evidence against each person—Persons of bad character seen with accused, effect of—Sureties not to be rejected merely on Police report.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Where a number of persons are tried jointly upon a charge under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, it is incumbent upon the Magistrate to exercise great care and caution in dealing with the evidence and to insist that definite evidence be given against each person who is charged.

Where the evidence amounted to nothing more than that some persons said to be of bad character had been seen on occasions at the Kothar where the accused did his work:

Held, (1) that it did not justify the Magistrate in holding that the accused was a dangerous dacoit and extortioner and habitual protector and harbourer of thieves;

(2) that Magistrates have no authority to reject sureties merely upon an unfavourable report of the Police. JAI GOVIND v. EMPEROR, 15 O. C. 263; 13 CR. L. J. 760 72

——————— s. 110 — Meaning and object of section—Security demanded from person not "resident" within jurisdiction.

The expression "any person within the local limits" in section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, means any person who is within the local limits at the time the Magistrate takes action under the section.

The object of the section is to prevent crime and that object would be defeated if its scope were restricted to persons residing within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.

Consequently, a Magistrate has jurisdiction to take security from a person who resides outside the jurisdiction of the Magistrate but is found within the local limits of his jurisdiction. KORA RANGAN, In re, 23 M. L. J. 535; 13 CR. L. J. 781 413

——————— s. 110 — Power of Police to detain—Suspected person.

Section 110 is not intended to afford the Police a means of keeping a suspected person under detention until they are able to work out a case against him. Action of this kind on the part of the Police tends to throw doubt upon their work generally and a Magistrate should not detain a person under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, unless he has the necessary information upon which he can make the order in writing required by section 112. EMPEROR v. PAIMAL NAI, 10 A. L. J. 351; 13 CR. L. J. 827 571

——————— s. 110 — Proceedings initiated under the section must be disposed of by the same Magistrate—Case cannot be sent up to another Magistrate—Bombay Regulation XII of 1827, s. 27.

Proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, should be disposed of by the Magistrate before or by whom they were initiated. The Code requires that he should pass the final order himself either discharging or taking security from the accused.

Therefore, where a 1st class Magistrate, before whom proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, were initiated recorded evidence in the case and then sent it up to the District Magistrate who, acting under section 27 of Bombay Regulation XII of 1827, placed certain restrictions upon the personal liberty of the accused:

Held, that the 1st class Magistrate had no jurisdiction to send up the case to the District Magistrate and the latter had no jurisdiction to dispose of it. EMPEROR v. KISAN KEVJI, 14 BOM. L. R. 713; 13 CR. L. J. 748 60

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——————— s. 110 — Witnesses for prosecution examined after defence witnesses—Illegal procedure—Prosecution witnesses as good as defence witnesses, effect of.

In a proceeding under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate examined some of the prosecution witnesses after the case for the defence had been closed, without recording any reason for doing so:

Held, that the procedure was erroneous and unauthorised.

In a case under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, if the defence evidence is as good as that of the prosecution, the accused is entitled to an acquittal. GANGA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 383; 13 CR. L. J. 772 404

——————— s. 112 416, 540

——————— s. 114 540

——————— ss. 117, 118 416

——————— s. 118 — Security for good behaviour.

A person was asked to furnish security for good behaviour. He gave two sureties. The Magistrate rejected the sureties on the ground that they did not live within a radius of five miles from the residence of the accused:

Held, that the order rejecting the sureties was bad and that there was no valid ground for rejecting the security. HASIN-UD-DIN v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 354; 13 CR. L. J. 831 575

——————— s. 122 72

——————— ss. 123, 397 — "Undergoing sentence of imprisonment"—Person committed to prison for failure to furnish security—Subsequent sentence of theft for imprisonment—Postponement of sentence—Practice.

When a person is committed to prison under section 123, Criminal Procedure Code, for failure to give security, he is not "undergoing a sentence of imprisonment" within the meaning of section 397.

Therefore, a subsequent sentence of imprisonment passed on the person in regard to theft cannot be postponed till after the expiry of the imprisonment under section 123, Criminal Procedure Code. EMPEROR v. VISHNU BALKRISHNA RAM, 14 BOM. L. R. 965; 13 CR. L. J. 849 785

——————— s. 145, proceedings under—Magistrate ordering his subordinate officer to make inquiry—Magistrate's order in accordance with subordinate's report without hearing evidence himself illegal.

A Magistrate, acting under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, referred the issues raised between the parties to a Tahsildar for inquiry. On submission of the report by the Tahsildar, the Magistrate accepted the report, and, without hearing the entire evidence himself, passed an order accordingly:

Held, that the order was illegal, and must be set aside. SARDHA PRASAD v. PITAMBER LAL, 13 CR. L. J. 777; 10 A. L. J. 465 409

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— ss. 145, 439, 537—Revision—Charter Act, s. 15—Jurisdiction—Interference by High Court.

A petition does not lie under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, to revise proceedings under section 145 of the Code.

The words in section 439, "the record of which has been called for by itself," are not limited to cases where the High Court acts suo motu. They are not used in contradistinction to "which otherwise comes to its knowledge" but as contrasted with "which has been reported for orders" they have reference to the recognised channels by which the High Court becomes seized of the case; that is to say, either by calling for the records itself or by having the case reported to it under section 438 by a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate who has himself called for the records under section 435. In either case, the Court is acting both of its own motion and on petition. There is, therefore, no room for the reading of the words "otherwise comes to its knowledge" as having reference to petition.

The words "or otherwise comes to its knowledge" in section 439 have no reference to any power outside the Criminal Procedure Code.

Under section 15 of the Charter Act, it has never been customary to interfere except when it can be said that the Magistrate's order was passed without jurisdiction.

The failure by a Magistrate to comply with any provision of the Code as to his preliminary procedure does not destroy his jurisdiction to take action under the Code.

Semble:—Such irregularity would be covered by section 537, Criminal Procedure Code. The essential requisite to give a Magistrate jurisdiction under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, is that he must be satisfied from information of some sort that a dispute exists likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning land or water or the boundries thereof in his jurisdiction. Once he is so satisfied his jurisdiction is complete and his subsequent action must be considered in relation to procedure, not jurisdiction. KAMAL KUTTY v. UDAYAVARMA RAJA, 12 M. L. T. 439; 23 M. L. J. 499; 13 Cr. L. J. 753; (1912) M. W. N. 1154 65

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 145, scope of—Absolute continuous possession dealt with—Party claiming right of easement not to be made party to section 145 proceedings—Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Public, if may be declared to be in possession.

Section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only deals with rights of absolute continuous possession of immoveable property, and proceedings under that section are entirely without jurisdiction unless they are directed to the decision of absolute continuing possession of either party.

The right of a party, who does not claim anything beyond the right to worship on one day in the year and the right to make due and proper preparations for the holding of that worship by erecting huts for the purpose of holding the puja, is in the nature of an easement and not in the nature of possession, and, therefore, such a party cannot be made a party to a proceeding under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code,

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

The public cannot be declared to be in possession of any piece of land, for if that be done, then both parties to the dispute are included in that term and the possession, therefore, is joint possession and the jurisdiction of the Court under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, is ousted. MANIK CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI v. PREO NATH KUAR, 13 CR. L. J. 789; 17 C. W. N. 205 533

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 165 (2) (3) 75

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 179—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 406—Criminal breach of trust—Loss entailed by criminal breach of trust completes offence—Jurisdiction.

The loss resulting from criminal breach of trust is a consequence which completes the offence. The Court within whose jurisdiction such loss accrues can try the offence.

A. and B., who both resided at Cawnpore with their wives, entered into an arrangement by which a machine purchased with A.'s money was entrusted to B. While both were at Bombay, A. allowed B. to take the machine to some place in Madras to work it for the mutual benefit of both. Subsequently, A. died and B thereupon misappropriated the machine and the money made out of it. A.'s wife and heir filed a complaint in the Court of the Cantonment Magistrate, Cawnpore, under section 406, Penal Code:

Held, that the Cawnpore Court had jurisdiction to try the offence. GEORGE LANGRIDGE v. GRACE ATKINS, 13 CR. L. J. 856; 35 A. 23; 10 A. L. J. 431 792

——— ——— ——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195—Perjury and its abetment during Police investigation of a theft case—Theft case ending in conviction—Sanction to prosecute, whether necessary—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Perjury during Police investigation.

The petitioners were placed for trial before a Magistrate under section 193, Indian Penal Code, for making and abetting the making of certain false statements during the Police investigation of a theft case which ended in a conviction. A sanction to prosecute the petitioners for perjury and its abetment was not obtained from the Court which had tried the theft case:

Held, that the sanction of the Court was necessary and without its sanction, the petitioners could not be tried.

The words "in relation to an offence" in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code are wide enough to include evidence which was adduced before a Court and which was heard by the Court. MAHADEV YADNESHWAR JOSHI, In re, 14 BOM. L. R. 715; 13 Cr. L. J. 751 63

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195—Sanction for bringing false charge before Police 570

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 195, 435—Revision—"Inferior criminal Court"—District Registrar—Sanction to prosecute granted by District Registrar—High Court's power to interfere.

A District Registrar is not an inferior Criminal Court within the meaning of section 435, Criminal Procedure Code.

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

Consequently, the High Court has no power, under section 435, Criminal Procedure Code, to interfere with an order passed by a District Registrar granting sanction for the prosecution of a person for an offence. ARDESHIR KAVASJI KARANJAVALLA, In re, 14 BOM. L. R. 970; 13 CR. L. J. 845 717

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195 -Sanction to prosecute—Complaint to Magistrate—Investigation by Police—Permission to Police to proceed against complainant—Case classed B—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211.

A complaint of an offence was made to a Magistrate, who examined the complainant and sent the case to the Police for investigation. The Police reported that the case was false and asked for orders for the prosecution of the complainant. At the foot of this report, the Magistrate made the following endorsement:—"The case is classed as (B). You may proceed against the complainant."

Held, that the order made by the Magistrate at the foot of the report made by the Police could not be accepted as a sanction under section 195, Criminal Procedure Code. EMPEROR v. LALUBHAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 960; 13 CR. L. J. 855 791

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195—Sanction to prosecute—Superior Court's duty when there is no prima facie case for sanction.

Where sanction to prosecute for any offence specified under section 195 of Act V of 1893, has been granted, the superior Court should see whether the discretion has been properly exercised, and when there is no prima facie case for the prosecution, the sanction should be revoked. JHANDU v. EMPEROR, 40 P. W. R. 1912 CR; 13 CR. L. J. 831 575

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195 (b) -Complaint, definition of—Letter of District Judge.

A document was tampered with during the pendency of a suit before a Munsif. The Munsif reported the fact to the District Judge, who wrote to the District Magistrate to take action in the matter:

Held, that the letter of the District Judge to the District Magistrate fell within the definition of a complaint under section 195 (b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. DEBI PROSAD v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 361; 13 CR. L. J. 829; 35 A. 8 573

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195, cl. (b)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—Making false report to Police—Grant of B summary not sanction—Sanction not required—Jurisdiction.

A Magistrate gave to the Police what is called a B summary in regard to the accusation made by a complainant. The complainant was thereupon prosecuted under section 211, Indian Penal Code, before the same Magistrate for giving a false report constituting the said accusation. The Magistrate inquired into the offence and convicted him.

Held, (1) that the Magistrate was competent to try the accused. The giving of a B summary was by no means tantamount to the grant of a Magisterial sanction for the prosecution of the original complainant, inasmuch as a B summary was not an order passed under the Code of Criminal Procedure at all, but was a mere administrative order made by the Magistrate for the purpose of facilitating Police work and Police statistics;

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

(2) that the offence in this case was constituted by the maliciously false report which the accused submitted to the Police, and that offence was not committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, and, therefore, no sanction was needed for the prosecution of the accused. EMPEROR v. CHANDABHAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 1160; 13 CR. L. J. 904 1000

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195 (c) -Sanction to prosecute for forgery—Offence committed prior to production of document in Court—No sanction required.

Courts are prohibited from taking cognizance of an offence described in section 463 of the Penal Code when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect to a document produced or given in evidence in any such proceeding. But if the offence was committed prior to its production in Court, prosecution for such offence requires no sanction.

Section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not remove from the cognizance of Criminal Courts an offence described in section 463 of the Penal Code, when such an offence has been committed by an ordinary individual. LALTA PROSAD v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 294; 13 CR. L. J. 863; 34 A. 654 799

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 195 (6)—Sanction to prosecute—Revocation of sanction by Appellate Court—Power of High Court to grant sanction.

Section 195 (6) does not limit the right of appeal to one superior Court only.

The higher Appellate Court has power not only to grant a sanction which has been refused but also to grant a sanction which has been revoked.

A sanction which has been revoked is in effect only sanction which has been refused. LALU v. GURDASMAL, 6 S. L. R. 81; 13 Cr. L. J. 768 80

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 197—Lower Subordinate of Public Works Department, charge against, of bribery—Whether sanction to prosecute necessary.

Inasmuch as a lower Subordinate in the Public Works Department can be appointed and transferred by a Superintending Engineer, without reference to the Local Government, sanction to entertain a complaint of bribery against such lower Subordinate is not necessary. REDDY VENKAYYA, In re, 12 M L. T. 351; 13 CR. L. J. 770 402

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 202, scope of—Preliminary inquiry—Order after issue of process—Judicial order—Construction.

An order under section 202, Criminal Procedure Code, is one by virtue of which the Magistrate decides to postpone issuing process against the accused.

Such an order can only be passed after recording reasons in writing.

An order for holding a preliminary inquiry under section 202 cannot be passed after process has been issued against the accused.

If a judicial order can be construed as either legal or illegal, the construction that makes it legal must prevail. GAJI v. JUMANSHAH, 6 S. L. R. 83; 13 Cr. L. J. 749 61

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 208 governs s. 347 813

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 208, 210, 212, 213, 347—Magistrate's discretion to summon and examine witnesses for defence before or after framing charge—"Stop further proceedings", meaning of.

Section 210, in requiring "the evidence referred to in section 208 sub-sections (1) and (2)" to be recorded before a charge is drawn up, does not require a Magistrate to record the evidence of witnesses whom, in the exercise of the discretion given by sub-section (3), he has deemed it unnecessary to summon. Therefore, the accused is not entitled to delay asking the Magistrate to summon his witnesses until the last moment before the charge is drawn up and then require him to summon and examine his witnesses, as such a procedure would lead to undue delay in the commitment of cases and the evils which such delay would entail.

Though it is left to the discretion of a Magistrate (section 212) to examine witnesses for the defence after the charge is drawn up and then to cancel the charge and discharge the accused (section 213), the Criminal Procedure Code does not compel a Magistrate to summon and examine witnesses for the defence after a charge has been drawn up or even before the charge has been drawn up if, for reasons to be recorded, the Magistrate deems it unnecessary to do so.

Obiter.—The expression "stop further proceedings," in section 347 of the Criminal Procedure Code, means, to stop proceeding with the case as a trial and instead to commit the case to the Sessions for trial by that Court. SESSIONS JUDGE OF COIMBATORE v. IMMUDI KUMARA KANGAYA, 23 M. L. J. 368; 13 CR. L. J. 778; 13 M. L. T. 116; (1912) M. W. N. 1243 410

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 209 714

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 210, 212 410

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 213 54, 410

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 213, sub-s. (2)—"Witnesses for defence," whether expression covers evidence extracted by cross-examination from prosecution witnesses—Charge against accused framed before cross-examination of prosecution witnesses—Subsequent cross-examination—Cancellation of charge, if legal.

A Magistrate, having drawn up a charge against an accused person with a view to his commitment to the Court of Session, can thereafter allow the accused to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and, as a result, cancel the charge.

The words "witnesses for the defence" in section 213 sub-section (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code are wide enough to cover evidence extracted by cross-examination from witnesses for the prosecution. JOGENDRA NATH MOOKHERJI v. MOTI LAL CHAKRAVARTI, 16 C. W. N. 1155; 39 C. 885; 13 CR. L. J. 774 406

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 215 — Quashing of commitment 714

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 215, 346, 347, 349—Commitment once made can be quashed only on point of law—Section 347 to be read subject to section 208.

Where a Magistrate thinks from the first that a case ought to be tried by a Court of Session, the procedure laid down in Chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure is prima facie obligatory on him and he must, under section 208, take all such evidence as may be produced for the prosecution or on behalf of accused and give the accused an opportunity to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses. Section 347 has no applicability in such a case.

The words "stop further proceedings" in section 347 refer obviously to proceedings of a trial or of an inquiry with a view to a trial by himself when it appears to the Magistrate that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session or the High Court.

A commitment made without examining prosecution witnesses and allowing the accused an opportunity to cross-examine is illegal and must be quashed.

Per Robinson, J. dissenting:—Section 347 applies to all inquiries whatsoever.

A commitment, without examining the prosecution evidence and giving the accused an opportunity to cross-examine witnesses, is not illegal and cannot be quashed. EMPEROR v. CHANNING ARNOLD, 5 BUR. L. T. 239; 13 CR. L. J. 877; 6 L. B. R. 129 813

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 239 — Joint trial—Same transaction—Accused conspiring to procure conviction of innocent persons—Several acts linked together by one design though done at intervals.

Five accused persons, A., B., C., D. and E., finding that a robbery was committed and that cash and ornaments worth a very large sum were stolen, aided and abetted each other in inducing a young man, F., whom they knew to be entirely innocent of the offence, for the consideration of a bribe of Rs. 100, falsely to confess to complicity in the crime, and to acquiesce in being prosecuted for it, the object being to share the loot with the real thieves. To this end, the accused wrongfully confined F., fabricated false evidence in order to procure his conviction, knowingly instituted a false prosecution against him, and in that prosecution gave false evidence in order to secure his conviction.

All the five accused were jointly tried. A. was convicted of fabricating and giving false evidence to procure conviction of an offence, of wrongful confinement and of causing criminal proceedings to be instituted against a person without just or lawful ground. E. was convicted of giving false evidence with intent to procure conviction of the same offence as A. intended. It was urged that the joint trial of A. and E. was illegal:

Held, that the joint trial of A. and E. was not illegal inasmuch as

(a) section 239, Criminal Procedure Code, was distinctly applicable and, in the circumstances of the case, the joint trial was not only legal but was demanded in the interest of public time and public convenience;

(b) there was one sustained and continuous plot for screening the real offenders in the robbery and of exposing an innocent man to a false charge with a view that the accused or some of them might participate in the stolen property; to secure this end various means had to be adopted, one of the means, a mere incident in the whole transaction, being the giving of false evidence in the prosecution of F.;

(c) the accusation against all the accused was that they carried out a single scheme by successive acts done at intervals, but there was complete unity of project and the whole series of acts were so linked together by one motive and design as to constitute one transaction within the meaning of section 239. EMPEROR v. GANESH NARAYAN DIKSHIT, 14 BOM. L. R. 972; 13 CR. L. J. 833 705

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— ss. 249, 403, 437

—Case challaned by Forest Department—Proceeding stopped by Magistrate, effect of—Further inquiry ordered by District Magistrate—Forests Act (VII of 1878), s. 32.

The Forest Department challaned a case of an offence punishable under section 32 of the Forests Act. The maximum term of imprisonment prescribed for this offence is six months. Acting under section 249, Criminal Procedure Code, the trying Magistrate stopped the proceedings. The District Magistrate, purporting to act under section 437, Criminal Procedure Code, set aside the Magistrate's order:

Held, (1) that the order of the District Magistrate was ultra vires as section 437 did not apply to the case:

(2) that the order under section 249 would not bar further proceedings in accordance with law. ACHHRU v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 860: 8 P. W. R. 1913 CR. 796

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 250 — Complaint — Information laid by Police Officer—Police report—Compensation 64

——— ——— ——— ss. 256, 257, 526

—Transfer application to superior Magistrate—Duty of Magistrate to adjourn—Accused given opportunity to cross-examine prosecution witnesses or cite defence witnesses—Duty to give another opportunity.

There is no duty cast on a Magistrate to adjourn a case because an application is being made to a superior Magistrate for transfer; section 526, Criminal Procedure Code, confines that duty to cases where application is made to the High Court.

Once the requirements of section 256 or 257 have been complied with and the accused refuses to state that he wishes to cross-examine witnesses or cite defence witnesses, there is no provision requiring the Magistrate to offer an opportunity to the accused to have his witnesses summoned. VAITHINATHA IYER v. KUPPU THEVAN, (1912) M. W. N. 1121; 13 CR. L. J. 823 572

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 257 572

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 260 —Practice—Summary trial—Cattle-lifting.

Cattle-lifting is a serious offence and should not be tried summarily. EMPEROR v. ALLAHRAKHIO, 6 S. L. R. 101; 13 CR. L. J. 780 412

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 260, 439 —Summary trial—Case involving question of title and documentary evidence—Revision—Power of High Court to set aside order of acquittal.

In the exercise of its revisional powers, the High Court has power to reverse an order of acquittal and to direct that further inquiry be made or that the accused be re-tried or committed for trial.

But this revisional jurisdiction will be exercised sparingly and generally in those cases only where there is an error of law and procedure patent on the face of the judgment.

A case involving the decision of a question of title and the production of documentary evidence should not be tried summarily. EMPEROR v. TIRITHDAS, 6 S. L. R. 120; 13 CR. L. J. 771 403

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 263 —Summary trial—Refusal by Magistrate to take evidence, if legal—Recording evidence not same as hearing evidence.

Section 263 of the Criminal Procedure Code, does not excuse a Magistrate from hearing the evidence of all witnesses. It only excuses him from recording the evidence of any of the witnesses. Recording evidence is not the same as hearing evidence. In all criminal trials, if the accused denies the charge, the complainant and such witnesses as he may produce must be examined and the case must be decided upon the effect of their evidence. JABAR SAEIKH v. TOMIZ SHEIKH, 16 C. W. N. 984; 39 C. 931; 13 Cr. L. J. 759 71

——— ——— ——— ——— ——— s. 304 —Jury trial—Verdict of majority given as verdict of Jury—No dissent by any Juror—Discovery of mistake after some days—Power of Court to disturb verdict and order—Jurisdiction—Criminal cases—Interpretation of statutes—Practice—Reference to Full Bench—Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884), s. 11.

Jurisdiction in criminal case is not to be assumed, and in regard to matters for which the Legislature has made express provision, it must not be assumed in excess of the jurisdiction so conferred.

Courts in India cannot travel beyond the scope of section 304, Criminal Procedure Code.

The Court will not disturb a verdict openly given in Court, if it is satisfied that all the Jurors heard the words of the Foreman and expressed no dissent at the time.

The power of amendment of a verdict provided by section 304, Criminal Procedure Code, must be exercised before or immediately after the verdict is recorded and cannot be exercised after the Jurors have dispersed.

In a trial by Jury before a Judge of the Chief Court the Foreman publicly announced the verdict of "not guilty" as the unanimous verdict of the Jury, in the hearing of all the Jurors and without dissent on the part of any of them. The verdict was recorded and the prisoner was acquitted. From information received some days afterwards, the trying Judge was led to believe that, as a matter of fact, the Jurors were not agreed as regards the verdict. The Judge summoned the Foreman of the Jury and examined him on oath.

He deposed that the verdict given as the unanimous verdict was really the verdict of a majority of the Jurors and was given as the unanimous verdict owing to a misunderstanding that the opinion of the majority was binding upon all the Jurors.

The Judge thereupon took action under section 11 of the Punjab Courts Act and referred for the opinion of the Full Bench the question as to whether any proceedings should be taken in the matter and if so, what course should be adopted:—

Held, (1) that the Full Bench had jurisdiction to give the opinion as the question arose before a Judge, sitting as a Single Bench, in a judicial proceeding;

(2) that the Court had no jurisdiction, in consequence of the Foreman's subsequent statement, to set aside a verdict given in open Court and in the hearing of all the Jurors and the formal order of acquittal, that followed thereupon. EMPEROR v. BRIAN BONHAM CARTER, 13 CR. L. J. 815; 9 P. W. R. 1913 CR. 559

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 337 (3), 209, 215, 437—Pardon—Approver—Discharge of co-accused by Magistrate—Pardon withdrawn—Approver committed to Sessions—Power of High Court to direct further inquiry against discharged accused—Joint trial of approver and discharged persons—Quashing of commitment.

Five persons were originally sent up for trial on a charge of dacoity. At the beginning of the Magisterial inquiry, conditional pardon was granted to one of the accused and the case proceeded against the remaining four accused. When the approver was examined as witness, he denied all knowledge of the dacoity and in the absence of material evidence against the four accused, they were discharged by the Magistrate under section 209, Criminal Procedure Code. Subsequently, the pardon tendered to the approver was withdrawn and he was committed for dacoity to the Court of Session.

The material piece of evidence against the approver was his confessional statement incriminating both himself and the other accused. The Sessions Judge referred the case to the High Court for quashing the commitment of the approver and for an order directing re-trial of the discharged accused along with the approver:

Held, (1) that the High Court had power, under section 437, Criminal Procedure Code, to direct that further inquiry should be held in the case of the discharged accused and that if that inquiry ended in the framing of the charge, the said accused should be committed to the Court of Session;

(2) that the provisions of sub-section 3 of section 337, Criminal Procedure Code, were fully carried out when they were applicable, namely, during the pendency of the Magisterial proceedings, and they did not constitute any bar against the High Court's ordering that, if the inquiry against the discharged persons ended in a commitment, they should be committed to be tried jointly with the approver;

(3) that even if the commitment of the approver were not quashed, the High Court could order the joint trial of the discharged accused with the approver by directing that the trial of the approver should be delayed till the Magistrate passed his final orders in the case of the discharged accused.

Sub-section 3 of section 337 contemplates only a case where there has been a commitment made by the Magistrate to the Court of Session or the High Court. It omits to consider the case where the Magistrate himself on his own responsibility discharges the accused person. The meaning of the sub-section is that the approver shall not be set at large until the judicial proceedings pending against the accused are finished. It is immaterial whether the proceedings are finished by a Magisterial order of discharge before a trial or by a Judge's order of acquittal after trial. In the case of the Magisterial discharge, the sub-section would be satisfied if the approver were detained in custody or on bail until the order of discharge was made, and the provisions of the sub-section would be inapplicable to any proceedings held thereafter. EMPEROR v. INTYA SALABATKHAN, 14 BOM. L. R. 897; 13 CR. L. J. 842 714

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— s. 346 813

——— ——— ——— s. 347 should be read subject to s. 208 813

——— ——— ——— s. 347 — Stop further proceedings 410

——— ——— ——— s. 349 813

——— ——— ——— ss. 367, 424, 537—Judgment at variance with directions given by law—Defect not cured.

Section 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not cure the defects in a judgment which is clearly at variance with the directions given in sections 367 and 424 of the Code and which materially prejudices the accused in the trial of their appeal. KANHAI SINGH v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 435; 13 CR. L. J. 698 795

——— ——— ——— s. 397 — Sentence of imprisonment on person imprisoned for default to furnish security 785

——— ——— ——— s. 403 796

——— ——— ——— ss. 403 (4), 213—Trial of several accused by Magistrate first class—Some acquitted, others convicted—Appeal by convicts to Sessions Judge—Power of Sessions Judge to direct commitment of acquitted persons for murder on same facts—Commitment under direction—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 148, 149, 302, 304, part 2, 325, 326—Unlawful assembly—Object—Death of one person by injuries caused—Murder—Death by rash act.

Certain persons were tried by a Magistrate, 1st class, for offences under sections 325, 326, 148, Penal Code. They were all convicted of the offences except A. and B., who were acquitted. On appeal by the convicts, the Sessions Judge quashed the convictions and directed that all accused persons, including A. and B., be committed for trial to the Court of Session as the offence committed was prima facie one of murder. In pursuance of that order, the accused were committed to the Court of Session and convicted of an offence under section 302:

Held, (1) that the subsequent trial of A. and B. for the offence of murder was justified under section 403 (4), Criminal Procedure Code;

(2) that the order of the Sessions Judge directing their trial was legal;

(3) that the commitment of A. and B. to the Court of Session was valid.

Certain persons who were reaping their crops were assaulted by the accused with sharp edged weapons and heavy sticks, the object being to prevent the latter by force from carrying away the produce.

As the result of the injuries inflicted on the attacked party, one of them died. It was not proved that the intention of the accused was to cause the death of any person or to inflict such bodily injuries as were likely to result in death:

Held, (a) that the accused constituted an unlawful assembly;

(b) that the offence of causing fatal injury was such as the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object;

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

(c) that each of the accused was, therefore, guilty of an offence under section 304, part 2, read with section 149, Indian Peal Code;

(d) that none of the accused was guilty of an offence under section 302. WADHAWA SINGH v. EMPEROR, 7 P. R. 1912 Cr.; 39 P. W. R. 1912 Cr. 243 P. L. R. 1912; 13 Cr. L. J. 742 54

——— ——— ——— s. 411 531

——— ——— ——— s. 413 813

——— ——— ——— ss. 417, 423 (a)—Riot case—Duty of Police to ascertain guilty party—Duty of Court—Re-trial of appeal, power of High Court to direct.

It is not the duty of the Police to determine in a riot case "which of two mutually destructive stories is the correct one." The Police are not called upon, nor is it within their province, to determine in a case of this kind which of the two parties concerned was in the wrong. It is for the Courts to determine upon the evidence on the record which of the two parties has been guilty of the offence charged against them, and none-the-less so because the record is lengthy and the case complicated and difficult.

The fact that a Sessions Judge obviously failed to apply his mind to the determination of questions before him, and declined to adjudicate therein himself, because the Police did not attempt to adjudicate as to the guilt or innocence of persons implicated, is an indication of a complete misconception of the respective duties of the Courts and the Police, and the High Court will in such a case, under the wide powers conferred upon it by section 423 (a) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, direct a lower Appellate Court to re-try an appeal which was before it for determination. EMPEROR v. CHANDA SINGH, 13 Cr. L. J. 737; 7 P. L. R. 1913; 43 P. W. R. 1912 Cr. 2 P. R. 1913 Cr. 49

——— ——— ——— s. 423A 49

——— ——— ——— s. 424 795

——— ——— ——— s. 435—Inferior Criminal Court 717

——— ——— ——— s. 435, 437,—Further inquiry—Magistrate's power not absolute.

A Magistrate has not an absolute right to order further inquiry in any case under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If he finds no illegality, impropriety or irregularity and nothing incorrect in the proceeding of the Court below, he is not empowered to set aside an order of discharge upon other grounds, or upon no ground at all. PRANKHANG v. EMPEROR, 16 C. W. N. 1078; 13 Cr. L. J. 764 76

——— ——— ——— s. 437—Power of High Court to direct further inquiry against accused 714

——— ——— ——— s. 437 — Proceedings stopped by Magistrate—Further inquiry ordered by District Magistrate 796

——— ——— ——— s. 439—Interference on the ground of want of corroboration 79

——— ——— ——— s. 439—Power to set aside acquittal 403

——— ——— ——— s. 439—Revision of proceeding under s. 145 65

Criminal Procedure Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— s. 476 — Action under section—When may be taken.

To justify action under section 476, it will suffice if it is taken with reasonable promptitude, i e., so shortly after the conclusion of the proceedings as to make it practically the continuation of the same proceeding. PICHAI ROWTHAN v. EMPEROR, (1912) M. W. N. 1203; 13 CR. L. J. 825 569

——— ——— ——— s. 476 — Offence committed by person not party or witness in case—Jurisdiction to order prosecution—Stay of criminal proceedings—Pendency of civil appeal.

It is not necessary under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, that the person proceeded against should be a party or a witness in the proceedings before the Court ordering his prosecution. All that is required is that such an offence, as is there referred to, should be either committed before the Court or brought under its notice in the course of judicial proceedings.

The mere pendency of a civil appeal is not in itself sufficient ground for staying criminal proceedings, under section 476, Criminal Procedure Code. KESHAV NARAYAN MANOLKAR, In re, 14 BOM. L. R. 968; 13 CR. L. J. 848 720

——— ——— ——— s. 526 572

——— ——— ——— s. 526—Stay of proceedings—Rule issued by High Court—Telegram sent by High Court Vakil to Court below—Disregard of telegram—Bias against accused—Transfer of case.

A Rule for the transfer of a case was issued by the High Court upon the application of an accused person staying further proceedings before a Magistrate and the direction given by the High Court was intimated to the Magistrate by a telegram sent by the Vakil who obtained the Rule, but the Magistrate proceeded with the case disregarding the telegram;

Held, that the Magistrate acted injudiciously in going on with the case, that the conduct of the Magistrate indicated clearly the bent of his mind and his bias against the accused, and that the case ought to be transferred to another Court. HEM CHANDRA KAR v. MATHUR SANTHAL, 16 C. W. N. 1031; 13 Cr. L. J. 766 78

——— ——— ——— s. 526—Application for transfer—Materials to be considered.

What the Court has to consider on an application for transfer is not merely the question whether there has been a real bias in the mind of the presiding Magistrate against the accused but also the further question whether incidents may not have happened which, though they may be susceptible of explanation and may have happened without any real bias in the mind of the Magistrate, are nevertheless such as are calculated to create in the mind of the accused a reasonable apprehension that he may not have a fair and impartial trial.

Where a District Magistrate cancelled the license for arms held by an accused and refused to grant an interview to him:

Held, that the circumstances were sufficient grounds for transfer of the case from the District. RAM KISHAN DAS v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 357; 13 CR. L. J. 823; 35 A. 5 567

Criminal Procedure Code—concld.

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 526 (8)—Transfer—Magistrate's duty—Full opportunity not given—Proceedings void—Sufficiency or insufficiency of reasons by whom to be decided—Proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, whether can be transferred.

After an application for transfer has been made under section 526 (8), Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate is competent to hear and record all the evidence for the prosecution, if he considers that the grounds set forth as reasons for the transfer are insufficient and unlikely to be acceded to by a superior Court. But when the evidence for the prosecution is completed, it is the bounden duty of the Magistrate, irrespective of the sufficiency or insufficiency of the grounds set forth for transfer, to allow a fair and reasonable opportunity to the accused to apply for a transfer before calling upon him for his defence.

It is for the High Court, and not for a Magistrate to decide, whether the grounds set forth for a transfer are good or not.

Unless full opportunity is given to an accused who has made an application for a postponement of the case in order to enable him to apply for transfer before he is called upon for his defence, the proceedings are void.

This was a case under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, and the High Court directed it to be transferred from the District Magistrate to another Magistrate. BAGGU MAL v. EMPEROR, 13 Cr. L. J. 746; 254 P. L. R. 1912; 42 P. W. R. 1912 CR.; 1 P. R. 1913 Cr. 58

——— ——— ——— s. 528—Order of transfer made by Sub-Divisional Magistrate—Appeal to District Magistrate not maintainable—Jurisdiction.

A District Magistrate cannot set aside an order of transfer passed by a Sub-Divisional Magistrate. ILTAF HUSAIN v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 782 414

——— ——— ——— s. 532 570

——— ——— ——— s. 537 65, 570

——— ——— ——— s. 537—Defective judgment 795

Criminal Trespass. See PENAL CODE, ss. 441, 447, 448.

Culpable Homicide. See PENAL CODE, ss. 299 TO 304.

Custom—Customary law considerations—Mutation in transfer cases 979

——— ———Daughter—Maintenance 903

——— ———Kolis—Marriage of divorced woman without receipt of pecuniary benefit 949

——— ———Muhammadan family adopting Hindu worship 758

——— ———Proprietary body—Settlers acquiring right to sites by adverse possession—Right to collect due.

The fact that defendants have, by adverse possession, become owners of the sites occupied by them and by their kamins in the area of plaintiff's patti, does not lead to the inference that the defendants thereby became jointly entitled with plaintiffs to the dues and cesses leviable within that area. The presumption is that the right to collect these dues and cesses rested in the proprietary body of the patti. KAMIRA v. LALU, 110 P. R. 1912; 30 P. L. R. 1913 907

Custom—contd.

——— ——— of transferrability. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

——— ———Adoption of collateral—Jats of the Gujranwala District—Repudiation of adoption—Age.

Among Jats of the Gujranwala District, a sonless proprietor may validly adopt any one of the descendants of a common ancestor, residing in the village whom he prefers.

When an adoption has once been completed, it cannot be set aside or repudiated by the adoptive father.

Among Jats and kindred tribes in the Punjab, a man may appoint an heir from the descendants of a common ancestor; he need not necessarily appoint the nearest collateral.

The age at which an adoption takes place is immaterial. SANT SINGH v. MULA, 23 P. L. R. 1913 350

——— ———Alienation by father of ancestral property—Necessity—Burden of proof—"Just debt"—Privy Council Appeal—Concurrent findings—Practice.

In the case of an alienation by a father, governed by Customary Law, the onus of proving necessity for the consideration rests upon the vendee.

An agriculturist male proprietor of lands may alienate ancestral lands as against the reversioners for valid necessity such as a "just debt". A "just debt" means a debt which is actually due and is not immoral, illegal, or opposed to public policy, and has not been contracted as an act of reckless extravagance, or of wanton waste, or with the intention of destroying the interests of the reversioners.

A concurrent finding of fact is conclusive on the point. KIRPAL SINGH v. BALWANT SINGH, 13 M. L. T. 5; 11 A. L. J. 1; 9 P. W. R. 1913; (1913) M. W. N. 58; 17 C. L. J. 137; 15 BOM. L. R. 79; 17 C. W. N. 302 28 P. L. R. 1913; 24 M. L. J. 318 656 P. C.

——— ——— ——— De facto guardian mortgaging minor nephew's property—Suit for possession—Right of nephew and sons of mortgagor to resist claim on the ground of no necessity—Joint and several liability—Necessity—Ground of attack in plaint but not pressed in appeal—Part of consideration for mortgage not for necessity—Incomplete mortgage—Incompetency of mortgagee to get possession.

In a suit for possession as mortgagee against the sons of an agriculturist, before the mortgagee can succeed, he must show that the mortgage was with consideration and for necessity.

A mortgage by the guardian of a minor is not valid unless it is proved that the minor's property was mortgaged for his benefit.

Where a minor's uncles undertake to pay his father's just debt by including it in their own bonds, and afterwards mortgage their share as well as that of the minor in the ancestral land, in consideration of that bond debt, the mortgage cannot be enforced so far as the minor's share is concerned, as such an alienation cannot be considered for his benefit.

Custom—contd.

Where a portion of the consideration for a mortgage by a male proprietor of his ancestral holding is not for necessity, the mortgage is incomplete so far as his reversioners are concerned and on his death the mortgagee cannot maintain a suit for possession of the property on the strength of that mortgage against the reversioners.

A ground of attack, mentioned in the plaint in respect of which no issue was drawn by the first Court and which was not repeated either in the written grounds of 1st or 2nd appeal, cannot be raised at the time of argument before the Chief Court. HIRA SINGH v. LAHORI MAL, 174 P. W. R. 1912: 217 P. L. R. 1912 247

——— Alienation—Necessity—Interest in advance—Compound interest—Money required for pre-emption decree—Small sum of money paid as make-weight—Decree passed on book account · Acquiescene —Estoppel—Market-value of land.

Where the principal mortgage-money is shown to have been borrowed for legal necessity, the interest added in advance as well as the compound interest charged under the terms of the mortgage-deed cannot be disallowed. These constitute a valid charge on the mortgaged property.

Such an alienation cannot always be regarded as unnecessary merely because the mortgagor has agreed to pay heavy interest thereon.

Interest at 12 per cent. per annum is not excessive.

If interest is not paid when due, there is nothing illegal in charging compound interest.

All that an alienee has to do is to satisfy himself that the alienor wants the money for a necessary purpose but he is not bound to go any further.

It is a valid necessity to raise money for paying in amount fixed for a decree for pre-emption of land.

Where a transaction is in the main for necessity, it cannot be upset merely because the alienor receives as make-weight a comparatively small sum of money even though no particular necessity for that sum may be shown.

Where a decree has been passed on a book account, apparently for ordinary expenses and interest, strict proof of necessity is not required, particularly where the record of the case has been destroyed.

One hundred times the jama of a land is its fair price.

Where, leaving out of consideration the items overcharged by a vendee, the land has still fetched the price at this rate, the sale is not liable to be disturbed for want of full necessity.

The mere fact of the sons cultivating a part of the alienated land as tenants under the alienee during their father's life-time does not amount to an estoppel, but long delay in suing coupled with several previous unsuccessful attempts of their father to get the sale set aside raises the presumption that the sale was for consideration and necessity. YAQUB KHAN v. RAGHPAT RAI, 165 P. W. R. 1912; 192 P. L. R. 1912; 235

——— ancestral holding for liq ... ity—Sale of whole ... purchasing a mare to a ... g mortgage money and ... some canal. some squares of land on

Custom—contd.

The sale of the whole of chahi ancestral land, which, owing to its insufficiency to maintain the holders and their families, was under mortgage, in order to pay the mortgage debt, and to purchase a mare by means of which a tenancy of two squares of land on the Jhelum Canal was acquired, is justifiable and the transaction is not open to question at the instance of the sons and reversioners of the holders on the ground of absence of necessity. NABI BAKHSH v. BHAGAT SINGH, 176 P. W. R. 1912; 214 P. L. R. 1912 251

——— Alienation—Succession—Right of daughter of uncle of last male owner to contest alienation by his widow · Muhammadan Law—Gujars of Kharian, District Gujrat.

Among Gujars of Kharian, in the Gujrat District, a daughter of the uncle of the last male owner is not entitled by custom, in the absence of a proof to the contrary, to inherit property left by him, nor is she regarded as a reversionary heir possessing a right of control in respect of alienations made by his widow. She has also no such right under the Muhammadan Law.

If such a right of inheritance by custom, and consequently a right of control in respect of alienations by widows, is claimed, it must be proved by the party asserting it. NIAMAT ULLAH v. AISHA BIBI, 90 P. R. 1912; 250 P. L. R. 1912; 262 P. W. R. 1912 21

——— Hindu Law—Alienation—Gift by widow of Sarin Khatri of Lahore of her husband's estate in favour of his daughter—Incompetency of reversioners to challenge gift.

Among Sarin Khatris of Nayar got of Lahore emigrated from Kunjah in the Gujrat District, no special custom, contrary to Hindu Law, exists by which collaterals exclude daughters. All Sarin Khatris of Lahore City follow Hindu Law in matters of succession.

As by Hindu Law a daughter is an heir, a gift by a widow of a Sarin Khatri of Lahore of her husband's separate moveable and immoveable property in favour of his daughter, cannot be challenged by his collaterals, as it simply amounts to an acceleration of succession. KARORI MAL v. JAWALA DEVI, 258 P. W. R. 1912 510

——— Non-agricultural Banias of town—Adoption of sister's son, validity of—Occupancy-holding—Adopted son, whether succeeds—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887*), s.* 59.

Non-agricultural Banias, who reside in a town, are not governed by the Customary Law, and amongst them the adoption of a sister's son is valid, and the adopted son succeeds to an occupancy tenancy. BRIJ INDAR SINGH v. BANSI LAL, 88 P. R. 1912; 218 P. L. R. 1912; 230 P. W. R. 1912 36

——— Inheritance. See CUSTOM—SUCCESSION.

——— Muhammadan Law—Family custom—Succession—Right of representation—Daughter of daughter who died during life-time of her mother—Kanjars of Jagadhari town, Ambala District.

Kanjars of Jagadhri in the Ambala District are not governed by Agricultural Customary Law, nor do

Custom—concld.

they follow strict Muhammadan Law in matters of succession. The right of representation exists among these people. SAHIB JAN v. AMIRAN, 196 P. L. R. 1912; 244 P. W. R. 1912 214

——— —Re-marriage—Kumbis of Berar 133

——— —Succession—Ancestral property—Onus probandi.

The burden of proving that the entire estate left by a land owner is ancestral rests on the person who asserts that it is. The fact should be proved conclusively.

If the property in the possession of an adopted son is not ancestral, the collaterals of his adoptive father cannot succeed to the property, although the adoption is invalid by custom. ALA SINGH v. KHARK SINGH, 253 P. W. R. 1912; 257 P. L. R. 1912 392

——— ——— ——— ——— Arains of Tahsil Sharkpur, District Lahore—Self-acquired property of nephew—Nephew's daughter preferred to his paternal uncle.

Among Arains of Tahsil Sharkpur, District Lahore, a paternal uncle has no right to the self-acquired property of his nephew in preference to that nephew's daughter. ZAINAB BIBI v. BADAR-UD-DIN, 270 P. W. R. 1912; 20 P. L. R. 1913 187

——— ——— ———Pathans of Chhach, District Attock—Daughters preferred to collaterals of 4th degree.

Among Pathans of the Chhach tract of the Attock District, the collaterals in the 4th degree do not succeed in preference to daughters. AHMADJI v. SHAHANCHI, 12 P. L. R. 1913 378

——— ——— ——— ———Right of daughter—Gujjars of Kharian 21

——— ——— ——— Widow — Daughter — Unmarried—Khattars of Fatehjang—Maintenance, form of.

Among Khattars of Fatehjang, Attock District, there is no custom by which a widow or an unmarried daughter takes a share of inheritance with the sons of the propositus.

In such a case, a widow or an unmarried daughter is only entitled to maintenance which may be awarded by setting aside certain land for her. ROSHNAI KHANAM v. NAWAB KHAN, 112 P. R. 1912; 32 P. L. R. 1913 903

——— ———Widow—Maintenance 903

——— ———Vatandar Joshi—Suit to recover fees paid to usurper—Liability of yajman—Action against person procuring breach of contract 138

Customary dues—Right to collect 907

Damages, award of—No prayer in plaint—Contract of sale 497

——— ———Fire insurance—Liability of company 755

——— ———Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause 316, 879

——— ———Minor's money—Investment—Trust 597

——— ——— for trespass—Limitation 605

Damages—concld.

——— ———Trespass on immoveable property 740

——— ———Cause of action—Contract to transfer negotiable instrument—Failure to perform—Measure of damages—Unstamped promissory-note executed on settlement of accounts—Admissibility in evidence—Promissory-note for previous debt dishonoured—Revival of debt.

A, as the agent of B, took, in the name of a third party, a negotiable promissory-note from C., a debtor of B., for the sum due. On settlement of accounts between A. and B, in May 1905, it was agreed that A. should take possession of, and deliver to B., the said promissory-note duly endorsed. A. failed to carry out this covenant and hence B. instituted a suit in December 1906 to recover from A. the amount of the note. At the settlement of issues, A. offered to hand over the note:

Held, (1) that it could not be said that B. had not sustained any damage. A. by taking the note in the name of a third party and allowing it to remain in his possession and neglecting to hand it over to B., put it out of B.'s power to sue the debtor on the original consideration. A., having more than reasonable time within which to perform his obligation under the covenant, his offer of performance of the obligation after the institution of the suit, could not affect B.'s right of action;

(2) that it was not necessary for B. to prove that C. had become insolvent or that B. would be unable to realise his debt if he sued C.;

(3) that B. was entitled to recover from A. the amount for which C. had executed the debt.

A promissory-note, executed in lieu of a previous debt, is only a conditional satisfaction of the debt. If the creditor retains the note in his own hands and it is dishonoured, the previous debt revives. But if the note has been endorsed to a third person, no suit can lie on the original debt.

Where on settlement of accounts between principal and agent, a promissory-note is executed, which being unstamped is inadmissible in evidence, nothing can be recovered on the settlement itself, as there is no completed obligation created by way of settlement except by the promissory-note. SUBRAMANIAN CHETTY v. MUTHIA CHETTY, 35 M. 639 721

Dancing girl—Power to adopt 422

Dasi putra 276

Debtor and Creditor—Advance to broker on pro-note 824

Debuttar property—Letters of Administration 155

Declaration of right—Wrong entry in settlement record—Subsequent correction of entry—Cause of action 675

Declaratory decree—Fraud—Discretion 602

——— ———suit. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, s. 42.

——— ——— ——— by reversioner—Conditional decree 508

——— ——— ——— for declaration that plaintiff not tenure-holder but raiyat 917, 919, 921

——— ——— ———Sale of equity of redemption—Limitation 864

Declaratory suit -concld.

——— ——— ———Will by widow—Suit by reversioner to set it aside—Cause of action 586

——— ———Relief granted different from that asked for in plaint—Court of second appeal, power of, to interfere with discretion of lower Courts.

Where the two Courts below exercised their discretion in granting the plaintiff a declaration somewhat different from that asked for in the plaint, without any formal amendment of the plaint, the Court of second appeal refused to interfere in the absence of good reasons justifying interference. MUHAMMAD SARFARAZ BEGAM v. MUNNA 315 ——— ——— ———Petition by Hindu widow for transfer of patta to the name of another—Suit to declare such transfer not binding on reversioner not maintainable.

A petition to the Revenue Authorities by a Hindu widow for transfer of patta in respect of her husband's lands to another person's name would not, by itself, furnish a cause of action to a reversioner for a declaration that his reversionary right cannot be affected by the widow's conduct, as such petition does not amount to the assertion of a right to the property sought to be affected. BAGGU SIMMANNA v. ITRAGULU CHINNAYA 375

——— ——— ——— Suit against decree-holder and judgment-debtor that attached property is not liable to attachment—Judgment-debtor also made defendant but not appearing, disputing or admitting plaintiff's claim—Jurisdiction—Value of Suit—Value of property.

In execution of his decree, a decree-holder had the property in dispute attached as that of his judgment-debtor. The plaintiff filed an objection against the attachment but without success. Thereupon he brought this regular suit praying for a declaration that the property was his and not of the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder as well as the judgment-debtor were both impleaded as defendants but the latter did not appear and, therefore, so far as he was concerned, there was neither admission nor denial of the plaintiff's claim:

Held, that, as the judgment-debtor was made a party to the suit, the jurisdiction value of the suit was the value of the property, it being quite immaterial that the judgment-debtor did not appear and dispute or admit the claim. KALLU MAL v. SHAMS-UD-DIN, 269 P. W. R. 1912; 14 P. L. R. 1913 196

Decree. See EX PARTE DECREE; MORTGAGE-DECREE.

——— ———, alteration of—Acting upon altered decree for number of years, effect of—Mortgage decree providing for interest up to date of grace but silent as to subsequent interest—Petition by judgment-debtors for time agreeing to pay subsequent interest and praying for sanction—Grant of time by Court—Whether order sanctioned agreement or not 936

——— ———, amendment of—Costs assessed on wrong principle 418

——— ———, assignment of. See ASSIGNMENT OF DECREE.

———, assignment of—Assignment by agent acting under power-of-attorney—Absence of provision in power to transfer decree—Power of assignee to execute decree—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 188.

Decree—concld.

A power-of-attorney should be construed strictly. Such a construction does not disable an attorney from exercising all powers incidental to the execution of powers expressly conferred on him or from exercising powers which are necessarily implied and which may be termed 'medium' powers.

This is the principle laid down in section 188 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

The power to transfer a decree for a consideration is not incidental to any power expressly conferred in a power-of-attorney to execute the decree.

Where a power-of-attorney contained the following clause: "to execute all decrees in the name of my father or in any other name on my behalf or otherwise to attach and realize all monies due thereon:"

Held, that the agent acting under the power could not assign the decree that he was authorized to execute. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR v. ARUNACHELLAM CHETTIAR, 12 M. L. T. 528; 23 M. L. J. 595; (1912) M. W. N. 1204 139

——— ———Conditional decree—Court's power to grant—Admissibility of unregistered document for collateral purposes 987 ——— ———, effect of—Father impleaded as party to suit—Effect of decree on son 734

——— ———, form of—Legatee suing for interest on money bequeathed 754

——— ———Joint decree—Rights inter se of plaintiff not adjudicated 205

——— ———Suit by reversioner—Conditional decree 508

Deed, construction of. See CONSTRUCTION OF DEED.

Defendant's right to prove his case when plaintiff not giving evidence 87

Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 2—Agriculturist—Court of Wards—Suit on behalf of ward—Status of ward—Maintenance allowance, effect of—Rich agriculturist—Bombay Court of Wards Act (I of 1905), ss. 2, 4, 25, 32.

A suit brought by the Court of Wards on behalf of a ward, who is an agriculturist, is governed by the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act.

In such a suit, the real plaintiff is the ward and it is his status which has to be considered.

A temporary allowance made to a ward for the purposes of maintenance is not conclusive of the ward's status. To ascertain what that status is, regard must be had to the character of the ward's property from which this allowance is derived.

The Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act makes no distinction based on the comparative riches or poverty of the person whose status is being investigated. A rich agriculturist is just as much the agriculturist under the Act as a petty agriculturist. MANOHAR RAMCHANDRA HINGE v. COLLECTOR OF NASIK, 14 BOM. L. R. 943; 37 B. 97 670

——— ——— ——— ss. 47, 48 87

Deposit of Insurance policy by way of security 627

Dharamsala Sri Talok Nath, Tahsil Nurpur, District Kangra 270

Discretion. See DECLARATORY SUIT; SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, s. 42.

——— ——Appointment of Official Liquidator 853

——— ——— of Court. See U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT.

——— ———Declaratory decree—Fraud.

The Court will not go out of its way to help a plaintiff, who got up a number of fraudulent deeds to cheat creditors, to obtain a declaration that some portion of the alleged consideration actually passed between the parties to the fraud. LAKSHMINARAYANA NAIDU v. SOMASUNDARAM PILLAI, 12 M. L. T. 534 602

Dismissal in default—Restoration on review 661

District Registrar is not inferior Criminal Court 717

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), s. 3—Jurisdiction—Divorce suits—Resident at Aden—District Judge—Aden Courts Act (II of 1864), s. 3.

The Resident at Aden is not a 'District Judge' as defined in section 3 of the Divorce Act, as he has not been appointed a "Commissioner of a Division."

Consequently, the Resident has no juristion to try and pass decrees in cases under the Divorce Act. A. MOUNA v. J. E. MOUNA, 14 BOM. L. R 872; 37 B. 57 215

Document—Material alteration · Pro-note 281

——— ——— ——, execution of—Executant executing document as guardian of another—Liability of person for whom guardian acts—Recital in document as to guardianship, whether necessary.

Where a document is in fact executed by a person for himself and as guardian of another, it is not necessary, to render the latter liable, that the executant should describe himself as the guardian of the person who is sought to be bound by it. GOVINDA MUDELEY v. MUTHUSAWMY PILLAY 169

Dower—Muhammadan widow in possession of property in lieu of dower—Right of husband's heir to oust her 81

Drunkenness. See PENAL CODE, s. 85.

Easement. See EASEMENTS ACT 22

——— ———Easement of necessity, what is—Grant of part of land by owner—Easements implied in favour of part granted—No reservation by implication in favour of grantor except in case of easement of necessity.

An easement of necessity is an easement which is not merely necessary for the reasonable enjoyment of the dominant tenement, but one without which that tenement cannot be used at all.

Where an owner of land grants part of the land and retains other parts himself, all easements necessary for reasonable enjoyment are usually implied in favour of the part so granted, but such easements are not raised by implication in favour of the part retained, unless they are easements of necessity. Or, in other words, there is ordinarily no reservation by implication in favour of the grantor except in the case of an easement of necessity. C. H. CROWDY v. L. O'REILLY, 16 C. L. J. 417 966

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 15—Claim for title over land in possession of another—Evidence of ownership—Right negatived by evidence Right to easement—Whether can be declared on proof thereof.

The words 'as an easement' in section 15 of the Indian Easements Act do not mean that the enjoyment should be in the assertion of claim of an easement. Illustration (b) to that section shows that the expression 'as an easement' was introduced in order to show that unity of title or possession during the period of 20 years, or a portion thereof, makes the possession useless to create a right of easement.

The claimant of a right of easement need not necessarily prove that he asserted, during his enjoyment, only a limited right of easement as opposed to ownership. He need only prove that the user was for the beneficial enjoyment of another land. The mere claim of the higher right of ownership would not, on failure to prove the same, prevent a person from acquiring the lesser right of easement, provided he can show that he asserted certain rights of enjoyment over the land in question for the benefit of another land belonging to him. KONDA REDDI v. RAMASWAMI REDDI 112

——— ——— ——— s. 15—Easement—Prescriptive right, acquisition of—Right of way—Old way used for 20 years and then abandoned—New way not used for 20 years.

The fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Easements Act, which applies both to continuous and discontinuous easements, seems to render it impossible to acquire a statutory prescriptive title to an easement unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit.

A. enjoyed for more than 20 years a right of way over B.'s land through a particular passage. About 16 or 17 years ago, A. abandoned the old passage and began to use a new passage. The deviation was not due to any building erected by B. but was made by A. of his own accord.

B. sued A. for a perpetual injunction restraining A. from passing along B.'s land and from obstructing B. in the building of a wall across the land.

A. pleaded that he had acquired a presciptive right of way:

Held, that A. had no right of way,—

(a) across the old passage as it was not used within two years next before the institution of the suit;

(b) across the new passage as it had not been used for 20 years.

SULTAN AHMAD v. WALLIULLAH, 10 A. L. J. 227 22

Ejectment—Tenant holding over after formal ejectment 464

——— ——— suit—Lessee ready to accept renewal on proper terms 180

Endorsement—Whether assignment of actionable claim 417

Endorser, liability of 951

Endowment. See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS.

Enfranchisement. See INAM.

English Law—Drunkenness—Extortion 800

Equitable mortgage. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, s. 59.

——— ———Assignment—After-acquired property—Covenant to re-place goods sold by other goods—Lien—License 31

Estate, manager of—Late production of accounts by—Whether evidence of dishonesty—Receiver.

The late production of accounts and documents by the manager of an estate is not sufficient evidence of dishonest dealing with the estate to warrant the appointment of a Receiver.

Obiter:—The High Court will not deal with any material which was not before the original Court. NARAYANASAMI AIYAR v. JANAKI AMMAL, (1912) M. W. N. 904 261

Estoppel—Alienation by father—Sons cultivating portion of land 235

——— ———Failure to raise question of incompetency of Court 684

——— ———Inconsistent position in Court 513

——— ———Possession of mutwalli also entitled to contingent beneficial remainder—Life-tenant obtaining possession from trustee 689

——— ———Representation of females by males 758

——— ———Denial of mortgagee's right by representatives of mortgagors—Waqf property—Simple mortgage—Adverse possession against mortgagor, whether extinguishes mortgage security.

Although the representatives of a mortgagor are estopped from denying the mortgagee's right, yet it is open to them as mutawallis to plead that the property was waqf and that the mortgage was, therefore, void.

After the execution of a simple mortgage, a trespasser ousted the mortgagor from the possession of the property:

Held, that such ouster did not constitute adverse possession against the mortgagee and did not extinguish the mortgage security. NANDAN SINGH v. JUMMAN, 10 A. L. J. 278; 34 A. 640 632

——— ———Grant by Government—Suit for possession by grantee—Expression of intention not to claim land prior to grant—Whether amounts to estoppel—Fraud.

A mere disclaimer by a person of his preferential right to acquire land, made to a rival applicant, will not estop him from suing to recover possession after it was actually granted to him by Government, in the absence of a deliberate fraud practised by him on Government or on the rival claimant.

A person, who, as adjoining owner, had a preferential right to the grant of a certain land by Government, expressed his intention not to claim that the land should be allotted to him:

Held, that such disclaimer at a time when he had no right to the land would not work as an estoppel unless he was guilty of the exercise of deliberate fraud on his rival or the Government. PERIATHAMBI GOWNDAN v. PERIYA GOWNDAN, 23 M. L. J. 593; 12 M. L. T. 539 489 ——— ———Vendor denying his title—Possession not permissive—Question of fact—Revision—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115.

Estoppel—concld.

That a certain person's possession is not permissive is a finding of fact and, consequently, cannot be questioned in revision.

A person selling a property is not estopped from denying the correctness of his title so far as the claim of a third person is concerned, but such a vendor is not to be trusted when he is playing the vendee false by supporting that claim. SHAM SINGH v. PREM SINGH, 260 P. W. R. 1912 508

Evidence. See ADMISSIBILITY.

——— ———Admissibility of judgment in civil suit between parties relating to same subject-matter in proceedings against Pleader—Whether conclusive proof 544

——— ———Surrounding circumstances 152

——— ———Execution of mortgage-deed by father—Suit for sale against son—Circumstances under which it was executed—Oral evidence, admissibility of.

A suit for sale on the basis of a mortgage-deed, executed by a Hindu father, was brought against the mortgagor's son. The deed was executed in lieu of a prior mortgage-deed, which was not produced:

Held, that oral evidence was admissible to prove the circumstances under which the mortgage-deed was executed in order to show that the mortgage was executed for a family necessity. RAM JAR SINGH v. BHAGALU SINGH, 10 A. L. J. 401 669

——— ———Judge's personal knowledge of facts, whether can be imported into judgment.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—A Judge is not entitled to rely on specific facts not proved by the evidence in the case but known to him personally or otherwise. But a Judge may use his general knowledge and experience in determining the credibility of evidence adduced before him and applying it to the decision of the specific facts in issue in the case.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A Judge must be allowed to use even his personal knowledge of concrete private facts, provided he mentions his knowledge to the parties and they do not object to his deciding the case, and he must be allowed to use his knowledge of general or public facts, historical, scientific, political and otherwise, in coming to a conclusion. MULPURA LAKSHMAYYA v. VARADARAJA APPAROW, 23 M. L. J. 624; (1912) M. W. N. 1193; 12 M. L. T. 561 353

Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 18, 21—Recital in mortgage-deed—Admissible in evidence against representative of mortgagor—Probative value of recital.

A recital in a mortgage-deed is admissible in evidence as against the mortgagor as well as against those who derive their title from him. Sections 18 and 21 of the Evidence Act make the recital admissible against them even as an admission. The probative value of such recital, however, is a different question. NAWAL KUNWAR v. BAKHTAWAR SINGH, 10 A. L. J. 390 644

——— ——— ——— s. 21 722

——— ——— ——— s. 21—Recital in mortgage-deed 644

——— ——— ——— s. 32—Entries in Samadaskat book 722

Evidence Act—contd.

——— ——— ——— s. 34—Collection papers—Admissibility—Corroborative evidence—Absence of proof to show by whom rents had been collected—Collection papers, not admissible.

Certain collection papers were produced by an officer of the landlord who deposed that they were in his custody. No question was put to him as to who had written the papers, nor was there any evidence to show by whom the rents had been collected and when and by whom the entries in the collection papers had been made:

Held, that the papers were not admissible under section 34 of the Evidence Act. AKTOWLI v. TARAK NATH GHOSH, 16 C. L. J. 328 266

——— ——— ——— s. 54 565

——— ——— ——— s. 92—Admissibility of oral evidence to prove colourable nature of transaction 39

——— ——— ——— s. 92—Admissibility of previous negotiations to vary terms of document 737

——— ——— ——— s. 92—Compromise of subject-matter of appeal—'Adjustment of all matters in dispute'—Oral evidence of independant agreement—Written compromise silent as to certain provisions.

Where the subject-matter of an appeal is compromised by the parties by means of a written agreement which recited that 'all matters in dispute' were adjusted, it is not open to any of the parties to tender oral evidence of a separate agreement not comprised in the written deed of compromise on the ground that it related to a matter on which the compromise was silent. RAJARAM RAO v. TULJARAM RAO 43

——— ——— ——— s. 92 (3) & (4)—Registered contract—Admissibility of oral evidence.

Oral evidence of modifications of a registered contract is inadmissible. SHER MUHAMMAD v. NIKKA MAL, 21 P. L. R. 1913 362

——— ——— ——— ss. 101, 102, 110 889

——— ——— ——— s. 111—Position of active confidence — Experienced mukhtiar of inexperienced young man—Burden of proof—Allegation of benami transaction.

Where the affairs of an inexperienced young man, who has just come into possession of his property, are managed by an experienced mukhtiar, the latter stands in a position of active confidence to the former within the meaning of section 111 of the Evidence Act.

Where a sale to a person in a position of active confidence to the vendor is impugned on the ground that the vendor intended the sale-deed to be a benami document, the rule in section 111 as to burden of proof applies and it is for the vendee to prove that the transaction was for consideration and was entered into in good faith. SURATSINGH v. BALDEO, 8 N. L. R. 150 363

——— ——— ——— s. 114 889

——— ——— ——— s. 114—Production of document with endorsement of payment 396

——— ——— ——— s. 114, Illus. (b)—Accomplice—Evidence—Presumption—Corroboration—Rule of practice—Revision—Interference on the ground of want of corroboration.

Evidence Act—concld.

Where the act of an accomplice imports no great moral delinqency, the presumption enacted in illustration (b) to section 114 of the Evidence Act does not apply. This is recognized as a consideration controlling or rebutting that presumption in the second explanatory illustration (b) to the section.

The rule as to corroboration being necessary to accomplice evidence is a rule of practice.

Even if this rule of practice has not been adhered to by the lower Court, the High Court will not interfere on revision unless the case presents exceptional circumstances. EMPEROR v. ISARDAS, 6 S. L. R. 106; 13 Cr. L. J. 767 79

——— ——— ——— s. 115 508

——— ——— ——— s. 115—Inconsistent action in Court 513

——— ——— ——— ss. 115, 116 689

Execution by Appellate Court—Practice 583

——— ——— ——— Auction sale—When becomes complete—Application to set aside sale by deposit of purchase-money—Limitation.

In execution of a decree, certain property was put up for sale on 22nd August 1911. The sale officer, however, did not make a declaration on that date as to who was the purchaser but referred to the Civil Court for certain information. On receipt of the information, on 28th August 1911, he allowed the person whose bid was the highest to deposit one-fourth of the price. The sale was confirmed ex parte on 23rd September. The Civil Courts were closed from the 24th September to 26th October. The judgment-debtor deposited the amount of the decree plus five per cent. of the purchase money on the 26th of October and applied to have the sale set aside:

Held, (1) that the auction sale was concluded on 28th August, and, therefore, the application to set aside the sale was not barred by limitation;

(2) that the Court was not precluded by the ex parte order of confirmation from accepting the deposit and setting aside the sale.

The mere making of the last bid does not conclude a sale. For the conclusion of a sale, it is necessary for the sale officer to accept the final bid and to make a declaration as to who is the purchaser and to order him to pay over 25 per cent. of the purchase-money. MUNSHI LAL v. RAM NARAIN, 10 A. L. J. 475; 34 A. 65 783

——— ——— of decree—Attachment—Private alienation after attachment - Subsequent attachment by another creditor—Debtor declared insolvent - First attachment raised by satisfaction of decree—Claim enforceable under attachment—Validity of private alienation 625

——— ——— ——— Limitation. See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ARTS. 179 TO 182.

——— ——— ——— Petition by transferee to enter up satisfaction 617

——— ——— ——— Powers of executing Court on application of judgment-creditor to inquire into terms of compromise 752

——— ——— ——— Alteration of decree—Acting upon altered decree for number of years, effect of—Mortgage decree providing for interest up to date of grace but silent as to subsequent interest—Petition by judgment-debtors for time agreeing to pay subse-

Execution of decree—concld.

quent interest and praying for sanction—Grant of time by Court—Whether order sanctioned agreement or not—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 275A—Judicial orders, construction of—Presumption of judicial acts having been regularly performed—Inconsistent positions—Parties not to be allowed to assume—Practice.

A decree must ordinarily be executed as originally made and the parties cannot be permitted to make a substantial alteration therein.

But where the parties have acted upon the decree as altered for a number of years and treated it as valid, the judgment-debtors who have been substantially benefited thereby, cannot be permitted to take exception to its validity.

A mortgage decree made in 1903 directed that interest should run on the principal amount at the bond rate up to six months. No provision was made in the decree for interest from the expiry of the period of grace to the date of realisation. The decree was made absolute and the decree-holder applied for sale of the mortgaged properties. The judgment-debtors presented a petition to the Court asking for time to enable them to satisfy the decree and agreeing to pay interest up to the date of realisation of the whole amount. The decree-holder gave his consent to the petition which prayed for the Court's order of sanction to the agreement. The Court granted time and the sale was postponed. Subsequently in several applications for execution, the claim for interest up to realisation was made, and the judgment-debtors raised no objection to the claim, and obtained adjournment upon part payments and expressly agreed to pay the balance of the entire decretal amounts etc., on the adjourned dates:

Held, that the agreement contained in the petition of the judgment-debtors was sanctioned by the Court under section 257A of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, because the Court deemed the consideration reasonable under the circumstances of the case, and that the agreement was valid.

A judicial order must be reasonably construed. Although there is no presumption of law that a particular act required to be performed has been done, yet judicial acts must be presumed to have been regularly performed.

Parties litigant are not allowed to assume inconsistent positions in Court to the detriment of their opponents: where they have elected to adopt a certain course of action, they will be confined to the course they have deliberately adopted. GOKHAI PADHAN v. GONES LAL PANDIT, 16 C. L. J. 404 936

——————— Attachment of properties, objections to, by parties—Inquiry in execution—Objection to plaintiff's purchase at auction sale—Objection by stranger.

All objections to attachment of property in execution of a decree raised by parties to the suit must be made in execution proceedings.

If the attachment and sale were effected without the knowledge of the party objecting, the proper course for him is to get the sale set aside in execution proceedings.

An objection to the purchase of properties at a Court sale without the leave of the Court can only be raised by parties to the suit and not by strangers. JAGADAMBAL AMMAL v. RAMASWAMY IYENGAR 126

Executor, alienation by—Title of executor not obtaining Probate 4

Ex parte decree against minor is null and void 263

——— ——— ——— against Receiver without leave to sue 916

——— ——— ———, setting aside of—Executing process for enforcing judgment, meaning of—Attachment of debt due to judgment-debtor—Notice—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 164—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 268.

Where a decree-holder, who had obtained a decree ex parte, applied for execution of the decree by attachment of certain money held in deposit by the decree-holder on behalf of the judgment-debtor and the money in question was attached, though no notice had been issued to the judgment-debtor according to the provisions of section 268 of Act XIV of 1882:

Held, (1) that the attachment was an execution of process for enforcing the judgment which set time running under Article 164 of Act XV of 1877;

(2) that the money attached being moveable property not in possession of the judgment-debtor, it was only necessary to give notice to the person in possession of the same. RAJAB ALI SHAH v. UPPER INDIA COUPER (PAPER) MILLS CO. LD., 15 O. C. 289 420

Extension of time fixed by pre-emption decree 912

——— ———Period fixed for payment of money by pre-emption decree 868

Family arrangement—Title of relation—Registered document, absence of 885

Fire Insurance—Damage—Liability of Company—Actual damage.

The Insurance Companies take possession of the damaged premises in order to minimise the damage in their own interests. When they have taken possession of the premises and done what in their opinion was wisest to minimise the damage, they cannot say that actual damage is not the natural and direct consequence of the fire. AHMED BHOY v. BOMBAY FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE CO. LD., 13 M. L. T. 11; 11 A. L. J. 42; 15 BOM. L. R. 19; (1913) M. W. N. 64; 17 C. W. N. 269; 17 C. L. J. 154; 24 M. L. J. 328 755 P. C.

Foreclosure. See MORTGAGE.

Foreign State, suit against 444

Forest Act (VII of 1878), s. 32 796

Forfeiture for non-payment of rent—Relief against forfeiture—Landlord's act—Lease not providing for period of grace—Loss of improvements—Equitable relief—Plea of payment not proved 947

——— ——— on non-payment of rent 991

——— ——— of tenancy—Transfer of holding 654

Forgery. See PENAL CODE, ss. 467, 471.

Fraud. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, s. 18.

——— against creditors—Benami sale—Suit for possession 918

———, effect of 39

———Grant by Government 489

———Right of suit 125, 126

———Execution of decree—Sale—Fraud antecedent relevant in determining whether there was fraud subsequent to sale—Fraud to be considered as a whole—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 18.

It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule of law that proof of fraud antecedent to an execution sale necessarily indicates continuance of that fraud subsequent to the sale. At the same time, it is clear that proof of fraud antecedent to the sale, may have an important bearing on the determination of the question whether there was fraud subsequent to the sale, sufficient for the purpose of section 18 of the Limitation Act, in other words, the question of fraud should be considered as a whole. TOOKOOMONI DASI v. DWARKA NATH, 16 C. L. J. 581; 17 C. W. N. 478 972

Fraudulent assignment—Right to execute decree 323

——— transfer 393

———Land Revenue Sale 878

Fruit trees—Immoveable property 910

Full Bench, reference to—Practice 559

Further inquiry. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 437.

Ganjam Collectorate — Division into Agency District and non-Agency District—Sessions Court—Agent—Deputy Magistrate—General Deputy Magistrate—Jurisdiction 786

General Clause Act (X of 1897) 185

——— s. 6 629

Gift. See CUSTOM—GIFT; HINDU LAW—GIFT; MUHAMMADAN LAW—GIFT.

Government Tenants (Punjab) Act (III of 1893)—Horse breeding peasant grant—Jhelum Canal Colony—Tenancy to devolve on one person and not to be alienated—Compromise for joint succession in Civil Court—Decree of Civil Court, effect of—Government as landlord not affected—Chief Court—Revision.

One S. held a horse breeding peasant grant in the Jhelum Canal Colony. After the death of S., the grant, under the rules, could devolve upon a single person only as an impartible holding. It was also one of the conditions of grant that it should not be alienated without the previous sanction of the Financial Commissioner. S. died without a male issue but left three brothers A., B. and C. The Colonization Officer mutated the whole grant in favour of B. only. On this, A. instituted a civil suit for possession of the land of the grant on the ground that he, as eldest son of his father, was entitled to succeed in preference to B. The two brothers entered into a compromise whereby they agreed to hold the land jointly in equal shares. Upon this, the Court passed a decree in terms of the compromise.

Government Tenants (Punjab) Act—concld.

The Colonization Officer refused to effect mutation in accordance with the decree of the Civil Court, on the ground that the decree was illegal. The decree was accordingly referred to the Chief Court for revision:

Held, (1) that there was no good ground for interfering with the decree:

(2) that the decree in no way affected the rights of the Government as landlord, who could obtain ejectment or otherwise enforce the conditions of the tenancy;

(3) that the decree did not prevent the Government from enforcing any rights it might have in consequence of the infringement of the conditions of tenancy;

(4) that as between A. and B., there was a valid compromise to which the Court was bound to give effect in a decree, which was valid and binding on the parties. ALI MARDAN v. BAKAR KHAN, 7 P. W. R. 1913; 27 P. L. R. 1913; 13 P. R. 1913 680

Grant by Government—Suit for possession by grantee—Expression of intention not to claim land prior to grant—Whether amounts to estoppel—Fraud 489

——— of part of land by owner—Easements implied in favour of part granted—No reservation by implication in favour of grantor except in case of easement of necessity 966

Grievous hurt. See PENAL CODE, ss. 325 TO 336.

Grove planted with permission of zemindar on payment of rent—Right to transfer such grove 656

Guardian. See MINOR.

———Mortgage of minor's property by guardian — Burden of proof — Necessity — Suit against guardian as well as minor—Guardian confessing judgment—Money-decree 909

———Power of natural guardian—Sale of minor's property—Validity discussed—Necessity—Benefit 609

——— of minor not properly appointed—Partition 846

——— ad litem—Non-appearance of proposed guardian—Plaintiff's duty to ask Court to appoint guardian—Decree against minor not represented—Decree null and void.

Where the proposed guardian of a minor defendant does not enter appearance, the plaintiff ought to ask the Court to appoint one of its officers as guardian ad litem. If this is not done and the minor is wholly unrepresented, a decree made against him is absolutely null and void. DINABANDHU NANDI v. MASHUDA KHATUN, 16 C. L. J. 318 263

Guardian and Ward—Power of guardian to mortgage ward's property—Ward seeking equitable relief—Compensation for benefit received by ward—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 41.

Where a minor plaintiff seeks equitable relief, such as the cancellation of a document, the Courts will not grant that relief unless and until the plaintiff is willing and agrees to restore any benefits that he may have received under the transaction covered by such document.

Guardian and Ward—concld.

A., the de facto guardian of a minor, mortgaged the latter's ancestral property in order to pay off a just debt contracted by the father of the minor; the minor sued to recover the mortgaged property on the ground that A. had no authority in law to mortgage his property:

Held, (1) that the estate of the minor, which came to him through his father, could not have been made liable, either directly or indirectly, in respect of claims against his father for monies lent, as during his life-time the latter did not charge the estate in his possession with the payment of those debts;

(2) that the minor could not, under the circumstances, be ordered to make any compensation at all.

Though, under section 41 of the Specific Relief Act, a Court has ample power, on adjudging a cancellation of a mortgage debt in favour of the plaintiff, to require the latter to make such compensation to the other as justice may require, such power will not be used if it is shown that the defendant has been in possession for several years and been enjoying the produce during that time. CHOGHATTA v. ASO MAL 371

Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890)—Illegitimate children, custody of—Law applicable to them.

In dealing with the custody of illegitimate children, the Courts in England are governed by equitable rules and exercise equitable jurisdiction. One of those rules is that the desire of the mother of an illegitimate child as to its custody is primarily to be considered.

This equitable rule should be adopted in the case of parties in this country whose personal law is obscure.

An illegitimate child is regarded as no body's child, and neither the father nor the mother has any absolute right to the custody of their illegitimate child. MA MYA v. FELIX SLYM, 5 BUR. L. T. 164; 6 L. B. R. 116 926

Hereditary office, claim to—Nature of proof—Long possession—Presumption of right—Proof of creation of right unnecessary.

In a claim for hereditary right, the Court can infer such right from proof of long possession. Though, by itself, long possession is not sufficient to create a hereditary right, yet a presumption in favour of such right is not improper, as in most cases, proof of the creation of a hereditary right at some particular time is not to be expected. ITTICHERI EDATHIS SAMANTHAM v. ANANDA PISHAROTI 179

Hereditary Offices (Vatan) Act (Bom. Act III of 1874), s. 5—Vatan—Sale in execution—Collector levying full assessment—Character of land not charged—Right of auction-purchaser—Right of next holder after death of judgment-debtor—Limitation.

Certain vatan land was sold in 1872 in execution of a decree against the holder of the vatan and purchased by A. Because of the Court-sale, the Collector levied the full assessment and assigned it for remuneration for service:

Hereditary Offices (Vatan) Act—concld.

Held, (1) that the land did not lose its character as vatan property merely because the Collector levied full assessment and altered the mode of remuneration:

(2) that A. merely took the right, title and interest of his judgment-debtor, and on the death of the latter, his right under the Court-sale ceased;

(2) that consequently, the next holder of the vatan became entitled to the property and could recover it within 12 years from the death of the previous holder.

A vatan continues in that character even when the Gordon Settlement has been applied to it and service has ceased to be demanded as a consequence of the Settlement. SHIVRAM v. MAHADEV NARAYAN, 14 BOM. L. R. 797; 37 B. 81 170

——— ——— ——— ss. 11, 11 A—Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4—Deshmukhi Vatan—Alienation of Vatan—Power of Collector to set aside alienation and resume possession—Order granting alienor's heir permission to recover possession—Adverse possession of alienee for more than 12 years—Suit by alienee—Injunction—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Decree, form of.

In 1877, A. came into possession of certain Deshmukhi vatan lands by virtue of a miras lease and mortgage executed by B. After the death of B. in 1892, A. remained in possession for 10½ years when B.'s son obtained an order from the Collector to the effect that the land in suit may be recovered from the possession of A. and given to B.'s son under the Hereditary Offices Act. The Collector did not summarily resume possession of the land or assess it at the rates prescribed. A. continued in possession even after the Collector's order.

In 1906, A. filed the present suit to restrain B.'s grandson by a perpetual injunction from recovering possession of the lands, as his title had been perfected by adverse possession for upwards of twelve years:

Held, (1) that the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, was no bar to the suit as the order passed by the Collector was not authorised by the Hereditary Offices Act;

(2) that although A. might be obliged to yield to summary eviction at the hands of the Collector under section 11A of the Hereditary Offices Act, he was not obliged to submit to proceedings for recovery of possession at the hands of B.'s heirs;

(3) that the mere fact that the application was made to the Collector within 12 years from the death of the alienor did not interrupt the adverse possession of A.;

(4) that A. was entitled to an injunction against B's grandsons restraining them from taking proceedings in a Court of law or otherwise than under the Hereditary Offices Act, 1874, to recover possession from A.

Adverse possession runs in favour of the person in possession and will confer a title on him unless a suit is brought within twelve years. MAGANCHAND v. VITHALRAO, 14 BOM. L. R. 793; 37 B. 37 148

High Court. See LETTERS PATENT.

——— ———Power to direct re-trial of appeal 49

——— ———Jurisdiction — Testamentary Judge —Power to declare Will invalid—Power to issue Letters of Administration in face of Will—Practice—Original Civil Jurisdiction.

A Judge, exercising testamentary and intestate jurisdiction of the High Court of Bombay, has no power to declare that a Will made by a testator is invalid or inoperative in law by reason of the testator having no power to make such a Will and dispose of the property mentioned therein by that Will. Such a declaration can only be made by the High Court in the exercise of its Original Civil Jurisdiction.

The Testamentary Judge can adjust no civil rights to property between the parties.

Where a Will exists, the Testamentary Judge cannot ignore its existence and direct Letters of Administration to issue in the absence of a pronouncement by a Court of competent jurisdiction that the Will is in effect invalid and inoperative in law, although none of the executors under the Will are willing to act in the matter. DHURAMSI MORARJI GOCULDAS, In re, 14 BOM. L. R. 1031 730

——— ———'s jurisdiction to revise proceedings under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code 65

Hindu Law—Adoption—Daughter's son - Nephews not competent to contest adoption 379

——— ——— ——— Power to give in adoption 133

——— ——— ———Dancing girl—Prostitute—Invalid adoption.

The adoption of a girl by a Hindu married woman is invalid, even though that woman was once a dancing girl. A dancing girl when married and leading a family life cannot be treated as a dancing girl.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—It is illegal for a prostitute to adopt a minor girl, and the illegality is, if possible, enhanced very much by a woman of the prostitute class, who has followed the practices of a moral family Hindu woman, trying to follow the practices of a prostitute herself and adopt a girl for herself. Such an adoption is a criminal act and on this ground also is illegal.

Prostitution is as repugnant to the Hindu religion as it is to the Christian or Muhammadan religion or laws. GUDDATI REDDI OBALA v. GANAPATI, 23 M. L. J. 493; 12 M. L. T. 467; (1912) M. W. N. 1138 422

——— ——— ———Settlement by adoptive mother in favour of her daughter—Consent of natural father of adopted son—Repudiation of agreement by adopted son after majority —Right of daughter to enforce agreement.

A settlement of immoveable property by an adopting Hindu widow in favour of her daughter, to take effect upon the daughter obtaining majority, assented to by the natural father of the adopted boy at the time of the adoption, cannot be enforced by the daughter against the adopted son who repudiates it on attaining majority. VYASACHARYA NARAYANACHARYA v. VENKUBAI RANGACHARYA UPADYA, 14 BOM. L. R. 1109 741 ———Alienation by widow of whole property to next reversioner—Agreement by reversioner to re-convey portion of property —Consideration.

Hindu Law—contd.

An alienation by a Hindu widow of the whole of her estate to the next reversioner on the latter's undertaking to re-convey a portion thereof to the widow or her nominee is valid, irrespective of whether any consideration actually passed or not. KARETI BRAHMANAIKUDU v. KARETI MAHALAKSHMI 487

——— ———Dayabhaga—Gift of immoveable property by father to daughter at her marriage—Stridhan—Yautuka—Death of daughter without male issue—Inheritance—Daughter of daughter—Original owner's sister's son.

A Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga School, executed a deed of gift in respect of certain immoveable property in favour of his daughter on the occasion of her marriage. A clause in the deed ran thus:—"You do remain in possession of the land held by myself down to your sons, son's son and so on in succession. Your sons, son's son etc., heirs in succession and not your husband or his heirs or any other wife that may be taken by him, shall be competent to own the said property" The daughter died sonless:

Held, that the gift was not limited for the life of the daughter, but was an absolute gift in her favour and, therefore, was not defeasible upon her death without male issue; that the intention of the grantor was not to exclude female children of his daughter from the line of succession, and that the daughter of the grantee was entitled to take the property by right of inheritance and not the grantor's sister's son. NANDA GOPAL SINHA ROY v. PARESHMONI DEBI 478

——— ———Gift by Sareen Khatri of Lahore 510

——— ——— of immoveable property by father to his daughter at her marriage—Inheritance 478

——— ———Guardian or manager binding minor's share—Enforceability of contract against minor's interest—Document, construction of—Evidence of surrounding circumstances—Award of damages 497

——— ———Inheritance—Gift of immoveable property by father to his daughter at her marriage 478

——— ——— ——— ———Reversionary heir—Father's brother's daughter's son—Great-great-grandfather's great-grandson—Perferential title.

The father's brother's daughter's son has a preferential title as reversionary heir, as compared with the great-great-grandfather's great-grandson. KEDAR NATH ROY v. AMRITALAL MOOKERJEE, 16 C. L. J. 392; 17 C. W. N. 492 283

———Joint family—Partition against manager of family—Other members of family bound by it 846

——— ——— ———Pro-note in name of deceased member—Suit by surviving members 748

——— ——— ———Suit by or against manager of joint Hindu family—Effect of decree in such suit on other members of family 290

——— ——— ——— business—Suit on business contracts—Necessary parties—Minor members 193

——— ——— ——— property — One co-sharer in possession for all—Alienation by co-sharer in possession—Continuance of alienor in possession—Knowledge of exclusion 657

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Joint family — Alienation — Immoral debts, proof of.

A general charge of immorality is not sufficient to prove that the debts were contracted for immoral purposes. SRI NARAIN v. RAGHUBANS RAI, 17 C. W. N. 124 729

——— ——— ——— Benami purchase—Burden of proof—Shifting of burden—Statement of person as to his rights in property—Not to be lightly set aside.

Where the head of a Hindu joint family makes a purchase in the name of another member of the family, the onus of proving that the purchase was not benami lies upon the person who makes the assertion.

In a particular case, however, there may be other considerations which would shift the burden of proof in regard to the nature of the transaction. Thus, where a transactiou is shown to be in the nature of a distribution of property amongst various members of a family, or for the advancement in life of one of them, the initial presumption may cease to exist.

The statements of a person, who is in the best position of all to know about his property, ought not to be lightly set aside on the mere ground that they were made with a fraudulent purpose. If the heir or representative of such a person alleges that these statements were incorrect, the burden of proving that this is so lies very heavily upon him. The idea that false statements may be lightly made at one time, for the advantage of the person who makes them, and then lightly repudiated when they appear to be to his disadvantage or to the disadvantage of his successor's title, ought not to be encouraged. RAJA RAM v. FATTEH CHAND, 187 P. L. R. 1912; 248 P. W. R. 1912 216

——— ——— ——— ——— Debt—Loan for immoral purposes, proof of—Self-acquired family property.

If a debt is contracted for an immoral purpose by a Hindu father, it is not binding against the son, even if the property is acquired by the father himself.

Although in order to prove that a debt was incurred for an immoral purpose, it is not sufficient to prove isolated acts of immorality or even general immorality but there must be clear connection between the immoral life and the debts contracted, yet it is not necessary to show that the proceeds of each loan was separately spent on a specific act of immorality. It would be sufficient to prove that the borrower was at the time living a licentious life, beyond his means, indulging in drink, riot, prostitution and debauchery, and that at the same time, he was without any business or occupation on which the money might legitimately have been spent, without showing on which particular act of immorality the money was spent. If it is proved that at the time of the loan, the borrower was notoriously wasting his substance in riotous living and spending large sums beyond his income and above his station in life, in this way only, the loan contracted in the midst of such living and spent upon it would be a loan contracted for immoral purposes. RAM NATH v. BULAQI RAM 735 ——— ——— ——— Debts—Marriage expenses of twice-born Hindu male.

Marriage is obligatory on Hindus who do not desire to adopt the life of a perpetual Brahmchari or of a sanyasi. Therefore, debts reasonably incurred for the marriage of a twice-born Hindu male are binding on the joint family properties. GOPALAKRISHNAMARAJU v. VENKATANARASA RAJU, 23 M. L. J. 288; 12 M. L. T. 292; (1912) M. W. N. 903 308 ——— Joint family—Mitakshara—Conversion of one member to Christianity, effect of—Migration from Oudh to Bengal—Presumption of carrying succession laws—Conversion not to affect right of inheritance—Family ceases to be joint—Separation of one co-parcener—No presumption that others remain united—Strict proof.

When a person migrates from Oudh to Bengal, the presumption is that he carries with him the laws and customs as to succession and family relations prevailing in Oudh.

If one member of a joint Mitakshara family converted to Christianity, such conversion does not inflict on him forfeiture of rights or property or impair or affect in any way any right of inheritance. He retains his interest in the ancestral property. But the family ceases to be a joint Hindu Mitakshara family. He becomes, upon his conversion to Christianity, at once severed from the family, and the Hindu Law ceases to have any continuing obligatory force upon him. He continues to hold the property as joint owner.

There may be no presumption that when one coparcener separated from the others, the latter remaind united; the separation of one may be a virtual separation of all, and in this sense, where it is asserted that the remaining members remained united or agreed to re-unite, the fact has to be established from all the circumstances of the case. KULADA PROSAD PANDEY v. HARIPADA CHATTOPADHYAYA, 16 C. L. J. 311; 17 C. W. N. 102 257 ——— ——— ——— ——— Nucleus of family property—Acquisition by joint labour—Joint family property.

If the members of a Hindu family choose to live together, work jointly together, throw all their earnings into a common stock and have one food, in such a case the presumption is that they must have intended their property to be joint family property and the ordinary consequences attach to it and the right of all the members to partition necessarily follows. It is not necessary in such a case that there should be a nucleus of joint family property.

Where the plaintiff's father carried on business jointly with his uncles and cousins without the aid of any patrimony and they lived and acquired properties together and at a partition between them, the plaintiff's father got considerable properties for his share:

Held, the properties were joint family properties in which the plaintiff, as the son of his father, acquired an interest and the plaintiff's father had no right to dispose of the same by Will. MADHAVAIYA CHETTY v. DAMODARAM CHETTY, 12 M. L. T. 240; (1912) M. W. N. 972 347

——— ——— ——— ——— Presumption as to jointness—Separation, burden of proof as to—Pleadings.

Where a Hindu family, and more particularly a family consisting of two brothers, is once proved or admitted to be joint, there is a clear presumption in favour of the continuance of such jointness until the contrary is proved. GAYA KUNWAR v. DAL SINGH 296

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Joint family—Property acquired in the name of one of the members of a joint Hindu family.

In the absence of some definite proof of self-acquisition, a purchase of property in the name of one of the members of a joint Hindu family must be presumed to have been made on behalf and for the benefit of that family. NATHU MAL v. MUL CHAND, 183 P. W. R. 1912; 197 P. L. R. 1912 232

——— Self-acquired property.

Property granted to a person by the Government as a reward for his services is self-acquired property.

Property acquired by a member of a Hindu family becomes the property of the joint family if it is thrown into the common stock, and the income of the whole of the property is devoted to the expenditure of the family, one account being kept of the income from the self-acquired and the ancestral property. INDAR SAHAI v. SHIAM BAHADUR, 13 M. L. T. 156; (1913) M. W. N. 122; 17 C. L. J. 299; 17 C. W. N. 509 760 P. C

——— Khoja Muhammadans 17

——— Marriage expenses of twice-born Hindu male 308

——— ——— of divided nephew of husband 366

——— ——— Right to give girl in marriage—Paternal uncle—Mother—Will—Construction Right conferred by Will.

Under Hindu Law, the paternal uncle of a girl cannot betroth her or give her in marriage without the consent and concurrence of her mother.

The mother is, after the death of the father, the legal guardian of the girl and she has the right to be consulted as to the choice of a husband for her daughter.

A Will provided that the testator's brother, to whom the testator devised his property, should get the testator's girl married by expending money out of the testator's property with due regard to his status:

Held, that the right of giving the girl in marriage conferred by the Will was no more than the right under the Hindu Law and was, therefore, subject to the same limitations. BAI RAMKORE v. JAMNADAS, 14 BOM. L. R. 766; 37 B. 18 95

——— ——— Unapproved form—Asura marriage—Brahma marriage—Kolis—Marriage of divorced woman without receipt of pecuniary benefit.

Among Kolis, re-marriage of a divorced woman is valid and is not regarded with any social censure or disapproval.

The marriage of a divorced Koli woman cannot be regarded as marriage in an unapproved form when the father by whom the woman is given away receives no pecuniary benefit from the marriage.

The distinctive mark of the asura form of marriage is the payment of money for the bride, and the absence of such payment of a bride-price is a distinctive mark of the approved form. HIRA v. HANSJI PEMA, 14 BOM. L. R. 1182 949

Hindu Law- contd.

——— ——— Means of creating title—Treating near relation without title as co-sharer for many years—Title of that relation—Family arrangement—Registered document, absence of.

Transfer by way of gift is not the only means of creating title under the Hindu Law apart from inheritance or succession.

If the persons actually entitled to a property agree to treat a near relation as a co-sharer out of affection, and abandon their claim to an exclusive right, they may do so without a registered deed. If the act is unequivocal, it will create title in favour of the person who is taken in as a co-sharer.

On the death of a Hindu widow, her husband's estate came into the possession of five persons, three of whom were the actual reversioners and the other two one degree lower in descent. The reversioners treated the other two on an equal footing and they possessed the property in equal shares for several years, short, however, of the statutory period necessary to give them title by adverse possession. The appellants were the purchasers at an execution sale of the interest of one (P.) of those two persons:

Held, that the conduct of the actual reversioners was a family arrangement, and one of the legitimate means of acquisition of property under the Hindu Law, and that it created title in P. and, consequently, in his transferees the appellants. GIRHI RANI MISRANI v. CHANDRA LAL KANTH, 17 C. W. N. 62 885

——— ——— Minor — Guardian — Mortgage of minor's property by guardian—Burden of proof—Necessity—Suit against guardian as well as minor—Guardian confessing judgment—Money-decree.

The burden of proving that a transaction made by a guardian on behalf of a Hindu minor was for a legal necessity and the benefit of the minor, lies on the alinee or creditor. A person lending money on the security of a minor's estate is bound to exercise due care and attention in seeing that there was a legal necessity of the loan and must satisfy himself about the existence of the necessity and that the guardian was acting for the benefit of the minor's estate.

Where a guardian is sued on the loan together with the minor and the guardian confesses judgment, a money-decree should be passed against the guardian. ANNAMALAY CHETTY v. NA U MA, 5 BUR. L. T. 157 909

——— ——— Mitakshara—Alienation — Necessity—Marriage of divided nephew of husband 366

——— ——— ——— father, mortgage executed by—Only son minor at date of mortgage—Mortgage executed before advances made—Sums borrowed for family purposes—Suit on mortgage—Son made party defendant—Liability of son to be sued on mortgage—Decree against son—Mortgagee unable to prove item expended on family purpose—Inability of son to prove item borrowed for immoral purpose—Debt of father binding on son 577

——— ——— ——— Suit for protecting reversionary estate from waste and rendition of accounts 101

——— ——— ——— —Dasi—Dasi-putra — Sudra — Permanent concubine.

If a Sudra governed by the Mitakshara Law has a permanent, continuous and exclusive concubine who lives as a member of his family, she is a dasi, and a son born to him by her, who is brought up as a member of the family, is a dasi-putra within the meaning of that expression as used in the Mitakshara. CHATTURBHUJ PATNAIK v. KRISHNA CHANDRA PATNAIK, 16 C. L. J. 335; 17 C. W. N. 442 276

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Mortgage by father—Foreclosure proceedings and suit against minor sons through their mother—Minor grandson not made party—Right to redeem—Regulation XVII of 1806, s. 8 —Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).

A. mortgaged certain ancestral property in 1875. After A.'s death, foreclosure proceedings under Regulation XVII of 1806 were taken against his sons in 1881; as the sons were minors, the notices were served on them through their mother. At that time, one of the sons had a minor son, B., who was not made a party to the foreclosure proceedings nor to the suit for possession brought by the mortgagee after the expiry of the year of grace. B. subsequently sued for redemption of the mortgage on the ground that he was not bound by the proceedings as he was not made a party:

Held, (1) that the case was not governed by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act;

(2) that B.'s interests were adequately represented in the foreclosure proceedings and the suit by his grandmother who was the guardian both of B. and his minor father.

If the person, who would naturally be the manager of the family, is incapacitated by minority from acting as manager and the other members are incapacitated by still greater minority, then the person, who is guardian of the minor, who would naturally be manager, takes the place of that manager as regards the other minors and fully represents them. BAJIRAO v. GULABSINGH, 8 N. L. R. 136 141

——— Naicken—Adoption - Will 834

——— Non-agricultural Banias of town 36

——— Partition — Revenue partition—Date of effect 144

——— Enjoyment in specified shares—Agreement.

The co-parceners of a joint Hindu family, being in posesssion of defined shares of family property, entered into a written agreement by which they consented to hold the family property in separate, defined and specific shares.

This agreement was acted upon for a considerable number of years:

Held, (1) that the family property must be deemed to have been partitioned from the date of the agreement, although there was no actual division by metes and bounds;

(2) that from that date, the status of the family ceased to be joint. RAGHUBIR SINGH v. MOTI KUNWAR, 13 M. L. T. 162; (1913) M. W. N. 127; 11 A. L. J. 146; 35 A. 41; 17 C. W. N. 453; 17 C. L. J. 306 766 P. C.

——— Stridhan—Gift of immoveable property by father to daughter at her marriage 478

Hindu Law—contd.

——— Widow representing estate of her husband in first suit—Heirs of her husband bound in subsequent litigation—Withdrawal of appeal in first suit—Effect on question of res judicata 866

——— Re-marriage, effect of—Custom—Re-marriage valid by custom—Kunbis of Berar—Porsonal law—Mitakshara—Mayukha——Unchastity of widow after inheritance—Widow's inheritance, essence of—Widow re-marrying, incapable of acting as guardian of sons by first marriage—Adoption, power to give in—Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856), scope of.

Among Kunbis of Berar, widow re-marriage, by a form called pat, is permitted and is treated as a valid union.

The personal law of the Berar Kunbis is the Mitaksdara as interpreted by the Mayukha, called the Bombay School of Hindu Law.

In a community goverened by the general Hindu Law, every custom at variance with that law must be strictly applied and cannot be made the basis of any other variation from the law.

A Hindu widow who contracts a valid re-marriage in accordance with a custom of her caste, is thereby transferred from the gotra of her deceased husband to that of her husband by re-marriage, and ipso facto forfeits all interest in any estate, which she may have inherited from the former, in favour of the next heir or reversioner of the deceased.

The Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act applies generally to all Hindu widows, irrespective of caste regulations concerning re-marriage.

Obiter dicta:—

Though unchastity in a wife will prevent her from taking an estate of inheritance from her husband, unchastity by a widow, after she has inherited such estate, will not divest what has already vested in her.

It is of the very essence of inheritance by a Hindu widow, as such, that she is the surviving portion of her husband, that, after physical death, he still lives in her as a sort of incarnation of his spiritual being.

By re-marriage, a Hindu widow becomes incapable of giving in adoption a son of her deceased husband or of being the guardian of her minor children by her former husband by virtue of motherhood. SITARAM v. LAXMAN, 8 N. L. R. 128 133 ——— Right to inherit—Disqualification—Physical unchastity—Malignant hostility—Refusal to live with husband and co-wife.

The only disqualification for a widow to inherit her husband's estate is one of physical unchastity.

Where a wife refused to live with her husband and her co-wife:

Held, (1) that, she was not disqualified, in the absence of any misconduct on her part, to inherit her husband's estate after his death:

(2) that the refusal to live was, under the circumstances, no evidence of hostility. KHETTERMONI DASSI v. KADAMBINI DASSI, 16 C. W. N. 964 83

Hindu Law—concld.

——— Widow—Will by widow—Suit by reversioner to set it aside—Cause of action—Declaratory suit.

The plaintiffs, who were the reversionary heirs of one R., sued for a declaration that a Will executed by M, widow of R., was null and void as against them. In the pleadings, the defendant set up a title in the widow wholly inconsistent with the rights of the reversioners:

Held, that the suit was maintainable. RAM AUTAR DUBE v. BADAL PANDEY 586

——— Will—Power of Hindu minor to make Will 86

——— Construction—Implied prohibition to adopt—Widow's power in face of such prohibition—Vatan lands—Bombay Vatan Act (V of 1886*), effect of.*

A. died on the 13th March 1885, having made a Will dated the 9th of March of that year. He left a wife and two daughters. The Will provided that the ownership of the lands, most of which were Vatan lands, was to go to the daughters; the wife was not to make over the property to any body except to the daughters; the daughters had authority to make over their right of ownership to or to relinquish the same in favour of each other; or else should any occasion arise the right of one might go to the other only, but not to any body else. It also recited that the testator had not taken anybody in adoption. In 1886, Bombay Act V of 1886 (Vatan Act) came into operation, and the effect of section 2 of that Act was to postpone female members of the Vatan to male members in the matter of succession. The widow, thereupon, adopted the son of one of the daughters and the nephews of A. sued for a declaration that the adoption, being opposed to the terms of the Will, was null and void:

Held, that the adoption could not be upheld without giving the go-by to the testator's expressed wishes inasmuch as the Will had made a complete disposition of all the property in favour of the daughters, and there was no property left upon which an adoption could take effect. MALGAUDA PARAGOWDA PATIL v. BABAJI DATTU BHAKARE, 37 B. 107 746

Hindu Temple—Scheme for management 441

Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856), scope of 133

Horse breeding—Grant. See GOVERNMENT TENANTS ACT.

Husband and Wife. See RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS.

Hurt. See PENAL CODE, ss. 320 TO 336.

Illegitimate children, custody of—Law applicable to them 926

Immoveable property—Fruit trees—Growing timber—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882*), s.* 3.

In the absence of any evidence to prove that the character of fruit trees is that of growing timber, such trees fall within the definition of immoveable property. KATWARU CHAMAR v. RAM ADHIN UPADHIA, 10 A. L. J. 516 910

——— Standing crops 185

Improvement. See MALABAR COMPENSATION FOR TENANTS IMPROVEMENTS ACT.

——— Compensation for improvements—Costs of defending a suit by third person to establish his right in mortgaged property.

A mortgagee is entitled to get compensation for improving the mortgaged property if allowed to do so by the mortgagor, and the money due to the former is a charge on the latter's interest in the mortgage-property.

When a mortgagee, with knowledge that a third person had an interest in the mortgaged property, accepted a mortgage of the property he cannot claim from his mortgagor costs incurred by him in the litigation for opposing the claim of that person. RAM DITTA MAL v. Musammat KARAM DEVI, 167 P. W. R. 1912; 190 P. L. R. 1912 243

——— Excavation of tank—Burden of proof—Tenant to show purpose of excavating tank—Supply of good drinking water to tenant and his people, if sufficient—Co-sharer landlord, if entitled to bring suit to compel tenant to fill up tank wrongfully excavated—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885*), ss.* 76, 188.

In order to make section 76 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applicable, it must be shown by the tenant in the first instance that the tank in question was excavated for the purpose of agriculture, or for the use of men and cattle employed in agriculture. It is not enough for the purpose of the section if the object of digging the tank was to supply good drinking water to the tenant and his people.

A suit for the purpose of compelling a tenant to fill up a tank which he has wrongfully excavated in one part of his holding and in the alternative for damages, may be instituted by a co-sharer landlord for the suit is not one which the whole body of the landlords is required or authorised to bring under the Bengal Tenancy Act and consequently section 188 of the Act is not applicable to it. GOBINDA CHANDRA BASU v. KAMIJUDDI SOYAL, 16 C. L. J. 127 115

Inam—Minor Inam—Kudivaram right, presumption as to—Right to eject tenant.

The terms of a grant were: "We have granted 2½ kattis of manyam lands..... after having the said land measured and the boundaries marked:"

Held, that the lands themselves were not granted as inam.

If a zemindar himself has no kudivaram rights in land, he cannot grant such land as inam.

To establish his kudivaram right and necessarily his right to eject the tenants, an inamdar must show that he let in the tenants at the beginning of their occupation. PARVATANENI VENKATARAMIAH v. PARVATANENI NARAYUDU, 12 M. L. T. 313 246

——— Resumption by Government 'Granted or continued' by Government—Non-interference by Government with holder's rights—Whether amounts to 'continuance' 373

——— Service inams, grant of—Construction of grant—'Sudda Inam', meaning of—Grant of melvaram right—Enfranchisement of service inams, effect of—Abandonment by Government of right of resumption—Madras Act (II of 1894).

Inam—concld.

The expression 'Sudda inam, appearing in a deed of grant of a service inam, does not show that the inam consisted of the land itself and not merely of the melvaram. The meaning of the expression is merely that there is nothing payable to Government in consideration of the inamdar's possession of the land.

The effect of the enfranchisement of a service inam under Madras Act II of 1894, where the Government merely gives up the right of resumption possessed by it and does not resume the inam, is that the title rests where it was before. SESHAGIRI AIYAR v. TIRUMALAI AMBALAM 481

Inamdar, suit against, by pioprietor of estate for jodi and fasli jasti—Small Cause suit—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court.

A suit by the proprietor of an estate against an inamdar for an amount made up of jodi and fasli jasti is a Small Cause suit and is not triable, by a Revenue Court. VENKATAPPA NAYANIVARU v. RAMI REDDI 39

Inherent power of Court—Discharge or removal of Receiver 583

——— ——— ——— ——— to correct obvious errors in records 279

Injunction, grant of 490

——— ——— ———Prayer for declaration, granting of —Subsidiary relief 158

——— ———, suit for, against public officer 876

——— ———, temporary—Order to furnish security and submit accounts—Appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 94 (e), 115, O. XXXIX, r. 1, O. XLIII, r. 1, cl. (r)—Interlocutory order for ends of justice—Revision.

In a suit for ejectment, the plaintiff prayed for the issue of a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from working mica mines on the disputed property. The Court ordered the defendant to furnish security to the extent of Rs. 5,000 and submit accounts every week. An appeal was filed against that order. Subsequently, the Court directed the issue of an injunction as the security and the accounts had not been furnished. No appeal was preferred against this order:

Held, (1) that the order appealed against did not grant a temporary injunction nor did it stay and prevent the wasting of the property; that it was not an order contemplated by rule 1 of Order XXXIX, and that, therefore, it was not appealable under clause (r) of rule 1 of Order XLIII;

(2) that the order was made under clause (e) of section 94 of the Civil Procedure Code for the ends of justice, and that the High Court should not set it aside under section 115. SITO MAHTO v. F. F. CHRISTIEN, 17 C. W. N. 318 361

——— ——— when to be granted 219

Insolvency. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1882, s. 351; INSOLVENT DEBTOR'S ACT; PRESIDENCY TOWNS INSOLVENCY ACT; PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY ACT.

Insolvency Act (11 & 12, Vic. C. 11), s. 7—Posseseion of after-acquired immoveable property by insolvent—Adverse to Official Assignee—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 28, Sch. II, Art. 144.

Insolvency Act—concld.

Where an undischarged insolvent acquires immoveable property subsequent to the insolvency and is in possession of the same for over twelve years, his possession is adverse to the Official Assignee and the right of the Official Assignee to the property is extinguished under setion 28 of the Limitation Act, 1877. BALAKRISHNA PILLAY v. NARAYANASAWMY NAIDU, 12 M. L. T. 215 14

——— ——— ——— ——— (11 & 12 Vic. C. 21), s. 24—Voluntary and fraudulent transfer.

C. executed a promissory-note, and in order to secure the amount thereof, executed a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds. Two days after, he absconded whereupon one of his creditors presented a petition to have him adjudged an insolvent. It was found that full consideration for the note had not passed:

Held, that inasmuch as full consideration had not passed the mortgage was voluntary and fraudulent within the meaning of section 24 of the Insolvency Act and void against the Official Assignee. GOLLAPUDI v. LAKSHMI NARASIMHAM, (1912) M. W. N. 1001 393

——— ——— ——— ——— (11-12 Vic. C. 21), s. 39—Set-off—Right of petitioning creditor to set-off costs payable by him to insolvent as against his debt.

A petitioning creditor in an insolvency proceeding cannot set-off the costs payable by him to the insolvent as against his debt as the former is an asset of the insolvent's estate in which all the creditors are entitled to share.

Such a case is not a case of "mutual credit." KARRAY MANGIAH CHETTY v. KANACHI RAMIAH CHETTY 164

Instalment-bond—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 14, Sch. I, Arts. 74, 75, 120—Non-payment of instalments not amounting to default—Waiver—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Estoppel—Inconsistent action in Court.

In a dispute between plaintiff and defendant as regards their shares in a particular business, the matter was referred to arbitration; an award was passed by which the defendants executed, on 12th December 1904 to plaintiff, an instalment bond payable by monthly instalments. The bond also provided that if the amounts of three instalments be allowed to fall into arrear, the balance of principal and interest then due would at once be recoverable without reference to the instalments. The defendants paid the instalment till May 1906. The instalment for May was returned by the plaintiff as also that for June. In August, the plaintiff filed a suit to set aside the award but the award was upheld by the first Court on 26th February 1908 and by the Appellate Court on the 19th January 1910. In the course of the appeal, plaintiff's Vakil applied to the Court that a decree for the unpaid instalments on the promissory-note might be given. The defendants, through their Vakil, stated they did not deny their liability to pay and that they had always been ready and willing to pay and got the application rejected. After the termination of the appeal, the plaintiffs brought this suit for the recovery of the instalments due under the pro-note. Defendants contended that the amount was barred by limitation under Article 75:

Instalment-bond—concld.

Held, (1) that in the circumstances, there was no default by the defendants in paying the instalments of May, June or July or subsequently before the suit, which could have caused the whole amount to be due:

(2) that there had also been waiver by the plaintiff of the condition that on failure of payment of three instalments, the whole should become due;

(3) that time would run under section 74 of the Limitation Act from the due date of each instalment;

(4) that section 14 of the Limitation Act would not enable the plaintiff to deduct the period, during which he had been conducting the previous suit and appeal, in computing the period of limitation because there was no defect of jurisdiction or any other cause of a like nature and the cause of action was not the same;

(5) that the defendants were estopped, by reason of what passed when the Appellate Court's judgment was being delivered in the previous suit, from setting up this bar of limitation;

(6) that the plaintiffs were entitled to interest on the instalments due as there was nothing that amounted to a true legal tender of those instalments.

Section 115 of the Evidence Act is by no means an exhaustive exposition of the law of estoppel.

A person, who, without mistake induced by the opposite party, has taken a particular position deliberately in the course of a litigation, must act consistently with it; and this principle will apply to a suit other than the one in which the action is taken, where the second suit grows out of the judgment in the first. COTHA KRISHNASAWMY CHETTY v. SITARAM CHETTY, 23 M. L. J. 335; (1912) M. W. N. 967 513

Insurance. See FIRE INSURANCE; MARINE INSURANCE.

——— ——— Marine insurance—Policy—Perils of the sea, meaning of—Ordinary action of wind and waves—Wear and tear.

The term "perils of the seas" refers only to fortuitous accidents or casualties of the sea. It does not include the ordinary action of the wind and waves. It is not every loss or damage of which the sea is the immediate cause, that is covered by these words. They do not protect against the natural and inevitable action of the winds and waves, which result in what may be described as wear and tear. There must be some casualty, something which could not be foreseen, as one of the necessary accidents of adventure.

An insured boat sank suddenly in fair weather and smooth water, without any assignable cause

It was not proved that the boat had been deliberately scuttled. The boat was in water tight condition up to the night of accident. It appeared that bottom plates had corroded through natural causes, that is, in consequence of ordinary wear and tear:

Held, that the loss was not caused by perils of the sea under the terms of the policy. STEWART v. NEW ZEALAND INSURANCE CO. LD. 16 C. W. N. 991 188

Insurance policy—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882 as amended by Act II of 1900), s. 130 (1)—Deposit of policy—Assignment by writing—Deposit by way of security—Priority.

A. assigned in writing a policy of insurance in the form of an absolute assignment to B., though it was intended only to be by way of security. Previously to this, A. had merely deposited the same policy with C. by way of security for debts already existing as well as for future debts.

The deposit was not accompanied by anything in writing:

Held, (1) that C., with whom the policy was merely deposited, acquired no title whatever therein or in its proceeds;

(2) that B. acquired an absolute right to the proceeds of the policy.

Section 130 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act covers actionable claims and transfers by way of security as well as absolute transfers.

The principle of the English law that "a deposit of a document of title without either writing or a word of mouth" creates 'in equity' a charge upon the property to which the document relates to the extent of the interest of the person who makes the deposit, does not apply in India in view of the positive language of section 130. MULRAJ KHATAU v. VISHWANATH, (1912) M. W. N. 1247; 12 M. L. T. 152; 11 A. L. J. 7; 24 M. L. J. 60; 17 C. W. N. 209; 15 BOM. L. R. 9; 17 C. L. J. 162 627 P. C.

Interest—Calculation 370

——— ———Construction of bond 9

——— ———Mesne profits 915

——— ———Minor's money—Investment—Trust 597

——— ———Principle for awarding interest—Discretion 833

——— ———Redemption 677

——— ———Refusal of mortgagee to receive tendered amount 368

——— ———Suit for redemption by puisne mortgagee 291

——— ——— up to date fixed for payment 309

Interpretation of Statutes—Criminal enactment 559

——— ——— ———imposing penalty 25

——— ——— ———Object of statute 370

——— ——— ———Statue imposing restriction—Superfluity 621

Interrogatories—Questions to be asked 152

Intoxication 800

Investment—Trust—Minor's money 597

Issues—Object of framing issues—Several issues should not be tried together.

The whole object of framing issues is to keep the various points arising for decision separate and distinct; and to lump them all up together in the judgment defeats the object of the law and cannot but lead to confusion. The practice of dealing with all the issues in a case together is, therefore, condemned. RAJANI KANT MUKERJI v. RAM DULAL DAS, 17 C. W. N. 55 881

Jhelum Canal Colony. See GOVERNMENT TENANTS ACT.

Joint trial of approver and discharged persons 714

——— —— of more persons than one—Evidence against each person—Persons of bad character seen with accused, effect of 72

Judge's personal knowledge of facts, whether can be imported in his judgment 353

Judgment—Appellate Court—Conflicting evidence—Grounds of Appeal 898

——— —— at variance with directions given by law—Defect not cured 795

——— ——Evidence and Vakil's arguments heard by one officer—Judgment by successor without hearing arguments—Judgment pronounced without notice—Validity 278

Judicial notice by Court of illegal award 320

—— —— order, construction of 61

—— —— orders, construction of—Presumption of judicial acts having been regularly performed 936

Jurisdiction. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 179; LETTERS PATENT; VALUATION OF SUIT.

——— ———Criminal cases 559

——— ———Declaration that mortgage is invalid—Mortgaged property situate beyond local limits of Court 758

——— ———Divorce suit—Resident at Aden 215

——— ———Evidence recorded by Assistant Sessions Judge and judgment given by Sessions Judge 797

——— ——— —Exclusive jurisdiction of Land Acquisition Court to determine right to apportionment of compensation 684

——— ———Magistrate seeking advice of District Magistrate 530

——— ———Order to make inventory 429

——— ———Power of lower Court to stay execution 728

——— ———Question of satisfaction of decree 142

——— ———Sessions Court—Ganjam Agency 786

——— ———Suit against Collector as Court of Wards 972

——— ———Testamentary Judge—Power to declare Will invalid—Power to issue Letters of Administration in face of Will—Practice—Original Civil Jurisdiction 730

——— ——— of Civil Court—Interpretation of Statutes 621

——— ———, presumption to be made in favour of 490

——— ———Suit by alienee of Vatan—Order granting alienor's heir permission to recover possession 148

——— ———Suit for declaration of share in cash allowance of Vatan 661

——— ———Suit for refund of land revenue—Land revenue, nature of—Madras Revenue Recovery Act (II of 1864), s. 58.

Jurisdiction—concld.

Land revenue is a tax imposed on lands by virtue of the prerogative of the State. The liability to pay land revenue does not rest on contract or some relation resembling contract.

It is entirely a matter for Government to decide what amount of revenue should be levied on any land and Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to try any question relating to it.

A suit for refund of land revenue on the ground that as the Government failed to supply water for raising wet crops, it was not entitled to levy the revenue assessed on it, does not lie in a Civil Court. SECRETARY OF STATE v. PENUMACHA VENKATAPATHA RAJU, 23 M. L. J. 746; (1912) M. W. 1242 953 —— —— of Civil or Revenue Court. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT, s. 77.

——— ———Defendant to Civil suit establishing his tenancy in Revenue Court, during the pendency of Civil suit—Civil Court bound by decision of Revenue Court 302

——— ———Suit between rival claimants to occupancy holding 376

—— —— of Court—Articles of Association providing for registration of transferee if proper person—Refusal of Agent of Company to register transferee—Transferee's right to go to Court 640

——— —— of execution Court to convert suit against legal representative into execution proceedings 293

—— —— of High Court to interfere with findings of fact in revision 993

——— ——— ——— to revise proceedings under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code 65

——— —— of Revenue Court—Suit for rent by inamdar 120

—— —— ——— Suit against inamdar for fasli and jodi jasti 39

—— —— of Small Cause Court. See SMALL CAUSE SUIT 39

Jury—Charge—Misdirection—Death caused by injury with weapon—Omission to put case of grievous hurt before Jury—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 304 (2), 320 (8).

Where death has been caused by a blow with a weapon, that does not necessarily suggest an intention to cause such bodily injury as would, in the ordinary course of nature, cause death, and it is presumed, in the accused's favour, that he had no knowledge that the injury which he intended to cause was likely to cause the death of the person injured. In such cases, if the circumstances are such that an intention merely to cause hurt dangerous to life might not unreasonably be inferred, the Jury should be directed that it is open to them to find the accused guilty of the lesser offence, namely, of causing grievous hurt under section 320 (8) of the Penal Code.

Section 304 (2) is not appropriate to a case where there was a deliberate intention to inflict bodily injury to the person whose death resulted from such injury. EMPEROR v. CHAGAN RAJARAM, 6 S. L. R. 116; 13 CR. L. J. 750 62

Jury—concld.

——— Misdirection—Questions of law—Rioting—Common object—Suggestion by Judge that real case might be between cases alleged by both sides—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 146, 147—Violence, if includes that against inanimate object—Minutest details, whether necessary for Judge to go into—Statement by prosecution witness that accused had been bound down, whether admissible—Evidence of bad character—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 54.

In a case of rioting in which one common object was alleged throughout, the Judge suggested to the Jury that the case might not be precisely as the prosecution alleged, nor what the defence set up, but something between the two:

Held, that there was no misdirection; that the Judge left it entirely open to the Jury as to whether they would accept his suggestion or not; and that the acceptance of it by the Jury would not destroy the case for the prosecution.

In section 146, Indian Penal Code, violence includes violence against inanimate objects, such as pulling down a man's house.

In his charge to the Jury, it is not necessary for the Judge to go into the minutest details in the evidence.

In a prosecution for riot, the statement by a prosecution witness that he had brought a case under section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code against some of the accused who had been bound down, is admissible, if introduced not for the purpose of proving the bad character of the accused, but as part of the res gestæ, the events which had transpired before, and which eventually led up to, the riot with which the accused were charged. SAMARUDDIN v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 821 565

——— trial—Verdict of majority given as verdict of Jury—No dissent by any Juror—Discovery of mistake after some days—Power of Court to disturb verdict and order 559

Kattakonam—Set off 623

Khoja Muhammadans—Hindu Law 17

Khot. See KHOTI SETTLEMENT ACT.

Khoti Settlement Act (Bom. I of 1889), ss. 33 (c), 40 (a)—Rules under section 40 (a), rr. 1-8—Khot—Occupancy tenant—Rent—Crop-share—Gross annual produce how determined—Appraisement—Admission of defendant—Rule 8, intra vires.

Rule 8 of the rules framed under section 40 (a) of the Khoti Settlement Act is intra vires.

The only rent, which the occupancy-tenant under a khot can be liable to pay, is the rent as prescribed by section 33 (c), that is, a crop-share by way of a fixed proportion of the gross annual produce of the land and of the produce of the fruit trees, if any.

The crop may be appraised according to the provisions of the rules framed under section 40 (a).

If the provisions of the rules are not observed, then the appraisement admitted by the tenant himself is to be taken as determining the gross annual produce.

Apart from the provisions of the rules and the admission of the tenant, it is not open to the Court to estimate the amount of rent on an equitable basis from other materials. VINAYAK BALKRISHNA v. SITARAM, 14 BOM. L. R. 1173 943

Khoti Settlement Act—concld.

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 40 (a), rules under, rr. 1 to 8 943

Kudivaram. See INAM 353

Lambardar and co-sharers—Suit for profits—Pendency of partition suit no bar—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. II, r. 2—Principle for awarding interest—Discretion.

The pendency of a suit for partition is no bar to a suit for profits against the lambardar.

Two suits were brought for profits, one in respect of the share owned by the plaintiff as owner and the other as an assignee of another co-sharer:

Held, that the second suit was not barred by Order II, rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

There is no provision of law regulating what interest ought to be allowed to a successful plaintiff suing for profits against the lambardar. The rate depends on the discretion of the Court. In fixing the rate of interest, the analogy of what is allowed in favour of a landlord against a defaulting tenant is not an unreasonable one. MUHAMMAD ABDUL AZIZ v. RAFI-UN-NISSA BIBI, 10 A. L. J. 469 833

——— ——— ——— Suit for profits 914

——— ——— ——— Apportionment of compensation money—Zemindar and patnidar—No abatement of rent for acquisition of land within patni tenure—Compensation, whole of, to go to patnidar.

Where there is no abatement of rent by the landlord to the patnidar in respect of lands within the patni, acquired by the Government, the landlord is entitled to no portion of the compensation. RAM RANJAN CHAKRAVARTY v. BUNWARI LAL MITTER, 16 C. L. J. 211 170

Land Acquisition—Apportionment of compensation money—Zemindar and patnidar—No abatement of rent for acquisition of land within patni tenure—Compensation, whole of, to go to patnidar—Chance of patni coming to end, monetary value of.

Where the terms of a patni lease debar the patnidar from claiming any abatement of rent on account of diminution of his tenure by reason of compulsory acquisiton, he is entitled to the whole compensation money. It is difficult to appreciate the monetary value of the chance of the patni lease coming to an end by sale or forfeiture. BIPRODAS PAL CHAUDHURI v. SARAT CHANDRA SINGHA, 16 C. L. J. 209 168

——— ——— ——— Apportionment of compensation—Lands in patni—Transferee of patni tenure—Non-registration of name in zemindar's book, effect of—Zemindar not allowing abatement of rent to patnidar—Claim to portion of compensation money—Chance of forfeiture of patni—Remoteness—If chance may be valued.

The rights of a transferee of a patni are perfected upon the transfer by the patnidar, and are not in any way contingent for their validity upon the payment of the fee and the security under section 6, paragraph 1, of the Patni Regulation.

The only effect of his failure to secure registration of his name by the payment of the fee and the security, is that the landlord is not bound to recognise his purchase, and may sell up his tenure in execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained against the registered tenant.

Land Acquisition—concld.

Therefore, where lands included in a patni tenure are acquired by the Government, the purchaser of the patni tenure is entitled to claim the compensation money even though he has not registered his name in the books of the zemindar.

A zemindar is not entitled to any share of the compensation money when he has not allowed any abatement of rent to the patnidar.

The chance of forfeiture of the patni is very remote and it was held that the zemindar in the present case wholly failed to establish the value of this remote chance of possible loss. GANPAT SINGH BAHADUR v. MOTI CHAND, 16 C. L. J. 301 171

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894)—Compensation—Different interest in land acquired—How to apportion compensation.

When different persons hold different interests in the land acquired under the Land Acquisition Act, the Court should ascertain the value of the respective interests and apportion the compensation in proportion to such interests. HIRDEY NARAIN v. POWELL, 10 A. L. J. 403; 35 A. 9 672

——— ——— ——— s. 18 (2) (b)—Collector's award when complete—Application for reference to Court—Limitation.

The actual payment of the compensation awarded under the Land Acquisition Act is not part of the Collector's award, and is not necessary to the completion of it: the award is complete as soon as the Collector apportions the amount of the compensation between the parties concerned.

An application, therefore, to make a reference to Court made more than six months after this latter event is barred by section 18 (2) (b) of the Land Acquisition Act. MIRAN BAKHSH v. FEROZE DIN, 232 P. L. R. 1912 395

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 24, fifthly—Agricultural land acquired for Mandi—Compensation how determined—Proof—Sale of land requiring sanction of Deputy Commissioner—Appeal by Secretary of State against Court's award—Court-fee—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870*), s.* 8, Sch. II, Art. 17 (4).

Where agricultural land is acquired for a Mandi, the compensation should be assessed at the amount which similar land in the neighbourhood is likley to fetch for purposes of agriculture. The purpose for which the land is required should not influence the award of compensation.

The fact that a shop-keeper is willing to pay a large price for a shop in a Mandi, or so near a Mandi as to enable him to enjoy the benefit enjoyed by the proprietors of the shops in the Mandi, in the event of his being fortunate enough to receive sanction for the purchase under the Alienation of Land Act, should not be considered in assessing the value for the purposes of the Land Acquisition Act unless it is shown that the sanction would be granted for the purchase.

The evidence of witnesses, who merely give opinions as to the value of land or express their willingness to purchase it, should be excluded in determining the amount of compensation.

Where a District Board acquired land at a high price by private purchase for the enlargement of a Mandi in order to obviate the delay caused by proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act, the fact should not be taken into consideration in assessing the value of other land subsequently acquired through Government.

Land Acquisition Act—contd.

Section 8 of the Court Fees Act is applicable only to appeals by persons claiming compensation. An appeal by the Secretary of State against the award of the Court requires a Court-fee of Rs. 10 only under Article 17 (4), Schedule II of the Act. SECRETARY OF STATE v. BASAWA SINGH, 19 P. W. R. 1913 764

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 30 — Exclusive jurisdiction to determine right to, and apportionment of, compensation—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882*), ss.* 521, 522—Separable parts of award—Void and valid portions—Court discovering before decree its incompetency to try suit—Dismissal of suit—Amount of compensation—Apportionment—Estoppel.

A. died about 1902. He left two pieces of land, (1) at X and (2) at Y. Mutation in respect of this property took place in favour of A.'s three sons, B., C. and D. The land at X. was acquired by Government, and the Collector's award was delivered in August 1903. Objections were put in and referred to the Court, which gave its final decision in August 1907, to the effect that D. was not separated from the family, and was entitled to ⅓rd share of the compensation awarded. This decision formed the subject of an appeal to the Chief Court.

After the reference by the Collector to the Court, B. and C., on the 4th January 1905, instituted a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge in respect of both pieces of land to have it declared that on the death of A., their father, they were exclusive owners of the land and that D. was not entitled to a share of the land, or to a share of the compensation awarded by the Collector in respect of the X. land. The suit was referred to arbitration by the parties and the umpire's award, delivered on 22nd June 1906, declared B. and C. to be exclusive owners of the land and alone entitled to receive the compensation. Objections were put in under section 521 of the old Code of Civil Procedure and in addition a plea was raised that as the point in dispute was exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Land Acquisition Court, the Court of the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. On this plea alone, the suit was dismissed without any inquiry into the objections under section 521 and any adjudication on the award. On appeal, the Divisional Judge upheld the Subordinate Judge's decision in regard to the X land, but finding that the Court of the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction in regard to the Y land, enforced the award of arbitration and allowed the claim of B. and C. in respect of that piece of land. This decree of the Divisional Judge formed the subject of two cross-appeals by the parties concerned.

The first appeal under the Land Acquisition Act and the two cross-appeals mentioned above were heard together by the Chief Court:

Held, (1) that as regards the Y land, the decree of the Subordinate Judge not being in accordance with the arbitration award, the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to entertain an appeal which was not barred by section 522 of the old Civil Procedure Code; on the other hand, the decree of the Divisional Judge in respect of that piece of land being in accordance with, and not in excess of, the award, an appeal from it was barred by section 522;

Land Acquisition Act—concld.

(2) that there was no reason for interference on revision in respect of Y land, the grounds urged being unsustainable, because (a) the award relating to the Y land was separable from the award relating to the X land, and (b) D. had by his silence abandoned his objections to the award in the Divisional Court;

(3) that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to try the claim in respect of X land;

(4) that the Subordinate Judge having discovered, before passing a decree, that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit as regards the X land, or to pass a decree which would be binding on the Land Acquisition Court, he had no option under the circumstances but to dismiss the suit in regard to that land;

(5) that D., by his agreement to the reference to arbitration, was not, under the circumstances of the case, estopped from questioning the Court's jurisdiction or from defending his rights in the Land Acquisition Court;

(6) that the Land Acquisition Court was competent to go into the question of apportionment, as the objections referred to the Court included one by B. and C. that they alone were entitled to the portion of the compensation awarded by the Collector to their brother, D.

A decision of the Chief Court in the previous appeal on the question of the amount of compensation does not bar the Land Acquisition Court from disposing of the point of apportionment which, in its first decision on the matter of compensation, it had expressly left for future decision.

In a claim disposed of by the Collector in the course of Land Acquisition proceedings under the special procedure prescribed by Act I of 1894, the Collector's order or adjudication of the rights of the owners or claimants to the property for which compensation was assessed and awarded, cannot be questioned otherwise than by a reference to Court under the provisions of the Act, and the Civil Courts are not competent to re-open and determine matters disposed of in accordance with the Act in a separate suit. AMOLAK SHAH v. CHARAN DAS, 16 P. W. R. 1913 684 ——— ——— ——— ss. 49, 54—"Award or any part thereof"—Decision of Court under section 49, whether an award—Appeal.

The words "award or any part of the award" in section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, do not include the decision of the Court on a reference under section 49.

The decision of the Court on a reference under section 49 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is not appealable.

Obiter:—A decision by the Court under section 49, would not prevent a claimant obtaining compensation for severance under section 23, sub-section (1) clause (3). GILES SEDDON v. DEPUTY COLLECTOR OF MADRAS 117

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 54 117, 952

Land Acquisition award—Claim of objector absurdly extravagant—Pleader's fees 901

Landlord and Tenant. See AGRA TENANCY ACT; BENGAL TENANCY ACT. CENTRAL PROVINCES TENANCY ACT; CHOTA NAGPUR TENANCY ACT; PATNI REGULATION; PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.

——— ——— ——— ———Improvement—Excavation of tank—Burden of proof—Tenant to show purpose of excavating tank—Supply of good drinking water to tenant and his people sufficient—Co-sharer landlord, if entitled to bring suit to compel tenant to fill up tank wrongfully excavated 115

——— ——— ——— ———Lease to company 976

——— ——— ——— ———Lease by mortgagee in favour of mortgagor for the mortgaged property—Suit for rent of mortgaged property, maintainability of 424

——— ——— ——— ———Person settled as raiyat by trespasser—Recorded as raiyat in Record of Rights—Settling fair rent—Relationship of landlord and tenant—Whether consent of both parties essential 587

——— ——— ——— ———Suit for rent for a certain fasli—Issue as to propriety of patta tendered—Adjudication—Subsequent suit for rent for another fasli—Issue as to extent of holding—Res judicata 445

——— ——— ——— ———Zemindar and patnidar—No abatement of rent for acquisition of land within patni tenure—Compensation, whole of, to go to patnidar—Chance of patni coming to end, monetary value of 168, 170, 171

——— ——— ———Adverse possession — Non-payment of rent.

Mere non-payment of rent by a tenant does not make him owner of the land by adverse possession, unless the tenant does some act which is inconsistent with the owner's title and thereby turns his possession, as tenant into possession adverse to that of the owner. VINAYAK BALKRISHNA v. SITARAM 943

——— ——— ——— ———Decree for arrears of rent—Sale in execution—Purchaser to acquire property free from incumbrances—Decree should be one for arrears due in respect of under-tenure—Single decree obtained for rents of two tenures—Sale in execution of such decree—Rights of purchaser—Rent Recovery Act (X of 1859), s. 105—Sale of Under-tenures Act (VIII of 1865 B. C.), ss. 4, 6, 16.

Section 4 of Bengal Act VIII of 1865 makes it essential in order that the purchaser may acquire the property free from all incumbrances under section 16, that the decree under execution should be one for arrears of rent due in respect of the under-tenure brought to sale.

If a single decree is obtained for arrears of rent of two distinct tenures, it operates as a decree for money when in execution thereof either tenure is brought to sale.

The rent is not regarded as due from the person against whom the decree is obtained, but is due in respect of the tenure.

Therefore, if the landlord seeks to recover by the sale of a tenure, not merely arrears due therefor, but an additional sum not realisable in respect of that tenure, the purchaser at the execution sale does not acquire the special status mentioned in section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 B. C. KANTA LAIK v. LACHMAN OJAH, 16 C. L. J. 197 165

Landlord and Tenant - contd.

——— ——— ——— ——— Fraud—Person affected by fraud—Right of suit—Non-transferable holding, purchaser of—Rights of purchaser—Suit by purchaser to set aside fraudulent decree obtained by landlord against plaintiff vendor, whether maintainable.

It is open to any person affected by fraud to impeach it and to sue to set aside the results accruing from such fraudulent conduct.

The purchaser of a portion of a non-transferable holding has a subsisting right in spite of the non-recognition of the same by the landlord.

The purchaser of a non-transferable holding has sufficient interest to maintain an action for declaration that certain rent decrees were collusively and fraudulently obtained by the landlord against the purchaser's vendor, that the plaintiff is not bound by those decrees, and that the holding cannot be sold in execution thereof. He should not be shut out from showing that there was collusion between his vendor and his vendor's landlord. GADADHAR GHOSE v. MIDNAPUR ZEMINDARI CO., 16 C. L. J. 141 126

——— ——— ——— ——— Ground rent—Permanent tenancy—Evidence—Non-liability for enhancement of rent—Rights of permanent tenants—Buildings.

Long possession at uniform rent, erection of expensive buildings without interference for many years by the landlords, transfers by sale, gift, mortgage and succession, execution of several receipts of rent in which it is described as dawani or permanent, are indications to show that the tenure was permanent from the first.

In the case of a permanent tenancy at a fixed-rate of rent, no enhancement can be allowed.

Permanent tenants of sites, which are let for building purposes, cannot be restrained from building or re-building their houses thereon in the absence of any express conditions to the contrary. ABDUL KARIM v. ALLAH BAKHSH, 197 P. W. R. 1912; 209 P. L. R. 1912; 121 P. R. 1912 208

——— ——— ——— Grove planted with permission of zemindar on payment of rent—Right to transfer such grove—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), s. 4.

A. planted a grove and constructed a pacca well with the permission of the zemindar and agreed to pay a yearly rent. Subsequently A. sold the grove and the well to the defendants:

Held, that the transfer was a valid transfer, the position of A. being that of a grove-holder.

Per Banerji, J. (contra)—A grove-holder is a tenant under section 4 of the Agra Tenancy Act and has no right to transfer the grove in the absence of a custom or contract to the contrary. MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN v. MITHU LAL 656

——— ——— ——— Lease—Assignee from lessee—Liability for rent—Apportionment of rent—Privity of estate—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 36, 108.

As an assignee from the lessee becomes the lessee from the date of assignment, he must be held liable only for the rent accruing after the assignment.

Privity of estate being the ground of assignee's liability, the liability should not be made heavier than the extent of that privity would justify.

Landlord and Tenant—contd.

An assignee of a lease can claim as against the lessor an apportionment of the rent, accruing after the date of his assignment, according to the period before and after his assignment, as the rent is deemed accruing from day to day as between him and the lessor. RANDIPURAZIL KUNHISOW v. ALUKANDIYIL PARKUM MULLOLI CHATHU, 23 M. L. J. 695 933

——— ——— ——— Lease for long term of years—Leased land planted up as garden—Forfeiture condition on non-payment of rent—Relief against forfeiture—Deposit of rent in Court—Discretion—Revision—Failure to exercise jurisdiction—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 114—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), ss. 48, 84.

A. took from B. certain land on 20-year lease at a rent of Rs. 400 payable in half-yearly instalments. The lease contained a condition providing that A. would be liable to ejectment should at any time the rent for one year be in arrears.

The area leased was planted up by A. as a garden and contained many fruit trees which were about to reach their prime. B., alleging default in payment of rent in respect of two half-yearly instalments, sued for ejectment. A. pleaded tender of rent and further paid into Court the amount of rent then due. The first Court declined to grant ejectment, but the Collector on appeal, finding that the tender was not valid, held that he was bound to enforce the forfeiture condition of the lease:

Held, (1) that section 48 of the Tenancy Act did not bar or exclude relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent, if under the general law governing lease contracts, such relief was claimable by lessees;

(2) that the case called for the exercise of the discretion, conferred by section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act, to give relief against forfeiture under the condition of the lease, which was objectionable and unconscionable;

(3) that as the Collector failed to exercise the jurisdiction to grant relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent, his order was liable to revision.

Such of the sections of the Transfer of Property Act as lay down principles of law which are in consonance with the principles of equity, good conscience and justice should be followed by the Courts of the Punjab. Section 114 of the Act embodies such a provision of law. AZIZ-UD-DIN v. BHAGWAN DAS, 6 P. R. 1912 REV.; 36 P. L. R. 1913 991

——— ——— ——— Lease prior to 1882—Forfeiture for non-payment of rent—Relief against forfeiture—Landlord's act—Lease not providing for period of grace—Loss of improvements—Equitable relief—Plea of payment not proved.

In the case of a lease made prior to the coming into operation of the Transfer of Property Act, an act on the part of the landlord, showing that he elects to take advantage of the forfeiture, is not a condition precedent to his right to sue for ejectment.

The question whether a tenant is entitled to relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent must depend on the facts of the particular case.

Where no period of grace for payment of arrears of rent is provided and the lessee has agreed to deliver back the property, without demanding the value of his improvements, the lessee is entitled to relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent.

Landlord and Tenant—contd.

The fact that the tenant sets up a plea of payment which he fails to prove, does not necessarily disentitle him to equitable relief. RAMAKRISHNA MALLAY v. BABURAYA, 28 M. L. J. 715; 12 M. L. T. 656 947

——— Non-payment of rent for over 12 years—Presumption—Adverse possession.

The mere non-payment of rent by a tenant is generally insufficient to show that the tenant has acquired proprietary title against his landlord. A denial of landlord's title must be shown. But non-payment of rent, if proved to have continued for a very long period, might give ground for the inference that the landlord had been ousted or had transferred his right to the tenant.

Where parjawat (a kind of ground-rent) was not paid by the tenant or collected by the landlord for fifty years but the amount of the parjawat was very small, i. e., only 2 pice per mensem :

Held, that the tenant could not be taken to have been in adverse possession of the site of the house. DEOKINANDAN PERSHAD v. BINDESWARI PARSHAD 523

——— Non-transferable holding, purchaser of portion of—Rights of purchaser—Collusive decree by landlord against recorded tenant to defeat purchaser's right—Payment of decretal amount by purchaser—Suit by purchaser for amount paid by him and for declaration that the decree was fraudulent, whether maintainable—Fraud—Right of suit.

A purchaser of a portion of a non-transferable holding cannot be ejected. He has a subsisting right which cannot be denied, though the landlord may not recognise him and only looks to the recorded tenant.

Therefore, a suit for a declaration that a decree obtained by the landlord (defendant No. 1) against his recorded tenant (defendant No. 2) for arrears of rent, is fraudulent and inoperative against the plaintiff who is the mortgagee of a portion of the non-transferable holding of the tenant, and for recovery of the sum of money paid by the plaintiff for satisfaction of the said decree, is maintainable. BRAHAMDEO NARAIN v. RAMDOWN SINGH, 16 C. L. J. 139 125

——— Non-transferable holding—Transfer by raiyat—Suit by landlord to eject purchaser—Plaintiff to prove what—Abandonment and disclaimer, whether necessary to be proved positively as fact—Inference from transfer of holding and giving possession to purchaser—Parties—Whether raiyat necessary party to suit—Custom of transferability—Proof—Recognition by landlord without nazar or with nazar fixed by custom.

The raiyat of a non-transferable holding transferred his interest in the entire holding, and the landlord brought a suit for khas possession of the holding against the purchaser :

Held, (1) that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove positively as a fact that the raiyat had left the holding and disclaimed any interest in it, as this was a direct inference from the fact that he had sold the entire holding and given possession of it to the purchaser;

(2) that the raiyat was not a necessary party to the suit.

Landlord and Tenant—contd.

In order to prove a custom of transferability, it is necessary to prove that the transfers had been made with the knowledge and without the consent of the landlord and that they have been recognised by him either without the payment of nazar, or upon payment of nazar fixed by custom. SEKH CHAND v. ROMONI MOHAN ROY 603

——— Occupancy holding—Transferability—Custom, proof of—Registration of transferee's name on payment of nazar—Consent of landlord.

Where there was evidence that nazars were as a rule paid to the landlord by the transferees of occupancy-holdings, and on payment of the nazar, the purchaser was usually recognised by the landlord as his tenant:

Held, that it was not evidence of any custom by which an unwilling landlord was bound, or evidence that the landlord was compelled, to recognise the purchaser on payment of nazar, whether he wished to do so or not. BHOGIRATH CHANDRA MANDAL v. SITAL CHANDRA SARKAR, 16 C. W. N. 955 15

——— Relationship of—Kabuliat executed by one of two brothers—Whether other brother becomes tenant—Intention of parties—Conduct of parties to be considered—Subsequent knowledge of landlord that brothers agreed to share tenancy, effect of—Novation of contract—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 5—Prasumption—Tenure-holder—Holding more than 100 bighas—Occupancy-rights before commencement of Act—Whether presumption to be made.

Where one of two brothers executed a kabuliat, the question whether the other brother became a tenant of the landlord depends on what was the intention of the parties. If the landlord knew that he was letting the land to both, but took the kabuliat in the name of one alone merely for the sake of convenience, then the relation of landlord and tenant was constituted between him and the other brother. But if the landlord knew nothing of the arrangements made between the two brothers that they would equally share the tenancy, and believed himself to be contracting with the brother executing the kabuliat only, then those arrangements could not bind him in any way and would not create any relation between him and the other brother.

To decide what was the intention and knowledge of the parties, their conduct must be taken into consideration.

If the landlord came to know afterwards that the brother executing the kabuliat had allowed the other brother an interest in the tenancy, that would not amount to a novation of their contract.

Although the presumption referred to in section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that if a man holds more than 100 bighas, he must be supposed prima facie to be a tenure-holder, is not applicable to the rights of occupancy acquired by a raiyat before the Act came into operatien, yet when the question is whether a tenant was or was not a raiyat, the area of the land held should be taken into consideration though it is not necessary to adhere to the exact standard of 100 bighas. SARAT CHANDRA ROY v. RATUBUDDIN, 16 C. L. J. 271 227

Landlord and Tenant—contd.

——————— 'Savaram' — Melvaram — Kudivaram—Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), s. 185—Leases granted after 1st July 1898, admissibility of.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—The word 'Savaram' does not necessarily import the absence of kudivaram right in the cultivating ryot—Savaram was compensation granted to a zemindar or Revenue Officer under the Muhammadan Government. In some cases land exempt from payment of rent was granted to him. But if no land was available, the grant to the zemindar would consist merely of the revenue on a portion of the lands for the assessment of which the zemindar was responsible to the State.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—In consequence of certain land being known as savaram, the Courts need not necessarily presume that both melvaram and kudivaram belong to the zemindar, but the Courts may presume such land to be of the above character.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—Under section 185 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, it is the date of the contract that is material in deciding whether the evidence is admissible. The Act does not lay down any rule as to all the kinds of evidence that may be produced to prove that the land in question is the zemindar's private land, and evidence of dealings subsequent to 1st July 1898 is not altogether excluded.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The leases granted after 1st July 1898 are shut out as evidence by section 185 of the Madras Estates Land Act if they are sought to be used for the purpose of proving the character of the tenure of the land and even if such leases are sought to be proved merely in order to show that the land was treated in the same manner after July 1898 as before July 1898. Leases granted before 1st July 1898, though they were only to come into force after 1st July 1898, are admissible in evidence. MULPURA LAKSHMAYYA v. VARADARAJA APPAROW, 23 M. L. J. 624; (1912) M. W. N. 1193; 12 M. L. T. 561 353

——————— Surrender of portion of holding—Subsequent sale of same portion—Subsequent execution of kabulyat by raiyat *to landlord—Suit by landlord to eject purchaser—*Kabulyat, whether in fraud of purchaser, or legal fiction validly resorted to by landlord—Unauthorized purchase of portion of holding, if incumbrance—Abandonment—Surrender Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 86, 87, sub-ss. (6) and (7).

In December 1906, a raiyat surrendered a portion of his holding to his landlord, and sold this very portion to the defendant in February 1907. In December 1907, he executed a kabulyat in favour of the landlord in respect of the holding. Eleven days after that, a suit was brought by the landlord to eject the purchaser on the ground that the holding was not transferable by custom:

Held, that the execution of the kabulyat was not an act done by the tenant in fraud of the purchaser to which the landlord made himself a party by taking the kabulyat, but the contract was a legal fiction to which the landlord was entitled to resort to in order to recover from the purchaser who had no title as against him; that unless it was shown that the landlord acted fraudulently in excess of his rights for the purpose of defeating the rights of the purchaser, the kabulyat could not be inoperative; that the unauthorized purchase of a portion of the holding by the defendant could not create an incumbrance on the tenancy within the meaning of section 86, sub-sections (6) and (7), of the Bengal Tenancy Act; that the landlord in this case could accept the tenant's surrender of the whole or a portion of the holding under section 86, sub-section (7); that the effect of the kabulyat was to surrender the whole original holding and create a new holding altogether; that although the tenant might be answerable to the purchaser for damages and compensation for breach of contract, the landlord could not be bound to recognize any right in the transferee; and that the landlord was entitled to eject the purchaser. RAMONI MOHAN RAY v. KALIMUDDI 682

——————— Tenancy — Acquisition by prescription—Limitation — Central Provinces Tenancy Act (XI of 1898), ss. 39, 44, 62 (1)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 142, 144.

A tenancy cannot be acquired by prescription in the Central Provinces.

A person, occupying land without the consent of the landlord, and claiming to hold it as a tenant, does not hold even the limited right of a tenant adversely to the landlord.

Article 142 of the Limitation Act does not apply if the possession taken by the defendant of even a limited interest in land is not adverse to the plaintiff landlord.

Limitation time under Article 144 does not begin to run until possession becomes adverse. KANHAYALAL v. DULARSINGH, 8 N. L. R. 163 606

——————— Tenant suing to recover his holding from person settled by landlord—Regulation VII of 1822 and Regulation IX of 1825—Settlement proceedings—Collector's jurisdiction to decide disputes as to title between raiyats*—Decision whether "award"—Regulation VII of 1822, s. 14—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 14, 46.*

Under the decision in Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, 20 C. 708, a proprietor may not be able to eject tenants settled on the land by his rival, even though his rival is found to be a trespasser. But this principle could never be applied and was never intended to be applied to a tenant seeking to recover his own holding.

It was not intended by the provisions of Regulation VII of 1822 that Collectors should decide disputes as to title between raiyats, in which the zemindars or Sadar Malguzars had no interest, and which could in no way affect the assessment.

A decision by a Collector, therefore, as to the title between two raiyats is not an award under the Regulation or within the meaning of Article 46 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act of 1877.

Section 14 of Regulation VII of 1822 gives the Collectors jurisdiction to decide, not all disputes but disputes in regard to the nature of any tenancy. But the section does not apply to a case in which rival tenants claim, not only a tenancy of the same nature, but the same land under the same nature of tenancy.

Landlord and Tenant—concld.

An order of the Collector by which the lands belonging to the plaintiff have been given to the defendant without any warrant of law, does not require to be set aside by the plaintiff, and, therefore, Article 14 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act of 1877 does not apply to a suit by the plaintiff for possession of the lands. RAJANI KANT MUKERJI v. RAM DULAL DAS, 17 C. W. N. 55 881

——— ——— ——— Transfer of entire holding without landlord's consent—Original tenant remaining on land as sub-tenant of purchaser—Liability of purchaser to ejectment—Abandonment—Forfeiture.

Where the defendant purchased the entire rights of the original tenants to certain jote lands without obtaining the consent of the landlord, the plaintiff, to the transfer, and the original tenants remained in possession as sub-tenants of the purchaser:

Held, that the principle laid down in Kabil Sardar's case, 20 C. 590, did not apply, and the landlord was entitled to a decree for ejectment against the purchaser. NAGAR ALI JOARDAR v. KALA CHAND SARDAR 654

Land Revenue, nature of 953

——— ——— ——— sale—Fraudulent transfer 878

Land, suit for. See SUIT FOR LAND.

Lease. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

———Assignee from lessee—Liability for rent—Apportionment of rent—Privity of estate 933

——— granted after 1st July 1898—Admissibility 353

——— from mortgagor after mortgage suit—Lis pendens—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Lease after mortgage but before mortgage suit—Lease valid if granted on usual terms in ordinary course of management—Burden of proof 1

———Landlord's arrears—Possession by liquidator—Landlord's acquiescence — Landlord, whether secured creditor 976

——— for long term of years—Leased land planted up as garden—Forfeiture condition on non-payment of rent—Relief against forfeiture—Deposit of rent in Court—Discretion 991

——— prior to 1882—Forfeiture for non-payment of rent 947

———Privity of contract between lessor and lessee 500

———Transfer of occupancy rights—Sale—Burden of proof 889

———Usufructuary mortgage—Subsequent execution of mulgeni lease to stranger—No change of character as lessee—Lessor entitled to possession—Merger 265

———Claim for rent—Advance of kattakonam to lessor by lessee—Assignment by lessor of his reversion—Kattakonam, whether can be set-off—Assignor or assignee liable for kattakanom.

On the execution of a lease deed, the lessee advanced a certain sum as kattakanom to the lessor, whereby the interest due on the latter was to be deducted from the rent due every year and the principal amount of the kattakonam was re-payable at the termination of the lease, which was a lease from year to year. Soon after the lease, the lessor assigned his reversion to a third party. The lessor then sued for rent:

Lease—contd.

Held, (1) that the lessee could not set off the kattakanom as against plaintiff's claim;

(2) that the tenant was entitled to proceed for his kattakanom against either assignor or assignee and;

(3) that in the absence of a special agreement, the right to enforce the kattakanom did not accrue due on the date of the assignment; but on the termination of the tenancy. VEERARAYAN v. PARAKAL GOPAL MENON 623

——— Covenant for renewal—Permanency—Lease for term of years—Option of renewal—Option exercisable by lessee and his representative—Where no terms stated, lease to be renewed on former terms—Perpetual renewal—Covenant for renewal, if runs with land—Suit in ejectment—Lessee ready to accept renewal on proper terms—Covenant still specifically enforceable—Construction—Grant to be construed in favour of grantee.

A lease recited the prior settlements upon the termination of the last of which the lease was renewed at enhanced rent. It then provided that if the lessee stood in need of constructing any house, he could build on obtaining sanction therefor from the lessor, the Collector. If the lessee failed to pay rent, the Government might realise the arrear under the laws in force, and take possession of the land. The lessee, his heirs and representatives, would have the right to dwell on the land. After the expiry of the term, the Government would have power to re-settle the land with the lessee on a fair rent:

Held, that the last clause was intended to be a covenant for renewal.

A renewal clause in a lease does not necessarily import permanency; but if it did, the clause requiring sanction of the Collector to the erection of a building, is not necessarily inconsistent with the theory of a permanent grant; the object of such sanction may be not so much to prevent the erection of a building as to secure that the building should be of a suitable type from a sanitary or architectural or other similar point of view.

An express covenant to renew in appropriate technical language is not essential, and the habendom may be so framed as to amount in substance to a covenant for even perpetual renewal.

A lease, which creates a tenancy for a term of years may yet confer on the lessee an option of renewal.

If the lease does not state by whom the option is exercisable, it is exercisable by the lessee only.

The option is exercisable not merely by the lessee personally but also by his representative-in-interest.

If the option does not state the terms of renewal, the new lease will be for the same period and on the same terms as the original lease, in respect of all the essential conditions thereof, except as to the covenant for renewal itself.

There is no sort of legal presumption against a right of perpetual renewal. The burden of strict proof is imposed upon a person claiming such a right. It should not be inferred from any equivocal expressions which may fairly be capable of being otherwise interpreted. The intention in that behalf should be clearly shown; otherwise, the agreement is satisfied and exhausted by a single renewal.

Lease -concld.

A covenant for a renewal runs with the land.

The position of a lessee, who has been always ready and willing to accept a renewal on proper terms, is the same in equity as if a proper lease had been granted. Where the covenant for renewal was still specifically enforceable at the commencement of a suit for ejectment against the lessee, the position of the lessee in equity is the same as if it had been specifically enforced.

Per Beachcroft, J.—A meaning must be given to every clause where possible, and if there is ambiguity in a grant, it must be construed in favour of the grantee. SECRETARY OF STATE v. FORBES, 16 C. L. J. 217 180

Leave to sue—Suit to remove Granthi 270

Legacy, vesting of 754

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 13—Professional misconduct—High Court Rules, Chapter XV, rule 25—General Civil Courts Rules, 1911, Chapter XXI, rule 37—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 73.

If a Pleader, acting for a decree-holder, purchases the property sold in execution of his client's decree, he is guilty of professional misconduct. The evil is equally great if he purchases the property for other persons.

Therefore, where, in execution of his client's decree, a Pleader made a purchase on behalf of his father, the Court held him guilty of misconduct.

Per Chamier, J.—Rule 37 of Chapter XXI of the General Rules, Civil, 1911, applies even to a Pleader of the High Court, when he is practising in the Subordinate Courts. HAR PRASAD SINGH, In the matter of, 13 CR. L. J. 794 539

——— ——— ——— s. 13—Professional misconduct—Advocate—Grave moral turpitude—Instituting false case and supporting it by gross perjury—Evidence—Conviction.

Where an Advocate was found guilty of having committed gross perjury and where the course of his conduct displayed great moral turpitude in having instituted a false case and having supported it by false statement:

Held, that he was unfit to remain an Advocate any longer and should be ordered to be struck off the rolls.

In proceedings under the Legal Practitioners Act, the High Court will not go into the merits of the conviction but will ordinarily accept the findings of Criminal Courts as final. M. M. J., In the matter of, 5 BUR. L. T. 191; 13 CR. L. J. 875 811

——— ——— ——— s. 13 — Legal Practitioners Act Rules by Madras High Court, rule 27—Professional misconduct—Failure to appear for client in Court after receiving fee—Failure to make arrangements for professional help to client—False defence—Negligence, when amounts to misconduct—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 3, 136 —Purchase of actionable claim by Pleader during pendency of suit—Evidence—Admissibility of judgment in civil suit between parties relating to same subject-matter—Whether conclusive proof—Pleader engaging in trade

Legal Practitioners Act—contd.

—Carrying on family trade—Misconduct—Failure to report to High Court—Punishment.

A Pleader is amenable to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court for failure to appear for his client at the trial of the cause after receiving the fees thereof or, in the event of unavoidable circumstances precluding his appearance, for failure to make the necessary arrangement for his client.

The judgment in a civil suit between the Pleader and his client, relating to the subject-matter of the inquiry against the Pleader under the Legal Practitioners Act, is admissible in the latter inquiry to establish at least a prima facie case against the Pleader but such judgment will not be conclusive proof and the Pleader is entitled to adduce additional evidence in such proceedings in rebuttal of the charges against him.

The purchase of an actionable claim by a Pleader amounts to professional misconduct, the more so when the claim has been put in Court and is ripe for judgment.

Failure to obtain the sanction of High Court before a Pleader engages in trade, is in contravention of rule 27 of the rules under the Act.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—In the absence of an agreement that the fee promised should be previously paid, it is doubtful whether a plea of non-payment of a part of the fee would be of any avail in an action against the Pleader under the Legal Practitioners Act.

Mere negligence, as the omission by a Pleader to do his duty, may not amount to misconduct. But where the negligence is gross or where the Pleader falsely repudiates an agreement that he had entered into with his client, he is amenable to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court.

The judgment in the civil suit will be relevant under section 11 of the Evidence Act.

The judgment will not be admissible where the conduct of the Pleader was not the direct issue in the Court which found him guilty of misconduct, but only arose incidentally in a litigation between other parties.

A Pleader, who belongs to a trading family should not be regarded as trading simply because other members carry on the trade, the benefit of which would go to all the members of the family, including the Pleader. But if all the members enter into a partnership and carry on a family trade as partners, then all of them must be regarded as carrying on the trade.

Per Sankaran Nair, J.—A Vakil is bound to appear in Court and conduct his client's case even if the fee or any portion thereof remains unpaid, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary or at least notice to that effect to the client in sufficient time to enable him to make other arrangements.

The High Court has not declared, under section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act, that it is unprofessional for a Pleader to follow any trade or business, especially where Pleaders belong to a joint family which is carrying on a family trade, but the omission to report this circumstance under rule 27 of the High Court Rules brings the defaulting Pleader under clause (b) or (f) of section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act and renders him liable to punishment. MUNIREDDI v. VENKATA RAO, 23 M. L. J. 447; (1912) M. W. N. 1023; 12 M. L. T. 615; 13 CR. L. J. 800 544

Legal Practitioners Act—contd.

——— ——— ——— ss. 13, 14 — Grossly improper conduct—Muktear adding his own name to list of Muktears in vakalatnamah at request of person representing executant of vakalatnamah —Absence of improper motive—Apology by Mukhtear.

A Muktear added to the names, that were given in a vakalatnamah, his own name, and also altered certain words in the body of the vakalatnamah, at the request of the person who appeared to represent the individual who had executed the vakalatnamah, without any improper motive. He pointed out to that individual, who came to engage him to file a criminal appeal, that he could not do it unless the vakalatnamah contained his name, and thereupon at the request of this person he added his name:

Held, that although the Mukhtear was wrong in making the alteration in the vakalatnamah, yet in doing so, he was not actuated by any improper motive which would constitute grossly improper conduct under the Legal Practitioners Act, and that, therefore, there was no reason for passing any order under section 14 of the Act.

The Mukhtear in an apology expressed his regret for what he had done:

Held, that the apology might be accepted. PURNA CHANDRA CHATTERJEE, In the matter of, 17 C. W. N. 328; 13 CR. L. J. 846 718

——— ——— ——— s. 14 718

——— ——— ——— s. 36—Tout—Legal evidence necessary.

Before a person can be declared a tout under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, there should be legal evidence to show that he is a tout or that he is reported as such. The mere report of a Bar Association is insufficient. In re SOMAYAJULU RAMAMURTHI, 12 M. L. T. 259; (1912) M. W. N. 959 251

——— ——— ——— rules by Madras High Court, r. 27 544

Legal representative 101

Letters of Administration 4

——— ——— ——— obtained by heir after testator's property dealt with by executor appointed by testator—Effect of such Letters 868

——— ——— ——— Debuttar property—Whether Letters should be granted where no estate to be administered—Device to secure decision on contested question of title

Where there is no estate which stands in need of administration, no suggestion that any creditors have to be paid or any debts due to the estate have to be collected, and an application for Letters of Administration is a transparent device to secure from the Probate Court a decision upon a contested question of title to the estate, there is no occasion for the grant of Letters of Administration. PROSONNO KUMARI DEBI v. RAM CHANDRA SINGHA, 17 C. L. J. 66 155

Letters Patent (Bom.), cl. 12—High Court—Jurisdiction—"Suit for land"—Suit for recovery of title deeds of immoveable property at Mauritius—Nature of suit.

A suit for the recovery of title-deeds of immoveable properties situate at Mauritius is not triable on the Original Side of the Bombay High Court.

Letters Patent—contd.

In order to ascertain the true nature of a suit, a Court is bound to look further than the four corners of the plaint.

The words "suit for land" do not mean only suits for the recovery of land. The words include a suit which, having regard to the real object of the suit and the rights and contentions of the respective parties is substantially a claim in respect of land.

A suit for recovery of title-deeds of land is substantially a suit for land and is in effect and in reality a suit for establishing title to that land and the recovery of possession thereof. ZULEKABAI v. EBRAHIM, 14 BOM. L. R. 846 198

——— ——— ——— cl. 39—High Court decision in Land Acquisition Act 952

——— ——— ——— (Cal.) cl. 12—High Court—Jurisdiction—"Suit for land"—Trespass—Wrongful breaking through mine and carrying away coal—Covenant to keep barrier between lessor and lessee—Privity of contract between lessor and sub-lessee—Cause of action—Suit for damages for erection of buttresses.

A suit to recover damages for breaking through plaintiff's mine or land and carrying away coal belonging to the plaintiff, is a suit for land or immoveable property within the meaning of clause 12 of the Calcutta Letters Patent.

Such a suit is founded on the ordinary case of a trespass quare clausum fregit and necessitates the decision of the question of title as to the coal.

The venue of a suit on a covenant by reason of a privity of estate is local.

A., an under-lessee, covenanted that he would leave a certain barrier as was provided in the under-lease. Subsequently, A. assigned his rights or granted an under-lease to B., who granted an under-lease to C. The representative of the original lessor sued C. for damages for breach of the covenant to leave the barrier and for damages to which plaintiff would be put in erecting masonry buttresses to protect his mine:

Held, (1) that there was no privity of estate between C. and the plaintiff, that C. was not personally liable on the covenant in the original sub-lease, and that the plaint did not disclose any cause of action against C. on the covenant in the original sub-lease;

(2) that the claim for damages for erecting masonry buttresses was a claim for land, within the meaning of clause 12 of the Letters Patent. LODNA COLLIERY CO. LD. v. BIPIN BIHARI BOSE, 39 C. 739 500

——— ——— ——— (Mad.), cls. 11, 12—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Suit to declare a mortgage of property outside Madras fraudulent—Suit for land—Suit to avoid incumbrance—Jurisdiction—High Court—Original jurisdiction—Extent considered.

A suit to avoid an incumbrance on land is a suit for land within the meaning of the Letters Patent.

Where the Official Assignee sues for a declaration that a mortgage of properties situate in the North Arcot District, executed by an insolvent in favour of another person, is fraudulent and not binding on him, the suit is not within the jurisdiction of the original side of the Madras High Court, as the landed property is situate outside its jurisdiction.

Letters Patent—concld.

The High Court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, is merely a Local Court, and the general principle of construction applicable to an enactment conferring jurisdiction is that it must clearly appear that a particular case falls within the provisions of the enactment and that the jurisdiction should not be extended by implication. OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE OF MADRAS v. RAMASAMY IYENGAR, 12 M. L. T. 229; (1912) M. W. N. 974; 23 M. L. J. 726 342

——— ——— ——— cl. 12 342

License—Equitable mortgage — Assignment—After-acquired property—Covenant to re-place goods sold by other goods 31

Lien—License—Equitable mortgage—Assignment—After-acquired property—Covenant to re-place goods sold by other goods 31

Limitation—Acquisition of tenancy by prescription 606

——— ——— ———Appeal to District Judge 653

——— ——— ———Application to set aside award—Power of Court to extend time 7

——— ——— ———Attachment of land and standing crops—Suit to declare attachment illegal—Subsequent suit for damages for loss of crops 185

——— ———Auction sale—When becomes complete—Application to set aside sale by deposit of purchase money 783

——— ——— Contract to sell—Suit for specific performance 399

——— ——— ———Decree in partition suit—Ascertaining plaintiff's share—Co-parcenary between defendants not destroyed—Exclusion 642 ——— ——— ——— Execution of decree. See LIMITATION ACT, 1908, SCH. I, ARTS. 179, 182.

——— ———Execution of decree—Petition by transferee to enter up satisfaction 617

——— ——— ———Foreclosure—Mortgage by conditional sale 467

——— ——— ———Land acquisition award—Application for reference to Court 395

——— ———Mutual, open and current account, test for determining 48

——— ——— ———Order of Collector awarding plaintiff's land to defendant without authority 881

——— ——— ———Plea of limitation—Onus on plaintiff to prove that his suit is within time—Auction-purchaser—Symbolical possession—Limitation to run from date of symbolical possession 518

——— ———Plaint returned for presentation to proper Court—Appeal against order—Confirmation of original order by Appellate Court—Revision to High Court 593

——— ———Property held by widow—Suit by reversioner to recover after death of widow—Adverse possession 136

——— ———Pre-emption—Right of othidar in possession to claim pre-emption—Knowledge of sale to third party 337

Limitation—contd.

——— ——— ———Right of next holder of vatan after death of judgment-debtor 170

——— ——— ———Sale-in-execution — Application for delivery of possession, three years after confirmation of sale 242

——— ———Sale of equity of redemption—Declaratory suit 864

——— ———Sale of third person's interest after discharge of decree 591

——— ———Streets and drains in Municipal towns 158

——— ———Suit by legatee to recover property alienated by executor 4

——— ———Suit for fresh partition after private partition found to be invalid 10

——— ———Suit for refund of excess amount realised by landlord without claiming penalty 504

——— ——— ———Suit for wages of wet-nurse 658

——— ———Suit to recover interest from holder of Government Promissory-Notes—Pendency of previous litigation—Money had and received to plaintiff's use 311

——— ———Whether a good ground for revision 470

——— ——— Custom—Alienation by widow—Next heirs not contesting alienation—Suit for possession by remote heirs after death of nearer heirs—Starting point of limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 140, 141, 144.

On the death of N., his widow S. succeeded to the land in suit and she sold it in 1890. On her death H. was entitled to claim the land. He did not claim it nor did his son D. D.'s widow too made no claim and died in 1907. Plaintiff, after her death, became entitled to the land and sued for possession:

Held, that the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff on the death of D.'s widow and the suit was consequently not barred.

The anomalous condition of the law pointed out. SHAMAN v. ARI JANG, 172 P. W. R. 1912; 208 P. L. R. 1912 503

——— ——— Decree for rent obtained by co-sharer landlord without joining co-sharers—Money decree—Execution—Special limitation, if applicable—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 148A, 158A, Sch. III, Art. 6.

A decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord for his share of the rent in a suit, not brought under section 148A or section 158A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and in which the other co-sharers are not joined as parties, is a simple money-decree.

Consequently, to an application for the execution of such a decree, the special limitation prescribed by Article 6 of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply. MR. K. B. DUIT v. GOSTHA BEHARY BHUIYA, 16 C. W. N. 1006; 16 C. L. J. 279 207

——— ——— Mortgage decree for sale—Execution—Time when limitation begins to run.

Limitation for the execution of a decree for sale in a suit on a mortgage, runs from the date when the first decree or decree nisi for sale is made absolute. VENKATA PERUMAL RAJU v. AUDIKESAVALU REDDI, 23 M. L. J. 675; 12 M. L. T. 652 759

Limitation—contd.

——— Mortgage decree—Claim by second mortgagee for lien—Rejection of claim—Suit to establish mortgage—Parties—Mortgagor necessary party—Exclusion of time occupied by conciliation proceedings—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 11—Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), ss. 47, 48—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85.

A, an agriculturist under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, mortgaged his property to B. Subsequently, he mortgaged the same property to C. B. obtained a decree on his mortgage against A. without impleading C. When B. sought to sell the property in execution of his decree, C. intervened claiming a lien on the property. C.'s claim petition was rejected on 19th June 1907. On the 15th July 1908, C. brought a suit against A. and B. to establish his mortgage and to get rid of the order made against C. in claim proceedings. Before filing the suit, C. had to obtain a conciliator's certificate as A. was an agriculturist. If the period taken up in conciliation proceedings were deducted, the suit was within time. B. contended that this period could not be deducted as A. was not a necessary party to the suit:—

Held: (1) that although A. was not a party to the order of 19th June 1907, he was, as a person interested in the mortgaged property, a necessary party to the suit to establish the mortgage;

(2) that the period occupied by conciliation proceedings should be deducted in computing the period of limitation prescribed for the suit;

(3) that the suit was, therefore, within time. EKNATH PANDOBA KOSTI v. DAGDURAM, 14 BOM. L. R. 750; 36 B. 624 87

——— ———, question of—Court's duty to decide—Practice—Pleadings—Appeal — Suit found time-barred—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 3—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, rr. 2, 33.

A question of limitation, when it arises upon the facts before a Court, must be heard and determined, whether or not it is directly raised in the pleading or in the grounds of appeal.

In such a case, section 3 of the Limitation Act, 1908, is not controlled by any rule of pleadings, e. g., Order XLI, rule 2, Civil Procedure Code

Where the claim, or any part thereof, has been decreed in a suit, which, on appeal from such decree, is found to be barred by limitation, the Appellate Court is not only competent, under Order XLI, rule 33, Civil Procedure Code, but is compelled, by section 3 of the Limitation Act, to dismiss the suit whichever party may have made the appeal. GANESHDAS v. Musammat NIMBI, 8 N. L. R. 174 638

——— ———Restitution of conjugal rights, suit for—Demand and refusal—Failure to bring suit for two years after refusal while old Limitation Act in force—Suit brought after fresh demand and refusal while new Act in force—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 35—Limitation Act (IX of 1908)—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 6.

A., the wife of B., left her husband in 1896 and lived with her mother since then. In 1906, B. sent to A. a formal demand to return to him; she equally formally refused to do so.

Limitation—contd.

On 16th June 1911, B. sent to A. a fresh notice to return to his house and allow him to exercise the conjugal rights. As the notice was not complied with, B. sued A. on 20th June 1911 for restitution of conjugal rights:

Held, (1) that the suit was barred;

(2) that B.'s right to sue had become barred by virtue of Article 35 of the Limitation Act, 1877; and

(3) that the right could not be revived by the passing of the Limitation Act, 1908, which repealed Article 35 of the old Act. MAHOMAD MEHDI FAYA THARIA v. SAKINABAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 908 629

——— ——— Rent suit—Institution of suit after interest of landlord had ceased—Relation when right to sue accrued—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), Sch. III, Art. 2 (b)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908) Sch. I, Art. 110.

The question whether a suit for the recovery of arrears of rent is a suit brought by a landlord within the meaning of Article 2 (b), Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, ought to be determined with reference to the relation in which the parties stood when the right to sue accrued, that is, when the arrears of rent claimed fell due.

Therefore, the provisions of that Article apply to a suit for the recovery of rent of a holding by one whose interest as landlord has ceased to exist before the institution of the suit, provided that the arrears claimed accrued due to him when he was the landlord of the defendant. BALMUKUND SAHAI v. TARINI SINGH, 16 C. L. J. 360 343 ——— ———Suit against Railway Company for compensation for loss of goods—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 30, 31—Burden of proof of time of loss—Sufficiency of notice of claim—Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 75—Modes prescribed by rules.

In a suit for compensation for the loss of goods against a Railway Company, the burden of proving when the goods were lost is on the Company.

Where it is not proved that the goods were lost more than one year before the institution of the suit, neither Article 30 nor Article 31 bars such a suit if it is brought within one year from the date of refusal to deliver.

The modes of service of notice prescribed by the Railways Act are not exhaustive.

Where a mode of service of notice of a claim for compensation is prescribed by the rules of a Railway Company, and such rules are complied with, the Company cannot plead insufficiency of notice. Notice to the Traffic Manager is good notice when allowed by the rules of the Railway Company.

Section 75 of the Railways Act does not apply where the value of a package entrusted to a Railway Company is not more than Rs. 100. MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RY. CO. v. BHIMAPPA, 23 M. L. J. 511 419 ——— ———Suit by mortgagee for compensation for injury to specific moveable property—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 36, 49.

A suit by a mortgagee to recover compensation from a third person for injury to specific moveable property mortgaged to the former is governed by Article 49 of Schedule I, Limitation Act.

Article 36 of the Act relates to such cases as are not specially provided for in the Schedule. SITHAMBARAM CHETTY v. U KHA GYI, 5 BUR. L. T. 156; 6 L. B. R. 75 906

Limitation—concld.

——— ———Suit for damages for trespass—Setting fire to and destroying pepper vines on one's land—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 36, 39.

A suit for damages for unlawfully setting fire to and destroying pepper vines on one's land is governed by Article 39 of the Limitation Act.

Trespass includes the mischief which the trespasser commits after entering on the land.

Article 36 can apply only to cases of malfeasance, misfeasance or non-feasance not provided for by other Articles. KAYAKOOL NATUVLAPURAYIL MOIDIN KUTTI v. POTTARKULAR KOMAN NAIR, 12 M. L. T. 535; 23 M. L. J. 618; (1912) M. W. N. 1229 605

——— ———Wrong entry in Settlement Record—Subsequent correction of entry—Declaration of right—Cause of action.

Plaintiffs were in proprietary possession of a certain land and were recorded as such in the revenue papers. At the Settlement of 1901, however, they came to be recorded as proprietors of a smaller area than what they were in possession of. They, however, remained in undisturbed possession of what they were entitled to. In 1909, the Collector ordered that the Settlement entries of 1901 should be corrected and plaintiffs' share recorded as before that date. The Commissioner, on appeal, set aside the order of the Collector. The plaintiffs then brought a suit for declaration of their rights to the land:

Held, that the Commissioner's order of 1909 gave them a fresh cause of action for the declaration of their right, notwithstanding that it was passed on appeal from the Collector's order, and the suit, having been brought within six years from that date, was within time. SHEOPHER SINGH v. SHEO NARAIN SINGH, 10 A. L. J. 413 675

Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5 99

——— ———— s. 28 14

——— ———— Sch. II, Art. 11 87

——— ———— art. 14 504, 881

——— ———— art. 35 629

——— ———— arts. 36, 39—Destruction of pepper vines 605

——— ———— art. 44—Suit by legatee to recover alienated property 4

——— ———— art. 46 881

——— ———— art. 47 589

——— ———— arts. 62, 120, 132, 142—Purchase of property by mortgagee—Subsequent sale of property for Government revenue Suit by mortgagee to recover surplus sale-proceeds withdrawn by registered owner—Limitation.

In execution of a mortgage decree, the plaintiff purchased one of the mouzahs within estate K. The entire estate K. was sold for arrears of Government revenue a few months after the plaintiff's aforesaid purchase. After payment of the arrears, a surplus was left with the Collector, who paid it to the defendant, the registered owner, on March 31, 1904. The plaintiff brought this suit on May 23, 1907, for recovery of the money as representing the mortgaged property purchased by him:

Limitation Act—(1877)—contd.

Held, (1) that the money received by the defendant, which belonged to the plaintiff, was money received by the defendant "for plaintiff's use" within the meaning of Article 62 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act of 1877, and that the suit was, therefore, barred, being brought after three years from the date on which the defendant received the money;

(2) that the suit was not governed by Article 132, for the plaintiff having already purchased the property, could not be said to be seeking to pursue against the surplus sale-proceeds the remedy for the recovery of the money charged upon the immoveable property. LACHMI NARAIN v. DHANUKDHARI PROSAD SINGH 351

——— ———— Sch. II, Art. 91—Suit by legatee to recover alienated property 4

——— ———— arts. 120 337, 351

——— ———— arts. 120, 125—"Land"—"Alienation of land"—Sale of equity of redemption—Declaratory suit—Limitation.

The word "land" in Article 125 of the Limitation Act does not cover the equity of redemption in immoveable property.

A sale of equity of redemption is not an alienation of land within the meaning of Article 125.

Consequently, a suit for a declaration of invalidity of a sale of equity of redemption by a Hindu female is governed by Article 120 and the period of limitation is six years. Musammat RALLI v. SUNDAR SINGH, 108 P. R. 1912; 29 P. L. R. 1913 864

——— ———— art. 125—Alienation of land 864

——— ———— art. 127—Adverse possession between co-sharers 657

——— ———— art. 127—Joint property—Suit for partition by one co-sharer—Decree ascertaining plaintiff's share—Co-parcenary between defendants not destroyed—Exclusion to knowledge of co-parcener—Possession—Adverse possession.

A., B. and C. were co-parceners in a joint Hindu family. A. was excluded to his knowledge from all enjoyment of the family property since 1890. The property was in possession of B. In 1895, C. sued B. and A. for his one-sixth share of the property and obtained a decree for this share in 1898. The decree decided that the family was a joint one, that the property in suit was joint family property and that B. was entitled to one-sixth share. In 1907, A. sued B. to recover his share by partition of the family property. A. contended that as against him, the possession of B. should only be considered adverse after 1898. Both the lower Courts held that the suit of A. was barred under Article 127 of the Limitation Act, as he had been excluded from all enjoyment of the property since 1890:

Held, that the suit was barred by time because,

Per Chandavarkar, J.—

(a) the co-parcenary between A. and B. was not destroyed by the decree of 1898;

(b) the judgment and the decree of 1898 did not disturb, as between A. and B., the previous state of things and stop the limitation that had begun to run from 1890;

Limitation Act—(1877)—contd.

Per Batchelor, J.—

(c) the finding of fact that B. held adversely from 1890 was wholly independent of, and unaffected by the decree of 1898, which only decided that the family and the property were joint and the property was consequently partible; and

(d) though A. had a good title to possession in 1898, the possession was actually with B., who was ousting A. to his knowledge and inspite of his title since 1890.

Per Chandavarkar, J.—For a judgment in partition suit brought by one co-parcener for his share, to operate as a severance of interest not only as to him but also as between the other co-parceners sued, the judgment must contain a clear adjudication that each co-parcener either should have or is entitled to a share definitely fixed.

Per Batchelor, J.— Possession is a mere matter of fact, and adverse possession means possession held by some person on his own behalf or on behalf of some person other than the true owner, the true owner having a right to immediate possession. BABAJI AKOBA v. DATTU LAXMAN, 14 BOM. L. R. 923 37 B. 64 642

——— ——— Sch. II, Arts. 132, 142 351

——— ——— ——— art. 144—Insolvent's possession of after-acquired property 14

——— ——— ——— ——— art. 144 — Adverse possession between co-sharers 657

——— ——— ——— art. 144 589

——— ——— ——— ——— art. 147, scope of 467

——— ——— ——— ——— art. 164 420

——— ——— ——— ——— art. 179 — Step-in-aid of execution—Application for extension of time to file extract from Collector's record—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 238.

An application by a decree-holder for an extension of time within which to produce an extract from the Collector's record to be filed with a pending darkhast for execution, is a step-in-aid of execution.

Such an application is not the less a step-in-aid of execution, because its immediate effect may be to defer the satisfaction of the decree. It is not necessary that it should be a step in expedition or acceleration of the execution as against its retardation.

The law requires only that it should be a step-in aid and if the decree cannot be executed at all otherwise than by means of a temporary delay, a step which ensures the ultimate execution, though at the expense of a temporary delay, may well be described as a step-in-aid of execution. SHESHDASACHARYA v. BHIMACHARYA, 14 BOM. L. R. 1204 969

——— ——— ——— ——— art. 179, (4)—"Applying in accordance with law"—Execution of decree—Application when in accordance with law Relief sought outside decree—Omission to file inventories.

All that Article 179, Schedule II of the Limitation Act, 1877, requires the Court to see, for the purposes of limitation, is whether the darkhast itself, whatever its merits on the evidence, is an application made in due conformity with the requirements of the law relating to execution.

An application for execution would not be bad in itself even if it seeks relief not strictly claimable.

If a person other than one entitled to apply applies for execution, or if the person entitled applies for execution in a mode and for a relief outside the decree, the application is not in accordance with law for the plain reason that the decree of which execution is sought is not in reality the decree to which the application professes to relate but some other decree, one not existing and, therefore, incapable of execution according to law.

Where, on the other hand, a decree gives certain reliefs, and the application for execution seeks some or all of them, it may be that, after going into the merits of the application, and considering on evidence all the circumstances and equities of the case, the Court comes to the conclusion that the particular relief or reliefs shall not be granted. Such a decision, however, cannot affect the application for the purposes of the question whether it is by itself in accordance with law, provided it meets in substance the requirements of the Code of Civil Procedure or any other law relating to execution.

Because a decree-holder does not ask by his application for execution for that relief to which he is entitled under the decree in a certain event, and asks for a relief given by the decree until the happening of that event, it does not follow that he has applied for relief outside the decree.

The omission to file inventories with the darkhast is a purely technical defect, which cannot affect the question whether the darkhast itself is substantially in accordance with law.

Per Batchelor, J.—The words "in accordance with law" have no reference to the likelihood of the application succeeding or to the Court's competency to grant any particular relief which has been prayed.

The words are merely an adverbial qualification of the word "applying," and look only to the form or procedure of the application.

If the applying complies with the forms and procedure prescribed in that behalf, the applying is in accordance with law, and not the less so, because, on the merits of the application, whether for one reason or another, the application had to be refused. BANDO KRISHNA KANBARGI v. NARSINHA KONHER DESHPANDE, 14 BOM. L. R. 861; 37 B. 42 210

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), effect on suits for conjugal rights 629

——— ——— ——— s. 3 638

——— ——— ——— s. 5 7

——— ——— ——— s. 10, scope of 689

——— ——— ——— s. 12—Time required for obtaining copy of judgment.

An appellant is entitled to deduct the time occupied in obtaining a copy of the judgment in addition to the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree. KARNAM NARASIMHULU v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 12 M. L. T. 360 393

——— ——— ——— s. 14—Time requisite for obtaining copy—Copy applied by post—Period between completion of copy and delivery to applicant—Central

Limitation Act—(1908)—contd.

Provinces Courts Act (II of 1904), s. 8 (1) (c), rules under.

A decree was passed by a Munsif on 12th May 1911. On 15th May, defendant applied by post for copy of Munsif's judgment and decree.

The application did not reach the office till after it had closed for the vacation and, consequently, the application was treated as received on 16th June when the Courts re-opened after vacation. The copy was ready on 3rd July but it was not despatched by post to the defendant, as the latter took delivery on 4th July in person. The appeal was filed in the District Judge's Court the same day:

Held, (1) that the 3rd and 4th July should be included as part of the time requisite for obtaining the copy;

(2) that the appeal was within time. PAGA v. SADASHEO, 8 N. L. R. 172 624

——— ——— ——— s. 14—"Civil proceeding in a Court of Appeal"—Whether includes revision petition to the High Court—Plaint returned for presentation to proper Court—Appeal against order—Confirmation of original order by Appellate Court—Revision to High Court—Limitation.

A revision petition presented to the High Court under section 622, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is a "Civil proceeding in a Court of Appeal" within the meaning of section 14 of the Limitation Act.

The expression 'Court of Appeal' in section 14 should be understood in the broad sense of a Court which has the power to bring under review the decision of an inferior Court, whatever may be the extent of jurisdiction that the superior Court may possess in reviewing the decision of the inferior Court.

A plaint was returned for presentation to the proper Court; the plaintiff, having unsuccessfully appealed against that order, moved the High Court in revision under section 622, Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and the High Court dismissed the revision petition:

Held, that plaintiff was entitled to deduct the time during which the revision petition in the High Court was pending in computing the period of limitation for his suit. VENKATRAGAYYA APPA ROW v. MURALA SRIRAMULU 593

——— ——— ——— s. 14 513

——— ——— ——— s. 18 972

——— ——— ——— s. 18, Sch. I, Art. 127—Fraud—Knowledge of fraud—Burden of proof—Nature of evidence—Partition—Private partition found to be fraudulent—Suit for fresh partition—Exclusion of plaintiff—Limitation.

Where a Court finds that a partition, effected between the co-parceners of a joint family, was unfair and inequitable, as one of the co-parceners had been imposed upon, the case is reduced to one of a fraudulent partition, and the cause of action for a suit for partition is then, in substance to set aside that partition on the ground of fraud and to treat the family as joint and seek for a fresh partition of the family estate.

For the purpose of limitation, such a case is taken out of Article 127 of the Limitation Act.

Where fraud is found and the Court has to apply the Limitation Act in order to see whether the suit is within time, the Court ought to have evidence of a definite character to show the point of time at which the plaintiff had not merely suspicion but definite knowledge of fraud. In order to make limitation operate when a fraud has been committed by one who has obtained property thereby, it is for him to show that the injured plaintiff has had clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud, at a time which is too remote for the suit to be brought. VITHAPPA DEVAPPA PATIL v. BASAGOWDA DEVAPPA PATIL, 14 BOM. L. R. 771 10

——— ——— ——— s. 19 — Acknowledgment of debt 722

——— ——— ——— s. 20—Payment by a donor—How far keeps debt alive against universal donee—"Party liable."

Where a person was sought to be made liable as a universal donee on a debt contracted by his donor and payments made by the latter after the gift were relied on as saving the bar of limitation:

Held, that the debt was kept alive against the donee by the payments made by the donor.

Section 20 of the Limitation Act requires that the payer should be one liable to pay the debts and provides that the result of the payment would be to give to the creditor a fresh period of limitation from the date of payment; it does not restrict the benefit accruing to the creditor with respect to his debt to his remedy against the payer alone. The debt being kept alive, the result must be to make it enforceable against any one liable for it.

The 'party liable' includes any person or persons against whom an action on the debt could be brought whether liable originally or as representing or taking the estate, real or personal, of the obligor. VELAYUDAM PILLAI v. VAITHYALINGAM PILLAI, 12 M. L. T. 610; 24 M. L. J. 66 619

——— ——— ——— s. 22—New party—Party not signing or verifying pleading 580

——— ——— ——— s. 29 (b) 653

——— ——— ——— Sch. I, Arts. 7, 102—Wet-nurse—Domestic servant—Suit for wages—Limitation.

A wet-nurse does not come within the definition of a house-hold servant; hence a suit by her to recover her wages does not fall under Article 7 of the Limitation Act, but falls under Article 102 of the Act. MOHAN LAL v. Musammat JUMERAT, 10 A. L. J. 395 658

——— ——— ——— arts. 11 (a), 12, applicability of—Sale of third person's interest after discharge of decree.

In execution of a decree of A. against B., C., a nephew of A, purchased a house on the 22nd September 1908. Three days before the auction-sale, B had sold another house to A., the decree-holder, the consideration of which had been set off against the decretal amount. When the auction-purchaser attempted to get possession, he was resisted by one D, grandson of B. D.'s objection was disallowed on the 26th of February 1910. D. then brought a suit to set aside the auction-sale, so far as his interest was concerned, on the 26th of April 1910:

Held, that the suit was governed by Article 11 (a) of the Limitation Act and that it was not barred by limitation. GOPAL DAS v. CHEDI LAL 591

Limitation Act—(1908)—contd.

——— Sch. I, Art. 12 591

——— ——— arts. 30, 31 419

——— ——— ——— art. 36 – Injury to mortgage property 906

——— ——— ——— art. 36 185

——— ——— ——— art. 49 – Injury to mortgage property 906

——— ——— ——— art. 62 185

——— ——— ——— art. 62—Suit by auction-purchaser for recovery of purchase-money 437

——— ——— ——— arts. 62, 120—Limitation—Suit to recover interest from holder of Government Promissory-Notes — Pendency of previous litigation—Money had and received to plaintiff's use.

On 1st December 1898, A., the proprietor of a firm, assigned all his rights in certain Government Promissory-Notes to B. Shortly after, certain creditors of the firm attached these Notes; B. objected to the attachment, but his objection was disallowed, whereupon in May 1900, he sued the decree-holders to establish his right to the Notes and impleaded C., in whose name the Notes stood, as a defendant. The suit was decreed by the Divisional Court on 10th November 1904 and this decree was affirmed by the Chief Court on 18th May 1908. Neither A. nor C. contested B.'s right in this suit. In execution of the decree of the Divisional Court, B. recovered the Notes in October 1905.

During the pendency of this litigation, C. realised the interest due on these Notes for the period, 1st November 1898 to 30th June 1905; the interest was first realized on 13th August 1903. On the 22nd January 1909, B. sued C. for recovery of the interest so realised:

Held, (1) that Article 62 of the Limitation Act, 1908, provided the limitation for the suit;

(2) that the suit was barred by time having been brought three years after the date of realization of interest;

(3) that the fact that the right of B. to the Notes was finally settled on 18th May 1908 in the previous litigation did not give B any extension of time, as

(a) the litigation was not really between B. and A. or C., and

(b) B. had recovered the Notes in execution of the Divisional Court decree in 1905 and the payment of interest was endorsed on the Notes at the time.

Article 62 applies whenever a person actually or constructively receives money for another person's use; in other words, when the receipt by the defendant is in law a receipt to the use of such other person to whom the money at the time of the receipt lawfully belongs. CHAND MAL v. SANSAR CHAND, 16 P. L. R. 1913 311

——— ——— ——— arts. 74, 75—Instalment bond—Default 513

——— ——— ——— art. 102 658

——— ——— ——— art. 110 343

——— ——— ——— art. 120 185

——— ——— ——— art. 120 — Instalment bond—Default 513

Limitation Act—(1908)—contd.

——— Sch. I, Art. 120—Suit by auction-purchaser for recovery of purchase-money 437

——— ——— ——— art. 120—Suit to recover interest from holder of Government Promissory-note 311

——— ——— ——— art. 127 — Suit for partition 10

——— ——— ——— arts. 140, 141 503

——— ——— ——— art. 141 — Property held by widow—Suit by reversioner to recover after death of widow—Adverse possession—Limitation—Tenant-in-common—Right to recover whole property.

One R, the holder of an impartible zemindari, died leaving two illegitimate sons, viz., 1st plaintiff and the father of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, a brother, 1st defendant, and a widow, P.

The zemindari fell to the 1st defendant. In a previous litigation relating to the private property of R., it was decided that the 1st plaintiff was entitled to one-fourth, the father of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 to one-fourth and P. to the other half. In the present suit to recover P.'s half share after her death:

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred under Article 141 of the Limitation Act, as P. did not hold her half share absolutely and plaintiffs' claim was as heirs of R.;

(2) that, though defendant's adverse possession might bar any suit by P. to recover her share after the expiration of 12 years, it would not bar the plaintiffs' right to recover half the share as heirs of R. after the death of P.

The right of a tenant-in-common to recover the whole property as against a trespasser is a right which he is entitled to assert only on behalf of himself and his co-tenants. He cannot do so in the assertion of a right to the whole property in himself.

A tenant-in-common is not bound to make a claim on behalf of his co-tenants. PONNAYA TIRUMALAI VANDAYA THEVAR v. KANDASAMI VANDAYA THEVAR 136

——— ——— ——— art. 142 — Defendant claiming to hold land as tenant 606

——— ——— ——— art. 142—Suit for alluvial land—Burden of proving title and possession within limitation—Nature of proof—Presumption—Settlement Records, entries in.

Where in a suit for possession of certain land as having accreted to plaintiff's village by alluvion, the defendants deny plaintiff's title and also plead that the claim is barred by limitation, it lies on the plaintiff to prove both title and possession within limitation. To bring his claim within limitation, it is open to the plaintiff to prove that the land in suit had accrued by alluvion within limitation, or that although it had accreted more than 12 years before the institution of the suit, it had remained, within the limitation period, waste or jungle land, in respect of which the presumption would arise that possession went with title.

There is a presumption until the contrary is proved that the possession of the parties is correctly shown in the Settlement Records. HABIBULLAH KHAN v. LALTA PRASAD, 10 A. L. J. 190; 34 A. 612 94

Limitation Act—(1908)—concld.

——— Sch. I, Art. 144 — Defendant in possession as tenant 606
——— ——— art. 144 503
——— ——— ——— art. 152 653
——— ——— ——— ——— art. 158 7, 320, 431
——— ——— ——— ——— art. 166 — Starting point—Date of sale 884
——— ——— ——— ——— art. 179 — Execution of decree—Limitation—Step-in-aid of execution—Application for time to procure copies of judgment and decree.

An application for time, made by a decree-holder after presenting a petition for execution of a decree, for procuring copies of the decree and judgment, is a step-in-aid of execution. HARIDAS v. VITHALDAS, 14 BOM. L. R. 765; 36 B. 638 30 ——— ——— ——— art. 180—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 311, 314—Court sale—Application for delivery, 3 years after confirmation of sale, barred.

A Court sale was confirmed on 28th July 1906 and an application for delivery of the property was not made till the 19th January 1910:

Held, that under section 314, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, the sale became absolute on 28th July 1906 and not on the day on which a petition filed by a third party under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, was dismissed.

The application for delivery of the property, having been made after three years from that date, was barred under Article 180, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act. ARUNAGIRI MUDALIAR v. UTHANDO MUDALI, 12 M. L. T. 315; (1912) M. W. N. 1136 242

Liquidator, appointment of 853

Lis pendens — Assignment of decree during appeal 420
——— ——— ——— Lease from mortgagor after mortgage suit 1

Loan and Trust—Advance to broker on pro-note 824

Lunacy Act (XXXV of 1858)—Malabar Law and Usage—Tarwad property, nature of—Karnavan of a Malabar tarwad, declaration of, as lunatic—Appointment of manager in his stead—Powers of karnavan.

The property of a Malabar tarwad is not the individual property of the karnavan and a manager appointed for him obtains no rights over the tarwad property. His powers of management may be modified by a karar entered into by the other members of the family. The members concurring with each other may dispose of the property as they please. The right of disposition is the crucial mark of ownership. If any one of the members does not join, the alienation, unless justified by family necessity, would be invalid because the ownership is as much in any one dissenting member as in all the other members together.

No application can lie for a declaration of lunacy of the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad under Act XXXV of 1858 and for the appointment of a manager in his stead for property other than his separate property. Lunacy of a karnavan is a conclusive ground on which the next Anandravan could claim to have the karnavan removed. Act XXXV of 1858 cannot be applied to a member of a Hindu Mitakshara family who owns no separate property.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J. Quære:— Whether the lunacy of a karnavan would automatically work a forfeiture of his right of management or whether it would be necessary to get him removed by Court? GOVINDAN NAIR v. NARAYANAN NAIR, 23 M. L. J. 706; 12 M. L. T. 585; (1913) M. W. N. 79 473

Madras Act (II of 1894) 481
——— ——— s. 17—Service Inam—Resumption by Government—'Granted or continued' by Government—Non-interference by Government with holder's rights—Whether amounts to 'continuance.'

Under section 17 of Madras Act II of 1894 Government has no right to resume land granted by the proprietor of an estate. In order that Government may have the rights of resumption, the right to the land must, in the first instance, either have emanated from Government, or the continuance of the right must have been due to an act of Government. Mere sufferance by Government, or forbearance from taking steps which it might have been open to the Government to take, will not amount to a 'continuance' by the Government of the land in respect of the office. Mere collateral expressions of opinion which were not intended to be a recognition or confirmation of the right of the holder would equally be insufficient to amount to a continuance. SECRETARY OF STATE v. CHINNAPRAGADA BHANUMURTY 373

Madras City Municipal Act (III of 1904), s. 172, meaning of—"Shall ordinarily be resident in"—Direction not imperative.

Section 172 of the Madras City Municipal Act does not require that one of the Commissioners, hearing an application for revision of assessment, should always be one who is resident in or representative of the division in which the applicant resides or carries on business or in which the property assessed is situate. The meaning of the section is that ordinarily one of the Commissioners hearing the application should be resident in or representative of the division. NARAYANA RAO v. PRESIDENT OF THE CORPORATION OF MADRAS, 23 M. L. J. 591 945

Madras District Municipalities Act (IV of 1884), s. 168 (1) 158

Madras Estates Land Act (Mad. Act (I of 1908), s. 3, clauses (3) & (5), s. 189 and Sch. A. No. 8—Rent, meaning of—Inamdar of certain lands in village, whether a land-holder—Suit for rent by Inamdar—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court.

An Inamdar, to whom a grant only of some lands in his estate has been made by the zemindar, is a 'land-holder' within the meaning of section 3, clause (5 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, and a suit by him for rent against a ryot is cognizable by the Revenue Court. SIVINI APPALANARASIMHULU v. MURADA SANYASI 120
——— ——— ——— ——— s. 185 353
——— ——— ——— ——— s. 189, Sch. A, No. 8 120

Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865) 445
——— ——— ——— s. 58 953

Maintenance, form of—Widow—Daughter—Khattars of Fatehjang 903

——— ——— ———Right to receive money—Interest in estate out of which annuity paid—Personal right or interest in property—Saleable property—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 60, cl. (n), proviso—Restraint on alienation—Involuntary sale—Payer's property vested in Court of Wards—Whether manager under Court compellable to bring money to Court month by month—Whether Receiver may be appointed.

A well marked distinction has been recognised between a right to receive a sum of money for purposes of maintenance properly so called, and a right or interest in property which really forms a fund or estate out of which an annuity is periodically paid to the grantee; in the former case, a purely personal right is created which may be properly deemed inalienable; in the latter case, an interest in property is created which can rightly be deemed alienable. Whether a particular grant falls within the scope of the one principle or the other, must depend upon its terms.

A father, finding himself unable to pay his creditors, conveyed to his son all his properties for the consideration of paying off his debts. The transferee agreed to pay to his father, the transferor, during his life a monthly sum and two annual sums. These sums were made first charges upon the estate in the hands of the son, subject to the then existing mortgages executed by the father. The deed contained a covenant that the allowances were payable to the vendor personally and would be absolutely incapable of transfer in any form whatever:

Held, that the right of the father to receive the annuity was a valuable interest in property and saleable property within the meaning of section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, and could not be regarded as a right to future maintenance within the meaning of clause (n) of the proviso to that section; that the clause in the document seeking to impose a restraint on alienation, was illegal; that a restraint on voluntary alienation, even if validly imposed, did not necessarily imply a restraint against involuntary alienation, and that the restraint did not bar a compulsory sale at the instance of the father's creditors.

The father's decree-holder is entitled to attach and sell the right to receive the allowance. The purchaser at the sale will acquire the right of the judgment-debtor. Before that event takes place, the manager under the Court of Wards, in whom the estate of the son has vested, cannot be called upon to pay the money into Court month by month.

Nor can a Receiver be appointed to receive the money month by month. PADMANAND SINGH BAHADUR v. RAMA PRASAD MALVI, 16 C. L. J. 354 284

Majority Act (IX of 1875), s. 3—Hindu Law—Will—Power of minor Hindu to make Will—"Minor," meaning of.

A Hindu is not competent to make a Will, unless he has attained majority under the Majority Act.

The Majority Act has modified the Hindu Law on the question of minority except in respect of marriage and adoption. BAI GOLAB v. THAKORLAL, 14 BOM. L. R. 748; 36 B. 622 86

Malabar Compensation for Tenants' Improvements Act (Mad. Act I of 1900), s. 5—Compensation to tenant—Improvements effected by third party.

In order to entitle a tenant to compensation under section 5 of the Malabar Compensation for Tenants Improvements Act, it is not necessary that the improvements should be effected by the tenant himself. It is quite sufficient that, at the time of ejectment, the improvements are on the land, even if they were made by some previous occupant. THUPRAN v. MAMAD KASIM SAIT 433

——— ——— ——— ss. 6, 15—Tables prepared under clause 2 of section 15, object of—Tables prepared after disposal of suit and pending appeal—Remand of suit—Re-valuation—Admissibility of tables.

The preparation by Goverment of tables under section 15, of the Malabar Tenancy Improvements Act I of 1900, is not intended to create any fresh right in favour either of the tenant or of the landlord. They are admissible in evidence to prove the compensation to which the tenant is entitled and are presumptive evidence of the proper amount of compensation. The compensation, however, is itself determined by the provisions of section 6, viz., by the market-value.

Where the tables are prepared after the disposal of a suit and pending an appeal, the Appellate Court should not remand the suit for the purpose of determining the compensation according to the tables, though, if a re-valuation became necessary in execution or otherwise, the tables might be received in evidence. VELUTHEMANA v. PATHUMA 131

——— ——— ——— s. 15 131

Malabar Law and Usage—Tarwad property, nature of—Karnavan of a Malabar tarwad, declaration of, as lunatic—Appointment of manager in his stead—Powers of karnavan 473

——— ——— ———Tarwad property—Self-acquisition of karnavan—Survivorship—Notice—Order to make inventory—Jurisdiction—Direction of deceased 429

——— ——— ———Self-acquisitions of a female member of tarwad, whether devolve on tarwad or her tavazhi.

The self-acquisitions of a female member of a Marumakkattayam tarwad, on her death, do not lapse to the tarwad of which she dies a member, but descend to her tavazhi, i. e., to her issue, if she has any, and, if not, then to the tavazhi to which she would, in that case, belong according to the Customary Law of Malabar. KRISHNAN NAIR v. DAMODARAN NAIR, 13 M. L. T. 166 769

——— ——— ———Tavazhi—Medical expenses incurred by member of tavazhi—Right to recover from karnavan of tarwad.

A member of a Malabar tavazhi, who has incurred expenses for his medical treatment, cannot claim the same as against the karnavan of the tavazhi, but can enforce its payment from the karnavan of the tarwad. KELU ACHAN v. UMALA ACHAN 704

——— ——— ———Uralans of temple—Sawatham, grant of, by devaswom to tarwad whose Karnavan is an uralan.

Malabar Law and Usage—concld.

The grant of a Saswatham is prima facie an improper act and where it purports to be granted by a Devaswom to a tarwad, the Karnavan of which is himself the Uralan of the Devaswom, the Courts should ordinarily not enforce it.

Any transaction by which a trustee obtains an interest in properties belonging to the trust is to be deprecated, and where it can be set aside without injury to the trust, the Court should do so. NEELAKANDAN NAMBUDRI v. NARAYANAN NAMBUDRI 128

Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Damages.

A., who dealt in sugar at Lakhiserai, in compliance with a written order from B., sent a consignment of sugar to him at Agra. B., however, did not pay for it. A. went to Agra and found the sugar in the shop of C. he accordingly lodged a complaint of cheating against B. and C. B and C. were acquitted, whereupon C. sued A. for damages for malicious prosecution:

Held, that there was no reasonable and probable cause which justified A.'s complaint and, consequently, he was liable for damages for malicious prosecution. KESHO PARSHAD v. RAM KISHEN DAS 316 ——— ——— ——— ———Suit for damages—Reasonable and probable cause.

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution what the Court has to see is what was the conduct of the complainant before and after making the charge and whether the charge was false to his knowledge.

The mere fact that one Criminal Court has believed in the truth of the complaint is not sufficient evidence of the existence of reasonable and probable cause. PADARATH v. DULAM, 10 A. L. J. 423 879

Mamlatdars' Courts Act (II of 1906), s. 28 676

Marine Insurance Policy—Perils of the sea 188

Marriage. See HINDU LAW—MARRIAGE.

Master and servant—Possession—Servant fetching gun for licensed master 796 ——— ——— ——— ———Contract of service for definite term—Discontinuance of service by the servant during term—Right to claim compensation for period of work—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 39, 64, 65, 73 and 74.

The plaintiff entered defendant's service under an engagement to work for a period of one year on a salary of Rs. 18 per month, the same being payable in a lump sum at the end of the year. He discontinued his services just 10 days before the expiry of the year without any justification and sued to recover the wages for the period during which he had actually worked:

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover for that period.

A servant who without excuse abandons his employment before the expiry of the term may, after its expiration, recover the value of the services performed less the master's damages for the breach of the contract.

Where one party hires himself to another for a given period of time and leaves his services before the expiration of the term without any fault on the part of the employer, the former may recover the value to the services performed as upon a quantum meruit without showing that he performed his entire contract or that he left the services of his employer without any good cause.

Master and servant—concld.

In cases between master and servant, Courts should not be too strict in treating the contracts of service for a certain period and for a certain wage as indivisible unless the nature of service raises a strong presumption that the servant intended not to claim wages for a broken period.

In calculating the reasonable remuneration for the broken period, the broken contract is admissible to prove the nature of the service for the broken period. CHOKALINGAM MUDALIAR v. MAHOMED SHERIFF, (1912) M. W. N. 1212; 12 M. L. T. 594; 23 M. L. J. 680 894

——— ——— ——— ———Liability of servant for wrong done on behalf of master.

Inasmuch as the law holds the doer of a wrong liable for it, a wrong-doer cannot escape liability on the ground that he was a servant acting for the benefit of his master. DAJI v. RUKHMA, 8 N. L. R. 159 378

——— ——— ———Monthly servant—Wages for broken period—Pleadings—Case not set up in plaint.

A monthly servant who leaves without notice is entitled to be paid down to the date when wages were last due but not for the broken period he has served since that date.

In a suit by a monthly servant, the Court cannot make out a case of wrongful dismissal, not set up in the plaint, and not supported by plaintiff's witnesses. STEWART v. SIMON GONSALVES, 5 BUR. L. T. 167; 6 L. B. R. 74 900

Material alteration—Pro-note 281

Maxims - Actio personalis moritur cum persona 226

Melvaram 353

Merger of colorable transaction in decree 39

——— ———Usufructuary mortgage—Subsequent execution of Mulgani lease to a stranger 265

——— ———Proprietor possessing nij jote lands—Interest of proprietor, sale of—Whether right to nij jote subsists—Mortgage of interest of mortgagor—Express reservation—Presumption—Construction of deed—Deed to be construed in favour of grantee.

When a proprietor is in possession of nij jote lands, it cannot be said that he has, in respect of such lands, an interest subordinate to the proprietary interest, so that when his interest as proprietor disappears, along with it must disappear his interest in the nij jote lands.

It is a maxim in law that every man's grant shall be taken by that construction of law which is most forcible against himself. Therefore, the words of a deed executed for a valuable consideration ought to be construed, as far as they properly may, in favour of the grantee.

Therefore, when a person effects a mortgage of his interest in the mortgaged property, unless there is express reservation, the presumption would follow that he has given by way of security all interests of whatever kind he possessed in the land. BHOJOHARI DAS ADHIKARI v. BHAGABATI DASI 494

S. N. DAR, B. A. LL. B.,
Vakil High Court,
SRINAGAR (Kashmir)

Mesne profits, decree, for, obtained by evicted tenant, whether revives claims for rent—Defaulting patnidar purchasing tenure—Evicting dar-patnidar—Annulment of dar-patni 238

——— ——— ———Execution of decree for mesne profits—Interest.

In execution of a decree for mesne profits, the decree-holder is entitled to claim interest on mesne profits, as the definition of the term includes interest on such profits. BANWARI LAL v. Musammat RAMA, 10 A. L. J. 533 915

Migration—Presumption of carrying of personal law 257

Minerals lying on surface of soil 490

Minor. See HINDU LAW—MINOR.

———, contract by, is void 979

———De facto guardian mortgaging minor nephew's property—Suit for possession—Right of nephew and sons of mortgagor to resist claim on the ground of no necessity—Joint and several liability 247

———, meaning of 86

———'s money—Investment—Trust 597

———Next friend's disobedience—Party to suit—Order for personal appearance—Power of Court 762

———Custody—Father's right—Adoption without father's consent not valid—Acquiescence.

A. sued B. for custody of his child. It was found that A. had deserted the mother of the child; the latter had given it in adoption to B. to save its life and B. had brought it up. It was contended that the plaintiff had relinquished his right of custody or had lost it by acquiescence in adoption:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff could not be said to have relinquished his right inasmuch as there was nothing to show that he was in a position to look after the child at the time of the alleged adoption and that such adoption being without his consent was not valid;

(2) that even if he had acquiesced, he would have been entitled to cancel the adoption. MA THET v. MG PO TUN, 5 BUR. L. T. 171 962

———incurring debt—Subsequent conduct in raising another loan from the same creditor—Ratification—Apparent necessity at the time of incurring debt.

Where a person contracts a loan while a minor, and, after attaining majority, takes further advances from the same creditor, this subsequent conduct of his constitutes a ratificatinn on his part of the original debt incurred during minority.

If a creditor knows that his debtor has sufficient justification for requiring money, both being residents of the same village, he acts rightly in advancing it, and is entitled to recover the sum thus advanced with interest. JAWAHRI MAL v. DHANPAT, 163 P. W. R. 1912; 170 P. L. R. 1912 223

———Ex parte decree against minor is null and void 263

———Guardian—Power of natural guardian—Sale of minor's property—Validity discussed—Necessity—Benefit.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—Where the mother of a Hindu minor sells his property for the discharge of certain debts due by the minor's father, the validity of the sale must depend upon the general powers and duties of a guardian under the Hindu Law apart from the provisions of the Guardians and Wards Act.

There is a difference between the powers of a natural guardian and one appointed by the Court. The latter class of guardian is under the supervision of the Court, the powers of guardianship are in large part exercised by the Court itself and the appointed guardian can only act subject to its supervision and control. Definite restraints are put upon an appointed guardian by Statutes. These restraints will not be applicable to a natural guardian whose duties must be regulated by considerations of what should be regarded as best in the interests of the minor.

The powers of a manager for an infant heir to charge his estate not his own is under the Hindu Law a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in the case of need or for the benefit of the estate. The question in each case would be whether any alienation or other transactions for the benefit of the minor is necessary so as to satisfy the phrase 'in a case of need.' Again, if a person dealing with a guardian acts bona fide and after due inquiry believes that the transaction is for the minor's benefit or necessary, it can be upheld against him though a ward may have good reasons to complain of the conduct of the guardian.

The words 'necessity' and 'benefit' really import two different ideas. Necessity seems to connote the idea of warding off an evil or the doing of something that cannot be avoided or of something which is one's legal duty to do, such as avoiding a sale of a minor's property for a debt, conducting necessary repairs, maintenance of a minor and performance of his father's funerals, but over and above all these acts that are necessary, there may be acts which are positively beneficial to the minor and an alienation which would conduce positively to the benefit of the minor would be upheld apart from any necessity unless, of course, it is accompanied by other evil.

Demand is not necessary to justify an alienation to discharge a debt. A debt may be a pressure on the estate even though the creditor has not yet demanded payment of it. Whether it would be so, would depend on the circumstances.

It is the duty of the guardian to pay off debts incurred by the father. As a natural guardian has in this country no right to ask the advice of the Court like a statutory guardian, the discretion as to how the duty of discharging the debts binding on the minor should be performed, must rest with him. The question in each case would be, whether the discretion vested in a guardian has been exercised properly. He would be taken to have done so, if he acted with due prudence and caution. As to the degree of prudence required, the right view to take is, whether in the circumstances that existed at the time of the alienation, the act would be regarded as a prudent one by men of ordinary prudence in dealing with the property of a ward.

If the guardian consulted proper advisers, that would be a good test whether the act would be prudent but the mere consultation of others would not be a ground for upholding a transaction if the Minor—concld.

Court is convinced that both those consulted and the guardian made a grave mistake.

The powers of a manager of a Hindu family, a guardian of an infant and a trustee, contrasted.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—If the guardian of a Hindu minor alienates the minor's property because he considers it, after weighing all the then existing circumstances, to be in the best interests of the minor to make that alienation, the minor is clearly bound by that act of alienation.

Even if the guardian has acted wrongly, the alienee is protected if he acts in good faith after making due inquiry and if he is satisfied, on the representations of the guardian and on his own independent inquiry, that the guardian's act appears then to be clearly for the minor's benefit.

Any comparison between the powers of a natural guardian and of a guardian to whom the Guardians and Wards Act applies is of very little utility in deciding as to the powers of a natural guardian under the Hindu law. The Legislature is not bound to follow the common law and can give powers and impose restrictions on certain kinds of guardians according to pleasure. VEMBU IYER v. SRINIVASA IYENGAR, 23 M. L. J. 638; 12 M. L. T. 847 609

Misdirection. See JURY.

Misjoinder of parties—Objection taken for first time in appeal—Inadmissible.

An objection as to misjoinder of parties cannot be taken for the first time in appeal, especially when the suit is decided upon the merits in the first Court. RAGHAVA AIYAR v. MURUGESA MUDALI 97

Mortgage. See EQUITABLE MORTGAGE.

——— ——— by Mitakshara father. See PARTY 577

——— ———Agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee as to disposal of rents and profits—Admissibility of previous negotiations to vary terms 737

——— ——— by co-sharer—Default in paying revenue by other co-sharers—Payment of their share by mortgagee—Suit by mortgagee for recovery of sums paid—Whether suit maintainable without specifying share of revenue payable by each co-sharer 45

——— ———Estoppel—Denial of mortgagee's right by representatives of mortgagors—Waqf property—Simple mortgage—Adverse possession against mortgagor, whether extinguishes mortgage security 632

——— ——— of interest of mortgagor—Express reservation—Presumption—Construction of deed—Deed to be construed in favour of grantee 494

——— ———Mortgage by customary owner—Part of consideration for mortgage not for necessity—Incomplete mortgage—Incompetency of mortgagee to get possession 247

——— ——— by pattadar—Relinquishment—Decree and sale by mortgagee after relinquishment, whether binds new pattadar 253

——— ———Priority—Puisne mortgagee, whether personally responsible for re-payment of mortgage-debt 927

Mortgage—contd.

——— ———Property subject to mortgages—Covenant by vendor to discharge previous mortgages—Pre-emption suit 318

——— ———Splitting up 837

——— ———Tender of mortgage money—Mortgagor claiming to split up the mortgage—Dispute as to extent of mortgagor's right—Refusal of mortgagee to receive tendered amount—Mortgagor's claim for mesne profits—Interest 368

——— ——— by conditional sale—Foreclosure—Limitation—Regulation XVII of 1806—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art 147, scope of—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).

The limitation for an application for foreclosure under Regulation XVII of 1806 is 12 years.

Article 147, Schedule II, Limitation Act of 1877, applied not to foreclosure proceedings under the Regulation but to such suits for foreclosure as under the law then in force could be brought.

Where a right to make an application for foreclosure had come to an end by reason of efflux of time, before the enactment of the Transfer of Property Act, the subsequent enactment of the Act could not resuscitate that right.

Where a mortgage by way of conditional sale, governed by Regulation XVII of 1806, has not provided for possession of the mortgagee, the latter has no right to take possession unless foreclosure proceedings have been taken under the Regulation.

A mortgage by conditional sale, executed in 1865, provided for payment of mortgage-money with interest on 31st March 1866. The mortgagee made no application for foreclosure under Regulation XVII of 1806. In 1910, he brought a suit for foreclosure:

Held, that the suit was barred. SHYAM CHANDRA SINGH v. BALDEO, 10 A. L. J. 522 467

——— ——— Construction of deed—Zar-i-marhuna—Hamrah—Personal remedy of mortgagee as to interest—Redemption—Interest.

The operative part of a mortgage-deed ran as follows:

'Rihn bashrait-i-zail karte hain ke qabza kasht wa muamala Sarkar zimme murtahinan hoga. Zar-i-marhuna se chhih sau pachchas bila sud rahega. Iwaz sud zar-i-bala wa muamala Sarkar paidawar arazi murtahinan lenge. Baqi chhih sau pachchas ke hamrah sud bahisab ek rupia fisadi mahwari denge. Zar-i-sud salana ada hoga. Basurat adam adai sud salana sud dar sud bahisab bala denge. Kasht arazi bamarzi murtahinan muzhiran karenge ... ... Miad koi muqarrar nahin hai. Jab bad darau fasl bamah-i-Har khud kasht murtahinan talab karen zar-i-marhuna *dekar zamin chhura lewenge. Zar-i-*marhuna batafsil-i-zail ... ... wasul pai. Qabza diya gaya ... ... Nisbat zar-i-sud salana bala hamrah chhih sau pachchas rupia murtahinan ko ikhtiyar hoga ke sud dar sud lewen ya muzhiran se ba irja-i-nalish wasul karlewen.'

Held, (1) that the words zar-i-marhunah in the redemption clause in the above extract meant the mortgage-money without any reference to the interest due on it;

(2) that the words hamrah chhih sau pachchas rupia in the last clause of the above extract meant calculated or due on Rs. 650 and in the light of the context were susceptible of no other meaning. The clause was one relating to interest and compound interest, and stood by itself, having nothing whatever to do with the redemption of the land. Under the clause, the interest or compound interest was agreed to be received or recovered from the mortgagors personally;

(3) that, under the terms of the mortgage-deed, as set forth in the above extract, the mortgagors were entitled to claim redemption on payment of the principal mortgage-money only, and the mortgagees had only a personal remedy against them in respect of their claim for interest or compound interest. AULIA KHAN v. KANSHI RAM, 25 P. W. R. 1913 677

—— ——Foreclosure—Suit for valuation 886

—— —— —— ——Foreclosure of same property twice under separate mortgages—Mortgage of undivided share of village—Mortgagee's right to sir—Nature of sir right—Proprietary and cultivating rights—Cenrtal Provinces Tenancy Act (IX of 1883), s. 42—Applicability to mortgages—Central Provinces Tenancy Act (IX of 1898, as amended by Act XXI of 1899), s. 45 (6)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 8.

A mortgagee is fully entitled to foreclose twice on the same property. Where a mortgagee holds two mortgages by conditional sale over the same property, he can get a separate foreclosure decree under each of them, whether at the same time or one after the other.

The cultivating or occupancy-rights in the sir land do not come into existence on loss of the proprietary right in the land. The proprietary and cultivating rights are co-existing and component parts of the sir right.

Consequently, a mortgagee, entitled to proceed against a mortgagor's rights in the sir land, can get a decree against what is left of those rights—the ex-proprietary cultivating rights in the land, although the proprietary right may have passed to the same mortgagee or to another person.

Section 42 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act of 1883, applies only to sales of three specified kinds and not to mortgages, whether by conditional sale or of any other kind.

Although a mortgage in India is not a transfer of property but only of an interest in property, yet section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to mortgages.

A mortgage of an undivided share in a village includes the sir rights and all other rights, which the mortgagor is capable of transferring, in the absence of any words showing an intention to retain or exclude them. SHIOLAL v. NANHELAL, 8 N. L. R. 123 129

—— ——Lease from mortgagor after mortgage suit—Lis pendens—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Lease after mortgage but before mortgage suit—Lease valid if granted on usual terms in ordinary course of management—Burden of proof.

A person who obtains a settlement from a mortgagor after the commencement of a suit upon the mortgage, is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, and may be ejected by the purchaser of the property in execution of the mortgage decree.

A mortgagor in possession may make a lease conformable to usage in the ordinary course of management; for instance, he may create a tenancy from year to year in the case of agricultural lands, or from month to month in the case of houses. But he is not competent to grant a lease on unusual terms, or to alter the character of the land, or to authorize its use in a manner or for a purpose different from the mode in which he himself had used it before he granted the mortgage.

A person, who has obtained a settlement from a mortgagor after the mortgage but before the mortgage suit, can resist a claim for ejectment made by the purchaser in execution of the mortgage decree, only if he can establish that the lease in his favour was granted on the usual terms in the ordinary course of management.

Such a person acquires an interest in the equity of redemption and can claim to redeem on that footing. MADAN MOHAN SINGH v. RAJ KISHORI KUMARI 17 C. L. J. 384 1

—— ——Mortgage-deed providing for appointment of Receiver—Inability of Receiver to pay any interest—Direction by Court to Receiver to pay money to mortgagor to prefer appeal from mortgage-decree—Order of Court, whether justifiable—Order, whether appealable—Appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XL, r. 1 cl. (1) (d). O. XLIII, r. 1 cl. (s).

A mortgage-deed provided that G. was to be appointed manager of the mortgaged properties on behalf of the mortgagors and was to hold charge of them until he had paid off the principal and interest due to the mortgagee, and that if the manager failed to discharge his duties, the mortgagees might appoint a Receiver of the rents and profits of the mortgaged premises.

The manager was unable to obtain possession of the properties, and a suit upon the mortgage was instituted and a Receiver was appointed. A decree was made in the suit.

The mortgagors-judgment-debtors obtained an order from the Court on the Receiver to pay over to them certain sums of money to enable them to appeal from the decree passed against them in the mortgage suit:

Held, (1) that Order XLIII, rule 1, clause (s), gave an appeal in the case of an order like the present passed under clause (1) (d) of rule 1 of Order XL;

(2) that the mortgage-bond and the order passed for the appointment of the Receiver did not provide for the payment of any sum to the mortgagors for the purpose of instituting appeals from decrees obtained against them on the basis of the mortgage, and the Court below ought not to have allowed them the amounts.

It appeared that the mortgagee had not received anything as interest:

Held, that under the circumstances, the order of the Court below could not be supported. EASTERN MORTGAGE AND AGENCY CO. LD. v. FAKURUDDIN MAHOMED CHOWDHURY, 17 C. W. N. 1 849

—— ——Prior and subsequent mortgages—Father impleaded as party to suit—Effect of decree on son.

A. mortgaged his share in 1887 to B. In 1892, he mortgaged the same share to C. In 1893, he again mortgaged that share along with other properties to B. A part of the consideration of the mortgage of 1893 was the sum due under the mortgage of 1887. In 1899, the heirs of C. brought a suit on the basis of the mortgage of 1892 and impleaded B. as subsequent mortgagee. At the time of the suit, B. was in Jail and had a son who had not been impleaded as a party to the suit:

Mortgage—contd.

Held, that B.'s son, who was not impleaded in the suit, was not bound by the decree obtained therein as he was not effectively represented in the suit. PRAG v. RAM NIRANJAN, 11 A. L. J. 36 734 ——— ——— Priority—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 79, 80—Notice of prior mortgage—Maximum amount—Release of property of one of mortgagors, effect of.

Under section 79 of the Transfer of Property Act, two elements have to be considered; first, whether the subsequent mortgagee took with notice of the prior mortgage, and, secondly, whether the prior mortgage expresses the maximum secured thereby.

A deed stated that a lease had been granted and that the lessees had hypothecated their properties for the payment of the annual rent and interest on defaulted instalments:

Held, that the deed expressed the maximum to be secured thereby within the meaning of section 79 of the Transfer of Property Act, and would be enforceable against a subsequent mortgagee, if the latter took with notice.

A mortgagee cannot release the properties of one of the mortgagors to the detriment of the others.

If the mortgagee relinquishes a valuable property for an inadequate consideration, he cannot be permitted to throw the burden of the balance of the debt upon the remaining properties. DALIP NARAIN SINGH v. CHAIT NARAYAN SINGH, 16 C. L. J. 401 931 ——— ——— Refusal to deliver possession—Suit for mortgage-money and interest.

The refusal by a mortgagor to deliver possession gives the mortgagee the right to sue for the mortgage-money and interest. SHER MUHAMMAD v. NIKKA MAL, 21 P. L. R. 1913 362

——— ——— decree—Claim by second mortgagee for lien—Rejection of claim—Suit to establish mortgage—Parties 87

——— ——— ——— for sale — Execution—Time when limitation begins to run 759

——— ——— ——— Successful party — Personal decree for costs 244

——— ——— deed executed by parda nashin lady —Presentation for registration by husband—Validity of presentation 274

——— ——— ——— Recital—Admissibility 644

——— ——— Redemption — Construction of deed—Interest 677

——— ——— ——— Mortgage by Hindu father —Foreclosure proceedings and suit against minor sons through their mother—Minor grandson not made party—Right to redeem 141

——— ——— ——— Suit—Court-fee 442

Mortgage—contd.

——— ——— Redemption—Mortgage for term of years—Failure of mortgagee to perform essential part of contract—Right of mortgagor to redeem before expiry of period.

Where property subject to prior encumbrances is mortgaged with possession for a term of years, and the mortgagee covenants to pay the prior encumbrancers out of the mortgage-money but does not do so, the mortgagor has, on equitable grounds, the right to redeem the mortgage before the expiration of the period for which the property has been mortgaged, as the essential part of the contract, so far as the mortgagors are concerned, has not been performed by the mortgagee. CHHAKTU RAI v. BALDEO SHUKUL, 10 A. L. J. 330; 34 A. 659 340

——— ——— ——— Owner of share of equity of redemption, whether entitled to redeem the whole mortgage—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 60, 91.

A person who is entitled only to a part of the equity of redemption has not, under all the circumstances, the right to insist on redeeming the whole mortgage. If there are several persons in whom the equity of redemption is vested, one of them and the mortgagee acting together are entitled to deal with the former's interest in the equity of redemption and the mortgagee's rights as against him, provided the rights of the other owners in the equity of redemption are not thereby injuriously affected. But nothing done either by a mortgagor or a mortgagee behind the back of the other can affect the right of that other so as to injure him in any way.

Where the mortgagee has dealt with one of those entitled to the equity of redemption, a person entitled to the remainder may claim to redeem his share only of the equity of redemption.

The objection to a mortgagee splitting up a mortgage is entitled to weight only where the owner of a part of the equity of redemption is prejudicially affected by the splitting.

If some of the co-owners of the equity of redemption should desire to continue the mortgage of their shares, one of the co-owners cannot be held entitled to redeem the whole of the mortgage.

The question whether the Court will allow redemption of the whole of the mortgage at the instance of a person entitled to a part only of the equity of redemption, must depend on the circumstances of each case.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A mortgagee has the right to release any portion of the mortgaged property or to sue for a sale of a portion thereof, though such release or abstention will not affect the rights and liabilities as between themselves of the owners of the different portions of the equity of redemption in the mortgaged properties. RATHNA MUDALI v. PERUMAL REDDY, 12 M. L. T. 484; (1912) M. W. N. 1168 837

——— ——— ——— Prior mortgagee obtaining decree for sale without impleading puisne mortgagee —Purchase of property in execution by prior mortgagee—Suit for redemption by puisne mortgagee—Amount due—Interest.

Where a prior mortgagee has obtained a decree for sale without impleading the puisne mortgagee in his suit, and has in execution of the decree purchased the mortgaged property himself, the puisne mortgagee, when seeking to redeem the prior mortgage, is bound to pay the prior mortgagee interest at the mortgage rate and not at the decree rate.

Mortgage—concld.

The puisne mortgagee cannot treat the prior mortgagee as a mortgagee for one purpose and a decree-holder for another. PONNAMBALA CHETTI v. MUTHUSAMI PILLAI, 23 M. L. J. 284; (1912) M. W. N. 1119 291

——— ——— suit. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, O. XXXIV; TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, s. 85.

——— ——— ———Alteration of law. 577

——— ———Usufructuary mortgage -- Lease—Subsequent execution of mulgeni lease to stranger—No change of character as lessee—Lessor entitled to possession—Merger.

Sundara Aiyar, J.—Where, at the time of the execution of a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor takes a lease from the mortgagee of the mortgaged properties, the position of the mortgagor is that of a tenant of the mortgagee and the value of the possession is not changed, till the mortgage is redeemed, by the execution of a mulgeni lease or by the assertion of any mulgeni right in himself. SUBRAYA KINI v. RAMAPPA AIDGE, (1912) M. W. N. 907 265

——— ———Usufructuary mortgage, meaning of—Mortgage in which possession is postponed to be delivered on a date subsequent to the mortgage, interpretation of.

The word "deliver" in section 58 does not necessarily mean "deliver immediately" and where the mortgagor is not in a position to give immediate delivery of possession it is sufficient if he gives the right to possession though he cannot give delivery of possession.

Therefore, where under the terms of a mortgage-deed, the possession is to be delivered to the mortgagee subsequent to the date of the mortgage, the transaction is an usufructuary mortgage as defined in section 58 of the Transfer of Property Act.

If there is a condition in the mortgage-deed by which the mortgaged property cannot be redeemed until a certain period elapses after the date of execution of the deed, the deed is nevertheless a usufructuary mortgage. BISHESHAR BAKHSH SINGH v. DEBI BAKHSH SINGH 329

Mortgagee—Compensation for improvement 243

Mortgagor and mortgagee—Possession—Burden of proof 913

——— ——— ———Purchase from mortgagor—Duty to pay revenue—Land Revenue Sale—Fraudulent purchase 878

——— ——— ——— ———Lease by mortgagee in favour of mortgagor for the mortgaged property—Suit for rent of mortgaged property, maintainability of—Landlord and tenant.

If a mortgagee chooses to put the mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged premises on payment of rent, the mortgagee is at perfect liberty to recover the arrears of such rent as arrears of rent, and it is not necessary for the mortgagee to include these sums in a suit upon the deed of mortgage. MAHADEI v. BHIKHAN 424

Mosque—Right to worship 386

Muhammadan Law—Gujars of Kharian 21

——— ——— ———Kanjars of Jagadhri 214

——— ——— ———Mushaa 857

——— ——— ———Shafei—Life-estate 689

——— ——— ———Custom — Muhammadan family adopting Hindu worship—Females, rights of—Estoppel—Representation by males.

A Muhammadan family, governed by Muhammadan Law, adopted the Hindu religion in matters of worship.

There was no evidence of any custom in the family by which the Muhammadan Law in respect of descent of property had been altered or varied:

Held, (1) that the family did not cease to be governed by Muhammadan Law in matters of succession;

(2) that the females succeeded to proprietary interest in accordance with that law.

In the absence of any proof or suggestion that parda nashin ladies of a family have misled, by word or conduct, any alienee from the male members, the mere fact that the ladies left the management of the property in the hands of males is insufficient to show that the male members represented the females or that the latter are estopped. AZIMA BIBI v. SHAMALANAND, 17 C. W. N. 121; 13 M. L. T. 159; (1913) M. W. N. 125; 11 A. L. J. 169; 17 C. L. J. 303 758

——— ——— ———Gift—Acceptance—Gift by registered deed—Formal possession—Undivided property—Effect of transfer of possession—Mushaa—Wakf—Written instrument not necessary—Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 1, 5.

The Trusts Act does not affect the rules of Muhammadan Law as to wakf.

Therefore, it is not necessary to execute an instrument in writing in order to create a valid wakf.

A gift under the Muhammadan Law is not invalid merely because there is no formal acceptance by the donee at the time of the execution or registration of the deed of gift.

It is not necessary for the validity of gift that the signification of the acceptance must be at any particular moment of the transaction.

A declaration by the donor in the deed of gift that possession has been given binds the heirs of the donor and possession once taken cannot be invalidated by any subsequent change of possession.

In the case of a gift of undivided property possession given and taken under such gift effectually transfers such property.

A gift by a person by means of a registered deed, in favour of his sons, wives and grandson, as to property of which the donor was in joint possession with the donees and of which he made over entire possession to the donees, is valid under the Muhammadan Law. NUR MUHAMMAD v. BHAGWAN DAS, 106 P. R. 1912; 31 P. L. R. 1913 857 ——— ——— ———Mosque—Right to worship—Religious institution—Right to offer prayers—Right to recite Koran.

Every Muhammadan worshipper has the right both to offer prayers and to recite the Koran as a part of his right of worship in a mosque.

There is nothing to prevent a worshipper from receiving at the mosque money offered to him there by others or from distributing sweetmeats. But no worshipper can claim to use the mosque as of right for such purposes. MUTHALA KANDI v. PALLI VEETIL ABU BAKER, (1912) M. W. N. 1059 . 386

Muhammadan Law—concld.

——————Pre-emption. See PRE-EMPTION.

——————Succession to trusteeship how determined 124

——————Wakf — Written instrument not necessary 857

——————Waqif not owner of property at creation of waqf—No subsequent ratification by real owner—Validity of waqf.

A Muhammadan made a waqf of property of which he was not the owner at the time of dedication. The true owner did not ratify the waqf:

Held, that the wakf was invalid under the Muhammadan Law. NASIR-UD-DIN v. BALLABH DAS, 10 A. L. J. 501; 35 A. 608 471

——————by user—Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887*)*, s. 44—Record of Rights.

Where a graveyard existed from time immemorial, in which the Muhammadan community of Multan used to bury their dead, and in the Record of Rights of the last Settlement, the said graveyard was described as "in the possession of the Muhammadans, and as ghair mumkin kabristan:"

Held, (1) that the entry in the Record of Rights was conclusive under section 44 of the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887, and that the land in question, being a graveyard, was wakf by user, if not by dedication;

(2) that land unoccupied by graves within the area of the graveyard could not be held to be private property. COURT OF WARDS v. ILAHI BAKHSH, 1 P. W. R. 1913; 11 A. L. J. 265; 13 M. L. T. 318; (1913) M. W. N. 270; 17 C. L. J. 360; 27 P. R. 1913 744 P. C.

——————Widow's possession in lieu of dower—Right of husband's heirs to oust her.

Where the widow of a deceased Mahomedan is proved to have obtained possession of her husband's property after his death peacefully, quietly and without fraud in lieu of her unsatisfied dower-debt, his legal heirs are not entitled to oust her until that debt has been satisfied. HASAN RAZA v. BASTI BEGAM, 15 O. C. 257 81

——————Will—Naikin 834

——————Probate not required—Bequest exceeding one-third of testator's property—Validity of such bequest—Letters of Administration obtained by heir after testator's property dealt with by executor appointed by testator—Effect of such Letters—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881*)*, ss. 42, 43, 44.

It is not necessary for the executor of a deceased Muhammadan to take out Probate.

A Muhammadan can make a Will. It may be either oral or written. His power of testamentary disposition is limited to the extent of ⅓rd of his estate and any bequest in excess thereof requires the consent of heirs whose rights are infringed by the bequest. Also a bequest to a person entitled to inherit is void unless the other heirs give their consent after the testator's death to its taking effect.

Where, A., an executor appointed by the testator, has dealt with certain properties belonging to the testator and where B. has, subsequently, obtained Letters of Administration, the latter will be confined to the properties other than those dealt with by the executor. MAUNG LU MAUNG v. MAUNG PE, 5 BUR. L. T. 255 868

Murder. See PENAL CODE, ss. 299 TO 304.

Mutation entries -Object—Nature of inquiry—Possession—Title—Record of Rights, object of—Inheritance cases—Transfer cases—Summary inquiry—Customary Law considerations — Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887*)*, ss. 34 (4), 36 (1), 37 (a), 44—Minor, contract by, void—Contract Act (IX of 1872*)*, s. 11—Interpretation of statutes—Intention.

In construing statutes, no matter what the intention of the Legislature may have been, the Courts are bound to follow the wording of an enactment and to disregard evidence as to intention, when inconsistent with the language actually used in the Act as passed, if the latter is clear and unambiguous.

The Record of Rights is a record of titles and not a record of possession. Mutations are not to follow possession in all disputed cases but should be based primarily on title.

The procedure of the Revenue Officer in dealing with mutations is determined by the nature of the mutation. If the proposed entries are agreed to by all the parties interested therein or are supported by a decree or order binding on these parties, possession may be disregarded. In disputed cases, the facts as to possession are relevant to the decision of the dispute, but they are relevant not for the purpose of making mutation follow possession, but for the purpose of ascertaining whether facts are proved or admitted to have occurred which would justify a variation in the existing Record of Rights.

The extent to which possession or the absence of possession should be regarded as proof, for mutation purposes, that a fact has or has not occurred, depends mainly on whether the case is one of transfer or of inheritance.

In succession cases, a mutation of some sort must be effected; there is in these cases no such thing as a rejected mutation; the dispute is between rival heirs. In disputed cases of inheritance, comparatively little stress should be placed on possession as it is not true evidence of right.

In disputed cases of transfer, the issue is not only what the true entry shall be, but whether a new entry shall be made at all or not. In such cases, possession counts for a very great deal.

Investigations in mutation proceedings should be of a very summary character. In transfer cases, where anything more elaborate than a summary inquiry is necessary to decide whether a fact is proved to have occurred, it will be best to refuse mutation and refer the parties to the Courts. In inheritance cases, where a new entry must be made, the scope of the inquiry must be left to the discretion of the mutation officer but it must necessarily be summary.

A minor is incompetent to enter into a contract and a contract, one of the parties to which is a minor, is not merely voidable but void and cannot be validated by the transfer of possession. A transfer by minor, even if accompanied by possession, should not be followed by mutation.

A mutation of sale should not be rejected merely because the mutation officer considers that the vendor has exercised a power of alienation opposed to his Customary Law.

When possession has taken place in pursuance of such transfer, the mutation officer should sanction mutation irrespective of Customary Law considerations. GHULAM MUHAMMAD v. Musammat ZEWARO, 5 P. R. 1912 (REV.); 35 P. L. R. 1913 979

Naikin—Adoption of daughters—Will—Construction—Persona designata—Practice—Hindu Law or Muhammadan Law.

A., a professional prostitute of the class known as Naikins, made a Will in favour of B., a daughter of one of her near relatives. The Will declared that as the testatrix had no issue of her own, she had adopted B., but in the subsequent passages of the Will, sometimes the adjectival phrase 'adopted daughter' occurred, and sometimes it did not occur in relation to the name of B. B. claimed the property of A. as her adopted daughter and also as persona designata under the Will:

Held, that the adoption was invalid;

(2) that according to the Will, B. was not to take the property as being the adopted daughter, but that B. was the adopted daughter and was to take the property because she was the special object of A.'s bounty.

Where in a case, there is no specific evidence to show whether the parties are to be reckoned as Muhammadans or Hindus, but from the very beginning of the litigation to its appearance in the High Court in second appeal, the assumption, which throughout was accepted by both parties, was that they were to be governed by Muhammadan Law, the High Court would not allow any of the parties in the second appeal to disturb that assumption. HIRA NAIKIN v. RADHA NAIKIN, 14 BOM. L. R. 1129; 37 B. 116 834

Negligence—Damage done to crop by animal 899

——— when amounts to misconduct 544

Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 20—Blank promissory-note, suit on—Payee's name not filled in—Endorsement.

A payee can fill in a blank inchoate instrument and sue on it himself after filling it or endorse it to some one; but no decree can be passed on a blank instrument not containing the name of the payee; nor is such an instrument transferable by endorsement. M. N. P. L. FIRM v. KIRWAN GYAN, 5 BUR. L. T. 162 915 ——— ——— ——— ss. 35, 37, 38—Endorser, liability of.

An endorser is liable to every subsequent holder in case of dishonour by the drawer, provided he has received due notice of his dishonour, unless (a) there is a contract to the contrary or (b) he expressly excludes or limits his liability in the indorsement itself.

He is liable as a surety for the maker, but he is also, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, liable as principal to his endorsee. A holder having duly presented the instrument and given notice of dishonour is not bound to sue the drawer before he sues his immediate indorser; he has a right at once to sue the indorser without impleading the drawer in the same suit. SOMASUNDARAM CHETTY v. LAKSHMAN CHETTY, 5 BUR. L. T. 173 951

——— ——— ——— ss. 37, 38 951

——— ——— ——— s. 79 309

——— ——— ——— s. 87—Material alteration—Private International Law.

A suit was brought upon two documents executed in Mysore, and not stamped according to the Stamp Law of Mysore, and, consequently, were inadmissible in evidence and could not be acted upon there. The documents were described in the plaint as bonds, but in the documents themselves, they were described as promissory-notes; the documents were torn in several places and had been pieced together in such a manner that the name of the payee and the words "or order" were missing with the result that the documents could be described as bonds:

Held, that this was an alteration of a material character, whereby documents, which could not be sued upon in the only Court where any suit upon them was likely to be maintainable, were converted into documents which could be sued upon, and that, apart from the express provisions of section 87 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the suit on these documents must fail.

The question whether the plaintiff's suit, which was not maintainable in Mysore owing to the failure to conform to the Stamp Law there, was maintainable in India, considered. LAKSHMAMMAL v. NARASIMHA-RAGHAVA IYENGAR, 12 M. L. T. 333 281

N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 209 914

N.-W. Ry. Tariff Rule No. 464 (V) 37

Notice. See U. P. COURT OF WARDS ACT.

———Appeal dismissed in absence of both parties—Restoration 292

——— of prior mortgage 931

———Pledge of deposited goods 663

———Suit for injunction against public officer 876

———Suit against Railway Company—Modes prescribed by rule 419

Oaths Act (X of 1873), s. 10—Oath taken in absence of other party.

The defendant offered to be bound by the oath of plaintiff taken in the mosque on the Koran; the parties went to the mosque but defendant refused to hand over the Koran to plaintiff. Next day plaintiff went to the mosque with a Court peon in the absence of the defendant and took the oath as agreed. The suit was decreed. DAR BUX v. DAR MEAH, 5 BUR. L. T. 165; 6 L. B. R. 60 930

——— ——— ss. 11, 12—Agreement to abide by oath of opponent—Imposition of fresh conditions at time of taking oath—Right of party agreeing to take oath to enforce original agreement.

Where one of the parties to a suit agrees to abide by the statement made on oath by his opponent, but at the time of taking the oath, the former imposes fresh conditions as to the form of taking the oath, the party agreeing to take the oath has a right to enforce the agreement originally entered into by the party offering to abide by the oath. If he takes the oath according to the original agreement, the evidence so given will be conclusive aganist the other party. THUKKU GOUNDAN v. KUPPAUDA GOUNDAN 339

——— ——— s. 12 339

Occupancy-holding. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Occupancy rights—Transfer — Transferee in possession—Suit for declaration—Defendant admitting transfer by lease—Plaintiff pleading sale 889

Occupancy-tenancy. See PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.

——— ———, transfer of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 102, 115—Small Cause suit—Second appeal—Revision—Money-bond and lease of holding.

P. executed a bond in favour of J. for Rs. 400 and on the same day gave him a lease of his occupancy holding in which it was provided that the rent was to be retained by J., on account of interest payable under the bond. J., having been ejected from the occupancy holding, brought a suit for the recovery of Rs. 400 due under the bond. The Munsif dismissed the suit, but the District Judge on appeal decreed the suit. Defendant preferred a second appeal:

Held, (1) that the transaction carried out by means of the two documents, viz., simple money-bond and the lease of the occupancy holding, was illegal and the plaintiff could not sue for the recovery of the money due under the bond;

(2) that as the District Judge had decreed the plaintiff's suit in appeal and as the suit was one of the nature cognizable by the Small Cause Court, no second appeal lay to the High Court;

(3) that as the District Judge had not failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him or exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him or acted in the exercise of his jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity, the High Court could not interfere in revision. POORAN SINGH v. JAI SINGH 522

Occupancy tenant — Rent — Crop-share—Gross annual produce how determined—Appraisement—Admission of defendant 943

Official liquidator, appointment of 853

Othidar—Pre-emption 337

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 3 cl. (6) 334

——— ——— ——— s. 127 464

Pakka Adatia, position of—Suit by Pakka Adatia —Wagering, defence of—Evidence—Surrounding circumstances—Interrogatories, questions to be asked.

A pakka adatia is a person who enters into a contract of employment with his constituent for reward. He obtains instructions from his client what contracts to enter into. But, generally speaking, the constituent is not concerned with the method in which his instructions are carried out.

In the Bombay Presidency, it is open to the constituent to prove, in a suit by the pakka adatia, that the contracts made by the latter were wagering contracts.

A party relying on the defence of wagering must prove that at the time the contract was entered into, it was the common intention of both parties neither to give nor receive delivery, but merely to pay or receive differences according to the market-rate at the due date. In determining the question what was the common intention of parties at the time of the contract, the Court can look to the surrounding circumstances, as it hardly ever occurs that there is direct evidence of a common intention to wager.

Pakka Adatia—concld.

A party seeking discovery by interrogatories is entitled to put questions for the purpose of extracting from his opponent information as to the facts material to the questions between them, which he has to prove on any issue raised between them, or for the purpose of securing admissions as to such facts in order that expense and delay may be saved or to destroy his opponent's case or to support his own case.

The mere fact that the questions would be admissible in cross-examination of a witness, does not make them good as interrogatories.

Interrogatories must not be exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, nor be prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous. Nor should interrogatories be allowed which are sought to be administered obviously for the purpose of fishing out a case.

In cases where the defence of wagering has been set up, the party setting up this defence should not be allowed to interrogate his opponent generally as to his business transactions apart from the particular transactions in suit. It is manifestly unfair to compel a man to disclose his general dealings on the chance that thereby his opponent may discover something which will support his case. BHAGVANDAS v. BURJORJI, 14 BOM. L. R. 807 152

Panchnama—Destruction of rough drafit—Offence 1003

Pardanashin lady—Mortgage-deed executed by lady—Presentation for registration—Validity 274

——— ——— ——— ———Hard terms of mortgage.

An Indian lady, who does not ordinarily appear in public, but goes about the Bazar to make purchases for the household, can hardly be described as parda nashin in the strict sense of the term.

Such a lady cannot be relieved from a transaction on the ground that its terms are unusually hard, particularly where she had the opportunity of taking independent advice. RAM DITTA MAL v. KARAM DEVI, 167 P. W. R. 1912; 190 P. L. R. 1912 243

Pardon. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 337.

Partition. See HINDU LAW—PARTITION.

——— ——— See HINDU LAW—SEPARATION 390

——— ———Private partition found to be fraudulent—Suit for fresh partition—Exclusion of plaintiff—Limitation 10

——— ———Revenue partition—Date of effect 144

——— ——— ——— suit—Decree declaring right to partition—Actual partition not effected—Execution of decree barred—Subsequent suit for partition 955

——— ——— ———Final decree in the first instance—Decree for possession of share, whether executable.

There is no reason why in a partition suit, where the claim is for a certain share in joint property, a final decree should not be passed in the first instance, especially where the subject-matter of the suit is a house and the share can be ascertained without difficulty in execution.

A decree in a partition suit directing the plaintiff to receive possession by partition of a definite share in a house is not merely declaratory and is capable of execution. SULTAN SINGH v. BAHADUR SINGH, 246 P. L. R. 1912 390

Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 10—Whether applicable where preliminary decree has been made.

Section 10 of Act IV of 1893 is applicable to a case where a preliminary decree for partition has been made but the final partition has not been effected. SEPAHDAR KHAN SANTHOJI v. BADI BI, 12 M. L. T. 337; (1912) M. W. N. 943 284

Partnership in business—Business brought to end—Adjustment of accounts—Dissolution of partnership—Separate suit to recover sums which one partner may have realised.

Where two parties had been partners in a business which had been brought to an end, and the only dispute between them, is with reference to the division of the property, that dispute can only be finally settled in a proper suit for dissolution of partnership and for adjustment of accounts. It is not desirable that each of the parties should proceed by separate suits in order to recover from the other any sums due to the partnership business which he alone may have realised. RAM CHANDRA PAL v. KRISHNA LAL PAL, 17 C. W. N. 351 600

Party. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, O. XXXIV; MISJOINDER OF PARTIES; TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, s. 85.

——, addition of 641

——Necessary and proper party—Distinction between 921

—— not allowed to set up procedure successfully objected to by him 420

——Not signing or verifying pleading 580

——Suit to establish mortgage by second mortgagee—Mortgagor necessary party 87

—— waiting to be produced as witness by opposite party 363

—— not allowed to assume inconsistent positions 936

——Suit by landlord to eject purchaser from tenant—Whether tenant necessary party 603

———Hindu Law—Joint family business—Suit on business contracts—Necessary parties—Minor members—Plaint—Amendment—Development of original cause of action—Date of institution of suit.

It is not necessary, in the case of a Hindu family, to join in a suit upon a business contract the minor members of the family who in fact take no share in the business which is carried on on behalf of the family.

The only necessary parties are those who actually contracted with the defendant.

Where the allegations introduced in a plaint by amendment are mere development of plaintiff's position and original cause of action and do not introduce any new cause of action, the suit must be taken to have been instituted on the date of the original plaint. LALJI NENSEY v. KESHOWJI, 14 BOM. L. R. 840 193

——Mitakshara father, mortgage executed by—Only son minor at date of mortgage—Mortgage executed before advances made—Sums borrowed for family purposes—Suit on mortgage—Son made party

Party—concld.

defendant—Liability of son to be sued on mortgage—Decree against son—Mortgagee unable to prove item expended on family purpose—Inability of son to prove item borrowed for immoral purpose—Debt of father binding on son—Alteration of law—Procedure in mortgage suit—Joinder of defendant—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).

The plaintiffs sued on a mortgage-bond executed by J., and they made his only son B, who was a minor at the date of the mortgage, a defendant in the suit. The sums covered by the bond were expended on legitimate family purposes; but the mortgage was executed before the advances were made. J. and B. formed a Mitakshara joint family, and the mortgage purported to charge the entire interest in the property mortgaged:

Held, that J., as the managing member of the family, had implied authority to execute the mortgage so as to make it unimpeachable by his minor son against whom as well as against his father, the mortgage could be enforced.

The plaintiffs were unable to show how an item of Rs. 600 was expended and the defendants refrained from throwing any light on the point:

Held, that as the defendants failed to show that the item was used for an immoral purpose, it was a debt of the father binding on the son, and he could not be permitted to redeem the mortgage except on paying the Rs. 600.

After the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, a mortgagee must, in a suit on a mortgage of the joint property of a Mitakshara family executed by the father, join as a party the executant's son though he was a minor at the date of the instrument. But it was not necessary to make the son a party to such a suit before that Act was passed. The son's remedy was that he could sue to recover the property provided he could show that the debt was contracted for immoral purposes and the purchaser had notice that they were so contracted. BISSONATH PROSAD MALITA v. BRINDESRI PROSAD SINGH 577 ——Record of Rights—Suit for declaration that plaintiff not tenure-holder but raiyat*—Court adding persons recorded as* raiyats, as defendants—Plaintiff not prejudiced—Persons recorded as raiyats, whether necessary parties.

The plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was not a tenure-holder as he had been described in the Record of Rights, but a raiyat. The Munsif, during the hearing of the case, thought it desirable, in the interest of justice and to prevent a multiplicity of suits, to add suo motu, as defendants the persons who had been recorded in the Record of Rights as raiyats of the land under the plaintiff as tenure-holder. The plaintiff's case was that these persons were mere tenants-at-will:

Held, (1) that as by the law the status of the tenants under the plaintiff was made to depend on his status, they were as vitally interested in the Record of Rights, as he himself and were proper parties to the suit;

(2) that the order did not prejudice the plaintiff in any way and that, therefore, it should not be set aside. DIGAMBAR NANDA v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 16 C. L. J. 381 917

Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819), ss. 9, 13 cl. (3) (4) —Payment of patni rent by darpatnidar—No darpatni rent due at the time—Payment from private fund—Possession taken by darpatnidar—Suit for arrears of darpatni rent—Set off, whether can be claimed by darpatnidar without rendering account—Eviction by landlord—Suspension of rent—What is necessary to constitute eviction—Actual physical expulsion, if necessary—Mesne profits, decree for, obtained by evicted tenant, whether revives claims for rent—Defaulting patnidar purchasing tenure—Evicting darpatnidar—Annulment of darpatni.

The plaintiffs were the patnidars and the defendants darpatnidars under them. The defendants, to preserve their own interest, made certain payments to save the patni from sale for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819, section 13. While making the payments, the defendants stated that the rent due from them had been paid in full and that what was paid was an advance from private funds. They then obtained possession of the patni taluk. The plaintiffs brought a suit for rent in respect of the darpatni. The defendants did not offer to render an account of the sums collected by them during their possession of the tenure but asked that the amount sought to be recovered by the plaintiffs may be set off against the amount deposited by them:

Held, that the defendants' plea must be overruled, that they could not drive the plaintiffs to a separate suit to determine whether they had or had not by means of their possession already realised the amount advanced by them, and that the defendants were not entitled to claim a set-off.

The principle of law is that a landlord who has evicted his tenant is not entitled to claim rent from him in respect of the period of eviction.

To constitute an eviction within the meaning of the above rule, it is not necessary that there should be an actual physical expulsion from any part of the premises; any act of a permanent character done by the landlord with the intention of depriving the tenant of the benefit of the enjoyment of the demised premises or any part thereof will operate as an eviction.

The fact that the evicted tenant has obtained a decree for mesne profits, does not revive the claim for rent which was extinguished by reason of the misconduct of the landlord, the decree for mesne profits in his favour does not necessarily restore him to all the advantages he would have enjoyed, had his possession not been illegally disturbed.

A defaulting patnidar purchased in the name of another person, the patni in arrears, in contravention of the express provisions of section 9 of the Patni Regulation, and took possession of the dar-patni tenure in the name of the ostensible purchaser:

Held, that the patnidar was not entitled to annul the dar-patni tenure created by himself and as he, under colour of law, evicted the dar-patnidar, he was not entitled to get any rent from the latter for the period of dispossession. KALANAND SINGH v. JARAO KUMARI, 17 C. L. J. 96. 238

——— ——— ——— s. 13 cl. (3) 378

——— ——— ——— s. 14—Collector's power to determine summarily rent of tenure then payable—No power to determine rent payable in future 504

Patnidar. See LAND ACQUISITION.

Pattadar, mortgage by—Relinquishment—Decree and sale by mortgagee after relinquishment, whether binds new pattadar—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 70—Assessment paid by mortgagee—Right to recover.

A., to whom the Government granted a patta, executed a mortgage to plaintiff and later on relinquished the land to the Government, who subsequently granted a patta to the defendant. After this the plaintiff sued on the mortgage after the relinquishment by A., got a decree, purchased the land covered by the patta in execution and obtained a patta from the Revenue Authorities.

In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the land from the defendant on the strength of the patta granted to him:

Held, (1) that as A. relinquished in favour of Government before the plaintiff instituted the suit on the mortgage, the plaintiff's decree and sale could give him no right to recover the land against the defendant, who claimed under a title granted by Government;

(2) that the plaintiff could not recover from the defendant the assessment paid by him after he got his patta, because he did not make the payment on defendant's behalf. MOOLINTI VEERANA GOWD v. DEVARINTI BHIMA REDDY, 12 M. L. T. 261; (1612) M. W. N. 880 253

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 10, 352, 354—Girl six years old—Assault with intent to outrage modesty—Woman.

The accused took a girl six years old to his room; he made her lie down and he lay on her. The girl screamed and ran away:

Held, (1) that the girl, though young, was a "woman" for the purposes of section 354 of the Penal Code;

(2) that the facts amounted to an offence under section 354, and that the accused should be convicted of that offence. EMPEROR v. TATIA MAHADEV, 14 BOM. L. R. 961; 13 CR. L. J. 888 794

——— ——— ——— s. 34 1001

——— ——— ss. 85, 86, 387, 398—Drunkenness—Particular knowledge or intention necessary to constitute offence—Imputation of knowledge to voluntary drunkard—Intention—Burden of proof—Presumption—English law—Extortion—Attempt at robbery.

The general presumption of law is that a man is taken to intend the ordinary and natural consequences of his acts; if a drunken man relies on his drunkenness as absolving him from a crime, he must show that his mind was so affected by the drink, he had taken, that he was incapable of forming the intention necessary to constitute the offence charged against him.

The effect of the omission to make any express provision, in section 86 of the Penal Code, regarding the intention which is to be attributed to a voluntary drunkard committing an act, which is an offence when done with a particular or specified intent, is that the question of intention is left to be dealt with on the general principles of law, which are the same both in India and in England.

The drunkenness of an accused person at the time that he committed the act charged as an offence may be and should be taken into consideration on the question whether he did the act with the intention necessary to constitute the offence charged. The law does not require that the intention, which would be ascribed to a sober man in connection with an act, must necessarily be ascribed to a drunken man who does the same act.

Penal Code—contd.

Section 86 of the Penal Code gives the drunken man the knowledge of the sober man when judging of his action but does not give him the same intention; it does not render him liable to be dealt with as if he had the same intent.

A. went up into B.'s house having a dah in one hand. He called out to B. that if B. did not give him money, he would cut B. and his wife. B. and his wife were in an inner room, the door of which was closed against A. A kicked at it and slashed it with his dah but the door did not give way. A then went to the door of another room; he kicked at it and slashed it but when the door opened, A. fell down. Meanwhile B. and his wife had fled through the back part of the house. B. assembled a number of villagers but when they approached the house, A. fled away. He was, subsequently, found in his father's house in a drowsy condition.

A. was charged with having attempted to commit robbery armed with a deadly weapon.

It was ascertained that A. had been drinking toddy before the commission of the offence.

His defence was that he was drunk and did not know what he did. He was convicted under section 398 of the Penal Code:

Held, (1) that A. was not so drunk as to be incapable of forming in his mind the dishonest intention necessary to constitute the offence of extortion in case his demands had been acceded to;

(2) that A. was guilty of an offence under section 387 of the Penal Code;

(3) that as at the time A. uttered his threat to B. and his wife, the latter were inside a room, the door of which was shut against A., who could not get at them, it was doubtful whether the conditions necessary to constitute the offence of an attempt at robbery were fulfilled in the case, and that A. should have the benefit of this doubt.

Per Hartnoll, J.—To form an intention, a man must necessarily have the requisite knowledge to do so; but, if he has certain knowledge, he must, to form an intention, go a step further than having such knowledge.

Per Young, J.—In most cases, intention has to be inferred from the nature of the acts done and from all the circumstances of the case. If a drunkard by reason of his drunkenness does not know the nature of his act, he cannot be presumed to have intended the consequences of that act. Therefore, in cases where an act is not an offence at all unless it is done intentionally, drunkenness is an excuse.

A drunkard is often fully conscious of what he is doing and what are the natural consequences of his acts. If he fails to prove that owing to his intoxication, he had not the same knowledge in relation to the offence as he would have had if sober, then section 86 will not apply at all and an intention will be presumed or not just as it would be in the case of a sober man. NGA TUN BAW v. EMPEROR, 5 BUR. L. T. 175; 13 CR. L. J. 864; 6 L. B. R. 100 800

Penal Code—contd.

——— ——— s. 86 800

——— ——— s. 97 —Private defence, right of—Defence of property and body—Reasonable force to defend possession.

No person can take the law into his own hands and forcibly recover possession.

But the law allows every person to use reasonable force to defend his possessions from a trespasser.

Where A., as owner of cattle, is in possession of the cattle and B. endeavours to dispossess him by trying to seize the cattle, the right of private defence exercised by A. in such a case is in reality a right of private defence of the body, though exercised with the object of defending property. EMPEROR v. GULSHAH, 6 S. L. R. 121; 13 CR. L. J. 765 78

——— ——— ——— s. 99 76, 1001

——— ——— ——— s. 100 1001

——— ——— ——— s. 147 565

——— ——— ——— s. 147—Violence against inanimate object 565

——— ——— ——— s. 148 54, 1001

——— ——— ——— s. 149 54

——— ——— ——— s. 149 — Unlawful assembly—Offence in pursuance of common object—Knowledge of individual members.

The word "knew" in section 149 of the Penal Code indicates a state of mind at the time of the commission of the offence and not knowledge acquired in the light of subsequent events.

The offence, for which members of an unlawful assembly can be convicted as being in pursuance of the common object of the assembly, must so probably flow from the prosecution of the common object that each member might antecedently expect it to happen. IMPERATOR v. KHAMISO, 6 S. L. R. 101; 13 CR. L. J. 776 408

——— ——— ——— ss. 182, 211 —False information to Police.

The offence of laying false information to the Police falls under the first paragraph of section 211 as well as under section 182 of the Penal Code. BARKATULLAH v. SADHO KALWAR, 10 A. L. J. 429; 13 CR. L. J. 855 791

——— ——— ——— ss. 182, 211—False charge, bringing of, before Police—Recommendation by Police that informant should be prosecuted—Prosecution of informant and conviction—Irregularity—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss 195, 532, 537—"Complaint".

The appellant lodged information before a Sub-Inspector of Police that certain persons had beat him and set fire to a house. The Sub-Inspector on inquiry did not believe the story and recommended that the appellant might be prosecuted under sections 182 and 211 of the Penal Code.

The prosecution of the appellant was then directed by a Deputy Magistrate. A preliminary inquiry was made and the appellant was committed to the Court of Session and convicted under section 211:

Held, that even if there was any defect in the initiation of the proceedings in the original Court, still when the accused had been committed for trial to the Court of Session, a conviction by that Court could not be set aside simply on the ground of some irregularity in the commitment proceedings, more specially when that point was not raised in the first Court, and that section 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code would cure such a defect.

Penal Code—contd.

Section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code clearly contemplates prosecutions at the instance of Police Officers. In any case, when a Police Officer asks that a person should be prosecuted under section 211, Indian Penal Code, for information given to him, and gives evidence himself in support of that charge, no serious irregularity can arise in the conviction of the accused in proceedings initiated upon that report. DILAN SINGH v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 826 570

——— ——— s. 193—Perjury during Police investigation 63

——— ——— ——— s. 193 - Witness—Deliberate false statement - Prosecution for perjury.

A witness, who deliberately gives false evidence but who, when confronted with incontestable proof of his falsehood, admits it to be false, is guilty of perjury. PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. ARUMUGAM CHETTY, 13 CR. L. J. 752 64

——— ——— s. 199—Declaration—False statement—Declaration not admissible in evidence, whether can be basis of prosecution.

A declaration, before it can be made the foundation of a prosecution under section 199, Indian Penal Code, must be one which is admissible in evidence and which the Court before which it is filed is bound or authorized by law to receive in evidence. RAM PARSHAD v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 769; 10 A. L. J. 462 35 A. 58 401

——— ——— ——— s. 204 — Panchnama — Rough draft destroyed—No offence—Fair copy regarded original document.

In the course of an investigation, a Police Officer had a certain document drawn up and signed by a Panch, but finding it disfigured by interlineations and scratches, he had the document re-written in textually the same form by the same writer and the same Panch. The rough document was thereupon destroyed:

Held, that, on a true view of the facts, the fair document which the Officer preserved and ultimately presented to the Court must be regarded as the only document which he was lawfully compelled to produce as evidence, the former writing being nothing more than rough notes designed for the preparation of the fair original document, and hence a conviction of the Police Officer under section 204 of the Indian Penal Code could not be supported. EMPEROR v. GANGA RAM, 14 BOM. L. R. 1163; 13 CR. L. J. 912 1008

——— ——— ——— s. 211 570

——— ——— s. 211—False information to Police 791

——— ——— s. 211—Complaint to Magistrate —Investigation by Police 791

——— ——— s. 211—Making false report to Police 1000

——— ——— s. 211—Principles to be kept in view 993

Penal Code—contd.

——— ——— ——— s. 290—Public nuisance—Placing of charpoy temporarily on road.

Placing a charpoy on the road in the bazar temporarily, does not amount to the offence of causing public nuisance. KAMLA PRASAD v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 362; 13 CR. L. J. 830 574

——— ——— ——— s. 300, Exception 2—Culpable homicide—Firing at person mistaken for thief —Fatal injury—Offence.

The accused fired at a person a gun loaded with a slug, one inch long, in the mistaken belief that he was a thief: the shot was fired in order to protect certain fruit from being stolen. The shot resulted in the death of the person fired at. It was found that the accused had no reason to apprehend anything more serious than the theft of certain fruit, and that he must have known that the shot was likely to cause death:

Held, that the accused was not entitled to the benefit of the second exception to section 300 of the Penal Code. THEKKUMTHATATHIL KELUKUTTI v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 782 414

——— ——— s. 302 54

——— ——— s. 304 1001

——— ——— ——— s. 304-A—Injuries inflicted intentionally—Section not applicable.

Section 304A of the Penal Code deals with the causing of death by a rash or negligent act. It does not apply to a case where injuries are inflicted neither rashly nor negligently, but intentionally and designedly. EMPEROR v. ISTLINGAPA, 14 BOM. L. R. 887; 13 CR. L. J. 798 542

——— ——— ——— s. 304 (part 2) 54

——— ——— ——— ss. 304 (2), 320 (8) 62

——— ——— ——— s. 325 54

——— ——— ——— s. 326 51, 54

——— ——— ——— ss. 352, 354—Assault on six years' old girl 794

——— ——— s. 387 800

——— ——— ss. 397, 326—Robbery—Robbery not proved—Conviction for grievous hurt under section 326.

A Jury, in a Sessions case is competent, where a charge under section 397, Indian Penal Code, is not established, to convict the accused of an offence under section 326, Indian Penal Code, where the facts proved establish the commission of that offence. ADABALA MUTHIYALU, In re, 13 CR. L. J. 739 51

——— ——— s. 398 800

——— ——— ——— s. 401—Association for the purpose of habitual theft.

The essential requisites for a conviction under section 401 of the Penal Code are:—(1) proof of association, and (2) proof that the association was for purposes of habitual theft.

The accused, in company with three others, whose whereabouts were unknown, came to a village. They were regarded with suspicion, and on being challenged ran away, but in the pursuit, the accused was caught. It was not shown who the others were or whether they had before been seen together in the neighbourhood, or at some other place under suspicious circumstances, or that any one of them had ever been suspected or found guilty of theft or robbery :

Penal Code—contd.

Held, (1) that the conviction under section 401 of the Penal Code could not be sustained;

(2) that the fact that the accused had at one time been bound over under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code was immaterial. ISHAR DAS v. EMPEROR, 36 P. W. R. 1912 CR; 13 CR. L. J. 799; 258 P. L. R. 1912 543

——— ——— s. 405—Breach of trust—Advance to brokers on pro-notes—Loan or trust—Debtor and creditor—Trust.

A., a paddy dealer, entered into an agreement with B., the object of which was that A. should supply B. with certain baskets of paddy to be bought at a particular place and to be delivered at B.'s mills. On the same day, B. advanced A. Rs. 10,000 to enable him to obtain this paddy and it was agreed that the account should be settled by B. taking over the paddy at the ruling market rate on the day of delivery. A. undertook to use this sum to no other purpose than the purchase of paddy for B. Simultaneously, A. executed five promissory-notes for Rs. 2,000 each in favour of B. bearing no interest. A. was to bear the loss, if any, and was to retain the profit if any:

Held, (Hartnoll, J., dissenting), (1) that there was no entrustment of the money to A. within the meaning of section 405 of the Penal Code;

(2) that the effect of the transaction was to create the relationship of debtor and creditor between A. and B.

Per Fox, C. J.—The property in respect of which criminal breach of trust can be committed must be either the property of some person other than the person accused, or the beneficial interest in or ownership of it must be in some other person, and the offender must hold such property on trust for such other person or in some way for his benefit.

Mere breach of contract is not made synonymous with criminal breach of trust.

Per Ormond, J.—In a prosecution for criminal breach of trust, the fact of trust must be established beyond all reasonable doubt. NGA PO SEIK v. EMPEROR, 5 BUR. L. T. 143; 13 CR. L. J. 888; 6 L. B R. 62 824

——— ——— s. 406 792

——— ——— s. 414—Concealing stolen property—Owner of property not traced—Offence.

Section 414 of the Penal Code does not impose on the prosecution the requirement to trace in all cases the owners of the property stolen. All that is needed is to show that the accused voluntarily assisted in concealing or disposing of property which he had reason to believe to be stolen property. The latter fact may be proved from the accused's own conduct and actions. EMPEROR v. BUDHANKHAN, 14 BOM. L. R. 893; 13 CR. L. J. 793 537

——— ——— s. 441 — Trespass — Civil and criminal trespass—Intention to annoy — Placing haystacks and manure on another man's land—Annoyance in law.

The placing of haystacks and manure on another man's land need not necessarily amount to annoyance.

Penal Code—concld.

It is not annoyance in law. It may be annoyance in fact. To convict an accused of criminal trespass, it must be clearly found that he intended to cause annoyance.

The distinction between civil and criminal trespass should not be lost sight of. MEAJAN v. SHARAFATULLAH KHAN, 16 C. W. N. 1007; 13 CR. L. J. 783 415

——— ——— ss. 467, 471 — Alternative charge—Evidence recorded by Assistant Sessions Judge and judgment given by Sessions Judge—Jurisdiction—Sessions case—Adjournment—Practice.

An Assistant Sessions Judge recorded the evidence in a Sessions case and the Sessions Judge pronounced judgment upon the evidence so recorded :

Held, that the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to do so.

An accused can be convicted at one and the same time of forging a document and using that document as forged under sections 467 and 471.

The intention of the Criminal Procedure Code is that a trial before a Court of Session should proceed and be dealt with continuously from its inception to its finish.

Adjournments should be granted only on the strongest possible ground and for the shortest possible period. BADRI PRASAD v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 473; 13 CR. L. J. 861; 35 A. 63 797 ——— ——— ss. 467, 471—Forgery of document—Forgerer of document charged under s. 467, whether can be charged under s. 471—Proof of forgery.

The fact that a person charged with an offence under section 471, Indian Penal Code, is himself the forgerer of the document is no reason why he should not be charged under section 471, Penal Code, especially when he cannot be charged under section 467, Penal Code, owing to the latter offence having been committed beyond the jurisdiction of the Court.

The forgery must be proved in order to establish the offence under section 471, Penal Code, though it is not itself the subject of a charge. BHAGAVATTY PERUMAL PILLAY, In re, 13 CR. L. J. 862 798

——— ——— s. 471 797, 798

Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), s. 4—Jurisdiction—Civil suit—Deshpande Kulkarni Vatan—Suit for declaration of share in cash allowance—Collector's certificate.

A suit to obtain a declaration that the plaintiffs are owners of an eight-anna share in the Deshpande Kulkarni Vatan, consisting of a cash allowance paid annually from the treasury, whether coupled with a prayer to recover the actual cash received or not, falls within the class of suits defined by section 4 of the Pensions Act, and is, consequently, not maintainable in a Civil Court without a Collector's certificate. DWARKANATH AMRIT v. MAHADEV BALKRISHNA, 14 BOM. L. R. 938; 37 B. 91 661

Perils of the sea, meaning of 188

Perjury. See PENAL CODE, ss. 191, 193.

Perpetuity, rule against 68

Personal decree against mortgagor—Essential elements—Second personal decree not to be made—Mortgage decree for sale and also personal decree—Not in conformity with Act, yet binding between parties 263

Petroleum Act (VIII of 1899), ss. 11, 15—Possession and transport of petroleum—Illegal possession by agent without principal's knowledge—Liability of principal.

Even though the Petroleum Act provides a personal penalty, the only person that can be punished is the one who keeps petroleum or carries it about or puts more than 500 gallons at one place.

There is no provision in the Act, as there is in the Excise Act and in the Motor Car Act, which makes the principal responsible for the acts of his agents or servants.

Therefore, if an agent of several persons in the sale of petroleum keeps more than 500 gallons in contravention of section 11 of the Petroleum Act, his principal is not responsible for this unless the latter knew that more than 500 gallons of petroleum were illegally kept on his license and allowed this to take place with such knowledge. GANPAT RAI v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 792; 17 C. L. J. 390; 17 C. W. N. 207 536

——————— s. 15 536

Plaint—Amendment—Development of original cause of action 193

———, amendment of—Rent, suit for, based on specific settlement—No alternative claim for rent—Plaintiff's title proved but settlement not proved—Whether decree for use and occupation should be given 646

———Nature of suit how determined 779

———Want of verification and signature—Late verification and signature 580

Pleader engaging in trade—Carrying on family trade—Misconduct—Failure to report to High Court—Punishment 544

Pleaders Act (I of 1846), ss. 6, 7 (2) 964

Pleader and client—Compromise—Power of Vakil to compromise—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Revision not competent when there is an appeal—Position of Vakil.

In a suit for maintenance, the Vakil of the plaintiff consented to the rate proposed by the defendant: the plaintiff sought to revise the order on the ground that the consent of her Vakil was not binding on her:

Held, that, as the order was appealable, an application for revision was not competent.

A Vakil, who has an engagement vakalat, empowering him to compromise an action, does not need to get a special and separate power in order to effect a compromise. KOLLIPARA VENKAMMA, In re, 12 M. L. T. 348 391

Pleader's fees — Appeal — Land Acquisition award—Claim of objector absurdly exorbitant—Ad valorem fee.

Where the claim of an objector to a Land Acquisition award is found to be exorbitant, speculative and absurdly extravagant, the Counsel's fees for the Secretary of State should be allowed ad valorem on the amount in appeal. FAIZ MUHAMMAD v. SECRETARY OF STATE, 107 P. R. 1912; 34 P. L. R. 1913 901

———————Preliminary decree adjudicating a party as agriculturist—Appeal to High Court—Regulation II of 1827, s. 52—Pleaders Act (I of 1846), ss. 6, 7 (2)—Bombay High Court Appellate Side Rules, r. 65.

For the purposes of assessing the Pleader's fees, an appeal to the High Court from a preliminary decree adjudicating the status of a party as an agriculturist, is governed, neither by section 52 of Regulation II of 1827 nor by section 6 of Act I of 1846, but by rule 65 of the Appellate Side Rules of the Bombay High Court, under which the fee to be allowed is the sum of Rs. 30. MANOHAR RAMCHANDRA HINGE v. COLLECTOR OF NASIK, 14 BOM. L. R. 1190 964

Pleadings—Appeal—Suit found time-barred 638

———Case not set up in appeal 900

———Ground of attack in plaint but not pressed in appeal 247

———No objection to jurisdiction in first Court 886

———Parties not allowed to assume inconsistent position 936

———Practice—Party not allowed to set up procedure successfully objected by him 420

———Presumption of dishonesty—Suit for conversion of goods and marshalling securities 663

———————Appeal—Plea not raised before the first Court—Plea raised but not put in issue by first Court—Point not taken in grounds of appeal.

Where the first Court has neither put in issue a plea of a defendant nor has given any finding thereon and the defendant has failed to raise the point in the grounds of his appeal, such plea cannot be allowed to be advanced in argument to attack the judgment under appeal.

A point not raised in the original Court cannot be allowed to be advanced for the first time in appeal. NATHU MAL v. MUL CHAND, 183 P. W. R. 1912; 197 P. L. R. 1912 232

———————, effect of failure to prove facts alleged in.

The failure of a party to prove the particular allegations of fact set up in pleadings does dot necessarily involve the failure of that party's case. GAYA KUNWAR v. DAL SINGH 296

———————New plea in further appeal not allowed.

A party cannot be allowed to put forward a new case in appeal. RAM DITTA MAL v. KARAM DEVI, 167 P. W. R. 1912; 190 P. L. R. 1912 243

Pledge—Bailment—Bailee working as warehouseman and merchant—Pledge of deposited goods—Pledgee having no knowledge of bailor's claim—Return of goods to pledgor—Notice—Presumption of dishonesty—Suit for conversion of goods and marshalling securities—Pleadings.

A. entrusted certain bales of cotton to B. as a muccadum or warehouseman. Besides working as a Pledge—concld.

muccadum or a warehouseman, B. carried on business as a cotton merchant on an extensive scale. B. was financed by C., with whom B. used to pledge cotton to secure his account for cash advances and cash credits.

B. pledged A.'s bales to C., who had no notice or reason to suspect that the cotton belonged to any one but B. or that any one but B had any right or title thereto or interest therein. As a matter of fact, the cotton was subsequently returned by C. to B. or parted with to B.'s order.

A. sued C. claiming recovery of cotton bales entrusted to B.; in the alternative, A. claimed payment of the value of the bales and finally claimed that his rights should be ascertained and declared on the basis that the securities deposited by B. with C. should be marshalled in his favour:

Held, (1) that, having regard to the claim to marshal securities, C. was entitled to prove the fact that the cotton was returned to B. or parted with to his order;

(2) that the fact that C. parted with the cotton deposited with him to or to the order of the depositor, B., without notice of any claim by any other person, afforded a complete defence to the suit.

No one is bound to suspect dishonesty in a person of good credit and reputation with whom he is dealing, merely because that person occupies a position which would enable him to act dishonestly if he were a rogue. BANK OF BOMBAY v. NANDLAL THACKERSEYDAS, 12 M. L. T. 646; (1913) M. W. N. 29; 15 BOM. L. R. 1; 24 M. L. J. 177; 17 C. L. J. 146; 17 C. W. N. 358 663 P. C.

Police—Power to detain suspected person 571

Possession—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Burden of proof 913

——— ———, suit for—Heir of person in possession can sue for possession as against person who shows no better title—Ejectment—Suit to eject trespasser by one of several persons jointly interested.

The heir of a person in possession of property is entitled to bring a suit for possession against one who can show no better title.

One of several persons jointly interested in land may sue to eject a trespasser where the removal of the trespasser is necessary to give the plaintiff enjoyment of his rights. ROHAN SINGH v. AHSANI BEGAM, 10 A. L. J. 518 469

Possessory title—Suit for recovery of land—Right of suit against person having no title.

A person, who has merely a possessory title to land, is entitled to a decree for possession against a person who has no title. NEELAGARA LINGAMMA v. KINNAHAL HAMPIAH 167

Practice—Adjournment—Sessions case 797

——— ———Burden of proof—Suit by co-sharer against lambardar for share of profits 914

——— ———Cattle lifting—Summary trial 412

——— ———Evidence and arguments heard by one officer—Judgment by successor 278

——— ———Execution by Appellate Court 583

Practice—concld.

——— ———Leave to withdraw from suit with liberty to bring fresh suit 647

——— ———Parties not to be allowed to assume inconsistent positions 936

——— ———Party not allowed to set up procedure successfully objected to by him 420

——— ———Plaintiff not giving evidence—Suit to be dismissed—Defendant not entitled to prove his case 87

——— ———Pleadings—Appeal—Suit found time-barred 638

——— ———Privy Council Appeal—Concurrent findings 666

——— ———Privy Council Appeal—Concurrent findings on question of fact 733

——— ——— ———Reference to Full Bench 559

——— ———Suit for possession of immoveable property—Power of Court to grant restitution—Unregistered document—Admissibility for collateral purpose—Restitution—Court's power to grant conditional decree 987

——— ———Jurisdiction—Magistrate seeking advice of District Magistrate—Magistrate bound to decide question himself.

A Magistrate, before whom an accused was placed on trial, felt a doubt as to his jurisdiction to try the accused. He thereupon sought the advice of the District Magistrate and, on the receipt of the latter's opinion on the question of jurisdiction, proceeded to try the case:

Held, that the Magistrate was not justified in seeking the advice of the District Magistrate in the way he did. The Magistrate was bound to finish his inquiry, complete his record, by the reception of all evidence of relevant facts, including the facts which bore upon the question of accused's amenability to his jurisdiction, and then as a Magistrate pass such order as seemed to him to be legal and proper. EMPEROR v. ABDUL RAHIMAN MOMIN, 14 BOM. L. R. 891; 13 CR. L. J. 786 530 ——— ———Party waiting to be produced as witness by opposite party.

A party knowing the facts of his case personally, should appear as his own witness and not wait to be produced as a witness by the opposite party. SURAT-SINGH v. BALDEO, 8 N. L. R. 150 353

——— ———Suspicion, decision cannot be founded on—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114—Presumption—Burden of proof—Production of document with endorsement of payment.

Suspicion, though a ground for scrutiny, cannot be made the foundation of a decision.

In view of the presumption under section 114 of the Evidence Act, the production of a bond with an endorsement of payment, casts upon the plaintiff the burden of proving that the debt is still outstanding, i.e., that the bond came into defendant's hands by dishonest means, and that the signatures to the endorsement are either forgeries or unauthorised. MOHAMMAD MEHDI HASAN KHAN v. MANDIR DAS, 12 M. L. T. 392; 15 O. C 278; (1912) M. W. N. 1052; 34 A. 511; 14 BOM L. R. 1073; 10 A. L J. 373; 17 C. W. N. 49; 16 C. L. J. 629; 23 M. L. J. 741; 39 I. A. 68 396 P. C.

Pre-emption—Decree for foreclosure against mortgagor's representative—Representative also co-occupant—Subsequent suit for pre-emption 616

——— ———Custom—Wajib-ul-arz, construction of.

The provisions regarding pre-emption in a village were contained in paragraph 14, Chapter II of the Wajib-ul-arz. Chapter II was headed thus:—"Mutual rights of the co-sharers, based on custom or particular contracts." Paragraph 14 was headed "Custom relating to the right of pre-emption." The clause gave a right of pre-emption first to a near co-sharer, then to a co-sharer in the patti, after that to a co-sharer in the thok and lastly to a co-sharer in the mahal:

Held, that the terms of the Wajib-ul-arz clearly evidenced a custom of pre-emption in respect of the mahals to which it related. MATHURA PRASAD v. SHEIKH MUHAMMAD 844 P. C.

——— ———Deposit of 1/5th of purchase-money plus costs of improvements—Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), s. 19—Court-fee—Value of buildings.

A pre-emptor, who has taken no steps to obtain an injunction against a vendee, who has been carrying on his building operations after the purchase of the pre-empted property and before the institution of the suit, is bound to pay Court-fee on the total value of the property as well as the improvements made thereon, and must deposit one-fifth of such total amount, under section 19 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905. KHIDMAT RAI v. ANANT RAM, 169 P. W. R. 1912; 184 P. L. R. 1912 245

——— ———Muhammadan Law—Pre-emption—Assertion of right before completion of sale—Formalities for—Talab-i-istishhad—Reference to talab-i-mowasibat, when necessary—Co-owner's right to pre-empt per capita.

The assertion of a right of pre-emption before the completion of a sale is premature and ineffectual.

Under Muhammadan Law, a pre-emptor must ordinarily comply with the following fomalities after the completion of a sale:

(1) talab-i-mowasibat, or assertion of right immediately on receiving information of sale;

(2) talab-i-istishhad, or demand in the presence of witnesses made either to the buyer or to the seller or on the premises in dispute;

(3) that talab-i-istishhad should refer expressly to the talab-i mowasibat.

Where, however, the occasion for performing the talab-i-mowasibat does not arise until all the conditions for a talab-i-istishhad had occurred, there is no scope for the operation of the rule that talab-i-istishhad should refer expressly to the talab-i-mowasibat and the maxim applies cessante ratione legis, cessat et ipsa lex.

All persons having an equal right of pre-emption are entitled under Muhammadan Law to divide the property equally per capita. PERUMAL v. MAHOMEDALI, 6 S. L. R. 107 39

——— ———Provision in decree for payment of purchase-money within certain time—Payment not made—Appeal, maintainability of.

In a pre-emption suit, the plaintiff got a decree on condition of his paying the purchase-money within a month. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge simply in regard to the condition laid down by the first Court as to payment of the purchase-money.

Pre-emption—concld.

During the pendency of the appeal, the one month time expired and the money was not paid. The District Judge dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that the money had not been paid within one month:

Held, that the suit should not have been dismissed on that ground as the condition of payment of money itself was the subject of appeal. KHURSHED-UN-NISSA v. ALIM-UN-NISSA, 10 A. L. J. 421 858 ——— ———Right of othidar in possession to claim pre-emption—Limitation—Knowledge of sale to third party—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 120.

The right of an othidar in possession of property to claim pre-emption consists in a right to elect, when there has been an attempt on the part of the owner of the property to sell it to a third person, whether he will buy it for the same price as that offered by the third person or not.

Article 120 of the Limitation Act provides the period of limitation for a suit by an othidar for pre-emption, and time commences to run against the othidar from the date he has knowledge of the sale and of its terms and not from the date of the sale. MAMABI v. ACHARATH PARAKAT, 12 M. L. T. 535; 23 M. L. J. 607; (1912) M. W. N. 1217 337

——— ———Rishtadar karibi not co-owner with the vendor—No right to pre-empt.

The pre-emptive clause in the zamima khewat of a village ran as follows: "When any sharer wishes to transfer his rights, he can transfer first to a near relative (rishtadar karibi), after him to a distant relative (rishtadar baidi), and after him to sharers in the village (shurkain deh). In the event of those persons refusing, the transferor shall have power to sell or mortgage to whomsoever he pleases. Sharers (hissadaran) and sharers in the village (shurkain deh) shall be considered to have preference on condition that they are willing to pay the same price as a stranger is paying":

Held, that under the above clause, a near relative, who was not a co-sharer of the vendor in the same mahal, had no right to pre-empt. MAHABIR PERSHAD v. RAM LOCHAN TEWARI 521

——— ———Wajib-ul-arz—Evidentiary value of wajib-ul-arz—Custom or contract.

In pre-emption cases, the wajib-ul-arz is, no doubt, evidence and, in some cases, evidence of great importance. But the existence or non-existence of a custom of pre-emption does not and cannot depend upon the construction of a wajib-ul-arz. The wajib-ul-arz is to be taken into consideration by the Court and carefully considered; but there is no class of evidence which varies so much in its importance as does a wajib-ul-arz. ZALIM SINGH v. RADHA BAI 594

——— ———decree—Extension of time fixed 912

——— ———suit—Property subject to mortgages—Covenant by vendor to discharge previous mortgages—Subsequent suit on mortgages 318

Preliminary decree. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 2.

——— ———inquiry. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 202.

Prescription—Acquisition of tenancy by prescription 606

Prescriptive right—Streets and drains in Municipal towns 158

——————, acquisition of 22

Presentation. See REGISTRATION ACT, 1877, s. 32.

Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 69—Reference to High Court when permissible—Reasonabl edoubt by the referring Court.

Section 69 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, permits a reference to the High Court only when the referring Court entertains a reasonable doubt on the point referred. KRISHNA DOSS PARAMANANDA v. FREDERICK WILLIAM EMERY 93

Presumption. See PUBLIC GAMBLING ACT.

————Benami transaction — Passing of consideration 740

————Drunkenness—Intention—Knowledge 800

———— of dishonesty 663

————Mortgage of interest of mortgagor 494

————Non-payment of rent for more than 12 years 523

————Production of document with endorsement of payment 396

————Record of rights 744

————Settlement records, entries in 94

————Tenure-holder 227

Principal and Agent—Possession and transport of petroleum—Illegal possession by agent without principal's knowledge—Liability of principal 536 ————Undisclosed principal — Right of suit by agent—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 230 (2), 236.

An agent is entitled to sue on a contract under section 230 (2) of the Contract Act, when he is able to establish that he has an undisclosed principal behind him.

Where a contract has been entered into with a person in the character of an agent, but in fact he is acting not as agent of any principal, but on his own account, he is not entitled to sue on the contract, under the provisions of section 236 of the Contract Act. RAMJI DAS v. JANKI DAS, 39 C. 802 973

Priority. See MORTGAGE—PRIORITY; REGISTRATION ACT, 1877, s. 50.

————Deposit of policy—Assignment by writing—Deposit by way of security 627

Prisons Act (IX of 1894), s. 33—Supply of clothing to prisoner by arresting judgment-creditor—Subsistence allowance—Civil prisoner released owing to mistake of Jail authorities can be re-arrested—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 57, 58 (2).

Prisons Act—concld.

Where A., a civil prisoner, was released by the Jail authorities for non-supply of the clothing required to be supplied to him under section 33 of the Prisons Act, 1894, but where it was discovered that the requisition on the arresting creditor was despatched to a wrong address and did not reach him till four days after the petitioner's release:

Held, (1) that A. was released owing to a mistake of the Jail authorities and not owing to any default of the decree-holder under section 33, Prisons Act;

(2) that A. could be re arrested but in calculating the period of imprisonment under the new warrant, the time of imprisonment under the former warrant should be deducted.

The cost of clothing, etc., payable under section 33, Prisons Act, is not "subsistence allowance" as contemplated in section 58 of the Civil Procedure Code which includes only the monthly allowance fixed by scale under section 57. DURAI RAJAH MUDALIAR v. VADIVELU, 5 BUR. L. T. 159; 6 L. B. R. 61 911

Private alienation after attachment 625

———— defence, right of. See PENAL CODE, s. 97.

————, right of—Burden of proof—Assault by accused when deceased was violating woman—No proof that accused assaulted deceased afterwards—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 34, 99, 100, 148, 304.

The right of private defence is a restricted right, and section 100 of the Penal Code has to be read subject to the provisions of section 99.

When one man takes away the life of another man the onus is on him to show the circumstances which justify his act in law. But where the deceased was assaulted, while he was in the very act of violating a woman, by her relations, no question of burden of proof arises, and the case falls within section 100 even as qualified by section 99.

The accused assaulted the deceased while the latter was in the very act of violating a woman related to the accused. The deceased escaped out of the room; in the corridor he was assaulted by persons other than the accused. The deceased finally got into the court-yard where he was beaten to death by a large body of persons. There was no common intention between the accused and the persons assembled outside the house.

The accused were not shown to have taken any part in the assault upon the deceased after he had escaped from the room and come to the corridor and finally to the court-yard:

Held, that the accused could not be convicted under sections 304 and 148, Penal Code. JHAKRI CHAMAR v. EMPEROR, 16 C. L. J. 440; 13 CR. L. J. 905 1001

———— International Law—Pro-note executed in Foreign State 281

———— Suit against Foreign State 444

Privy Council Appeal—Concurrent findings 666

————Practice—Exercise of discretion 441

Privy Council Appeal—concld.

——————High Court's decision in Land Acquisition case—Letters Patent (Bombay), cl. 39—Final judgment or order—Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), s. 54.

No appeal lies to the Privy Council from a decision of the High Court under section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act, although the value of the property involved in the case exceeds Rs. 10,000 and a substantial point of law is involved in the judgment.

The Land Acquisition Act is a special statute enacted to deal with a certain special class of cases and the orders made thereunder are outside the ordinary course of the Civil Court's jurisdiction.

Since the Act itself gives no right of appeal to the Privy Council, no such right exists.

An award made in a land acquisition case by the High Court is not a decree within the ordinary jurisdiction to which the Civil Procedure Code refers. Nor is it a final judgment or order within the meaning of section 39 of the Letters Patent. SPECIAL OFFICER, SALSETTE BUILDING SITES v. DOSABHAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 1194 952

——————, appeal to—Order refusing leave to appeal to Privy Council, if open to review—Value below Rs. 10,000 even if interest up to date fixed for redemption is added—Value above the sum if interest subsequent to that date is added—Redemption suit, when leave should be granted 221

——————Practice—Concurrent findings—Question of fact.

The Privy Council, not sitting as a Court of first instance, cannot take into account even well-founded criticism and disturb the concurrent findings in effect of two lower Courts purely on a question of fact, unless it is satisfied that such findings are erroneous. SACHINDRA NATH ROY v. SECRETARY OF STATE 733 P. C.

Probate. See PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION ACT; WILL.

——————Will by a Muhammadan 868

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) 4

——————ss. 42, 43, 44 868

——————s. 50 763

——————s. 86 99

——————s. 112 17

Procedure. See PRACTICE.

——————in mortgage suit—Alteration of law 577

Professional misconduct. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT, s. 13; PLEADER.

Promissory-note—Unstamped promissory-note executed on settlement of accounts—Admissibility in evidence—Promissory-note for previous debt dishonoured—Revival of debt 721

——————in name of deceased member of Hindu family—Right of survivor to sue 748

——————, suit on—Execution admitted—Undue influence of plaintiff and immorality of defendant pleaded—Burden of proof—Consideration—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Interest up to date fixed for payment—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 79.

Promissory-note—concld.

In a suit on a promissory-note, the defendant—a young man of 25 or 26—admitted the execution of the pro-note but contended that (1) the plaintiff had obtained the note by the exercise of undue influence, (2) a major portion of the consideration had not been paid by plaintiff, and (3) whatever consideration was paid by plaintiff was paid for an immoral purpose:

Held, that as there was nothing on the face of the pro-note or in the evidence to indicate that the bargain was an unconscionable one or to show that the plaintiff was in a position to dominate the will of the defendant, the onus lay upon the defendant to prove the pleas of undue influence and immorality.

Under section 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, a plaintiff is entitled to interest at the stipulated rate from the date of the institution of the suit till the date fixed for payment. GHAZAFFAR HUSSAIN v. MAHABIR PRASAD 309

Property subject to mortgages — Covenant by vendor to discharge previous mortgages—Pre-emption suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata.

The first defendant owned a share of 1 biswa, 8 biswansis in a certain village and out of it he sold an unspecified 12 biswansis share to the plaintiffs. The sale-deed contained a recital that as the aforesaid share of 12 biswansis was being sold to the plaintiffs free of any charge, the vendor will pay off the debts due under the mortgages existing on the said share and if the plaintiffs were compelled to pay anything, they would be entitled to recover that sum from him. The other defendants pre-empted the share in suit and obtained the possession of it on payment of the purchase-money. Meanwhile, the plaintiffs purchased the previous mortgages existing on the property in dispute and put them into suit. It was contested by the defendants, who had pre-empted the property, that because the plaintiffs had not put forward the aforesaid mortgages in the pre-emption case, their present suit was barred:

Held, that the suit on the aforesaid mortgages was maintainable, inasmuch as a plea regarding the aforesaid mortgages could not be the subject of an issue in the pre-emption suit, nor could it affect the result of that suit. SHEO SAHAI v. SHIB SINGH 318

Prostitute—Power to adopt 422

Protection in statutory duties 673

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), ss. 15 (1)—Grounds for dismissing application for insolvency—Petitioner trying to show his property as belonging to another.

A person, who petitions to be declared insolvent, not unfrequently at some stage or another of the proceedings, endeavours to keep back a portion of his property or pretends that property which belongs to him does not belong to him. An action of this kind on the part of a debtor or the suspicion or belief that such action is contemplated by a debtor is not a good ground for dismissing a debtor's petition in insolvency.

Such cases are distinguishable from cases in which the petitions are dismissed on the ground that they have been presented for inequitable or collateral purposes. MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN v. ILAHI BAKHSH, 10 A. L. J. 188 92

Advocate High Court Jammu & Kashmir

Recital in mortgage-deed—Admissible in evidence against representative of mortgagor—Probative value of recital 644

Record of Rights, object of—Title—Possession 979

——— ——— ———Presumption 744

——— ——— ———Suit for declaration that plaintiff not tenure-holder but raiyat—Party—Court adding persons, recorded as raiyats, as defendants—Plaintiff not prejudiced—Persons recorded as raiyats, whether necessary parties 917, 919, 921

Redemption. See MORTGAGE—REDEMPTION.

Reference to High Court by Presidency Small Cause Court 93

——— ——— for minor to arbitration—Superseding arbitration—Appeal—Revision 388

Registered document, absence of—Family arrangement 885

Registrar is not inferior Criminal Court 717

Registration—Agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee as to disposal of rents and profits 737

——— ——— not conclusive without further proof 842

Registration Act (III of 1877), ss. 17, 49—Agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee as to disposal of rents and profits—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Admissibility of previous negotiations to vary terms of document—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 65 (a), application of—Mortgage executed before Act.

An agreement between a mortgagor and mortgagee as to the mode in which the rents and profits of the mortgaged property (exceeding Rs. 100 in value) are to be dealt with, requires compulsory registration and, if unregistered, is inadmissible in evidence.

It is no more permissible in India than in England to contradict or vary the express and unambiguous terms of a written instrument by reference to preliminary negotiations or previous conversations.

Section 65 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act can have no application to a case where the mortgage was executed before the date of the Act, though one of the further charges was subsequent to it. ABDULLAH KHAN v. BASHARAT HUSSAIN, 17 C. W. N. 233; 13 M. L. T. 182; (1913) M. W. N. 131; 35 A. 48; 17 C. L. J. 312 737 P. C.

——— ——— ——— s. 17 (b), (c) 176

——— ——— ——— ss. 32, 33—Mortgage-deed executed by parda nashin lady—Presentation for registration by husband—Validity of presentation.

A parda nashin lady executed a mortgage-deed. The deed was presented for registration to the Sub-Registrar by her husband who had no authority to make the presentation:

Held, that the presentation was a complete nullity. KHALIL-UD-DIN v. BANNI BIBI, 10 A. L. J. 440; 35 A. 34 274

——— ——— ——— s. 33 274

——— ——— ——— s. 44 176

Registration Act (1877)—concld.

——— ——— ——— s. 49 737

——— ——— ——— s. 49—Suit for possession of immoveable property—Power of Court to grant restitution—Unregistered document—Admissibility for collateral purpose—Practice—Restitution — Court's power to grant conditional decree—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 65.

A Court in India has power to pass a conditional decree as it is perfectly within its competence to impose a condition which will do complete justice to the parties and there is nothing in section 65 of the Contract Act which suggests that the Court has no such power.

Even in suits in which the relief sought is not an equitable relief, the Court has the power, in a proper case, to refuse to grant a relief to the plaintiff except on terms indicated by the obvious consideration of justice.

Per Abdur Rahim, J. (affirming the decree of the lower Court).—The main object of the Registration Act is to prevent documents of certain classes having any effect unless they are registered and not to deal with questions of evidence, pure and simple. That a document of sale was not intended to be a real transaction, can be proved by a contemporaneous document, which was intended to be a mortgage but failed to have that effect for want of registration, as the evidence is adduced not to enforce the mortgage, but to show that the so-called deed of sale was not intended to operate as a transaction affecting immoveable property.

An unregistered document is admissible to prove the circumstances in which the property came to be in defendant's possession.

Per Miller, J.—An unregistered document is inadmissible in evidence to prove the nature of the possession of the defendant or the circumstances in which defendant came into possession of the property so as to enable a plaintiff to disturb defendant's possession and re-place it by its own. MUTTA VENCATACHALAPATHY v. PYINDA VENCATACHALAPATHY GARU, 23 M. L. J. 652; 12 M. L. T. 579 987

——— ——— ——— s. 50—Registered and unregistered deed—Priority—Same property covered by deeds by different persons.

A. mortgaged certain property to B. on 21st August 1894. On 30th May 1896, A. mortgaged the same property to C. Both the mortgages were unregistered. C. brought a suit for sale on his mortgage and purchased the property himself in execution of the decree. C.'s heir sold the property to D., whose heir sold it to E. The sale in favour of E. was an out and out sale of the full right of ownership in the property and was by a registered sale-deed:

Held, that E.'s deed had priority over B.'s unregistered mortgage-deed, as both deeds covered the same property and section 50 of the Registration Act applied. ISHRI PERSHAD v. GOPI NATH, 10 A. L. J. 222; 34 A. 631. 19

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 32—Presentation for registration—Executant present before Sub-Registrar when document handed over for registration by servant—Presentation, whether valid.

Registration Act—(1908)—concld.

H. executed a mortgage-deed in favour of K. The document was handed over to the Sub-Registrar for registration by a servant of the mortgagee. The mortgagor was also present there assenting to the registration of the document :

Held, that the presentation was a valid presentation within the meaning of the Registration Act. KIRTA KISHEN v. HARNAM CHAND, 10 A. L. J. 510; 35 A. 72 465

Regulation XVII of 1806 141, 467

——— VII of 1822, s. 14 881

——— IX of 1825 881

——— II of 1827, s. 52 964

Release of property of one of mortgagors 931

Relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent 947

——— against forfeiture 991

Religious Endowment—Adverse possession by Pujari—Right of founder's representative to sue 589

——— ———Waqf, proof of—Question of law or fact—Appropriation of income, whether sufficient proof—Case to be made out by plaintiff—Question of law or fact.

The mere appropriation of the rents and profits of a particular property to the up-keep of a religious foundation is not sufficient proof that such property is endowed property.

The question whether a specified property is or is not waqf property, is a question of law or, at any rate, a mixed question of law and fact.

A plaintiff, who sues in ejectment for recovery of property, alleged to have been appropriated by way of endowment for the up-keep of an endowed property, must make out just as strong a case as a plaintiff who seeks to set aside an alienation of endowed property. ABDUL GHAFUR v. SHIAM SUNDAR DAS 303

Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), ss. 14, 18 270

Religious Institution—Mosque—Right to worship—Right to recite Qoran 386

——— ———Dharmsala of Sri Tilok Nath, Tahsil Nurpur, District Kangra—Public or private—Suit to remove Granthi—Leave to sue—Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), ss. 14, 18—Court-fee for such a suit.

A plaint containing a claim to remove the manager of a religious institution, based on the allegation that the institution is a private one and is founded and maintained by plaintiff's ancestors, and that the plaintiff alone has the power of appointing and dismissing the manager who refuses to leave it, requires ad valorem Court-fee and is not maintainable on a stamp of rupees ten only.

Where the object of a Dharamsala is that the Granth should be read there daily and no member of the Sikh Community, who behaves with propriety can be excluded from participating in this service or forbidden from entering it where such recitation is being made, the Dharamsala is a Public Religious Institution, particularly where the Granthi is remunerated wholly or partly from a Government grant. It is immaterial whether the appointment or dismissal of the Granthi rests solely with the founder or his representative.

The Dharmsala of Sri Tilok Nath, Tahsil Nurpur, District Kangra, is a Public Religious Institution and the Granthi of such an institution cannot be removed even by its founder except for good reason.

The provisions of section 14 and other sections of Act XX of 1863 apply to an institution of the above description, and its founder or his representative or any other person interested in the institution suing to remove the Granthi or Manager cannot maintain a suit for the purpose without first obtaining leave, under section 18 of the said Act, of the principal Court of Original Civil Jurisdiction. BASAWA SINGH v. BHAGWAN KAUR, 181 P. W. R. 1912; 216 P. L. R. 1912 270

——— ——— ——— Hindu temple—Scheme for future management—Practice—Exercise of discretion.

The High Court has a large discretion in the matter of sanctioning a scheme for the management of a temple and of its funds, and unless it can be shown that that discretion has been improperly exercised, or that the High Court has not given due consideration to matters which they were directed by the Privy Council to take into consideration, its decision ought not to be interfered with. SEVAK KIRPA SHANKAR DAJI v. GOPAL RAO MANOHAR TAMBAKAR 12 M. L. T. 448; (1912) M. W. N. 1106; 16 C. L. J. 640; 15 BOM. L. R. 13; 24 M. L. J. 199 441 P. C.

Relinquishment. See PATTADAR.

Remand. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XLI, Rr. 23, 25.

——— ———Title suit—Finding of lower Appellate Court that plaintiff's suit is not barred—Sufficiency of finding—Remand by single Judge—Appeal coming on for hearing before Division Bench—Disposal of appeal by Division Bench 224

Rent. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

———, meaning of 120

——— suit—Limitation 343

——— ———Res judicata 445

——— ———Res judicata—Presumption—Considerations for determination 111

——— suit for, based on specific settlement—No alternative claim for rent—Plaintiff's title proved but settlement not proved—Whether decree for use and occupation should be given—Amendment of plaint, whether should be allowed.

In a suit for rent, where no alternative claim is made for use and occupation, no sum can be decreed on that footing.

Therefore, where rent was claimed under an alleged settlement with the defendant, which the plaintiff failed to prove, a decree for use and occupation ought not to have been given when there was no such claim and the defendant had no notice of such a claim.

A plaint may be allowed to be amended only when a claim has been omitted by mistake or inadvertence or for similar reasons, and not deliberately.

Rent suit—concld.

Therefore where the plaintiff has sued for rent upon a specific case of settlement with the defendant, which has been found to be false, it is not a case where he should be allowed to amend the plaint by claiming a relief for the defendant's use and occupation, not consistent with the claim originally laid. BHUKHI KOERI v. RAM KHELWAN PROSAD, 17 C. W. N. 311 646

Representative. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 146.

Repudiation of adoption 350

Reputed ownership, doctrine of, inapplicable to secured creditor 31

Res judicata. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 11.

———————, constructive—Mortgage—Priority—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 79, 80—Puisne mortgagee, whether personally responsible for re-payment of mortgage-debt.

On the 28th September 1900, the mortgagors took a lease from the mortgagees of a certain property and on the same date executed a security bond, for the due payment of rent. The two documents were registered on the 11th October 1900. The lessees made default in payment of rent. The landlords, consequently, sued for rent and enforcement of the security given by the lessees. In this suit, several persons were joined as defendants including one H., a mortgagee under a bond dated 12th October 1900, on the allegation that they had acquired an interest in the properties given by the lessees by way of security. A decree was made in favour of the landlords on the 13th March 1907, which declared the priority of the landlord's mortgage over that of H. On 20th April 1908, a mortgage bond was executed in favour of the mortgagees in lieu of the decree debt and other debts. In a suit to enforce this mortgage:

Held, that the security bond of the 28th September 1900, was not entitled to priority over the mortgage of the 12th October 1900, except to the extent that the matter was res judicata by virtue of the decree of the 13th March 1907, in respect of the sum then in controversy, for the Court would not extend the doctrine of constructive res judicata beyond the subject matter of the particular litigation.

A mortgagee, making a further advance, shall not, in respect of that advance, acquire any priority as against an intermediate mortgagee; but this general rule is subject to the exception that the intermediate mortgage is postponed in respect of advances subsequently made on the security of that mortgage, provided it expresses the maximum to be secured thereby and that maximum is not exceeded.

A puisne mortgagee, as holder of a fragment of the equity of redemption, cannot be held personally responsible for the re-payment of the mortgage-debt which is primarily payable by the mortgagors. DALIP NARAYAN SINGH v. CHAIT NARAIN SINGH, 16 C. L. J. 395 927

———————— Joint decree—Rights inter se of plaintiffs not adjudicated upon their rights adjusted in subsequent suit—Recovery by one plaintiff of his share of first decree—Suit by other plaintiff entitled to that share under second decree—Recovery of money by person with knowledge of cessation of right, result of.

Res judicata—contd.

In 1899, A., claiming to be the sole proprietor of a trading firm, sued C. for the recovery of a debt due to the firm. A. joined his uncle B. as a pro forma co-defendant in the suit.

The Court found that A. & B. were co-partners and thus B. was joined as co-plaintiff and a joint decree was passed against C.

In 1900, B. sued A. for partition of the joint properties. It was found in this suit that B. was not entitled to any share in the partnership in respect of which the debt was claimed in the previous suit. Two years after the adjudication in the second suit, B. recovered his half share of the decretal debt due from C. A. sued to recover this money on the ground that B.'s interest in the first decree had ceased to exist by virtue of the second decree:

Held, per Chandavarkar, Ag. C. J.,

(1) that the finding in the first suit that A. & B. were jointly entitled to a decree was arrived at only for the purpose of the defendant sued in that litigation;

(2) that the Court was not called upon in the first suit to decide finally what the respective interests of A. & B. were in the decretal debt;

(3) that the finding in the second suit that B. was not entitled to any share in the partnership must be regarded as the final and decisive finding governing the jural relation of the parties;

(a) first, because it settled the interest between A. and B. which the judgment in the first suit had left undecided;

(b) secondly, even assuming that that judgment had settled what those interests were, B. having failed to plead that settlement as res judicata in the second suit, it was the adjudication in the second suit that must prevail as finally deciding the issue of title as between A. & B.;

(4) that B. having recovered the money while the decree in the second suit against him had come into existence, was liable to restore the money recovered by him knowing that he had no right to it.

Held, per Batchelor, J.—

(i) that there was no real inconsistency between the two decrees, because the later decree and that alone decided the question as to what interest, if any, B. had in the partnership;

(ii) that even supposing that the decision in the second suit could only be arrived at by overriding what was decided in the first suit, the later decision must prevail to govern the present rights of the parties.

The rule laid down in Marriot v. Hampton, 7 T. R. 269, that money recovered under a judgment or decree cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit or action whilst the decree or judgment under which it was recovered remains in force, rests on the ground that the original decree or judgment must be taken to be subsisting and valid until it has been reversed or superseded by some ulterior proceeding. If it has been so reversed or superseded, the money recovered under it ought certainly to be refunded.

In order to bring the principle of the rule mentioned above into force, there must be bona fides on the part of the party, who has got the benefit of his opponent's payment. If a person enforcing a payment under legal process has therein taken an unfair advantage or acted unconscientiously, knowing that he had no right to the money, the principle cannot prevent the other party from recovering the money back. SHANKAR VISHNU GOKHALE v. RAGHUNATH HARI DHARAP, 14 BOM. L. R. 854 205

Res judicata—concld.

——— ——— ——— Rent suit—Presumption—Considerations for determination—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 51.

A prior decision in a rent suit may be taken to determine the rent claimed in that suit, and to give rise, under section 51 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, to the presumption that the rents for subsequent years remained the same.

The weight to be attached to the presumption thus raised must depend first on the conditions under which that decision was arrived at, that is to say, whether it was after an adjudication of the question of the amount of rent or the rate of rent or not. If in the prior suit there had been such an adjudication it would be only open to the Judge in a subsequent suit for rent to look to subsequent circumstances and events to enable him to determine whether there had been any change in the relations between the parties since. If there was no adjudication of the question, it would be for him to consider the circumstances and events, both prior and subsequent to that former suit, in order to enable him to determine the relations existing between the parties and the rentals rightly due for the lands for the years in suit. BENI PERSHAD KOERI v. RAJ KUMAR CHOWBEY, 16 C. L. J. 124 111

——— ——— ——— Suit by or against manager of joint Hindu family—Effect of decree in such suit on other members of family.

The manager of a joint Hindu family can both sue and be sued in his representative capacity and a decision fairly obtained against him is binding on the other members of the family and operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit. BINDHACHAL RAI v. GAYA RAI 290

Restitution—Assignment of decree during appeal—Assignee realising decree from judgment-debtor 420

——— ——— Suit for possession of immoveable property—Power of Court to grant restitution 987

——— ——— ——— Suit for possession decreed in first Court—Forcible possession taken by plaintiff—Subsequent reversal of decree—Application by defendant for restitution and mesne profits, if may be entertained—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144.

Section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code was enacted with a view to shorten litigation and afford speedy relief. A narrow construction of the section so as to restrict its application should not be adopted.

Where a successful plaintiff in a suit for possession took possession of the property in suit by force and not by execution of the decree, and the decree was set aside on appeal:

Held, that an application by the defendant for restitution of the property to him with the mesne profits enjoyed by the plaintiff in the interval by virtue of his possession was maintainable under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Restitution—concld.

Section 144 is not limited to restitution of what may be technically described as mesne profits; if an appropriate order of restitution is made under the section no question of limitation arises.

The Court will not, in the interests of justice, be astute to force the parties to a separate suit, merely to allow the question of limitation to be raised. RAGHU SINGH v. SHEW PROSAD RAI, 16 C. L. J. 135 121

——— ——— of conjugal rights, suit for —Limitation 629

——— ——— ——— Hindu girl married during minority—Refusal to consummate marriage.

A Hindu girl was married while under the age of puberty, but did not accompany her husband to his house and there was no cohabitation between the parties. On arriving at puberty, the girl refused to consummate the marriage;

Held, that the girl should be allowed freedom of choice and the husband was not entitled to a decree for restitution of conjugal rights. KALAWANTI v. BUKHAN, 187 P. W. R. 1912; 215 P. L. R. 1912 254

Resulting trust—Specific purpose 689

Re-trial of appeal, power of High Court to direct 49

Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4 148

Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859), s. 9—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—Mortgage by co-sharer—Default in paying revenue by other co-sharers—Payment of their share by mortgagee—Suit by mortgagee for recovery of sums paid—Whether suit maintainable without specifying share of revenue payable by each co-sharer—Contribution suit, nature of—"Defaulting proprietor," meaning of—Person not proprietor paying revenue—Remedies.

A co-sharer proprietor of an estate mortgaged his share to the plaintiff. Under the terms of the mortgage contract, the Government revenue was payable by the mortgagor. The other co-sharers of the estate made default in the payment of the revenue, and the plaintiff was obliged to deposit several sums to avert the sale of the properties and save his interest. He then brought this suit for the recovery of the sums against the defaulting co-sharers:

Held, that the suit was maintainable on the principle recognised in section 9 of the Revenue Sale Law Act of 1859, and also under section 69 of the Contract Act; that the plaintiff was not bound to claim against each co-sharer the specific amount of Government revenue payable by him proportionate to his share in the estate, as the present suit was not a contribution suit.

The nature of a contribution suit explained.

If the arrears of revenue due have been paid by a person who is not a proprietor he has a threefold remedy. If he is party to a suit pending before a Court of Justice for possession of the estate, it is competent to the Court to put him temporarily in possession. In the second place, he is entitled to have a personal decree against the defaulting proprietors for the amount paid by him to save the estate from danger. In the third place, he is entitled to have a lien on the estate for the amount paid.

Revenue Sale Law—concld.

The expression "defaulting proprietor" in section 9 of the Revenue Sale Law Act of 1859 means, where there is more than one proprietor, the entire body of such proprietors.

The reasonable interpretation of section 69 of the Contract Act is that it applies only to cases in which the person who makes the payment is himself not liable to pay, but is interested in the payment of the money. MOTICHAND v. BAJRANG SAHI, 16 C. L. J. 148 45

Reversioner—Declaratory suit—Offer to pay—Conditional decree—Charge for proved necessity.

In suits by reversioners regarding the alienations of widows, the uncertainty, regarding the person who would be entitled to succeed the widow, is no ground for refusing a declaration regarding the character of the alienation. When the alienation is declared invalid there is no reason why a charge should not be declared in favour of the alienee on equitable grounds for the amount for which necessity has been proved. It is not necessary that there should be an offer in the plaint before a conditional decree can be passed and the alienee given a charge for the amount. GARIKIPATI PAPARAYUDU v. GARIKIPATI RATTAMMA, (1912) M. W. N. 1176; 24 M. L. J. 62; 13 M. L. T. 110 508

Review. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XLVII.

——Amendment of decree—Costs assessed on wrong principle—Proper remedy 418

——Privy Council, appeal to—Order refusing leave to appeal to Privy Council, if open to review—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLV—Value below Rs. 10,000 even if interest up to date fixed for redemption is added—Value above the sum if interest subsequent to that date is added—Redemption suit, when leave should be granted.

An order of the High Court under Order XLV of the Civil Procedure Code, rejecting an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, may be reviewed by the Court which made the order.

In a redemption suit, even if the interest was calculated up to the six months allowed for redemption, the sum of Rs. 10,000 was not reached. The sum would be reached by the addition of interest subsequent to the date of redemption. The High Court, therefore, refused to grant leave to appeal to the Privy Council. On an application for a review of the order of the High Court:

Held, that there was no error apparent on the face of the record or any sufficient reason for granting a review. NAND KISHORE SINGH v. RAM GULAM SAHU, 16 C. W. N. 1089; 39 C. 1037 221

Revision. See PROVINCIAL SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT, s. 25; PUNJAB COURTS ACT, s. 70.

——Chief Court—Compromise by joint succession by Government tenant 680

——Costs assessed on wrong principle 418

——Failure to exercise jurisdiction 991

——Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 73 (2)—Order of rateable distribution of judgment-debtor's assets among rival decree-holders in execution of decree.

An order under section 73 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, that a certain decree-holder is or is not entitled to share rateably in the assets realized from the judgment-debtor's property is not open to revision; it is immaterial whether the order has been actually carried out or not at the time of filing or hearing the revision.

The general policy of the law and the usual practice of the Superior Courts is not to interfere on the revision side except in cases where the petitioner has no other remedy or his only alternative remedy is so cumbrous or expensive that to refer him to it would be tantamount to denying him relief. RADHE KISHEN v. BHOLU MAL, 171 P. W. R. 1912; 176 P. L. R 1912 254 ——Criminal case—Findings of fact—Jurisdiction of High Court to interfere—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 211—Principles to be kept in view in case under section 211.

Applications for revision in criminal cases stand on a fundamentally different footing from appeals against appellate decrees in civil suits. In cases of the latter description, the High Court is bound by the rigid provisions of section 100 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, to act on findings of fact embodied in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. In criminal cases, on the other hand, there is no such statutory restriction to the exercise of the High Court's jurisdiction. As a matter of practice, the High Court does not ordinarily interfere with the conclusions of the lower Appellate Court on questions of fact, but there cannot be any question as to the competency of the High Court to interfere with a finding of fact when the occasion requires it, and the High Court will not hesitate to do so when satisfied that the finding is manifestly erroneous and a miscarriage of justice would result from it if left uncorrected.

In a case under section 211 of the Penal Code, two principles must be kept in view: (1) that failure on the part of a complainant to establish the truth of his allegation does not by any means justify the inference that the complaint was false, and (2) that to secure a conviction it must be established beyond reasonable doubt that the circumstances are not merely consistent with the guilt of the accused but entirely inconsistent with his innocence. RAM PROSAD v. EMPEROR, 16 C. L. J. 455; 13 CR. L. J. 897; 17 C. W. N. 379 993 ——Criminal cases—Concurrent findings of facts—Material error as to facts.

Where a lower Appellate Court has fallen into a material error as to facts, the Chief Court will interfere in revision. PRABHU DIYAL v. EMPEROR, 24 P. L. R. 1912; 38 P. W. R. 1912; 13 CR. L. J. 774 406

——High Court Power to interfere with Collector's order reversing mamlatdar's decision Collector a Subordinate Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 3, 115—Mamlatdars' Courts Act (II of 1906), s. 28.

The Mamlatdars' Courts Act expressly constitutes the Collector, taking proceedings under that Act, a Court. Therefore, the Collector, when exercising judicial functions under the Act, is subject to the superintendence and control of the High Court.

Revision—concld.

Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code authorizes the High Court to interfere on revision with the order of a Collector under section 28 of the Mamlatdars' Courts Act. The Collector has no authority under the latter section to reverse a decision come to by the Mamlatdar on evidence.

The enumeration of subordinate Courts in section 3, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, is not exhaustive and does not exclude all other Courts from the category of Courts subordinate to the High Court. PURSHOTTAM JANARDAN v. MAHADU PANDU TURMALKAR, 14 BOM. L. R. 947; 37 B. 114 676 ——— ——Material irregularity—Discretion of Judge.

Where a Judge uses his discretion to grant or refuse leave to institute a suit, he does not act illegally or with material irregularity, nor is any question of jurisdiction involved. MANJESHWAR PADMANABHA BATTA, In re, 12 M. L. T. 359 400

——— ——— (Civil)—Civil proceeding in a Court of appeal 593

——— ——— ———Leave to withdraw suit with liberty to bring fresh suit 647

——— ——— ———Question of fact—Possession not permissive 508

——— ——— ———Reference for minor to arbitration—Superseding arbitration 388

——— ——— (Criminal). See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, ss. 435, 439.

——— ——— ———Sanction to prosecute granted by District Registrar 717

Revival of debt—Promissory-note for previous debt dishonoured 721

Right to sue—Adoption—Settlement by adoptive mother in favour of her daughter—Consent of natural father of adopted son—Repudiation of agreement by adopted son after majority—Right of daughter to enforce agreement 741

——— ———Pro-note in name of deceased member of Hindu joint family—Right of survivor to sue 748

——— ———Founder's representatives suing for preventing abuse of trust—Suit in ejectment against trespasser by worshipper 589

Right of suit. See CAUSE OF ACTION.

——— ———Suit for declaration that decree was fraudulent 125, 126

Riot case—Duty of Police to ascertain guilty party—Duty of Court 49

Rioting—Common object—Suggestion by Judge that real case might be between cases alleged by both sides 565

Robbery. See PENAL CODE, s. 397.

Rule against perpetuity 689

Ruling Chief, suit against 444

Sale. See VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

———Contract of sale—Registered deed 176

Sale—concld.

——— for Land Revenue—Fraudulent purchase 878

——— or lease—Burden of proof 889

———Liability of vendee to pay interest on consideration money 273

——— of minor's property by guardian—Benefit—Necessity 609

——— of goods—Goods sold on credit and delivered to purchaser—Vesting of title—Goods taken away from custody of purchaser by third party—Liability of third party to vendor for purchase money.

Where goods have been sold on credit and possession has been delivered to the purchaser, the title vests completely in him and the vendor has no lien on the goods sold. If thereafter the goods are unlawfully taken away from the custody of the purchaser by a third party, the vendor is not entitled to hold that party directly responsible for his claim. ERA APENA v. ERA SWAMI, 16 C. L. J. 575 963 ——— of interest in land in Rangoon—Verbal sale in 1890—Validity of sale—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882)—Law applicable prior to such extension—Burma Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. 13.

The Transfer of Property Act was first extended to the local limits of the ordinary Civil jurisdiction of the Recorder of Rangoon from the 1st January 1893.

Under sub-section 2, section 13 of the Burma Laws Act, all questions arising in Civil cases instituted in the Courts of Rangoon were to be dealt with and determined according to the law for the time being administered by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in the exercise of its ordinary Civil jurisdiction.

A verbal sale for Rs. 350 of a share in immoveable property at Rangoon in 1890, after the Transfer of Property Act was applied to the whole of Bengal from the first July 1882, though prior to the extension of the Act to Rangoon, is invalid inasmuch as it would have been invalid if it had taken place in Calcutta in that year. MG SAN U v. MA HMYIN, 5 BUR. L. T. 169; 6 L. B. R. 98 954

——— in execution—Application for delivery of possession 3 years after confirmation of sale 242

——— ——— ———Application for setting aside sale—Deposit of amount specified in sale proclamation—Amounts due to decree-holders applying for rateable distribution 920

——— ——— ———Fraud — Antecedent and subsequent 972

——— ——— ———Order allowing or rejecting application for setting aside sale—Appeal, second 884

——— ——— ———when becomes complete 783

Sales of Under Tenures Act (VIII of 1865 B. C.), ss. 4, 6, 16 165

Sanction to prosecute. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, ss. 195, 196, 197.

Satisfaction, doctrine of 17

Search—Failure to call witnesses 75

Second Appeal. See APPEAL—SECOND.

Secretary of State—Party—Under-tenants—Suit under section 104 (H), Bengal Tenancy Act 921

Security. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, ss. 106 TO 110.

——— without consideration—Other compensation 842

——— for costs 739

———Good behaviour — Habitual offender—Notice to show cause—"By habit" a thief—Notice stating, "by general repute" a thief, whether bad—Person not misled or prejudiced by terms of order—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 110, 112, 117, 118.

In an order drawn up under section 112 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it was stated that as it appeared to the Magistrate that the opposite party was "by general repute" (instead of "by habit" as required by section 110) a thief, he was called upon to show cause why he should not give security. The evidence was directed mainly to show that he was a habitual thief and his cross-examination was directed to refute the evidence to that effect:

Held, that the inquiry provided for by sections 117 and 118 of the Criminal Procedure Code was not strictly limited by the precise terms of the order drawn up under section 112, and that as the opposite party was not misled or prejudiced by the terms of the order, no ground existed for granting him any relief. DEPUTY LEGAL REMEMBRANCER v. KADIR MIRZA, 13 CR. L. J. 784; 17 C. W. N. 331 416

Separation. See HINDU LAW—JOINT FAMILY; HINDU LAW—PRESUMPTION.

Service, contract of. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

——— Inam. See INAM.

Sessions case—Adjournment—Practice 797

——— Court—Ganjam agency 786

Set-off. See PATNI REGULATION.

———Kattakonam 623

———Right of petitioning creditor to set-off costs payable by him to insolvent as against his debt 164

Settlement proceedings — Collector's jurisdiction to decide disputes as to title between raiyats—Decision, whether "award" 881

——— ——— records, entries in—Presumption 94

Shebaitship, grant of 696

Sir, whether it loses its character as such by planting groves thereon 302

Small Cause Court. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 24 425

———. See SMALL CAUSE SUIT.

Small Cause Suit—Decree against recorded tenant—Sale of tenure of share of recorded tenant—Decretal amount paid by recorded tenant's co-sharer—Co-sharer's right to be re-imbursed by recorded tenant 90

Small Cause Suit—concld.

——— ——— ———Suit against inamdar for jodi and jasti jasti 39

——— ——— ——— ———Suit to recover money due on bond executed along with lease of occupancy-holding 522

——— ——— ——— ———Suit for recovery of rent with incidental prayer for declaration of right 704

Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief, suit against—Consent of Governor-General in Council—Private International Law—Suit against Foreign State 444

Specific performance. See SPECIFIC RELIEF ACT, s. 22.

——— ——— ——— of contract—Unfair advantage to plaintiff—Hardship to defendants—Discretion of Court 732

——— ——— ——— of contract of sale—Guardian or manager binding minor's share—Hindu Law—Enforceability of contract against minor's interest—Document, construction of—Evidence of surrounding circumstances—Award of damages — Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 19.

In determining what interest passes to a vendee under a sale-deed executed to him by the managing member of a joint Hindu family, it is competent to Courts to go beyond the language of the document, if necessary, and look to the surrounding circumstances to see whether the executant purported to convey only his personal interest or the family interest.

The managing member of a Hindu family has power, in proper circumstances, to bind the minor's interest, in a contract by him for the sale of the joint family property and specific performance can be given against that interest.

The Court can also, in such a case, award damages in the alternative, though not asked in the plaint. KRISHNA AIYAR v. SHAMANNA, 23 M. L. J. 610; (1912) M. W. N. 1188 497

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 9—Suit in ejectment by licensee against trespasser, maintainability of.

A licensee of land, if dispossessed by a trespasser, is entitled to maintain not merely a suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, but also a regular suit on the basis of his title as lessee. SITA RAM v. JAGAN NATH, 15 O. C. 317 469

——— ——— ——— s. 19 497

——— ——— ——— s. 21 389, 600

——— ——— ——— s. 22—Contract to sell—Suit for specific performance—When limitation commences to run—Delay in suit, when fatal to suit.

Where, in a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell, no date is fixed for performance, limitation commences to run from the date when performance is demanded by one party to the contract and refused by the other.

Delay in instituting a suit for specific performance is not fatal to the suit, unless it can be shown that the delay has in any way prejudiced the defendant. ABDUR KHADIR v. NAGASARUPU, (1912) M. W. N. 1004 399

Specific Relief Act—concld.

——————— s. 22—Specific performance of contract—Unfair advantage to plaintiff—Hardship to defendant—Discretion of Court.

Where a contract conferred an undue advantage on the plaintiff and caused a hardship to the defendant, which was not anticipated at the time when the contract was entered into, the Court can, in its discretion, refuse specific performance of that contract. GULLA MAL v. CHUNNI LAL, 10 A. L. J. 498 732

——————— s. 41 370

——————— s. 42—"Legal character"—"Right to any property"—Declaratory suits, nature of—Such suits to be kept within legal limits—Discretion—Hindu Law — Adoption — Daughter's son—Nephews not competent to contest adopton.

A., a Hindu, governed by the Mitakshara, died leaving two widows, a daughter and a daughter's son, B. B. set up a title to succeed to A.'s estate on the ground that he had been adopted by A. A.'s brother's son, C., brought a suit to obtain a declaration that B. was not the adopted son of A. A.'s widows and daughters did not oppose B.'s title:

Held, (1) that the suit was not maintainable under section 22 of the Specific Relief Act;

(2) that C. could not be said to be entitled to a legal character or a right as to A.'s property;

(3) that B. was not a person entitled to deny C.'s title;

(4) that even if the suit were maintainable, it would be a proper exercise of the discretion, given by section 22, to refuse to grant a declaratory decree on account of the remoteness of C.'s interests being affected.

Per Elsmie, J.—B.'s heirs would be the same whether he succeeded to A.'s property as adopted son or as daughter's son.

Per Rattigan, J.—To entitle a plaintiff to maintain a declaratory suit under section 42 of Act I of 1877, it must be shown that his "legal character" or his "right to any property" has been denied by the defendant, or, if not denied, that the defendant is at least "interested to deny one or the other." As declaratory suits are an exceptional form of litigation, the power conferred by section 42 to institute such suits ought not to be extended beyond what the law absolutely requires. BARKAT RAM v. JAGAT RAM, 249 P. W. R. 1912 379

——————— s. 42, proviso—Suit for declaration of right to collect dues.

A suit by the proprietors of a patti for a declaration that they are entitled to collect village dues and that certain other persons, who have settled in the patti, have no such right is not barred by the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. KAMIRA v. LALU, 110 P. R. 1912; 30 P. L. R. 1913 907

Standing Crops—Immoveable property 185

Statement of person as to his rights in property—Not to be lightly set aside 216

Statutory duties, protection in 673

——— Rule, construction of 37

Stay of Criminal proceedings—Pendency of Civil Appeal—Jurisdiction to order prosecution 720

Stay—concld.

——— of execution, reasons for—Annoyance to feelings, whether a reason 219

——————— during pendency of appeal—Power of lower Court to stay execution—Jurisdiction—Decree for possession executed.

A Court has no power to stay execution after an appeal has been filed to the High Court. The utmost that the lower Court can do is to stay its hands and go no further.

Where a decree for possession of the house has been executed, the decree can no longer be stayed, until the decree has been set aside in appeal; the Court below has no power to go backward to drive the decree-holder out of possession and re-place the judgment-debtors in possession. SATYA SHANKAR v. MAHARAJ NARAIN, 11 A. L. J. 83 728

——— of proceedings—Rule issued by High Court—Telegram sent by High Court Vakil to Court below—Disregard of telegram—Bias against accused—Transfer of case 78

——— of sale—Court to which application should be made 763

Step-in-aid of execution. See LIMITATION ACT, SCH. I, ARTS. 179, 182.

Streets and drains in Municipal towns—Ownership in Government—Right of Municipality vesting in Municipality by statutory provisions—Construction by house owner of pial over drain—Adverse possession—Prescriptive right—Limitation—Extinguishment of title in Municipality after 12 years—Encroachment—Right of Municipality to remove pial—Madras District Municipalities Act (IV of 1884), s. 168 (1)—Injunction—Prayer for declaration, granting of—Subsidiary relief.

The streets and the drains therein in Municipal towns are vested in the Municipalities by Government for purposes for which they were constituted. Their right is not a mere right of easement, but a special kind of property in the site previously unknown to the law, but created by statute.

Though the Municipalities cannot give up the rights of the public in the streets or affect their right of way by any act of their own, it would not affect the capacity of a person in hostile possession to acquire rights which would affect the public.

Although the soil may belong to one person, another person may be the owner of a building above the soil, and the right to occupy a portion of the space above the soil may be acquired by limitation.

The construction of a pial over a drain by a house owner in front of his house is a user by him adverse to the Municipality and 12 years' adverse enjoyment (before 1900) extinguishes the right of Municipality to the space of the pial, and 60 years' adverse enjoyment extinguishes the rights of the Government.

The Municipality, however, has the right under section 168 (1) of the District Municipalities Act, the statutory right to demolish the pial as 'an encroachment,' notwithstanding the existence of a prescriptive title as against it and Courts have no jurisdiction to restrain the demolition by an injunction.

Streets and drains—concld.

Where plaintiff sought to have it declared that he had acquired a prescriptive right to the site of a pial built by him over a drain and for an injunction restraining the Municipality from demolishing it:

Held, that the Court would not grant him the declaration, though he succeeded in establishing his prescriptive right to the site, as it was only subsidiary to the substantial relief asked for, viz., injunction, which could not be granted. BASAVESWARASWAMI v. HAVALIGI HUSSAIN, 12 M. L. T. 405; 23 M. L. J. 479; (1912) M. W. N. 1080 158

Substitution. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, O. XXII.

Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 62, 164, 292 17

Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), ss. 4, 16—Assignee of holder of certificate, whether can maintain suit.

The assignee of a person, to whom a Succession Certificate has been granted, cannot sue for the recovery of the debt assigned to him. ALLAHDAD KHAN v. SANT RAM, 10 A. L. J. 506; 35 A. 74 486

——— s. 16 486

Succession (Property Protection) Act (XIX of 1841), ss. 3, 4—Malabar Law and Usage—Tarwad property—Self-acquisition of karnavan—Survivorship—Notice—Order to make inventory—Jurisdiction—Direction of deceased.

The provisions of Act XIX of 1841 do not apply to cases where property lapses by survivorship, as in the case of the property held by the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad, whether the property is the tarwad property or the self-acquisition of the karnavan.

Before issuing any notice under the Act, the Judge must be satisfied that there are strong reasons for believing that the party in possession has no lawful title. The Judge cannot, without making an inquiry and without having such strong ground of belief, appoint an officer to make an inventory of the property.

Obiter dictum:—The Act pre-supposes a case of succession; if there are directions as to the disposal of the property, the Judge should give effect to them in this summary proceeding without considering their validity. ABDULLA v. MIRTHUR, 23 M. L. J. 537; 12 M. L. T. 497; (1912) M. W. N. 1164 429

——— s. 4 429

Sufficient cause. See LIMITATION ACT, s. 5.

Suit for declaration that plaintiff not tenure-holder but raiyat 917, 919, 921

——— for land—Suit to declare a mortgage of property outside Madras fraudulent—Suit to avoid incumbrance 342

———, meaning of 198

——— Wrongful breaking away through mine and carrying away coal 500

Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8 162

Summary trial. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, ss. 260, 263.

Sureties not to be rejected merely on Police report 72

———, discharge of—Principal debtor sued but not proceeded with owing to want of address 893

Surface water, test of 648

Surrender of holder by tenant 682

Survival of right to sue—Suit to contest alienation 101

Suspected person—Power of Police to detain 571

Suspicion, decision cannot be founded on 396

Temple—Scheme for future management 441

Temple Uralans 128

Tenancy. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Tenant, holding on after formal ejectment—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 127.

Where a tenant was ejected formally under the provisions of section 60 of the Oudh Rent Act, but nevertheless continued to cultivate the holding in question without any break for any period, however small:

Held, that the provisions of section 127 of the Oudh Rent Act could not apply to such a case. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER, FYZABAD v. GUR DAYAL SINGH, 15 O. C. 311 464

Tenant-in-common—Right to recover whole property 136

Tender. See TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT, ss. 76 83, 84.

Testamentary Judge—Power to declare Will invalid 730

Title—Treating near relation without title as co-sharer for many years 885

Tort—Liability of servant for wrong done on behalf of master 378

——— Suit for damages for wrongful distraint—Action commenced against wrong-doer—Actio personalis moritur cum persona—Scope of doctrine—How far applicable to India 226

———Trespass—Animal—Damage done to crops by cattle—Liability of owner—Negligence—Property adjoining highway—Fencing.

The owner of an animal is liable for any injury or damage committed by it by trespassing on the land of another; it is immaterial whether the animal escapes by reason of the negligence of the owner or in spite of his most diligent care.

An exception from the general rule above stated exists when damage is done by cattle passing along a highway to property adjoining the highway.

In such cases, the sufferer cannot recover damages without proof of negligence or want of skill.

The rule is also inapplicable to a case where the sufferer is bound to fence but has failed to do so. In India, the complete fencing of fields with a view to exclusion of cattle is impracticable owing to the immense expense involved. MADHO v. AKAJI, 8 N. L. R. 190 899

Touts. See LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT, s. 36.

Transfer. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, s. 24.

——— Sale—Contract of sale—Registered deed 176

——— Void transfer—Collector leasing property for premium satisfying decree—Subsequent disposal of property by judgment-debtor 887

——— of case. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, s. 526

——— of occupancy holding—Illegal 522

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) 141, 577

——— Mortgage executed before enactment 467

——— Verbal sale in 1890 in Rangoon 954

——— s. 3—Fruit trees 910

——— s. 3 544

——— s. 8 129

——— s. 36 933

——— s. 52 1

——— s. 53 342

——— s. 54 176

——— s. 59—Equitable mortgage, essentials of—Deposit of title-deeds—Existence of debt—Intention to create security—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 25—Acknowledgment of time-barred debt without promise to pay—Equitable mortgage in lieu of time-barred debt—Right to enforce—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 21, 32—Entries by creditor in samadaskat book of debtor—Admission—Relevancy—Admissibility.

The mere possession of title-deeds coupled with the contemporaneous existence of a debt is insufficient to raise the presumption that there was an equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds. In order to establish such a mortgage, it must also be proved that the title-deeds were deposited by the debtor as security for the debt, that is, the intention accompanying the deposit was to create a security for the debt.

A mere acknowledgment of indebtedness without any promise to pay is not such an agreement as is contemplated by section 25 of the Contract Act.

Where time-barred debts are accepted by the debtor and made the consideration for an equitable mortgage effected by the deposit of title-deeds, the consideration would be valid and good in law and the equitable mortgage would afford a sufficient ground for the action of the mortgagee to sue for the debt, even though the requirements of section 25 of the Contract Act are not complied with. By the deposit of title-deeds as security for debt, the equitable mortgagor virtually discharges the debt by assigning to the creditor an interest corresponding in money value with the debt due on the property mortgaged. A time-barred debt may be a good consideration if accepted by the obligor as such.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

Entries, made by a creditor in the samadaskat book of his debtor, in which the creditor mentions the fact of the debt and the deposit of the title-deeds, fall within the language and intention of section 31 (2) of the Evidence Act.

Although such entries are admissions in favour of the creditor, they are not excluded by section 21 of the Act, as that section allows admissions of this kind to go in evidence if admissible also under section 32. JETHIBAI v. PUTLIBAI, 14 BOM. L. R. 1020 722

——— s. 60 837

——— s. 65—Purchase from mortgagor—Duty to pay revenue—Land Revenue Sale—Fraudulent purchase—Burma Land and Revenue Act (II of 1876), ss. 37, 44, r. 80.

The implied covenant under section 65 of the Transfer of Property Act for the mortgagor to pay land revenue extends to the purchaser of property subject to a mortgage.

Where such purchaser has failed to pay revenue and the land has been sold for default and purchased by him free of mortgage, the property is not freed from the mortgage but continues to be subject to it, as the omission to pay revenue is in defraud of the mortgagee. VEERAPPA CHETTY v. KANAPPA CHETTY, 5 BUR. L. T. 268 878

——— s. 65 (a), application to mortgage executed before Act 737

——— ss. 76, 83—Tender of mortgage money—Mortgagor claiming to split up the mortgage—Dispute as to extent of mortgagor's right—Refusal of mortgagee to receive tendered amount—Mortgagor's claim for mesne profits—Interest.

The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act relating to the tender of mortgage amount and the cessation of interest from the date of such tender, do not, in terms, refer to a case where the mortgagor claims to split up the mortgage in consequence of the mortgagee having become the owner of a portion of the equity of redemption, or to a case where there are disputes between the parties as to the extent of the subsisting interest of the mortgagor in the equity of redemption so as to compel the mortgagee to take upon himself the task of deciding such disputes rightly for himself at the risk of losing the interest on the money due to him and becoming accountable for mesne profits. VENCATARAMA AIYAR v. RANGASAWMI AIYANGAR, (1912) M. W. N. 1125 368

——— ss. 79, 80 927, 931

——— s. 83 368

——— s. 85 87

——— s. 85—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 1—Mortgage suit—Joinder of parties—Person having right to redeem, whether necessary party under section 85—Creditor of mortgagor attaching mortgaged property in execution of money-decree, whether to be joined as party in mortgage suit.

Order XXXIV, rule 1, of the new Civil Procedure Code, requires that not only a person having an interest in the mortgage security, but also a person having an interest in the right of redemption shall be joined as a party to any suit relating to the mortgage. But section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, which is repealed by Order XXXIV, rule 1, required that a person having an interest in the mortgage security only should be made a party to such a suit.

Transfer of Property Act—contd.

A creditor of the mortgagor who attaches the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree, does not obtain by his attachment any charge or lien upon the attached property; he only has the right to redeem. He is, therefore, not a necessary party in a suit upon the mortgage brought before the new Civil Procedure Code came into operation, although he would be a necessary party after the Code was passed. SHANANDA CHANDRA PAL v. SRI NATH ROY CHOWDHURY 432

——————— s. 90—Personal decree against mortgagor—Essential elements—Second personal decree not to be made—Mortgage decree for sale and also personal decree—Not in conformity with Act, yet binding between parties.

Three essential elements must be established before a decree under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act can be obtained; namely, first, that though there has been a decree for sale and the mortgaged property has been exhausted thereunder, the sale-proceeds have proved insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff; secondly, that the balance is legally recoverable from the mortgagor otherwise than out of the property sold, and, thirdly, that a personal decree has not previously been made.

If the decree-holder has obtained a personal decree against the judgment-debtor, he cannot subsequently invite the Court to repeat the operation already performed and thus obtain a second personal decree against the mortgagor.

A mortgage-decree, which is not merely the usual decree for sale but also a personal decree against the defendant mortgagor in the event of non-satisfaction of the mortgage dues by sale of the mortgaged properties, is not in strict conformity with the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act.

But such a decree is a good and valid decree as between the parties thereto.

And the decree-holder, who has obtained that decree and has executed it, cannot be permitted to turn round and contend that the decree is inoperative and ask for a second personal decree against the mortgagor. DINABANDHU NANDI v. MASHUDA KHATUN, 16 C. L. J. 318 263

——————— s. 91—Right of owner of equity of redemption 837

——————— s. 108 933

——————— s. 114 991

——————— s. 130 (1) 627

——————— s. 130—Pro-note executed by managing member of Hindu family—Endorsee of such pro-note, whether can sue members other than maker of pro-note—Endorsement whether assignment of actionable claim.

The endorsee of a pro-note executed by the managing member of an undivided Hindu family, cannot sue the other members of the family: he can only sue the maker of the note or, his legal representatives, after his death, inasmuch as the mere endorsement is not an assignment of an actionable claim under section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act. SEETHARAMA CHETTY v. SESHIAH CHETTY, (1912) M. W. N. 1011 417

——————— s. 136 544

Trespass. See PENAL CODE, ss. 441 TO 447.

——————— by animal—Damage done to crops 899

——————, damages for—Limitation 605

——————Owner not in possession at time of trespass—Right to damages.

An owner of immoveable property is entitled to damages against any one trespassing on it, whether he was or was not in possession at the time of trespass. CHILLAMUTHU v. MUTHUDAYAR SERVAI 740

Trespasser—Suit to eject trespasser by one of several persons interested 469

Trust. See WAKF.

——————Investment—Unauthorised securities—Damages—Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 15, 20, 23—Liability for interest—Minor's monies.

Trust monies payable to a minor are monies which cannot be applied for the purposes of the trust "at an early date" as the trustees cannot pay the money until the minor has attained majority. And even as regards money capable of being so applied at an early date, if the trustee takes the responsibility of keeping the money in investment for a long time, he is bound to make the investment in accordance with his obligation as trustee.

In the investment of trust money, a trustee is bound to comply with the provisions of section 20 of the Trusts Act, which regulates the mode in which a trustee is to make investments and such regulation is not controlled by the general provisions of section 15.

A trustee is guilty of breach of trust if he invests the money otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the section, however well-intentioned and honest his act may have been.

The measure of prudence required of a trustee by section 15 must be regulated by any specific provisions applicable to special matters found in the other sections of the Act.

Clause 2 of section 15 must be read with other sections and does not apply where the trustee has committed a breach of trust as by acting contrary to section 20 of the Act. The broad terms of section 23, that a trustee is liable to make good the loss when he commits a breach of trust, are not controlled by section 15. The Indian Courts have not been given the powers conferred on English Courts by successive English Statutes of relieving honest trustees from their liability for breach of trust.

Where a trustee invests money in an unauthorised security, it must be treated as tantamount to failure to invest under clause (e) of section 23 and he is liable for interest on the money lost. NEELAM TIRUPATHIRAYUDU NAIDU GARU v. VINJAMURI LAKSHMINARASAMMA, (1912) M. W. N. 1237 597

——————Trusteeship of Darga—Vesting of trusteeship in two persons—Succession to trusteeship, how to be determined—Per stirpes or per capita—Muhammadan Law.

Trust—concld.

Where the trusteeship of a Darga and the right of management thereof and the enjoyment of its emoluments vested in two persons:

Held, that the office of trustee with the right to emoluments devolved, on their death, to their heirs, according to the rules of Muhammadan Law, per stirpes and not per capita. GAFFUR SAHEB v. MOOSA SAHEB 124

——— or loan—Advance to broker on pro-note —Breach of trust 824

Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 1, 5—No written instrument necessary for a wakf under Muhammadan Law 857

——— ——— ss. 15, 20, 23 597

Unchastity. See HINDU LAW—WIDOW.

Under-proprietary rights in Oudh, meaning of—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 3, cl 6—Proprietary rights, claim as to, does not affect under-proprietary rights—Pleas in defence which ought to be raised—Inconsistent pleas when barred 334

Undue influence—Burden of proof 309

U. P. Court of Wards Act (III of 1899), ss. 16, 17, 18, 20—Notice, how to be published—Claims not notified to Collector within time—Loss of interest—Non-production of document before Collector upon notice—Objection taken at late stage of suit—Admissibility of document in evidence—Discretion of Court—Interpretation of Statutes imposing penalty.

Provisions of law, which operate to impose a penalty or disability upon a person who fails to comply with them, require to be strictly interpreted.

Under the United Provinces Court of Wards Act, as soon as the notice required under section 16 is duly published by the Collector, a double obligation is laid upon the creditors; they must not only notify their claims against the ward or his property, giving full particulars of the same, but they must produce before the Collector with the statement of claim every document on which they rely in support thereof.

There being no general or special orders from the Board of Revenue directing the Collector to publish the notice under section 16 of the Court of Wards Act at any other place or in any other manner, no obligation lies on the Collector to do any thing more than get the notice published in English and Vernacular in the Provincial Gazette.

It would be contrary to all sound principles of nterpretation to apply the proviso to section 17 to the subsequent sections 18 and 20. The obligation to produce documents is laid upon all creditors of the ward and not only on those who notify their claims.

Where the admission of document of title was not challenged at the proper time, and, strictly speaking, was not challenged at all, and the Court below had no real opportunity, at the late stage when the objection was raised, to turn round on the plaintiffs and call upon them to explain the non-production of their mortgage deeds before the Collector:

U. P. Court of Wards Act—concld.

Held, that to exclude the documents altogether from the record would be to exact an extreme penalty for a piece of neglect due to mere ignorance.

The provisions of section 20 leave the Court a discretion to admit the plaintiff's document of title in evidence despite its non-production before the Collector but those of section 18, as regards interest, give no such discretion.

The provisions of section 16 of U. P. Court of Wards Act compared with the provisions of sections 10A and 10B of Bengal Court of Wards Act, COLLECTOR OF GHAZIPUR v. BALBHADDAR SINGH, 10 A. L. J. 234 25

——— ——— ——— ——— ss. 17, 18, 20 25

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901)—Partition—Guardian of minor not properly appointed — Hindu Law—Joint family — Partition against manager of family—Other members of family bound by it.

Where a partition is fairly and honestly obtained against the managing member of a joint Hindu family, it is binding even on a minor member of that family, although no guardian had formally been appointed for such minor by the Revenue Court during the partition proceedings. BHAGWATI PRASAD v. BHAGWATI PRASAD, 11 A. L. J. 76 846

U. P. Municipalities Act (I of 1900), s. 128, cls. (h), (i)—Municipal Rules—"Dandidar," meaning of—Seller.

A dandidar, who only weighs things brought to a market to be sold, is not a seller of those things. JABBAR SINGH v. EMPEROR, 13 CR. L. J. 797; 11 A. L. J. 39 541

——— ——— ——— ——— s. 147—Power of Municipal Board to have shop lawfully possessed vacated.

A Municipal Board is not empowered to require a person to give up his shop situate on land, not belonging to Municipality, of which he is lawfully in possession. JIWA v. EMPEROR, 10 A. L. J. 286; 13 CR. L. J. 841 713

Unlawful assembly. See PENAL CODE, ss. 148, 149.

——— ——— ——— ——— Object—Death of one person by injuries caused—Murder—Death by rash act 54

Valuation—Suit for declaration that plaintiff is sole shebait and for injunction 162

——— ——— of suit—Declaratory suit—Suit against decree-holder and judgment-debtor that attached property is not liable to attachment—Judgment-debtor also made defendant but not appearing, disputing or admitting plaintiff's claim 196

——— ——— ——— ——— Suit for rent and declaration of title with injunction 44

——— ——— ——— ——— Suit for foreclosure of mortgage—Presumption—Pleadings—No objection to jurisdiction in first Court—Objection in appeal—Central Provinces Courts Act (II of 1904), ss. 13, 15.

In a suit for foreclosure of a mortgage, when the value of the mortgaged property is not less than the amount of the charge, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the total sum claimed as due for principal and interest under the mortgage.

Valuation of suit—concld.

In questions of jurisdiction, the presumption is in favour of giving jurisdiction to the highest Court.

A party cannot be heard to object, in appeal, to a valuation which he did not question at the trial of the suit and by virtue of which the suit had necessarily to be tried in a higher Court. KOTHIRAM v. GANPATI, 8 N. L. R. 179 886

Variation between pleading and proof—Claim for title over land in possession of another—Evidence of ownership—Right negatived by evidence—Right to easement—Whether can be declared on proof thereof 112

Vatan—Deshmukhi Vatan—Alienation of Vatan—Power of Collector to set aside alienation and resume possession—Order granting alienor's heir permission to recover possession—Adverse possession of alienee for more than 12 years—Suit by alienee—Injunction—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Decree, form of 148

——— ——— Jurisdiction—Civil suit—Deshpande Kulkarni Vatan—Suit for declaration of share in cash allowance—Collector's certificate 661

——— ———Sale in execution—Collector levying full assessment—Character of land not changed—Right of auction-purchaser—Right of next holder after death of judgment-debtor—Limitation 170

——— ——— lands—Widow's power to adopt 746

Vatandar joshi—Suit to recover fees paid to usurper 138

Vendor and Purchaser—Goods sold on credit and delivered to purchaser—Vesting of title—Goods taken away from custody of purchaser by third party—Liability of third party to vendor for purchase money 963

——— ——— ——— Liability of vendee to pay interest on consideration money 273

——— ——— ——— ———Whole sale price not paid—Sale pre-empted—Vendor paid by pre-emptor—Vendor again suing vendee for unpaid purchase-money—Lien, discharge of, by payment made by third person—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 70.

The plaintiff sold a certain village to the defendant. A portion of the sale price was paid by the defendant while the rest remained unpaid. The sale was the subject of two rival suits for pre-emption of which one suit was dismissed and the other was decreed. The pre-emptor whose suit was decreed paid the unpaid purchase-money to the plaintiff but that suit was ultimately dismissed on the ground that the purchase-money was not deposited in Court according to law. The plaintiff then brought a suit for the recovery of that very amount from the defendant who remained in possession of the property sold, the pre-emption suit having been dismissed:

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to bring a suit for the recovery of the same amount from the vendee when he had already received that sum from the pre-emptor. The plaintiff's cause of action, for the recovery of his unpaid portion of the purchase-money, was satisfied by the payment of the said money by the pre-emptor who had stepped into the shoes of the vendee. The mere fact that the decree for pre-emption had since been set aside did not revive the cause of action unless a claim was brought against the plaintiff for the refund of the said money and he was made to reimburse the same to one who had paid it. MUBARAK ALI SHAH v. ADITTYA PRASAD, 16 O. C. 1 288

Vendor and Purchaser—concld.

Verdict. See JURY.

Village cess 907

Void Contract. See CONTRACT ACT, s. 23.

Wadhwan Civil Station is not a part of British India 534

Wagering, defence of 152

Waiver—Instalment-bond—Default 513

Wajib-ul-arz. See PRE-EMPTION.

Wakf. See MUHAMMADAN LAW—WAKF.

———, proof of 303

——— ———Trust - Perpetuity, rule against—Dedication to charity illusory—Perpetual family settlement—Muhammadan Law—Shaffei—Life-estate — Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 10, scope of—Resulting trust—Specific purpose—Estoppel—Possession of mutwalli —Life-tenant obtaining possession from trustee—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 115, 116.

It is doubtful whether the rule of the Muhammadan Law, that a life-estate is bad and would resolve itself into an absolute estate, can be sustained in the case of shaffeis.

A person, claiming under a resulting trust, may be barred by limitation unless the resulting trust is of such a kind as to fall within the scope of section 10 of the Limitation Act.

A trust for a specific purpose is a trust for a specified purpose.

A resulting trust in favour of the heirs of a testator, upon failure through invalidity of one of the trusts declared in the Will, is not a trust for a specific purpose within the meaning of section 10.

The opinion of Beaman, J., in Casamally Jairajbhoy v. Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim, 12 Ind. Cas. 225; 36 B. 214; 13 Bom. L. R. 717, that for the purposes of limitation there is no distinction to be drawn between resulting trusts and trusts for specific purposes, and that the only case in which limitation can run in favour of a trustee, whether by express words or by operation of law, is where he is in as a trespasser and not as a valid transferee, dissented from.

A trust for the grand-daughter of the settlor for life and thereafter on her descendants from generation to generation, and in default thereof on the settlor's husband's relatives from generation to generation in perpetuity and in default with an ultimate trust for the education and instruction of Muhammadan youths, is void as being an attempt to create a perpetuity in the nature of a family settlement under the guise of a wakf.

Wakf—concld.

Where there are passages in a wakfnama, justifying the trustee in handing over to the successive life-tenants, the possession of the trust properties, so long as he does not abdicate the position of the mutwalli assigned to him, and the life-tenants obtain possession of the properties with the consent of the mutwalli on the footing of their title as life-tenants under the wakfnama, the life-tenants cannot be permitted to deny that the person from whom the possession was claimed had a title to such possession when it was handed over to them.

The estoppel so created binds all those who claim under or through the life-tenants so obtaining possession. This is specially so where the person from whom possession is claimed is not a bare trustee but is also entitled to a contingent beneficial remainder on failure of certain limitations.

When a wakfnama must be treated as valid between certain parties owing to estoppel, the mutwalli, when his beneficial remainder has taken effect, is entitled to the possession of the property under the terms of the wakfnama both as trustee and as beneficiary.

When the claim of settlor's heirs under a resulting trust has long been barred by the law of limitation, the person who is in possession of the trust property, at the time of the institution of the suit, can successfully defend his possession against those heirs. MAHOMED IBRAHIM v. ABDUL LATIF, 14 BOM. L. R. 987 689

Wakf property—Simple mortgage 632

Warrant for arrest of person who had left Court's jurisdiction—Proclamation—Attachment of property 540

——— Case. See CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE, ss. 256, 257.

Water—Right to water in running stream—Surface water—Nature and rights of water explained.

Where water flowed through a definite channel across the lands of A., up to B.'s lands and then spread itself all along the fields of B. and overflowed its bunds and joined another channel which irrigated C.'s land:

Held, that the water as it flowed from B.'s land could not be regarded as surface water and C. was entitled to the customary flow of the channel water along B.'s lands and A. and B. had no right to obstruct the same.

Although no claim can be made either as a natural right or as an easement by prescription except to water flowing in a definite course and no claim can be maintained with regard to surface water or surface drainage, yet it does not follow that the right to the water of a stream ceases when it ceases to flow in a confined water-course.

Water flowing into a field from a known channel and passing along the field onwards into another field, though not over a confined tract in the former field but along its whole area, is not surface water.

Water—concld.

In each case, the question, whether or not particular water is surface water, is one of fact to be determined by the circumstances, attending its origin and its continued existence. If the water is spread out and flows sluggishly over the surface, losing itself by percolation and evaporation, it is surface water although it has its source in springs.

But the mere fact that the water spreads out at some places and flows sluggishly without sufficient force to form a channel for itself, does not make it surface water if the flow has sufficient force to maintain itself and it is subsequently gathered together into a channel so as to form a water-course. The chief characteristic of surface water is its inability to maintain its identity and existence as a water body.

Well-defined existence arising from an ascertained course appears to be the real test in coming to a conclusion against any body of water being regarded as merely surface water. VILLURI ADINARAYANA v. POLIMERA RAMUDU, 12 M. L. T. 637; 24 M. L. J. 17 648

Water-tax when leviable 149

Wet-nurse is not domestic nurse 658

Widow. See HINDU LAW—WIDOW; MUHAMMADAN LAW—WIDOW.

Will. See HINDU LAW—WILL; MUHAMMADAN LAW—WILL.

——Construction—Right to give girl in marriage conferred by Will 95

——Construction—Implied prohibition to adopt—Widow's power in face of such prohibition 746

——Construction Persona designata — Practice—Hindu Law or Muhammadan Law 834

——Construction—Shebaitship, grant of.

Where a Hindu made a Will appointing his minor son shebait, and his widow as guardian of the minor son, and, in the event of his death without obtaining majority, herself as shebait:

Held, that the gift of shebaitship to the son was absolute and the right of the widow to act as shebait was extinguished on the son attaining the majority and taking over the temple, and could not be revived on the subsequent death of the son. TRIPURARI PAL v. JAGAT TARINI DASI, 17 C. W. N. 145; 13 M. L. T. 1; (1913) M. W. N. 34; 17 C. L. J. 159; 15 BOM. L. R. 72 696 P.C.

——— Construction—Satisfaction, doctrine of—Debt due from testator—Legacy of equal sum—Right to debt and legacy—Suit by legatee—Administration of whole estate—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 62, 164, 292—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 112—Khoja Muhammadans—Hindu Law.

Where the executors do not admit that they hold sufficient assets to meet all claims, the usual and proper course would be, whether a creditor or a legatee is suing, to have the whole estate administered.

Section 164 of the Succession Act expressly abolishes the doctrine of satisfaction. Although that Will—contd.

Act does not apply to Hindus, Muhammadans or Buddhists, there is no doubt that the intention of the Legislature was to announce what they considered to be a generally correct principle of interpretation universally applicable unless overridden by some special provision of local law or usage.

Section 112 of the Probate and Administration Act criticised.

Quære:—Whether a Khoja Muhammadan should be treated for all testamentary purposes as a Hindu governed by Hindu Law?

A., a Khoja Muhammadan, had a deposit of Rs. 9,000 with his brother, B. B. made a Will bequeathing Rs. 9,000 as bakshis (hiba) to A.:

Held, that A. was entitled both to his deposit of Rs. 9,000 and also to the legacy of Rs. 9,000. HASANALLI v. POPATLAL PARBHUDAS, 14 BOM. L. R. 782 17

——Construction—Legacy, vesting of—Possession—Decree, form of—Legatees suing for interest on money bequeathed.

A Hindu lady made a Will in favour of her two minor great-grandsons. Under the Will, the interest on the two mortgages bequeathed, accruing subsequent to the death of the testatrix until both the legatees should attain majority, was to be taken by them, and their father was expressly disinherited; no intermediate estate was created in favour of any one else till the minor legatees attained age, nor was there any gift over in case of the minors dying without attaining majority:

Held, (1) that these facts were indications that the amount due on the mortgages was intended to vest in the legatees immediately on the death of the testatrix; that the expression in the Will that the legatee should take the principal and the interest accruing after the testatrix's death on the younger attaining majority referred only to the time when they were to take possession of the legacy;

(2) that in a suit for interest by the minor legatees, a decree for the money due should be passed but the amount, when realized from defendant, should be kept in Court deposit or invested by the Court in Government securities till the younger legatee attained majority. NARAYANA AIYAR v. ANAI AIYAR, 23 M. L. J. 649; (1913) M. W. N. 189 754

——Natural father, executor—Alienation by executor—Son—Suit to recover alienated properties—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 44, 91 not applicable—Alienation, valid, if made in due course of administration—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881)—Probate—Letters of Administration—Title of executor not obtaining Probate.

A., as legatee under a Will, sued in 1908 to recover certain properties sold by B., his natural father and executor under the Will, to C. in 1897.

The suit was instituted more than three years after A. attained majority; C. contended that B. had authority to sell the land and the sale was for discharging certain debts due by the deceased testatrix:

Held, (1) that Article 44 of the Limitation Act did not apply, as the sale must be held to have been made by B. in his capacity as executor and not as guardian;

(2) that Article 91, too, did not govern the case, because A. could succeed without getting the alienation set aside. B.'s alienation would be binding on him if it was valid; if it was not, it would have no effect as against him.

There is no provision in the Probate and Administration Act which requires a person appointed as executor under a Will to take out Probate or Letters of Administration. There is nothing to prevent the executor from acting as executor and exercising the powers given to him under the Act without obtaining Probate.

An executor has the power to sell the estate for the purposes of administration and the alienee must be protected in the absence of any allegation that he was a mala fide purchaser, having knowledge that the sale was not made, in due course of administration. GANAPATHI AIYAR v. SIVAMALAI, 12 M. L. T. 207; 23 M. L. J. 306; (1912) M. W. N. 1112 4

——Probate granted—Will admitted and acted upon—Subsequent application for revocation—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 50.

A., the sole heiress of a testator, applied through her attorney for Probate of the Will.

The Probate was granted and the Will was acted upon for some years.

Some years after the grant of Probate, A. applied for revocation of the Probate on the ground that the Will was forged:

Held, that having admitted the genuineness of the Will and taken advantage of it, A. could not get the Probate revoked. BABUI BACHA KUMAR v. BABUI SURAJ KALA KUMAR 763 P. C.

—— by widow Suit by reversioner to set aside 586

Withdrawal of suit. See CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, 1908, O. XXIII.

Witness—Deliberately false witness 64

Words and Phrases—

alienation of land 864

applying in accordance with law 210

award or any part thereof 117

by general repute 416

by habit 416

civil proceeding in a court of appeal 593

conduct the search in person 75

dandidar 541

defaulting proprietor 45

deliver 329

exacted 504

Words and Phrases—contd.

five hundred feet from public water main 149 granted or continued 373
hamrah 677
if an application has been made to set aside an award 7 inferior criminal court 717 interested 589
just debt 666 knew 408 land 864
legal character 379
money decree 940 ought 334 party liable 619 resident 413
right to any property 379 same transaction 705
sarpanch 320
savaram 353
shall ordinarily be resident in 945 stop further proceedings 410
sudda inam 481
undergoing sentence of imprisonment 785

Words and Phrases—concld.

witnesses for defence 406 woman 794
zar-i-marhuna 677

Workmen's Breach of Contract Act (XIII of 1859), applicability of—Loan advanced to workman not for doing any specific work.

The loans that can be recovered under Act XIII of 1859 are the loans which are advanced by employers to their workmen for doing specific work. Where a loan was advanced to a workman not for doing any particular work and the work which he was doing at the time that he took the loan had been finished and nothing of it remained to be done:

Held, that Act XIII of 1859 did not apply. GIGA v. MUHAMMAD AMIN, 10 A. L. J. 468; 13 CR. L. J. 863; 35 A. 61 799 ——— ——— ———Strict interpretation—Employer—Broker or middleman not entitled to proceed.

The Workmen's Breach of Contract Act is a statute which calls for strict interpretation.

A person who is not an employer of labour or a master but is a mere broker or middleman for the purpose of supplying labour to the employer or master, is not entitled to take proceedings as an employer against a workman under the Act. EMPEROR v. NAGA TIMA, 14 BOM. L. R. 956; 13 CR. L. J. 853 789

Wrong entry in Settlement Record—Subsequent correction of entry—Declaration of right—Cause of action 675

INDIAN CASES.

1912.

VOLUME XVII.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2389 OF 1909.

August 22, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

MADAN MOHAN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAJ KISHORI KUMARI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Lease from mortgagor after mortgage suit—Lis pendens—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Lease after mortgage but before mortgage suit—Lease valid if granted on usual terms in ordinary course of management—Burden of proof.

A person who obtains a settlement from a mortgagor after the commencement of a suit upon the mortgage, is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, and may be ejected by the purchaser of the property in execution of the mortgage decree.

Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, 20 C. 703, explained and distinguished.

A mortgagor in possession may make a lease conformable to usage in the ordinary course of management; for instance, he may create a tenancy from year to year in the case of agricultural lands, or from month to month in the case of houses. But he is not competent to grant a lease on unusual terms, or to alter the character of the land, or to authorize its use in a manner or for a purpose different from the mode in which he himself had used it before he granted the mortgage.

A person, who has obtained a settlement from a mortgagor after the mortgage but before the mortgage suit, can resist a claim for ejectment made by the purchaser in execution of the mortgage decree, only if he can establish that the lease in his favour was granted on the usual terms in the ordinary course of management.

Such a person acquires an interest in the equity of redemption and can claim to redeem on that footing.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Bhagalpur, dated June 11th, 1909, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of Monghyr, dated June 8th, 1908.

Babu Mohini Mohan Chatterjee, for the Appellant.

Babus Jogendra Nath Mukherjee and Biraj Mohan Majumdar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiff in an action for declaration of title to land, for declaration that certain entries in the Record of Rights are erroneous, for recovery of possession and for incidental reliefs. The property originally belonged to the husband of the first defendant who executed a mortgage in favour of the plaintiff on the 27th January 1836. The mortgagee sued to enforce his security on the 16th November 1893. The usual mortgage-decree was made on the 20th February 1899. The property was sold in execution and was purchased by the decree-holder on the 19th September 904. The sale was confirmed on the 22nd June 1905. The case for the plaintiff is that, during the pendency of the mortgage suit, the mortgagor settled a number of persons, who are now defendants in this action, on different portions of the land, and these persons later on had their names entered in the Record of Rights as tenants in occupation of the land. The plaintiff, therefore, prays for declaration of his title as purchaser at the mortgage sale and for ejectment of the defendants on declaration that they have acquired no valid interest in the disputed property. The Courts below have concurrently dismissed the suit. On behalf of the plaintiff, this decree of dismissal has been assailed on three grounds, namely, first, that such of the defendants as took settlement after the commencement of the mortgage suit and before its termination were affected by the doctrine of lis pendens; secondly, that such of the defendants, if any, as took settlement before the commencement of the mortgage suit but after the grant of the mortgage, have acquired no valid title as against the mortgagee, and thirdly, that the Courts below have come to a conclusion, erroneous in law, upon the question of the true nature of the land, namely, whether it is kamat land as alleged by the plaintiff or ryati land as alleged by the defendants.

In so far as the first ground is concerned, it is clear that such of the defendants as may be proved to have obtained settlement from the mortgagor after the commencement of the mortgage suit, are affected by the doctrine of lis pendens. Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act provides in very comprehensive language that during the active prosecution in any Court having authority in British India of a contentious suit in which any right to immoveable property is directly and specifically in question, the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein, except under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it may impose. It cannot be disputed that the grant of a lease by the mortgagor is a transfer of an interest in immoveable property. It cannot also be disputed that when a mortgagor grants such a lease, after the institution of the mortgage suit, he, in any view, deals with the property in suit. If any authority is needed for an elementary proposition of this character, reference may be made to the cases of Devi Prasad v. Baldeo (1); Thakur Prasad v. Gaya Sahu (2) and Gaskell v. Durdin (3). It has been contended, however, on behalf of the defendants-respondents that they are ryots in occupation of the land and cannot, consequently, be ejected in view of the decision of a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik (4). In this case, it was ruled that a ryot, who has been inducted into the land by a trespasser in possession and who has accepted settlement bona fide, acquires a right to hold the land, within the meaning of section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. This principle has been applied to cases of agricultural tenants who have been settled on land by a middle-man who holds for a limited term, and it has been ruled in Atal Rishi v. Lakshmi Narain Ghose (5) that an agricultural tenancy so created continues in operation even after the expiry of the lease of the grantor. It was pointed out, however, in the case of Upendra Narain Bhattacharya v. Protab Chandra Pardhan (6) that the principle enunciated in Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik (4) is a great encroachment upon the ordinary rules of law and, consequently, should be applied with caution. Instances of cases where the Court has declined to extend the application of the doctrine in question will be found in Jonab Ali v. Rakibuddin Mallik (7); Peary Mohun Mandal v. Radhika Mohun Hazra (8) and Kazi Nawaz Khoda v. Surendra Nath Dey (9). We are clearly of opinion that the principle should not be extended so as to affect the application of the doctrine of lis pendens; and section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be frittered away by the application of the doctrine recognised in Binod Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik (4). The defendants, who obtained leases from the mortgagor after the institution of the mortgage suit are, consequently, not entitled to resist the claim of the plaintiff.

In so far as the second ground is concerned, we have to consider the position of such of the defendants, if any, as obtained settlements from the mortgagor before the mortgage suit was instituted but after the execution of the mortgage. It has been broadly contended on behalf of the appellant that a lease, granted by a mortgagor after the execution of the mortgage in no way binds the mortgagee, and in support of this view, reliance has been placed upon the case of Wazir Ali v. Moti Chand (10). It may be conceded, as was said by Lord Selborne in Corbett v. Plowden (11), that if a mortgagor left in possession grants a lease without the concurrence of the mortgagee, (and for this purpose, it makes

(1) 18 A. 123; (1896) A. W. N. 13.
(2) 20 A. 349.
(3) 2 Ball & Beaty 167.
(4) 20 C. 706.
(5) 10 C. L. J. 55; 2 Ind. Cas. 417.
(6) 8 C. W. N. 320; 31 C. 703.
(7) 1 C. L. J. 303; 9 C. W. E. 571.
(8) 5 C. L. J. 9; 8 C. W. N. 315.
(9) 5 C. L. J. 33; 11 C. W. N. 201; 34 C. 109.
(10) 2 A. L. J. 294.
(11) 25 Ch. D. 678 at p. 681; 54 L. J. Ch. 109; 56 L. T. 740; 32 W. R. 667.

MADAN MOHAN SINGH v. RAJ KISHORI KUMARI.

no difference whether it is an equitable lease by an agreement under which possession is taken or a legal lease by actual demise), the lessee has a precarious title, inasmuch as although the lease is good as between himself and the mortgagor who granted it, the paramount title of the mortgagee may be asserted against both of them. This doctrine appears to have been recognised in the cases of Wazir Ali v. Moti Chand (10); Chunni v. Thakur Das (12) and Macleod v. Kissan Vithal Singh (13). In our opinion, it cannot be disputed that a person, taking a lease from a mortgagor after the mortgage, acquires an interest in the equity of redemption and can claim to redeem on that footing. But this principle, which was recognised in Radha Pershad Misser v. Monohur Dass (14), Kasimunnissa v. Nilratana Bose (15); Radha Bai v. Shamrav (16), Paya Matathil Appu v. Kovamel Amina (17) and Raghunandan Prosad v. Ambika Singh (18), does not support the extreme contention of either of the parties. The doctrine does not assist the appellant, because it does not justify the inference that a lessee from the mortgagor acquires no interest whatever in the property demised to him, nor does it assist the respondent in his contention that a lease of this character is always operative against the mortgagee. The true point of view was indicated in the observation of Sir James Parke in Pope v. Biggs (19), that the mortgagor may be considered as acting in the nature of a bailiff or agent for the mortgagee. Consequently, if the moatgagor, after he has granted the mortgage, deals with the property in the usual course of management, the interest created by him may be rightly deemed operative against the mortgagee. An illustration of this view will be found in the case of Moreland v. Richardson (20), where a person took a mortgage of a chapel and burial ground. It was held that as the object of the burial ground is to grant rights of burial, this being the mode in which such property is dealt with, the mortgagee was not entitled to disturb the graves of those who had been buried on the land, while the mortgagor continued to hold it. The same principle was recognised in Bani Pershad v. Reet Bhuniun Singh (21). As the case is very imperfectly reported, we have examined the record and ascertained the question in controversy. The proprietor of an estate mortgaged it on the 12th March 1861. On the 7th July 1862, the mortgagor granted an ijara pattah of the property for a term of ten years. The mortgagee subsequently sued the mortgagor alone, and got a decree. At the execution sale which followed, the property was sold on the 24th December 1863. The purchaser sued on the 12th March 1867 to eject the lessee, on the ground that as he had acquired the property in the condition in which it was when mortgaged, the lease, which would otherwise run till the 7th July 1872, did not bind him. The Court of first instance overruled this contention as too broadly formulated, and held that as the mortgagor had in good faith granted the lease for a limited term on a fair and reasonable rent, the mortgagee or the purchaser in execution of his decree could not repudiate it, specially as the mortgage-deed did not prohibit the grant of temporary leases to middle-men or cultivators. On appeal, the District Judge affirmed this view and declined to accept the broad contention that leases of all descriptions granted by a mortgagor were void as against the mortgagee. On second appeal to this Court, Jackson and Mitter, JJ., took substantially the same view. It cannot, however, be maintained, as was pointed out by Lord Justice Romer in Reynolds v. Ashby (22), that the mortgagor has anything like a general authority to deal with or affect the mortgaged property during his possession thereof. The true position thus is that the mortgagor in possession may make a lease conformable to usage in the ordinary course of management; for instance, he may create a tenancy from year to year in the case of agricultural lands or from month to month in the case of houses. But it is not competent to the mortgagor to grant a lease on unusual terms, or to alter the character of the

(12) 1 A. 126.
(13) 30 B. 250 at 269; 6 Bom. L. R. 996.
(14) 6 C. 317; 7 C. L. R. 293.
(15) 8 C. 79; 9 C. L. R. 173; 10 C. L. R. 11.
(16) 8 B. 168.
(17) 19 M. 151.
(18) 29 A. 679; A. W. N. (1907) 227; 4 A. L. J. 703.
(19) 9 B. & C. 245 at 258; 4 Man. & Ry. 193; 7 L. J. (o. s.) K. B. 246; 32 R. R. 665.
(20) 24 Beav. 33; 26 L. J. Ch. 690; 3 Jur. (N. s.) 1189; 5 W. R. 672; 116 R. R. 18.
(21) 10 W. R. 325.
(22) (1903) 1 K. B. 87 at p. 102; 72 L. J. K. B. 51; 51 W. R. 405; 87 L. T. 640; 19 T. L. R. 70.

land or to authorise its use in a manner or for a purpose different from the mode in which he himself had used it before he granted the mortgage. In the case before us, therefore, if there are any defendants, who have obtained settlement from the mortgagor after the mortgage, but before the commencement of the mortgage suit, they can resist the claim of the plaintiff, only if they establish that the leases in their favour were granted on the usual terms in the ordinary course of management: such a plea, if established—and it must not be overlooked that the burden of proof in this matter is upon them—will furnish a complete answer to the claim of the plaintiff. We may observe in this connection that the plaintiff alleged that the land was kamat, that it had never before been let out to tenants but had always been cultivated by the proprietor by hired labourers or by his servants, and that the mortgagor designedly settled ryots on the land with a view to prejudice, if possible, the position of the mortgagee. These allegations must be kept in view in the determination of the question whether the settlements with the defendants were made in the ordinary course of management of the estate. The second ground urged on behalf of the appellant must, therefore, prevail.

In so far as the third ground is concerned, it must be conceded that the judgment of the District Judge is open to criticism upon the question of the character of the disputed land. Section 120 of the Bengal Tenancy Act lays down rules for determination of private lands of proprietors. The first sub-section formulates two tests to which a detailed reference is for our present purposes not necessary, because as the District Judge has found the case has not been brought within either of the two clauses. The appellant contends, however, that the provisions of the second sub-section of section 120 have been overlooked. That sub-section provides that in determining whether any land ought to be recorded as the proprietor's private land, the Revenue Officer (or the Civil Court, as the case may be) shall have regard to local custom and to the question whether the land was, before the 2nd day of March 1883, specifically let as proprietor's private land, and to any other evidence that may be produced; but shall presume that land is not a proprietor's private land until the contrary is shown. The District Judge has referred to the absence of evidence of local custom, but he does not specifically consider whether there is "any other evidence" as mentioned in sub-section 2 of section 120. The question of the true character of the land must, therefore, be re-considered, with reference to the terms of sub-section (2) of section 120 upon the evidence on the record. The third ground, consequently, prevails.

We may add that upon the question of the point of time when each of the tenants-defendants was settled on the land, the parties will be at liberty to adduce fresh evidence. Such evidence may be taken by the District Judge or taken by the Court of first instance under his direction and submitted to him with its finding thereon.

The result is that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the District Judge set aside and the case remanded to him for re-consideration.

The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

Appeal allowed;
Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 523 OF 1911.

August 1, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

GANAPATHI AIYAR—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SIVAMALAI AND OTHERS—2ND DEFENDANT'S LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES AND 1ST DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Will—Natural father, executor—Alienation by legatee—Son—Suit to recover alienated properties—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 44, 91 not applicable—Alienation, valid, if made in due course of administration—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881)—Probate—Letters of Administration—Title of executor not obtaining Probate.

A., as legatee under a Will, sued in 1908 to recover certain properties sold by B., his natural father and executor under the Will, to C. in 1897.

The suit was instituted more than three years after A. attained majority; C. contended that B. had authority to sell the land and the sale was for discharging certain debts due by the deceased testatrix:

Held, (1) that Article 44 of the Limitation Act did not apply, as the sale must be held to have been made by B. in his capacity as executor and not as guardian;

GANAPATHI AIYAR v. SIVAMALAI.

(2) that Article 91, too, did not govern the case, because A. could succeed without getting the alienation set aside. B's alienation would be binding on him if it was valid; if it was not, it would have no effect as against him.

There is no provision in the Probate and Administration Act which requires a person appointed as executor under a Will to take out Probate or Letters of Administration. There is nothing to prevent the executor from acting as executor and exercising the powers given to him under the Act without obtaining Probate.

Sheik Moosa v. Sheik Essa, 8 B. 241, Mathuradas Lavji v. Madhanji, 10 B. 468, followed.

Sarat Chandra Banerjee v. Bupendra Nath Basu, 25 C. 103, explained, discussed and distinguished.

An executor has the power to sell the estate for the purposes of administration and the alienee must be protected in the absence of any allegation that he was a mala fide purchaser, having knowledge that the sale was not made, in due course of administration.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Coimbatore, in A. S. No. 106 of 1910, preferred against that of the District Munsif of Erode, in O. S. No. 480 of 1908.

Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. L. A. Govindaraghava Aiyar, for the Repondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, as legatee under a Will, sues to recover certain properties which were sold by the 1st defendant, his natural father and executor under the Will, to the 2nd defendant in 1897. The suit was instituted in 1908. The plaint alleged that the sale was not binding on the plaintiff. The second defendant contended that the 1st defendant had authority to sell and that the sale was made for discharging certain debts due by the deceased testatrix. The District Munsif held that the sale was not binding on the plaintiff and gave a decree in his favour. On appeal, the District Judge disposed of the case on the question of limitation. He held the suit barred as it was instituted by the plaintiff more than three years after the date of his attaining majority; he regarded the suit as one to set aside an alienation made by a guardian and applied Article 44 of the Limitation Act. The 2nd defendant has not contended that the sale was made by the 1st defendant in his capacity as guardian. We are of opinion that the finding on the question of limitation cannot be upheld. The 1st defendant was executor and he had the powers of an executor. His right to deal with the estate must be regulated by rules relating to the powers and duties of an executor subject to any express provisions that may be contained in the Will. There are in the Will in this case no provisions either restricting or extending the scope of the executor's powers. The act cannot be regarded as having been done by the executor as a guardian when his powers were regulated by the rules relating to an executor.

Article 44 of the Limitation Act must, therefore, be held to be inapplicable. Mr. Govindaraghava Iyer contends that Article 91 must govern the case. We cannot agree with him. We do not think that the plaintiff could not succeed in recovering the property without setting aside the alienation. The alienation was not one made by him or by any one from whom he claims the property as heir. The executor's alienation would be binding on the plaintiff if it was valid; if it was not, it would have no effect as against him. It cannot be held to be a transaction binding on him until he set it aside, although, no doubt, he could ratify the act done by the executor. No authority has been cited in support of the application of Article 91 in such a case. We hold it is not applicable.

The District Judge has not recorded any finding on the merits of the case, that is, on the question whether the alienation is binding on the plaintiff. We propose to decide the question ourselves instead of remanding the case for decision by the Appellate Court. The plaint does not contain any allegation that the 2nd defendant was aware that the sale was not a proper act of administration and was not required for the purpose of discharging debts of the deceased. Undoubtedly, the plaintiff was bound to allege it and the onus would be on him to show that the 2nd defendant's conduct disentitled him to the protection which alienees from executors are entitled under the law. If, therefore, the 1st defendant was, at the date of the sale, entitled to exercise the powers of executor, the sale must be upheld. But it was argued by Mr. T. M. Krishnasami Iyer for the appellant that as Probate had not been obtained of the Will or Letters of Administration taken out with the Will annexed, the 1st defendant could not exercise the powers of an executor. He urges that the property of the deceased testator would vest in the 1st defendant only if and when he took out Probate or Letters of Administration and as he never did so, he never became possessed of the status and powers of an executor. We are unable to uphold this contention. There is no provision in the Probate and the Administration Act, which requires a person appointed as executor under a Will to take out Probate or Letters of Administration. Section 187 of the Indian Succession Act which provides that no right as legatee or executor under a Will can be enforced unless Probate or Letters of Administration have been taken out, has not been enacted in the Probate and Administration Act. It was imported into the Hindu Wills Act but it was, apparently for very good reason, considered undesirable to embody it in the Probate and Administration Act. Under section 4 of the Act, all the property of the deceased vests in the executor as such Probate is not necessary to make a person an executor. His title is derived under the Will. If section 187 of the Succession Act had been imported into the Probate and Administration Act, then neither the executor nor any persons claiming as alienees under him would be entitled to enforce any right as executor or alienee. But we can see nothing in the Act as it stands to prevent the executor from acting as executor and exercising the powers given to him under the Act without obtaining Probate. This was the view taken in Sheik Moosa v. Sheik Essa (1) and Mathuradas Lavji v. Goculdas Madhowji (2). In the former case, Sarjeant, C. J., states that the law is the same in this country as in England as to the title of an executor to the property devised by a Will, that Probate is regarded as the authentic evidence of the Will itself, from which the executor derives his title and by virtue of which the property vests in him from the death of the testator, from which time the executor would be entitled to collect the debts due to the deceased. Mr. Krishnasamy Iyer has referred us to a case, Sarat Chandra Banerjee v. Bupendra Nath Basu (3), but the question in that case was as to the validity of a sale made by an executor under a Hindu Will in the year 1864, long before the Probate and Aministration Act was passed. It was contended on behalf of the alienee that the acts of the executor were as valid as if they had been done after Act V of 1881 had come into force. Reliance was placed on section 2 of Act V of 1881, which lays down that, "Chapters II to XIII, both inclusive, of this Act, shall apply in the case of every Hindu, Mahomedan, Buddhist and of every person exempted under section 337 of the Indian Succession Act of 1865, dying before or after the said 1st day of April 1881." The argument was that as the provisions of the Act are applicable to the case of a Hindu dying before April 1881, executors under the Will in question had the powers given by the Act. It would probably have been quite enough to observe in answer to such an argument that no person could in 1864 have powers which were given to an executor only in 1881, though some other provisions of the Act of 1881 might be applicable to Wills made before that date, for instance, Probate of a Will made before 1881 could be obtained under the provisions of that Act. Before the Probate and Administration Act was passed, when there was no provision for granting Probate or Letters of Administration with respect to Hindu Wills, the position of a Hindu executor was taken to be that of a mere manager and not of one in whom the legal estate in the properties of the deceased vested. Whether by virtue of section 4 of Act V of 1881, the property of the deceased could be taken to have vested, immediately on the death of the deceased, in a person appointed as executor by a Will made before 1881, it is unnecessary to consider. But apparently the learned Judges who decided the case, regarded the executor's powers as depending on the question whether title vested in him on the death of the deceased. There are, no doubt, observations to be found in the judgment of these learned Judges which would show that in the case of a Hindu dying before 1881, if the executor or administrator should wish to get the benefit of section 4 of the Act, he should come in and prove the Will and take out Probate or Letters of Administration and references are made to the preamble of the Act and the heading II, in which section 4 is to be found, the preamble stating that it is desirable to provide for the grant of the Probate of Wills and Letters of Administration to the estate of certain persons and the heading of Chapter II being 'Grant of Probate and Letters of Administration.' The inference is apparently drawn that a party could obtain the benefits of the provisions of the Act only by obtaining Probate or Letters of Administration, but this inference, so far as this decision is concerned, is expressly limited to the case of a Hindu dying before April 1881. We cannot assume that the learned Judges would have taken the same view with respect to Wills made by a person who died after 1881. If the learned Judges had taken the view which we do, that no executor could before 1881 claim powers which were for the first time given by that Act, they would probably not have considered it necessary to rest their decision on the ground that a person who did not take out Probate of the Will of a testator who died before 1881, could not claim the benefit of any of the provisions to the Act. We do not think that either the preamble or the heading of Chapter II requires such a construction to be put on the words of section 4. That section certainly does not relate to the grant of Probate and would be beyond the scope of the heading and the preamble. The fact is that the Act contains many provisions which would not strictly come within either. The 1st defendant in this case, in our opinion, had, as an executor, the power to sell the estate for the purposes of administration, and the 2nd defendant must be protected in the absence of any allegation that he was a mala fide purchaser having knowledge that the sale was not made in due course of administration. In the result, therefore, the decree of the Appellate Court must be affirmed but, in the circumstances of the case, we shall make no order as to the costs of the second appeal.

(1) 8 B. 241.
(2) 10 B. 468.
(3) 25 C. 103.

Decree confirmed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 20 OF 1910.

July 30, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Holmwood.

SURYA NARAIN JHA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BANWARI JHA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration—Award—Decree based on award if appeable on ground that there was no valid award—Application to set aside award—Period of limitation, if Court can extend—"If an application has been made to set aside award", meaning of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 522—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5, Sch. I, Art. 158.

A decree based upon an award is not open to appeal on the ground that there was no award valid in law.

Ghulam Jilani v. Muhammad Hassan, 29 C. 167; 12 M. L. J. 77; 29 I. A. 51; 4 Bom. L. R. 161; 6 C. W. N. 226; 25 P. R. 1902, relied upon.

Raja Har Narain Singh v. Chowdhrani Bhagwant Kuar 13 A. 300; 18 I. A. 55, distinguished.

Indur Subbaramani Reddy v. Kandadai Rajmanner Ayyangar, 26 M. 47 and Muhammad Abid v. Muhammad Asghar, 8 A. 64; (1886) A. W. N. 2, not followed.

Under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the Court has no authority to receive an application to set aside an award after the time prescribed by Article 158 of the Act. It is not competent to the Court to extend the time prescribed by that Article.

The expression "if no application has been made to set aside the award" in section 522 of the Civil Procedure Code is comprehensive enough to cover the case of an application to set aside the award on the ground that there was no award valid in law, and refers to a contingency other than the remission of an award.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Deoghur, dated July 28th, 1909.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chakravarti and Romesh Chandra Sen, for the Appellant.

Babus Mohendra Nath Roy, Ambika Pada Chowdhury and Peary Mohan Chatterjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against a decree made under section 522 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882, in confirmation of an award of arbitration. A preliminary objection has been taken to the competency of the appeal, because under that section, an appeal does not lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award. As the decree is not assailed on behalf of the appellants on the ground that it is in excess of or not in accordance with the award, the appeal is prima facie incompetent.

SURYA NARAIN JHA v. BANWARI JHA.

It has been argued, however, on behalf of the appellant, upon the authority of the decisions in Indur Subbaramani Reddy v. Kandadai Rajamanner Ayyangar (1) and Muhammad Abid v. Muhammad Asghar (2), that inasmuch as the decree is assailed on the ground that there was no award valid in law, the appeal is competent. But this contention cannot possibly prevail, in view of the plain language of section 522, and of the exposition of the law by the Judicial Committee in Ghulam Jilani v. Muhammad Hassan (3). Our attention, however, has been invited to another decision of the Judicial Committee in Raja Harnarain Singh v. Choudhrani Bhagwant Kuar (4), where an appeal, under somewhat similar circumstance, was allowed to be heard without any question as to its competency. In that case, the award had been filed after the expiry of the time prescribed by the Court, and it was held by the Judicial Committee that there was no legal award which could be made the foundation of a decree. It is clear, however, from the judgment of the Judicial Committee that no question as to the competency of the appeal was raised either before their Lordships or in the High Court. Consequently, that decision cannot be treated as in any way in conflict with the later decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Ghulam Jilani v. Muhammad Hassan (3).

It is, further, worthy of note that even if the appellants were allowed to invite this Court to interfere in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, he would still find himself in inextricable difficulty, as no application was made on his behalf to the Court below to set aside the award. The matter was referred to the arbitrators on the 14th March 1907. The award was filed on the 8th July 1909. The Court thereupon adjourned the case till the 18th July and directed the parties to file objections, if any, on or before that date. This was in strict conformity with Article 158 of the second Schedule of the Limitation Act. On the 17th July, it was discovered that the date to which the case had been adjourned was a Sunday; the Court thereupon adjourned the case to the 28th July. We cannot interpret this order in the sense that the time within which objection could be filed was also thereby extended to the 28th July. In fact, it was not competent to the Court to extend the period of ten days prescribed by Article 158, because, under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the Court has no authority to receive an application to set aside the award after the expiry of the time prescribed by that Article. The appellant suggests, however, that he was misled by the order of the 17th July 1909 and alleges that he could not appear before the Judge on the date fixed, as the Court was held on that date in a place different from the locality wherein the Court was ordinarily held. It is not necessary for us to determine whether this latter allegation is or is not well founded on fact. The position is unassailable that no exception was taken within the time prescribed by Article 158 and it was not competent to the Court to extend the time prescribed by that Article. It thus became obligatory on the Court to confirm the award. But it has been ingenuously argued that an application to set aside the award was unnecessary, because the award had, in the eye of law, no existence, as the reference to arbitration was made with the concurrence of a person who had no authority to act on behalf of the guardian of the appellant, an infant at that time. This contention is clearly fallacious. Section 522 of the Code of 1882 provides that if the Court sees no cause to remit the award or any of the matters referred to arbitration for re-consideration in the manner aforesaid, that is, under sections 520 and 521, and if no application has been made to set aside the award or if the Court has refused such application, the Court shall proceed to give judgment according to the award. The expression 'if no application has been made to set aside the award' is clearly comprehensive enough to cover a case of the present description, and refers to a contingency other than the remission of an award. The award here, if not successfully challenged, would be prima facie binding upon the appellant; if there was good reason to assail the award, it was competent to his guardian ad litem to apply to the Court to set it aside within the time prescribed by Article 158. This was not done; and the Court had thus no other course open than to record an order of confirmation.

(1) 26 M. 47.
(2) 8 A. 64; (1886) A. W. N. 2.
(4) 13 A. 300; 18 I. A. 45.
(3) 29 C. 167; 12 M. L. J. 77; 29 I. A. 51; 4 Bom. L. R. 161; 6 C. W. N. 226; 25 P. R. 1902.

It has finally been represented to us that the appellant, at the time of the proceeding in the Court below, was an infant, and that, although he has since then attained majority, he is now insane. This may be a matter for regret, but plainly cannot affect our decision. We do not, however, express any opinion upon another aspect of the matter suggested in the course of argument, namely, whether it is possible for the plaintiff to obtain relief in a separate declaratory suit, on the ground of negligence of his guardian ad litem. We only hold that the present appeal is incompetent and that, even if we had been invited to interfere in the exercise of our revisional jurisdiction, we could not afford any relief to the petitioner in the events which have happened.

The result is that this appeal is dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 5 OF 1910.

May 16, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Stephen and Mr. Justice Richardson.

INDRO DEB DAS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

AZIZUR RAHAMAN SARKAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Bond—Construction—Interest to be paid at certain sum per month—Compound interest at end of every six months to be added to principal—Whether interest to be paid on whole sum per month or per cent. per month.

In a bond the debtor agreed to pay, on the principal amount of Rs. 2,000, interest at the rate of Re. 1·9 per month. There was a further provision to this effect: "We shall pay the interest every six months. If we fail to do so, the interest and compound interest shall at the end of every six months be added to the principal and we shall go on paying interest thereon at the aforesaid rate:"

Held, that the interest was to be payable at the rate of Re. 1-9 per cent. per month.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Jalpaiguri, dated September 21st, 1909.

Babu Karunamoy Bose, for the Appellants.

Babu Brojo Lal Chakravarti, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

STEPHEN, J.—This case arises out of a mortgage-bond executed by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs. The bond recites that the defendants on the day of execution of the bond borrowed Rs. 2,000 from the plaintiffs. It then goes on to say:—"We shall pay interest on this sum at the rate of Re. 1·9 per month." Further on, there is a provision which is as follows:—"We shall pay the interest every six months from this date. If we fail to do so, the interest and compound interest shall, at the end of every six months, be added to the principal and we shall go on paying interest thereon at the aforesaid rate until the time of re-payment."

Before the lower Court it was argued on behalf of the plaintiffs that the first of these passages meant that interest was to be payable at the rate of Re. 1-9 per cent. per month and that the words "per cent." had been left out by mistake. Under the circumstances, the lower Court allowed evidence to be adduced to show that such a mistake had in fact been made, and eventually held that the proper construction of the document in question was to read the words as though "per cent." had been added.

In appeal, it is argued before us that the lower Court had no authority to admit the evidence that was tendered as regards the making of the mistake and that the construction of the document, is wrong. We cannot take this view. For myself, I must admit that had I to construe only the words "we shall pay interest on this sum at the rate of Re. 1-9 per month," I should hold that the words are intelligible in themselves and mean that Re. 1-9 would be due on the whole sum of Rs. 2,000. This is an intelligible construction. It creates a provision which it was open to the parties to make. Looking, however, at the subsequent words relating to compound interest, it seems to me that the document becomes absolutely unintelligible unless the words "per cent." are included in the earlier sentence. It is not to be supposed that compound interest was to be reckoned at the rate of Re. 1·9 on the sum of Rs. 2,000. Some other rate was in contemplation and I have no doubt that that was intended to be indicated by the words "per cent." which have been omitted by mistake. Taking the document as a whole, I consider that the Judge is correct in reading it as he did. I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs, the hearing-fee being assessed at two gold mohurs.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree in the conclusion arrived at by my learned brother. The question, as I understand it, is one of construction and for my part, bearing in mind the universality of the practice of fixing the rate of interest at a rate per cent., I think that the words to be construed can only mean as they stand that interest was to be chargeable at the rate of Re. 1-9 per cent. per month. If the document be read as a whole, there can be no room for doubt on the subject.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 110 OF 1911.
July 2, 1912.
Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

VITHAPPA DEVAPPA PATIL—APPELLANT
versus
BASAGOWDA DEVAPPA PATIL—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 18, Sch. I, Art. 127—Fraud—Knowledge of fraud—Burden of proof—Nature of evidence—Partition—Private partition found to be fraudulent—Suit for fresh partition—Exclusion of plaintiff—Limitation.

Where a Court finds that a partition, effected between the co-parceners of a joint family, was unfair and inequitable, as one of the co-parceners had been imposed upon, the case is reduced to one of a fraudulent partition, and the cause of action for a suit for partition is, then, in substance to set aside that partition on the ground of fraud and to treat the family as joint and seek for a fresh partition of the family estate.

For the purpose of limitation, such a case is taken out of Article 127 of the Limitation Act.

Where fraud is found and the Court has to apply the Limitation Act in order to see whether the suit is within time, the Court ought to have evidence of a definite character to show the point of time at which the plaintiff had not merely suspicion but definite knowledge of fraud. In order to make limitation operate when a fraud has been committed by one who has obtained property thereby, it is for him to show that the injured plaintiff has had clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud, at a time which is too remote for the suit to be brought.

Rahimbhoy Habibbhoy v. Charles Agnew Turner, 17 B. 341; 20 I. A. 1, followed.

First appeal from the decision of the first class Subordinate Judge at Bijapur, in Civil Suit No. 175 of 1909.

Mr. Nadkarni, (with him Mr. S. V. Palekar), for the Appellant.

Mr. K. H. Kelkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The present suit was one for partition brought by the appellant. His allegation was that he, defendant No. 1 and defendants Nos. 2 and 3, the sons of defendant No. 1, and two brothers of his, Rama and Laxmana, were members of a joint family, and that in 1886 defendant No. 1, the eldest member and manager, effected a partition with Rama and Laxmana, so that these two brothers having become separated in estate left the rest of the members of the family including the plaintiff joint, and that in 1907 defendant No. 1 turned the plaintiff out of the family house, in which he was living with the said defendant. Hence the suit for partition.

Defendant No. 1 in his written statement pleaded that the plaintiff was not entitled to a share in the property, because there had been already a partition among the members of the family in the year 1886. In support of that allegation, he produced a farkhat executed by Rama and Laxmana and by Laxmana as the guardian of the plaintiff who was then a minor.

The defendants' case was that since 1886 the plaintiff had been living separately, enjoying the share of the property which had been allotted to him at the partition in 1886, and that, therefore, the plaintiff had been excluded from the general family property since that year, so that the claim was barred under Article 127 of the Limitation Act.

The Subordinate Judge found the partition of 1886 proved but he held that that partition was unfair and inequitable and was also the result of fraud. The finding on the question of fraud is as follows:—"Both Rama and Laxmana thus seem to have been hoodwinked and deceived by defendant No. 1 in the matter of the partition of the family property. Rama admits his having been imposed upon and says that he has been content with what was given to him. When two of the three brothers, deceived and imposed upon as noted above, have taken no steps to obtain redress for the wrong done to them and have submitted to it quietly, is it probable that the third (the plaintiff) who, though a minor, was made to throw in his lot with the two others would act differently?" This is a substantial finding that defendant No. 1 acted fraudulently in the matter of the partition especially with reference to the plaintiff who was then a minor and whose interests all the three brothers, defendant No. 1, Rama and Laxmana, were bound to protect. After this finding, the case became reduced to one of a fraudulent partition and the plaintiff's cause of action then is in substance to set aside that partition on the ground of fraud and to treat the family as joint and seek for a fresh partition of the family estate. In other words, for the purpose of limitation, the case was taken out of Article 127 of the Limitation Act. Notwithstanding his finding on the question of fraud, the Subordinate Judge held that, because in virtue of the partition of 1886 Rama, Laxmana and the plaintiff had been living apart from defendant No. 1 and dealing with the estate which had been allotted to them at the partition, it must be held that they knew they had been excluded from the joint family property by defendant No. 1, and that the claim was barred under Article 127.

Where fraud is found and the Court has to apply the Limitation Act in order to see whether the suit is within time, the Court ought to have evidence of a definite character to show the point of time at which the plaintiff had not merely suspicion but definite knowledge of fraud: see Rahimbhoy Habibbhoy v. Charles Agnew Turner (1), in which their Lordships of the Privy Council say that "in order to make limitation operate when a fraud has been committed by one who has obtained property thereby, it is for him to show that the injured complainant has had clear and definite knowledge of the facts, constituting the fraud, at a time which is too remote for the suit to be brought. Suggestion of his having been defrauded does not amount to such knowledge as is required by section 18 of the Indian Limitation Act XV of 1877."

Under these circumstances, the lower Court having failed to pursue the question of fraud from the point of view of the Limitation Act by the light of the authority just cited, it becomes necessary for this Court sitting in appeal to direct that there ought to be a fresh trial. The plaint will have to be amended. The plaintiff, no doubt, sues for partition but it now turning out that there had been a partition in the year 1836, the suit must be treated as one brought to set aside that partition on the ground of fraud, and the suit seeking a general partition of the family estate, all those who were co-parceners in 1886 or their legal representatives as the case may be, must be brought upon the record as defendants. The plaintiff must amend his plaint seeking relief on the ground of fraud alleging what that fraud is and when he came to have knowledge of it.

We reverse the decree of the Subordinate Judge and send back the case for a fresh hearing with due regard to the observations in this judgment. The plaintiff must amend his plaint in the manner directed by this Court within two months.

The Subordinate Judge will raise proper issues having regard to the law which has been pointed out by this Court's judgment.

All the family property will have to be brought into hotchpot as it existed in 1886 and though the plaintiff has abandoned his claim to the moveable property in appeal, yet, it will be open to the other parties who are brought upon the record to claim that it should be also brought into hotchpot and treated as part of the subject-matter of the suit. Whether the plaintiff, by reason of his having abandoned in appeal the claim for moveable property, has any right to claim it again, is a question on which this Court expresses no opinion at present. It will be open to the Subordinate Judge to deal with that question on its own merits at the hearing.

All costs hitherto incurred will be costs in the cause.

Decree reversed; Case remanded.

(1) 17 B. 341; 20 I. A. 1.

MCINTOSH v. BIDHU BHUSAN SEN.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 5032 OF 1911.
April 18, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Stephen and Mr. Justice Chatterjee.

W. C. McINTOSH—CLAIMANT—PETITIONER
versus
BIDHU BHUSAN SEN—DECREEE-HOLDER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Claim—Collusive sale by judgment-debtor to claimant to defraud creditors—Possession of claimant to be deemed as in trust for judgment-debtor—Trust need not be shown to be capable of enforcement—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 58, 61.

S., a judgment-debtor, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, conveyed certain property to P., who again collusively conveyed it to the claimant who took possession. This property being attached by the creditor of S., the claimant put forward a claim:

Held, (1) that the claimant was in possession for the benefit of the judgment-debtor as his trustee and that the claim should be rejected under rule 61, O. XXI of the Civil Procedure Code;

(2) that it was not necessary in order to defeat the claim to show that the trust was one capable of enforcement by law.

Rule against the judgment of the Sub-Judge of Mymensingh, dated August 7th, 1911.

Babu Harendra Narayan Mitra (for Babu D N. Chuckerbutty) and Babu Kali Kinkar Chuckerbutty, for the Petitioner.

Babus Tara Kishore Chowdhury and Hem Chundra Sen, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is a claim case under Order XXI, rule 58, in which the lower Court has dismissed the petition of claim. A Rule has been granted calling on the opposite party to show cause why the Subordinate Judge should not be directed to allow the claim of the petitioner on the facts found; to this Rule a clause has been added calling on the opposite party to show cause why the attachment obtained by him should not be set aside as being made without jurisdiction owing to a previous adjudication in insolvency made on the 19th September 1910. The facts of the case as found are as follows: On the 11th September 1909, a husband and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Sophianopulous, sold certain property to Mr. Philipopulous. This sale was not a bona fide one, which we understand to mean that it was entered into by Sophianopulous and Philipopulous for the purpose of shielding the property from the creditors of the former. On the 25th June 1910, Philipopulous sold the property to the claimant, who took possession and retained it till the attachment. This sale was a collusive one, being apparently a similar transaction to the first. Philipopulous was adjudicated insolvent on the 19th September 1910, a fact which curiously enough is not mentioned in the judgment of the Court below, though from the terms of the Judge's order we think he must have had it in his mind. The property was attached on the 7th May 1911; and it is against this attachment that the present claim is made. Under Order XXI, rule 60, the Court was bound to make an order releasing the property if it was satisfied that the property, when attached, was not in the possession of Sophianopulous or of some person in trust for him. Under rule 61 if the Court was satisfied that the property was in possession of Sophianopulous or of some other person in trust for him, it was bound to disallow the claim. There is no question of possession by Sophianopulous, and the only question arising under these two rules is whether the property was in the possession of the claimant in trust for Sophianopulous. The findings show that the claimant was in possession of the property under a title which neither he nor Sophianopulous intended should be acted on as between themselves, and that he was in possession for the benefit of Sophianopulous and to defraud his creditors. We are of opinion that, looking at the scope and purpose of the rules in question, it is not necessary in order to defeat the claim to show that the trust is one capable of enforcement by law. Accordingly, we hold that the claimant was in possession in trust for Sophianopulous: and the claim was, therefore, rightly dismissed. As to the second part of the Rule, it may be that the adjudication vested the property in dispute in the Official Assignee: but he has not so far made any objection to the attachment, though he has done nothing that can be taken as admitting its validity as against him We see no reason why on revision we should allow the claimant to take advantage of a right in another which has not yet been asserted.

The Rule is, therefore, discharged with costs, the hearing-fee being assessed at three gold mohurs.

Rule discharged.

VELCHAND v. BOURCHIER.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 783 OF 1911.

July 5, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G Chandavarkar, Kt., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

VELCHAND CHHAGANLAL—APPELLANT

versus

LIEUT. E. BOURCHIER—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 60—Attachment—Salary of officer of Regular Forces—Army Act (44-45 Vic. Ch. 58), s. 136.

The salary of an Officer of the British Regular Army is not liable to attachment in execution of a decree, under section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Colonel Lecky v. Bank of Upper India Limited, 33 A. 529; 8 A. L. J. 487; 9 Ind. Cas. 1023, followed.

Section 60 does not encroach upon the provisions of the Army Act.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 215 of 1911, confirming that passed by the Joint Subordinate Judge of Ahmedabad, in Darkhast No. 188 of 1911.

Mr. T. R. Desai, for the Appellant.

Mr. L. A. Shah, amicus curiæ, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHANDAVARKAR, AG. C. J—We are indebted to Mr. Shah for having undertaken to argue this case as amicus curiæ for the respondent, but we do not wish to call upon him to reply to Mr. Desai, who has put the case before us very clearly and there is no doubt upon the law that the lower Courts have taken the correct view.

The whole question depends upon the construction of the words of clause 2 (b) of section 60, Civil Procedure Code, viz., "Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of the Army Act or of any similar law for the time being in force."

Section 136 of the Statute 44 and 45 Vic., c. 58, amended in 1895, provides that the salary of an Officer in the British Army serving in India shall be paid to him without deduction unless the Legislature in India has directed to the contrary in that behalf.

The question, therefore, is whether there is any such direction in any Act of the Indian Legislature. The only law bearing upon that is clause 2 (b) of section 60 to which I have referred.

What is the meaning of the words "to affect the provisions of the Army Act" in that clause? They mean that section 60 shall not have any effect, it shall not encroach upon the provisions of the Army Act. What the Army Act directs is that the salary of the officer in question should be paid to him without any deduction unless the law in India has said expressly or by necessary implication that there shall be such deduction. What the Indian enactment says is that it will not "affect the provisions of the Army Act," that is to say, it leaves the provisions of the Army Act untouched.

Mr. Desai for the creditor argues that an officer of the kind we have in this case is a public officer within the meaning of the Army Act as defined in section 2, clause (17), of the Civil Procedure Code, but we cannot reach that stage unless we first find that clause 2 (b) of section 60 paves the way for it. It is that which is the bar to our considering the further question whether the officer falls within the definition of "public officer". The decision of the Allahabad High Court in Colonel Lecky v. Bank of Upper India, Limited (1) is to the same effect.

For these reasons, the decree must be confirmed.

BATCHELOR, J.—I am of the same opinion. The respondent in this case is an officer of the Second Battalion of the North Staffordshire Regiment, that is to say, he is an Officer of the Regular Forces.

Now, under the Army Act, section 136, the salary of such an officer is not liable to attachment except by virtue of some law made by the Governor-General in Council in that behalf. But the only law made by the Governor-General in Council in that behalf is admittedly section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that section in its explanation, clause 2 (b), expressly declares that it does not affect the provisions of the Army Act.

That being so, it seems to me that there is no law of the Governor-General in Council whereby this officer's salary is liable to attachment.

Decree confirmed.

(1). 33 A. 529; 8 A. L. J. 487; 9 Ind. Cas. 1023.

BALAKRISHNA PILLAY v. NARAYANASAWMY NAIDU.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
CIVIL SUIT No. 41 OF 1906.
March 29, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Bakewell.

P. BALAKRISHNA PILLAY AND OTHERS —PLAINTIFFS

versus

M. P. NARAYANASAWMY NAIDU AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

AND

THE OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE—CLAIMANT.

Insolvent Debtor's Act (11—12 Vict. Ch. 21), s. 7—Possession of after-acquired immoveable property by insolvent--Adverse to Official Assignee—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 28, Sch. II Art. 144.

Where an undischarged insolvent acquires immoveable property subsequent to the insolvency and is in possession of the same for over twelve years, his possession is adverse to the Official Assignee and the right of the Official Assignee to the property is extinguished under section 28 of the Limitation Act, 1877.

Kristocomul Mitter v. Suresh Chunder Deb, 8 C. 556; 12 C. L. R. 253, followed.

In re New Land Development Association and Gray, (1892) 2 Ch. 138; 61 L. J. Ch. 323; 65 L. T. 404; 40 W. R. 295, Rowlandson v. Champion, 17 M. 21, Abdul Kareem Sahib v. The Official Assignee of Madras, 28 M. 168 at p. 171, referred to.

FACTS.—In this case, one Narayanasawmy Naidu became an insolvent in 1880. The joint family, of which he was a member, got considerable properties under a bequest of his paternal aunt, Ammai Ammal, and at a partition in 1896, he got separate possession of his share as representing his branch of the family. He mortgaged certain properties, which fell to his share, in 1902 to the father of the plaintiff and on the said mortgage, a decree was passed on 17th July 1906. On 12th October 1907, the Official Assignee intervened and he was given leave to sell three items of the mortgaged property and to bring the legal representative of the said Narayanasamy Naidu on record, who died in the meanwhile. On 14th September 1909, the 2nd defendant was added as his legal representative. The said mortgaged properties were sold and the sale-proceeds were deposited in Court and the Official Assignee took out this notice of motion for payment to him of the sale-proceeds. It was contended, relying on Kristocomul Mitter v. Suresh Chunder Deb (1) and Suja Hossein v. Manohur Das (2) and other authorities on behalf of the plaintiff and 2nd defendant, that the right of the Official Assignee to the property was barred by limitation and he had no right to the sale-proceeds.

Mr. Nugent Grant, instructed by Messrs. King & Partridge, for the Official Assignee.

Mr. T. Ethiraja Mudaliar, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. P. Venkataramana Rao, for the 2nd Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—By an order of the Insolvent Court, dated the 25th October 1880, the property of one Narayanasawmy Naidu, an insolvent, became vested in the Official Assignee of Madras. On the 11th of July 1881, the insolvent obtained his personal discharge but he obtained no order for his discharge in the nature of a certificate, so that by virtue of the vesting order of 1880 and section 7 of the Insolvency Act of 1848, all the estate and interest of the insolvent in any real or personal estate which the insolvent might purchase or which might revert, descend, be devised or bequeathed or come to him, vested in the Official Assignee.

On the 19th August 1902, the insolvent mortgaged to the plaintiffs in this suit certain immoveable property, which he had acquired under the Will of one Ammai Ammal, who died in 1894 as a member of his joint family. The plaintiff brought this suit upon the mortgage and, on 17th July 1906, obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property and the payment of Rs. 5,910-13-2 and costs.

On the 12th October 1907, the Official Assignee applied by Judge's summons that the sale-proceeds of the mortgaged property might be paid to him and a consent order was passed directing that the property should be sold and the proceeds paid into Court. On the 15th November 1909, it was ordered that the Official Assignee should have the further conduct of the suit and that the legal representatives of the insolvent defendant, then deceased, should be brought in as parties.

The property has been sold and the Official Assignee now applies that the sale-proceeds now in Court may be paid to him. Under section 7 of the Insolvency Act, the order of 1880 vested the insolvent's after-acquired property in the Official Assignee, without any conveyance or assignment, so that the bequest contained in the Will of Ammai Ammal conveyed the interest to the insolvent but the property bequeathed passed at once to the Official Assignee [see In re New Land Development Association and Gray (3) per Chitty, J., page 145, cited in Rowlandson v. Champion (4)].

(1) 8 C. 556; 12 C. L. R. 253.
(2) 24 C. 244.

It has been held by the English Courts that when a bankrupt has been having and dealing with present estate, alienations of such property by him, before the trustee in Bankruptcy intervenes, will not be disturbed, but that this rule does not apply to real property which passes by conveyance; and this distinction has been approved by this Court in Rowlandson v Champion (4).

It follows that the mortgaged property never passed to the insolvent and he never had any lawful power to dispose of it and that his possession was that of a trespasser. It was the duty of the insolvent to account to the Official Assignee for all the property acquired by him and he might possibly have been made criminally liable for mortgaging it to the plaintiff (see Insolvency Act, sections 50, 70) but it does not appear that he was guilty of deceit or committed any fraud upon the Official Assignee [see Abdul Kareem Sahib v. The Official Assignee of Madras (5).]

I am of opinion that the possession of the insolvent was adverse to the Official Assignee since it did not originate from any lawful title; and it appears from the affidavit of the 2nd defendant that possession commenced in 1894. The right of the Official Assignee to the property was, therefore, extinguished in 1907. [Limitation Act, section 28, Schedule II, Article 144; Kistocomul Mitter v. Suresh Chunder Deb (1)].

It is unnecessary, therefore, to consider the argument on his behalf that his application of the 12th October 1907 was under section 26 of the Insolvent Act and is not within the Limitation Act or to deal with the procedure adopted by him to which no objection was, moreover, raised by the plaintiffs.

The motion is dismissed with costs, two sets.

(3) (1892) 2 Ch. 138; 61 L. J. Ch. 323; 66 L. T. 404; 40 W. R. 295.

(4) 17 M. 21 at p. 33.

(5) 28 M. 168 at p. 171.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 357 OF 1911.

July 29, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sharfuddin and Mr. Justice Coxe.

BHOGIRATH CHANDRA MANDAL AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

SITAL CHANDRA SARKAR—DECREE-HOLDER—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Landlord and tenant—Occupancy holding—Transferability—Custom, proof of—Registration of transferee's name on payment of nazar—Consent of landlord.

Where there was evidence that nazars were as a rule paid to the landlord by the transferees of occupancy-holdings, and on payment of the nazar, the purchaser was usually recognised by the landlord as his tenant:

Held, that it was not evidence of any custom by which an unwilling landlord was bound, or evidence that the landlord was compelled, to recognise the purchaser on payment of nazar, whether he wished to do so or not.

Appeal from the order of the District Judge of Rungpur, dated April 25, 1911, affirming that of the Sub-Judge of that District, dated September 20th, 1910.

Babu Surendra Chandra Sen, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of an objection of the judgment-debtors, who are the appellants before us, under section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure that their raiyati holdings, which had been attached, were not saleable by local custom or usage without the consent of the landlord. Both the Courts below dismissed the objection of the judgment-debtors and they have now appealed to this Court.

The proof that these holdings are saleable without the landlord's consent, depends entirely upon a passage in the evidence which has been quoted in the judgment of the first Court. The view of that portion of the evidence taken by the first Court is accepted by the lower Appellate Court. The quotation of the evidence given in the first Court's judgment is this: "There is a custom of the sale of raiyati jotes (meaning occupancy holdings) in the pergunnah. Without the permission of the zemindar, the jotes are being sold. If the purchaser pays rent, we take it and give receipt in the name of the old tenants. We do not give marfat of the purchaser. Without taking nazar, we do not make kharij-dakhil. We take order of the zemindar and take nazar from the purchaser and then make kharij-dakhil . . . . without nazar never kharij-dakhil is made . . . In these villages, nazar is taken at the rate of Rs. 2 per bigha. We do not forbid the purchase of jote at auction-sale. We make kharij-dakhil of the name of purchasers if nazar is paid. No objection is taken to it." What this amounts to is that nazars are as a rule paid to the zemindar and on payment of the nazars the purchaser is usually recognised by the landlord. But the passage is not evidence of any custom or usage by which an unwilling landlord is bound, or evidence that the landlord is compelled, to recognise the purchaser on payment of nazar whether he wishes to do so or not. There is no other evidence in support of the finding of the Court below, which must, therefore, be regarded as based on no evidence and unsustainable.

We, therefore, set aside the judgments and decrees of the lower Courts and decree this appeal with half costs in this Court, the hearing-fee being assessed at half a gold mohur. The appellants before us are entitled to their costs in both the Courts below.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 86 OF 1912.

October 3, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

SRIMAT UJJANI SADHARMA SIMHASANANDISWARA CHARAPPATTADHYASKSHA MARULASIDDA RAJA DESIKENDRA MAHASWARMULU—APPELLANT

versus

SRIMAT UJJANI SADHARMA SIMHASANANDESWARA CHARAPATTADHYASKSHA SIDDALINGA RAJA DESIKENDRA MAHASWARMULU, BY HIS AGENT CHENNABASAPPA—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XL, r. 1 —Appointment of Receiver—Properties not comprised in suit.

Rule 1, Order XL, of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, does not empower the Court to appoint a Receiver of properties which cannot be dealt with by the Court in the suit.

Appeal, under section 15 of the Letters Patent, against the order of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair, dated 15th August 1912, in Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 625 of 1912 in Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 63 of 1912, presented against the order dated 21st February 1912 in F. A. No. 356 of 1911 in O. S. No. 19 of 1911 on the file of the District Court of Bellary.

Mr. C. P. Ramaswamy Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Dr. M. S. Swaminadhan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in his plaint sued to recover the properties in Schedule A appended to it. When he put in his application for the appointment of a Receiver, he appended another schedule to it, which he called B. The affidavit also stated that the suit was for the recovery of the properties in schedule A. It seems to be fairly clear that the properties in schedule B were not part of those included in schedule A to the plaint. There is nothing in the plaint which can be taken to make the properties in schedule B. appended to the Receiver petition the subject-matter of the suit. We cannot agree with the learned Counsel for the respondent that rule 1, Order XL, of the Code of Civil Procedure, empowers the Court to appoint a Receiver of properties which cannot, in any way, be dealt with by the Court in the suit. A Receiver, therefore, cannot be appointed in this case to take charge of the properties in schedule B appended to the plaintiff's petition. It is suggested that, probably, the Judge did not intend to make the order include these properties, but the order is vague and at least liable to misconstruction. It must be restricted in terms to the properties included in the plaint. We modify the order of the lower Court accordingly. There will be no order as to costs in this Court either in this appeal or in the petition before Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

Order modified.

HASANALLI v. POPATLAL PARBHUDAS.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 944 OF 1911.

June 25, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Beaman.

HASANALLI MOLEDINA—APPELLANT

versus

POPATLAL PARBHUDAS—RESPONDENT.

Will—Construction—Satisfaction, doctrine of—Debt due from testator—Legacy of equal sum—Right to debt and legacy—Suit by legatee—Administration of whole estate—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 62, 164, 292—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 112—Khoja Muhammadans—Hindu Law.

Where the executors do not admit that they hold sufficient assets to meet all claims, the usual and proper course would be, whether either a creditor or a legatee is suing, to have the whole estate administered.

Section 164 of the Succession Act expressly abolishes the doctrine of satisfaction. Although that Act does not apply to Hindus, Muhammadans or Buddhists, there is no doubt that the intention of the Legislature was to announce what they considered to be a generally correct principle of interpretation universally applicable unless overridden by some special provision of local law or usage.

Section 112 of the Probate and Administration Act criticised.

Quære:—Whether a Khoja Muhammadan should be treated for all testamentary purposes as a Hindu governed by Hindu Law?

Advocate General v. Karamali, 6 Bom. L. R. 601; 29 B. 133, referred to.

A., a Khoja Muhammadan, had a deposit of Rs. 9,000 with his brother, B. B. made a Will bequeathing Rs. 9,000 as bakshis (hiba) to A.:

Held, that A. was entitled both to his deposit of Rs. 9,000 and also to the legacy of Rs. 9,000.

Pestonji v. Framji, 12 Bom. L. R. 863; 8 Ind. Cas. 180, relied upon.

Mr. Talyarkhan (with him Mr. Kanga), for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Shortt (with him Mr. Davar), for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—This suit was brought by the plaintiff to recover a deposit of Rs. 9,000 from the estate of the deceased Karmali Moledina and a legacy of equal amount given to him by clause 8 of the Will. The suit was brought against the executors, who resisted the plaintiff's claim on two main grounds: (1) availing themselves of the old and, as far as this country is concerned, exploded doctrine of satisfaction that the legacy in the Will was no more than a payment of the deposit or debt and, therefore, the plaintiff could not have both the debt and the legacy; (2) that inasmuch as the executors had not given their assent to the legacy, the plaintiff could not sue them directly as upon a complete title for that amount, nor as a creditor of the estate could he sue the executors without asking for an administration of the whole estate.

In order to avoid as much as possible unnecessary difficulties arising out of technical defences of that kind, the plaintiff was allowed to amend his plaint so as to ask in the first instance for a declaration that he was entitled to his debt and his legacy; in the next, if necessary, for an administration of the estate. To the plaint so amended, the executors have put in a supplemental written statement, reiterating their defence based upon the doctrine of satisfaction, and further claiming that all parties interested in the estate ought to be joined in this suit. As to that, they will be able to come in in the administration suit if they desire to do so. The executors were asked whether they admitted that they held sufficient assets of the deceased to meet all claims upon the estate, for, if they did, it would probably be unnecessary to make the usual administration decree. They do not admit that they hold sufficient assets to meet all claims; and where that is so, the usual and proper course, no doubt, would be, whether either a legatee or a creditor is suing, to have the whole estate administered.

Before dealing with the substantial objection taken by the executors, I should like to observe in passing, upon their defence under section 112 of the Probate and Administration Act, that that section appears to me to be unfortunately worded. If it really means what it says, the practical consequences of applying it strictly logically would be absurd, for, however just a legatee's claim may be, no Court could decree it upon an incomplete title. Therefore, as long as the executors chose to withhold their assent, it is difficult to find any remedy of which the legatee might effectually avail himself. The executors appear to have thought that while this objection would be fatal to a suit brought directly against them, it would be obviated as soon as the form of the suit was changed and administration of the estate granted. Merely as a matter of academical logic, I do not see how that in any way affects the position. I cannot bring myself, however, to believe that the law really meant to leave legatees thus completely at the mercy of perverse or capricious executors; and it certainly does appear to me that the Legislature might with advantage alter or add to the words of this section and the section which corresponds with it in the Indian Succession Act.

I now pass to a consideration of the executors' main defence. I have already said that, as far as this country is concerned, the doctrine of satisfaction is exploded. Section 164 of the Indian Succession Act expressly abolishes it, and although that Act does not apply to Hindus, Mahomedans or Buddhists, it cannot be doubted that it was the intention of the Legislature to announce what they considered to be a generally correct principle of interpetation universally applicable unless overridden by some special provision of local law or usage. I may further add that if Khojas are really to be treated as Hindus for the purposes of making Will as well as in all matters of succession and inheritance, then the Will at present in dispute being regarded as that of a Hindu would be governed by the provisions of section 164 of the Indian Succession Act. This point has frequently come before me during the five years I have been sitting on the original side of this Court. I have repeatedly expressed my own opinion that it has never yet been authoritatively and finally decided that for all testamentary purposes a Khoja Mahomedan is to be treated as though he were a Hindu governed by the Hindu Law. There are observations in a judgment of Sir Lawrence Jenkins in the case of Advocate-General v. Karmali (1), which indicate that that eminent and learned Chief Justice thought that in this Presidency, Khoja Mahomedans were governed in all testamentary matters by the Hindu Law. As, however, that opinion appears to have rested chiefly upon the assent of Counsel of long standing and experience who were arguing the particular case before him, I have never been able to regard it as an authoritative and final decision of the question, for a question so important and so vitally affecting the interests of a large, wealthy and influential community could hardly be properly decided upon the admissions of Counsel made probably for their own convenience in the argument of a particular case. However that may be, if Khoja Mahomedans are not governed by the Hindu Law and section 164 of the Indian Succession Act is, therefore, not applicable to their Wills, then the interpretation of those Wills would seemingly have to be made in accordance with the provisions of the general law of evidence. Section 92 of the Evidence Act would then create even a more formidable bar to the defence upon which these executors rely than any section to be found in the Succession Act. It is true that section 92 is not to be applied in contravention or supersession of any of the special provisions of the Indian Succession Act relating to the interpretation of Wills. But the executors, as far as I can see, are not entitled in one breath to deny the applicability of the principles enunciated in section 164 of the Indian Succession Act and also the applicability of the general rule of evidence, which, as soon as the provisions of that Act are got out of the way, governs the interpretation of all documentary evidence.

In the present case, it is enough for me to say that I adhere to every word of my former decision in the case of Pestonji v. Framji (2), particularly where I have endeavoured in that judgment to ground my decision upon general principles. That was a far stronger case than this; for here even were any Court not precluded by the provisions of section 164 read with those of section 62 of the Succession Act, or, leaving that Act entirely out of consideration, by section 92 of the Evidence Act, from going behind the plain language of the Will in search of imaginary motives and conjectured circumstances, still reading the Will as a whole, I do not think that any Court even in the early days in England would have been disposed, where the language is as plain as it is here, to go very far in that direction although, no doubt, the doctrine of ademption has been applied very peremptorily and carried very far. In clause 8 of the Will, the testator says in as plain language as possible that he gives Rs. 9,000 to the plaintiff as baskshis. I do not see how any bequest could have been expressed in plainer language. Upon the principle, therefore, of Pestonji v.

(1) 6 Bom. L. R. 601; 29 B. 133.

(2) 12 Bom. L. R. 863; 8 Ind. Cas. 180.

Framji (2), and without covering the same ground again, I have no hesitation whatever in coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff is entitled to this legacy.

The debt to the extent of Rs. 9,000 is admitted. The plaintiff is, therefore, clearly entitled to the declaration he has asked for in prayer (a) to the plaint; and thereupon to have the usual administration decree prayed for in prayer (c) to the plaint.

Costs of the parties up to the present out of the estate, those of the executors as between attorney and client.

Costs and further directions reserved.

Liberty to apply.

Suit decreed.

Attorneys for the Plaintiff: Messrs. Shamrao Minocheher & Hiralal.

Attorneys for the Defendant: Messrs. Raghavayya, Bhimji & Nagindas.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 34 OF 1912.

July 19, 1912.

Present:—Sir Henry Richards, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Tudball.

ISHRI PERSHAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GOPI NATH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Registration Act (III of 1877), s. 50—Registered and unregistered deed—Priority—Same property covered by deeds by different persons.

A. mortgaged certain property to B. on 21st August 1894. On 30th May 1896, A. mortgaged the same property to C. Both the mortgages were unregistered. C. brought a suit for sale on his mortgage and purchased the property himself in execution of the decree. C.'s heir sold the property to D., whose heir sold it to E. The sale in favour of E. was an out and out sale of the full right of ownership in the property and was by a registered sale-deed:

Held, that E.'s deed had priority over B.'s unregistered mortgage-deed, as both deeds covered the same property and section 50 of the Registration Act applied.

Ram Lal v. Thakur Bachha Singh, 10 A. L. J. 114; 16 Ind. Cas. 625, followed.

Sobhagchand Gulabchand v. Bhaichand, 6 B. 193 at p. 208, and Baldeo Parshad v. Baldeo, (1901) A. W. N. 112, relied upon.

Letters Patent Appeal from the following decision of BANERJI, J.—In my judgment, there is no force in this appeal. The suit which has given rise to it was brought by the respondents for sale upon a mortgage, dated the 21st of August 1894, for Rs. 99, executed by Ram Bakhsh and others. On the 30th of May 1896, the same mortgagors mortgaged the same property to one Bindraban. Both the mortgage-deeds were unregistered. Bindraban brought a suit for sale upon his own mortgage, and, in execution of the decree obtained by him, sold the mortgaged property and bought it himself. His son sold it to one Bal Kishen, whose heir sold it to Ishri Prasad, defendant, on the 7th of April 1910. This sale-deed was registered. Ishri Prasad claims that by reason of his sale-deed being registered, he has priority over the plainitiff by virtue of the provisions of section 50 of the Registration Act. In my opinion, the lower Appellate Court has rightly overruled his plea. The mortgage in favour of Bindraban was a mortgage of such rights as existed in the mortgagor after the execution of the prior mortgage in favour of the plaintiffs. It is these rights which Bindraban brought to sale in execution of his decree, and it is these rights only which passed to him under his auction-purchase. Ishri Prasad under his purchase has acquired only such rights as Bindraban and his successors-in-title possessed. Therefore, Ishri Prasad has only acquired the rights of the mortgagors which existed in them after the execution of the mortgage-deed in favour of the plaintiffs; that is to say, the equity of redemption of the mortgagors. That being so, Ishri Prasad cannot claim that he has acquired the property mortgaged to the plaintiffs; that is to say, the entire property, and that he can ignore the mortgage in the plaintiff's favour. His sale-deed and the mortgage of the plaintiffs do not in reality cover the same property, and, therefore, section 50 cannot apply to a case like this. The principle of the decision of the Bombay High Court in Sobhagchand Gulabchand v Bhaichand (1), does not apply to the present case. I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Mr. Sital Pershad Ghosh, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. L. Banerji (for Mr. D. C. Banerji), for the Respondents.

(1) 6 B. 193 at p. 208.

ISHRI PERSHAD v. GOPI NATH.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are as follows:—

Ram Baksh and others mortgaged certain property to the present respondents on 21st August 1894. On 30th May 1896, they mortgaged the same property to Bindraban. Both mortgage-deeds were unregistered. Bindraban brought a suit for sale on his mortgage and purchased the property himself in execution of his decree.

His son sold the property to Bal Kishen. The latter's heir sold it to Ishri Prasad, the present appellant.

It must be clearly noted here, that though Bindraban purchased at the auction sale the right, title and interest of his mortgagors, what was sold to Ishri Prasad by the heir of Bal Kishen was the full right of ownership and not the mere right, title and interest of the transferor. An examination of Ishri Prasad's sale-deed makes this clear. That sale-deed was registered. Ishri Prasad's vendor was the full owner of the mortgage of 21st August 1894, was out of the way, but we may assume for the purposes of this appeal that the vendor legally owned only the property subject to that mortgage; what he purported to sell, was the full right of ownership. In this, he may or may not have acted dishonestly, but there is nothing to show that Ishri Prasad had any notice whatever of the pre-existing unregistered mortgage. The prior mortgagee brought the present suit for sale out of which this appeal has arisen.

In defence, Ishri Prasad pleaded section 50 of the Registration Act and urged that his registered sale-deed took effect as regards the property comprised therein against the unregistered mortgage-deed of the plaintiff which related to the same property. The Court of first instance upheld this plea and dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court reversed that decision and decreed the suit. On second appeal to this Court, the learned Judge, who heard the appeal, confirmed the decree of the Court below, hence this appeal under the Letters Patent.

It is urged before us, and with great force, that our learned brother has taken a wrong view of the facts of the case. The argument in his judgment is that, what was mortgaged to Bindraban, was the equity of redemption; and this is what Bindraban purchased, and what his son sold to Bal Kishen, and what Bal Kishen's heir transferred to Ishri Prasad; and as the latter only purchased the equity of redemption, the two deeds do not cover the same property and, therefore, section 50 of the Act does not apply. Reliance was placed on the decision in Sobhagchand Gulabchand v. Bhaichand (1). The error in the above is patent on an examination of the sale-deed in favour of Ishri Prasad. That deed does not purport to transfer only the right, title and interest of the transferor, but is, in plain terms, a sale, out and out, of the full right of ownership in the property. The mortgage in the present suit is a mortgage of the same property.

The two deeds, therefore, do cover the same property and section 50 of the Act does apply.

There can be no question that if the original mortgagors had executed the two deeds now in conflict, the sale-deed being registered would take effect against the unregistered mortgage-deed, even though after the execution of the latter, the mortgagors would have been the owners of only the equity of redemption.

The rights of the mortgagors were acquired by the appellant's vendor, but he sold to the appellant not the equity of redemption but the property itself. In principle, there is no difference.

We would call attention to the remarks of Melville, J, in Sobhagchand Gulabchand Bhaichand (1), which were quoted with approval by Aikman, J., in Baldeo Parshad v. Baldeo (2).

In the present case, the "estate" was covered by both the deeds in suit. The case is also covered by the decision in Ram Lal v. Thakur Bachha Singh (3).

We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of this Court and restore that of the Court of first instance, with costs in all Courts.

Appeal allowed.

(2) A. W. N. (1901) 112.
(3) 10 A. L. J. 114; 16 Ind. Cas. 625.

J. Kashmir University Library

NIAMAT ULLAH v. AISHA BIBI.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 606 OF 1911.

February 26, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Chevis.

NIAMAT ULLAH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat AISHA BIBI—PLAINTIFF AND Musammat AIMNA BIBI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Inheritance—Right of daughter of uncle of last male owner to contest alienation by his widow—Muhammadan Law—Gujars of Kharian, District Gujrat.

Among Gujars of Kharian, in the Gujrat District, a daughter of the uncle of the last male owner is not entitled by custom, in the absence of a proof to the contrary, to inherit property left by him, nor is she regarded as a reversionary heir possessing a right of control in respect of alienations made by his widow. She has also no such right under the Muhammadan Law.

Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan, 19 P. R. 1906; 70 P. L. R. 1906; Maqsud-ul-Nisa v. Kaniz Zohra, 135 P. R. 1908; Sher Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Khan, 5 P. R. 1895; Nur-ul-nissa v. Gauhar-ul-nissa, 61 P. R. 1906; Lahori v. Radho, 72 P. R. 1906; 108 P. L. R. 1907, and Musammat Kokan v. Musammat Lakhoo, 60 P. R. 1910; 92 P. W. R. 1910; 7 Ind. Cas. 470; 109 P. L. R. 1910, cited.

Hamira v. Ram Sigh, 134 P. R. 1907, (F. B.); 85 P. W. R. 1907, relied upon.

If such a right of inheritance by custom, and consequently a right of control in respect of alienations by widows, is claimed, it must be proved by the party asserting it.

Second appeal from the decree of the Divisional Judge of Rawalpindi Division, dated the 30th November 1910.

Mr. Fazal-i-Hussain, for the Appellants.

Mr. Ganga Ram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties are Gujars of Tahsil Kharian of Gujrat District, and their relationship appears from the following pedigree:—

The property in suit is a house situate in Dingah which admittedly came down from Mian Ala Din to Muhammad Alim, the deceased husband of Musammat Aimna, respondent No. 2. By a registered deed dated the 6th May 1909, this lady made a gift of the house, by way of charity, to the Imam of a mosque in Dingah known as the Barnianwali mosque. In June following, the present suit was brought by Musammat Aisha, daughter of Mian Budha, to obtain a declaration to the effect that the gift in question shall not affect her rights of reversion in the house gifted by Musammat Aimna. The donors and the donees pleaded, inter alia, that the plaintiff was not an heir to Muhammad Alim, deceased, or to Musammat Aimna, and that she had no locus standi to sue for the declaration prayed for. The first Court held that the plaintiff had no right of inheritance in the house in dispute, and on that ground it dismissed her suit. On appeal, the Divisional Judge held that since, in the absence of all other heirs, Musammat Aisha would succeed to the house in question on the death of Musammat Aimna, therefore, she was an heir to her in respect of this house, and that as such heir she had a right to contest the gift in dispute which is one made by a widow with a limited estate. The learned Judge has cited Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan (1) and Maqsud-ul-nisa v. Kaniz Zohra (2) in support of the latter view, and has decreed the plaintiff's claim. The donees have preferred a further appeal to this Court, and before us, two questions have been discussed in argument,—

(1) Whether Musammat Aisha is an heir to Muhammad Alim, deceased, as regards the succession to the house in dispute, and

(2) Whether, if she is an heir, she, being a female heir entitled to reversionary rights on the death of Musammat Aimna, is empowered by custom to contest the validity of the gift of 1909 ?

With reference to the second question, a number of authorities have been cited on both sides, reliance being placed by the appellant's Counsel chiefly on Sher Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Khan (3) and Nur-ul-nissa v.

(1) 19 P. R. 1906; 70 P. L. R. 1906.
(2) 135 P. R. 1908.
(3) 5 P. R. 1895.

SULTAN AHMAD v. WALLIULLAH.

Gauhar-ul-nissa (4) and by the respondent's Pleader on Chiragh Bibi v. Hassan (1), Lahori v. Radho(5), Maqsud ul-nisa v. Kaniz Zohra(2) and Musammat Kokan v. Musammat Lakho(6). We do not, however, think it necessary to consider and decide this question as, in our opinion, the first question must be answered in the negative. It is not disputed that among the parties' tribe, a daughter has no right of inheritance in her father's property as against his collaterals; and it is also admitted that plaintiff, Musammat Aisha, has married outside the family. It was for the plaintiff, Musammat Aisha, to prove that as the daughter of Muhammad Alim's uncle, she had by custom a right to succeed to the house in dispute on the death of his widow, Musammat Aimna, and she has adduced no evidence whatever in support of such right of succession. On the principle enunciated in Hamira v. Ram Singh (7), the plaintiff cannot, for purposes of succession to the house in dispute, be regarded as the granddaughter of the common ancestor, Mian Ala Din; she must prove affirmatively that she is entitled to succeed as the first cousin of Muhammad Alim to the property left by him, and that his widow Musammat Aimna is in possession of that property only on a life-estate. Unless and until she establishes such a right of inheritance by custom, she cannot claim to possess a right of control in respect of alienations made by Musammat Aimna in respect of the property in her possession as a widow of Muhammad Alim. Furthermore, for the purposes of the present litigation, we cannot assume that Musammat Aimna succeeded to the house in suit on the usual life-estate as a widow, for that presupposes that there is in existence a reversionary heir who is entitled to succeed under custom to Muhammad Alim's property on the death or remarriage of Musammat Aimna. The plaintiff, Musammat Aisha, has not shown that custom assigns to her the position of such reversionary heir. It follows, therefore, that, on the one hand, Musammat Aisha is not proved to be a reversionary heir of Muhammad Alim; nor, on the other hand, is Musammat Aimna shown to have succeeded to a mere life-estate in the house in dispute. It is, undoubtedly, true that in the absence of a definite rule of custom applying to the case in hand, Musammat Aisha would, under her personal law, have succeeded to the house in suit on the death of Musammat Aimna without heirs if the gift in dispute had not been made; but such right of succession under the Muhammadan Law does not confer on Musammat Aisha the power to control an alienation by way of gift made by Musammat Aimna in respect of the property in dispute. In order to possess such a power of control, she must show that she has a right of succession to Muhammad Alim's property under custom, and, in our opinion, she has entirely failed to prove such right.

We accordingly accept the appeal and, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, we restore that of the first Court with costs throughout.

Appeal accepted.

(4) 61 P. R. 1906.
(5) 72 P. R. 1906; 108 P. L. R. 1907.
(6) 60 P. R. 1910; 92 P. W. R. 1910; 7 Ind. Cas. 470; 109 P. L. R. 1910.
(7) 134 P. R. 1907 (F. B.); 85 P. W. R. 1907; 74 P. L. R. 1908.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 870 OF 1911.
June 18, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Chamier.
SULTAN AHMAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS —APPELLANTS
versus
WALLIULLAH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS —RESPONDENTS.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 15—Easement—Prescriptive right, acquisition of—Right of way—Old way used for 20 years and then abandoned—New way not used for 20 years.

The fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Easements Act, which applies both to continuous and discontinuous easements, seems to render it impossible to acquire a statutory prescriptive title to an easement unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit.

A. enjoyed for more than 20 years a right of way over B.'s land through a particular passage. About 16 or 17 years ago, A. abandoned the old passage and began to use a new passage. The deviation was not due to any building erected by B. but was made by A. of his own accord.

B. sued A. for a perpetual injunction restraining A. from passing along B.'s land and from obstructing B. in the building of a wall across the land.

A. pleaded that he had acquired a prescriptive right of way:

SULTAN AHMAD v. WALLIULLAH.

Held, that A. had no right of way,—

(a) across the old passage as it was not used within two years next before the institution of the suit;

(b) across the new passage as it had not been used for 20 years.

Second appeal from a decision of the District Judge of Azamgarh.

When the appeal first came on for hearing, Chamier, J., by his order, dated 11th April 1912, called for further findings. The order was as follows:—

ORDER.—This was a suit by the appellants to obtain a perpetual injunction restraining the respondents from passing across plot No. 1640, which is the property of the plaintiffs, and also restraining them from obstructing the appellants in the building of a wall across the same plot. The respondents' case was that they had originally two distinct rights of way across No. 1640 from north to south. Both the Courts below have decided that although it is proved that the respondents have been using the eastern way for many years, they have not used it for the period required for the establishment of an easement. Nothing more need be said about the eastern way. With regard to the western way, the Munsif held that it was proved that the defendants for many years used that way in passing from their houses to their factory and that they gave it up in favour of a new and more direct way when they built their new zanana house. The Munsif was of opinion that the evidence was strong to show that the western way was used by the plaintiffs up to within 16 or 17 years of the present suit, and that about that time, the defendants of their own accord abandoned the old way and began to use a different way. He rejected the contention of the defendants that the deviation was due to a construction of a wall caused by the plaintiffs and he declined to hold that the deviation took place ten years before the suit. He held that the defendants had not used the old way for 16 or 17 years before giving it up, and that the new way had been enjoyed for a sufficiently long period

On appeal, the District Judge, after agreeing with the Munsif regarding the eastern way, said that it was satisfactorily proved that the defendants had enjoyed the western way over plot No. 1640 for many years. He agreed with the Munsif that the defendants had built a new house 16 or 17 years before the suit, but he found it proved that about 10 years before the suit the plaintiffs had built an enclosure, and that it was then that they had begun to use a somewhat different way over the plaintiffs' property. He held that it was not proved that the defendants had abandoned the old way, but that it was a case of a deviation due to the erection of the plaintiff's enclosure. He allowed the appeal in part and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit as regards a way which he marked on the plan as A B C D.

In second appeal, it is contended that there is no definite finding by the lower Appellate Court, and that in fact there is no evidence on which there could have been a definite finding that the defendants had enjoyed the old western right of way over plot No. 1640 as an easement and as of right without interruption for twenty years before the deviation took place. It seems probable that the District Judge intended to find on this point in favour of the defendants, but I am bound to hold that there is no definite finding. The case must, therefore, go back for a definite finding, and as the attention of the parties was not drawn in the Court of first instance to the importance of proving or disproving the existence of an easement previous to the deviation, I do not think that I should prevent the parties from giving any further evidence that may be available. I direct that the record may be returned to the lower Appellate Court for definite findings on the following issues:—

(1) Whether the defendants acquired an easement in respect of what is called the old western way over No. 1640?

(2) Whether there was a deviation from that way?

(3) Whether the deviation was caused by the buildings erected by the plaintiffs, and, if so, when those buildings were erected?

Further evidence may be admitted. On return of the findings, ten days will be allowed for objections.

FINDINGS.

The facts of the case have been explained with clearness in the order of the Hon'ble High Court, so they need not be repeated here. The issues remitted to this Court for decision are:—

(1) Whether the defendants acquired an easement in respect of what is called the old western way over plot No. 1640?

SULTAN AHMAD v. WALLIULLAH.

(2) Whether there was a deviation from that way? and

(3) Whether the deviation was caused by the buildings erected by the plaintiffs, and if so, when these buildings were erected?

I hold that the defendants did acquire an easement in respect of the old western way. Their zanana house is to the south of plot No. 1640, which was formerly parti land and their baithka, where the men congregate, is to the north of that land. In the very nature of things, an Indian could never resist the temptation of a short cut over an open space of land belonging to another person. The plan prepared in the year 1875 (paper 30 C), indicates that a pathway did exist in plot No. 1640.

Undoubtedly, the witnesses of the defendants are prejudiced in their favour, but they testify to a natural course of events, and I am prepared to believe them so far as they speak of the defendants making use of a pathway over the parti land to the west from the defendant's western door to their baithka.

(2) It is admitted by both parties that there was a deviation from that way, and I hold accordingly.

(3) I do not believe that the deviation was caused by the plaintiff's building over the path to the west. The defendants had left that old path some years before the building was constructed and adopted the path to the east going directly to the baithka from the northern door. Sixteen or seventeen years ago, the defendants opened the door to the north of their house after building the northern portion of brick. Since that time, the door for ingress and egress to the house has been the northern door and not the old western door. The dispute between the parties is whether the opening to the west continued to be a door or turned into a window sixteen or seventeen years ago. The matter is of no importance because it is clear that the western door ceased from that time to be the principal door of the house and was not made use of for the purposes of ingress and egress by the inhabitants. This is clearly indicated by a copy of an award, dated 23rd December 1903, filed to-day, on behalf of the plaintiffs. The arbitrator has stated therein that this western opening was no longer used at the time by the defendants as a means of communication with the public road. There is another point: the parties are at such enmity and are so keen on litigation that if the western path had existed six or seven years ago, when the plaintiffs constructed their enclosure, the defendants would never have allowed such an opportunity for a suit to pass by without taking advantage of it. The only reason why the defendants did not rush to Court at the time was that they had given up the western road and had started using a different road to the east over the parti land. The defendants' witnesses are very confused about the exact situation of this old western path. Some put it as far as the south-western extremity of the new building and some as near as the south-eastern extremity. Some give it as their opinion that the path was situated between those two points. It is clear to me that the path existed at a time of which the witnesses have no clear recollection. This would not have happened if the path had ceased to exist only six or seven years ago when the plaintiffs constructed the new enclosure. The want of recollection is due to the path having been given up over fifteen years ago when the defendants changed the situation of the front door of their house. The parties to the suit form two factions in the village whose only amusement in life is to have some litigation on in Civil Courts. The witnesses they bring to Court are well tutored partisans who help the parties as whole-heartedly with false testimony as they themselves hope to be helped by these parties in other litigations in which the witnesses are concerned. In such a state of affiairs, a Court is more likely to arrive at the truth by the guide of circumstances and probabilities than by reliance on the uttered word. I hold that the deviation was not caused by the plaintiff's buildings; that the defendants gave up the western path voluntarily some years prior to the construction of the buildings, and that only the eastern path has been in use for the last fifteen years.

Mr. Ahmed Kareem, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The finding on the first and second issues remitted by my order of April 11th is in the affirmative, and the finding on the third issue is in the negative.

The meaning of the findings on the first and third issues is that the defendants enjoyed the old western right of way over plot No. 1640 as an easement and as of right for more than twenty years up to within 16 or 17 years of this suit and then abandoned it, or at all events the southern part of it in order to go direct to a new door opened by them.

It seems to me that the result of these findings is that the defence fails. The fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Easements Act seems to render it impossible to acquire a statutory prescriptive title to an easement unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a suit. The same has been held with reference to sections 3 and 4 of the Presciption Act, 1832 [see the judgment of Lord Macnaghten in Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores (1) and Hyman v. Van den Bergh (2).] The circumstance that section 3 of the Prescription Act relates to continuous easements only does not appear to affect the matter. The fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Indian Easements Act applies to both continuous and discontinuous easements.

There is no ground for presuming a lost grant of the right of way. Nothing of the kind has been suggested. The defendants have not claimed to be entitled to an easement except under the Easements Act.

The result is that the appeal is allowed, the decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside and the decree of the Munsif is restored with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

(1) (1904) A. C. 179 at p. 189; 73 L. J. Ch. 484; 90 L. T. 687; 53 W. R. 30; 20 T. L. R. 475.

(2) (1908) 1 Ch. 167; 77 L. J. Ch. 154; 98 L. T. 487.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 256 OF 1910.

May 23, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chamier and Mr. Justice Piggott.

COLLECTOR OF GHAZIPUR—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BALBHADDAR SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

U. P. Court of Wards Act (III of 1899) ss. 16, 17, 18, 20—Notice, how to be published—Claims not notified to Collector within time—Loss of interest—Non-production of document before Collector upon notice—Objection taken at late stage of suit—Admissibility of document in evidence—Discretion of Court—Interpretation of Statutes imposing penalty.

Provisions of law, which operate to impose a penalty or disability upon a person who fails to comply with them, require to be strictly interpreted.

Under the United Provinces Court of Wards Act, as soon as the notice required under section 16 is duly published by the Collector, a double obligation is laid upon the creditors; they must not only notify their claims against the ward or his property, giving full particulars of the same, but they must produce before the Collector with the statement of claim every document on which they rely in support thereof.

There being no general or special orders from the Board of Revenue directing the Collector to publish the notice under section 16 of the Court of Wards Act at any other place or in any other manner, no obligation lies on the Collector to do anything more than get the notice published in English and Vernacular in the Provincial Gazette.

It would be contrary to all sound principles of interpretation to apply the proviso to section 17 to the subsequent sections, 18 and 20. The obligation to produce documents is laid upon all creditors of the ward and not only on those who notify their claims.

Where the admission of documents of title was not challenged at the proper time, and strictly speaking, was not challenged at all, and the Court below had no real opportunity, at the late stage when the objection was raised, to turn round on the plaintiffs and call upon them to explain the non-production of their mortgage-deeds before the Collector:

Held, that to exclude the documents altogether from the record would be to exact an extreme penalty for a piece of neglect due to mere ignorance.

The provisions of section 20 leave the Court a discretion to admit the plaintiff's document of title in evidence despite its non-production before the Collector but those of section 18 as regards interest give no such discretion.

The provisions of section 16 of U. P. Court of Wards Act compared with the provisions of sections 10A and 10B of Bengal Court of Wards Act.

W. Barrow v. Gaya Prasad, 9 A. L. J. 558; 15 Ind. Cas. 729, explained and discussed.

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur.

Mr. A. E. Ryves (with him Mr. W. Wallach), for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Dr. Sunder Lal (with him Mr. Gobind Prasad), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit by respondents Nos 1 and 2 upon three mortgage-deeds executed in their favour, or in favour of their father, in March 1888, and August 1892, by Ram Saran Singh, Lutawan Singh, Bisheshar Singh and Meghu Singh. The following pedigree shows the relationship between the mortgagors and other persons who will be referred to in this judgment:—

COLLECTOR OF GHAZIPUR v. BALBHADDAR SINGH.

The defendants, described as defendant first party in the Court below, are the living descendants of Nanku Singh and Ram Saran Singh. The defendants, second party, are lessees whose exact position need not be explained. The defendant, third party, is the Collector of Ghazipur, representing the estate of Dulhin Ram Kuar, who purchased the mortgaged property in December 1902, from Ram Saran Singh and his descendants and from the descendants of Nanku Singh. The defence of the Collector of Ghazipur was that the property belonged to Nanku Singh and Ram Phal Singh; that Nanku's widow, as guardian of her children, sold their share in the property in December 1850, to Ram Phal Singh; that Ram Phal Singh died without issue, leaving his widow, Babisa Kuar, who died in September 1901; that the Ram Saran Singh shown in the pedigree was not the son of Ram Phal, nephew of Nanku, but was the son of a Ram Phal whose father's name was Ghore Patari Rai; that during the life-time of Babisa Kuar, the descendants of Nanku, who were her husband's reversionary heirs, had no rights in the property, therefore, the mortgages in suit were invalid; and lastly, that Dulhin Ram Kuar purchased the property from the persons who became entitled to the property on the death of Babisa Kuar, whether under a Will said to have been executed by her or as the reversionary heirs of her husband.

It appears that Babisa Kuar obtained mutation of names in her favour upon the death of her husband. But in 1884, Ram Saran and the sons of Nanku got their names entered in the record. Babisa Kuar, in May 1894, obtained a decree against them declaring that they had no title. The plaintiffs alleged that the proceedings of 1894 were collusive. The Subordinate Judge has found that those proceedings were collusive; that Ram Saran was the son of Ram Phal, nephew of Nanku, and that the mortgages in suit are binding on the property in the hands of the Collector.

At a late stage of the suit, under circumstances which will be detailed below, it was contended on behalf of the Collector that the suit was not maintainable inasmuch as the plaintiffs had failed to notify their claim to the Collector when the Court of Wards took charge of the estate of Dulhin Ram Kuar in 1903, and had failed at that time to produce before the Collector the deeds on which this suit is based. The Subordinate Judge rejected this plea.

In appeal, it is contended that the decision of the Court below is erroneous on both points.

We think that the decision of the Court below on the question of fact is clearly right.

It may be that there was in the village a Ram Phal, who was the son of Ghore Patare Rai. But there can be no doubt that Ram Saran, father of defendant No. 9 and grandfather of defendant No. 10, was the son of Ram Phal, nephew of Nanku Singh. Mutation of names was, no doubt, made in favour of Babisa Kuar upon the death of Ram Phal. But that would not unnaturally have been done if Ram Saran was then a minor. Ram Saran and the descendants of Nanku managed to get their names on the records in 1884. Ram Saran joined with the descendants of Nanku in mortgaging the property in 1878 to Raja Shambhu Narain Singh, and Babisa Kuar made a Will in November 1894, whereby she purported to leave half the property to Balram Singh, grandson of Ram Saran. If Ram Saran, who was admittedly the father of defendant No. 9 and grandfather of defendant No. 10 and of Balram Singh, was, as the defendants suggest, merely a dishonest servant of Babisa Kuar, it is inconceivable that she would have left half her property to Ram Saran's grandson very soon after she had litigation with Ram Saran. The association of Ram Saran with the descendants of Nanku on several occasions when the property was being dealt with, is inexplicable except on the ground that he was related to them. It came out in the cross-examination of some of the defendants' witnesses that Ram Saran's house was actually next door to that of Lutawan Singh, the eldest son of Nanku; whereas the house of Ghore Patare Rai was some distance away. It seems probable that Ram Saran's house is part of the old family house. After a full consideration of the documentary evidence, we have no doubt that the evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses is true. These witnesses say that Ram Saran, father of defendant No. 9, was the son of Ram Phal by his wife Babisa Kuar. Much stress was laid by the defendants upon a suit brought by Babisa Kuar in 1898 against a Receiver, who had been appointed in execution of a decree, obtained by Raja Shambhu Narain Singh upon a mortgage made in his favour in August 1878, by Ram Saran and the descendants of Nanku. In that suit, Babisa Kuar obtained a declaration that the mortgage of August 24th, 1878, was not binding upon her. The defendants have also relied strongly upon a statement made by Babisa Kuar in a Will made by her in November, 1894, to the effect that she had no son. We regard that statement as being of a piece with the allegations made by Babisa Kuar in her suit against Ram Saran and others earlier in the year in which she obtained a declaration of her title. The suit was brought and the Will was made long after the mortgages now in suit and are parts of a scheme which was designed to enable the family to get rid of the mortgages in suit. The failure of the Receiver to successfully resist the suit brought against him by Babisa Kuar may be explained on the ground that he was an outsider, who had no knowledge of the facts, and was, therefore, severely handicapped in defending the suit. We have no doubt that the suit brought by Babisa Kuar against Ram Saran and others in 1894 was a collusive proceeding taken for the purpose of evading the mortgages, which are now in suit. We agree with the Court below that Ram Saran, grandfather of defendant No. 5, was the son of Ram Phal and Babisa Kuar. It follows that the mortgages in suit are binding upon the property purchased by Dulhin Ram Kuar and now in charge of the Court of Wards.

The question of law was raised in the Court below in a somewhat peculiar manner. The suit was instituted on May 7th, 1909, the written statement of the Collector of Ghazipur, as Manager of the estate of Dulhin Ram Kuar under the Court of Wards, was filed on September 1st, 1909. In this written statement, no plea is taken as to the suit being open to any sort of objection by reason of the failure on the part of the plaintiffs to comply with the provisions of section 16 of the Court of Wards Act, nor was any issue struck on this point before the parties went to trial. The taking of evidence in the case commenced on January 11th, 1910, and was practically concluded on March 4th, 1910. On April 13th, 1910, one stray witness for the defendants, who had somehow been left over, was examined. That same day a petition was put in on behalf of the Collector of Ghazipur which has been printed on page 156A This petition tendered in evidence a notification which appeared on page 768 of the United Provinces Gazette (Part II) of the 25th of April 1903, and a similar notification from the Vernacular Gazette of May 23rd, 1903. It was merely stated that these papers had an important bearing on the case, and "should be placed on the record and read along with the evidence." This having been permitted by the Court, these papers were made the basis of an entirely fresh set of pleadings, the contentions raised being of such a nature that, if accepted in their entirety, they would involve the dismissal of the entire suit. The Notifications in question are those required to be issued by section 16 (1) of the United Provinces Court of Wards Act (Local Act III of 1899), calling upon all persons having claims against the ward (in this case, against Dulhin Kam Kuar) or her property, to notify the same in writing to the Collector of Ghazipur within six months of the date of the publication of the said notices. It is admitted that the claim upon which the present suit is based was never notified to the Collector as thus required; and it is quite clear that it ought to have been so notified. Dulhin Ram Kuar is the substantial defendant in the case; she was impleaded as "a subsequent transferee of all the properties mortgaged in the documents sued on." She is in fact the present owner of the said properties; for the validity of her document of title in no way depends on the respective rights of Babisa Kuar, of Ram Saran Singh or of the heirs of Nanku Singh. In the sale-deed of December 7th, 1902, upon which her title rests, she took the precaution of getting included amongst her vendors every single person who had any possible claim to the ownership of the property transferred, and she thus obtained a clear title unaffected by any question which might afterwards be raised as to the respective rights of her vendors, so long as any one of them had a good and valid title.

The possible penalties provided by law for failure to notify a claim to the Collector, as required by section 16 of the Court of Wards Act, are two:—

(i) By reason of section 18 of the said Act, a claim not notified under section 16, "shall, notwithstanding any law, contract, decree or award to the contrary, cease to carry interest from the date of the expiry of the period prescribed in that section."

(ii) By reason of section 20 of the same Act, if any document in the possession or under the control of any person is not produced by him, "as required by section 16," such document shall not be admissible in evidence against the ward in any suit brought thereafter to enforce any liability under the same, "unless good cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof before the Collector."

The appellant claims the benefit of both these provisions. The plaintiffs-respondents have put forward substantially three arguments in reply.

First.—It is contended on their behalf that there has been, on the part of the Collector of Ghazipur, no sufficient publication of the notice required by section 16 of the Court of Wards Act, so as to entail any penalty whatsoever on the plaintiffs by reason of their failure to notify their claim to that officer. The required notices in the United Provinces Gazette are shown to have been duly published both in English and in the Vernacular; but it is not shown that there was any other publication than this. The second clause of section 16 of the Court of Wards Act provides as follows:—

"The notice shall also be published at such places and in such other manner as the Court of Wards may, by general or special order, direct."

There is no suggestion that any special orders were issued in the present case directing further publication of the notice to be effected in any particular manner. So far as we can ascertain, no general orders have been issued by the Board of Revenue, which is the Court of Wards for the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh (vide section 4 of the Court of Wards Act III of 1899) directing publication of notices under section 16 of the said Act otherwise than in the Provincial Gazette. On any reasonable construction of the provisions of the Act above quoted, it would appear that the Collector of Ghazipur having received no general or special orders from the Board of Revenue directing him to publish this notice at any other place or in any other manner, lay under no obligation to do anything more than get the notice published in English and in the Vernacular in the Provincial Gazette. Nor can it be said that the Board of Revenue lay under any positive obligation to issue general or special orders, for the words of the section, as quoted, leave the Court of Wards a discretion in the matter. We were referred to a ruling of this Court in W. Barrow v. Gaya Prasad (1); but this was based on the wording of sections 10A and 10B of the Bengal Court of Wards Act (Act IX of 1879) as amended by Act I of 1906. The provisions of these sections differ from those of section 16 of our Local Act in one matter of detail which happens to be of decisive importance as regards the point under discussion. By the United Provinces Act, as soon as the required notice has been duly published by the Collector, a double obligation is laid upon creditors; they must not only notify their claims against the ward or his property, giving full particulars of the same, but they must produce before the Collector with the statement of claim every document on which they rely in support thereof. Under the Bengal Act, after the creditor has put in a written statement of claim and furnished full particulars, he is only bound to "produce all documents which are in his possession, power or control" within such time as the Court of Wards may appoint. That is to say, the officer acting for the Court of Wards in the matter has laid upon him, after a claim has been filed, the duty of appointing a time within which documents must be filed. It was held by this Court that if such officer failed to fulfil this duty, and did not give the creditor concerned the requisite notice that his documents must be filed within a certain time, no penalty could be enforced against a creditor merely on the ground that he had failed to produce his documents before the Court of Wards There is no similar provision in the United Provinces Act, nor was any obligation laid upon the Collector of Ghazipur in this case to give the present plaintiffs notice that any mortgage-deed in their possession which they desired to make the basis of any claim against the property of Dulhin Ram Kuar must be presented before him by some fixed date subsequent to the presentation of their claim. On the contrary, both by the wording of the Court of Wards Act itself, and by that of the notice published in the Gazette, all creditors were required to present their claims and the documents on which the same were founded to the Collector within six months of the publication of the notice. Provisions of law, which operate so as to impose a penalty or disability upon a person who fails to comply with them, require, no doubt, to be strictly interpreted; and, for this reason, in the reported case, it was held that the serious penalty of excluding his document of title from admission in evidence should not be imposed upon a creditor until it was shown that every notice required by law had been duly given to him, and every obligation imposed by law upon the Court of Wards strictly performed. In the present case, the law as it stands required nothing more from the Collector of Ghazipur, once he had got the notice published in the Gazette in English and in Vernacular than to sit still and await the presentation of claims, the law itself laid upon creditors the obligation to produce detailed statements of claim, accompanied by all necessary documents, within the period limited by the notice itself. The first contention on behalf of the plaintiff-respondents, therefore, fails.

Secondly:—It was suggested that the obligation to produce documents is laid upon creditors who notify their claims. The argument is that a creditor who does not notify his claim at all may make himself liable to the provisions of section 18 already quoted, but cannot be held liable to the further disability laid down by section 20. There is nothing in the wording of the Act to support this contention; indeed, it appears contrary to the clear intention of the provisions under consideration. Something was said about the proviso embodied in the second clause of section 17; but it would be contrary to all sound principles of interpretation to apply this proviso to the subsequent sections 18 and 20. We must overrule this contention also.

There remains, however, a third argument for the plaintiffs, which must, in our opinion, prevail, so far as the penalty imposed by section 20 is concerned. The provisions of this section left the Court below a discretion to admit the plaintiffs' documents of title in evidence, despite their non-production before the Collector. That discretion has been exercised in favour of the plaintiffs, and we are not prepared to hold that it was exercised wrongly. On behalf of the appellant, it was contended that there had been no real exercise of discretion, because the plaintiffs had never been called upon to explain the non-production of these documents before the Collector. It has already been pointed out that the admission of these documents in evidence was not challenged at the proper time, and, strictly speaking, was not challenged at all. At a late stage of the case, long after the documents had been put in evidence and after the suit had gone to trial on the basis of the said documents, a petition, was put in which, on the face of it, asked for nothing beyond the admission of two documents in evidence on behalf of the Court of Wards. After the Gazette notifications had thus been got on to the record, they were used in argument to attack the very foundation of the plaintiff's case. The Court had no real opportunity at this stage to turn round on the plaintiffs and call upon them to explain the non-production of thei rmortgage-deeds before the Collector. We can conceive of no reason for their non-productton if the plaintiff in fact saw the notices in the Provincial Gazette and understood the obligation thereby cast upon them. We cannot relieve the plaintiffs of all the consequence of their failure to comply with the provisions of section 16 of Act III of 1899; but to exclude their documents of title altogether from the record would be to exact an extreme penalty for a piece of neglect due to mere ignorance. The Court of Wards Act of 1899 had not long been in force; the Board of Revenue had neglected to avail itself of its powers to direct publication of the Collector's notice in some more effective form. The Civil Court having a discretion as regards the admission of these documents, it seems clear to us, under all the circumstances, that this discretion has been rightly exercised in favour of the present plaintiffs.

(1) 9 A. L. J. 558; 15 Ind. Cas. 729.

HARIDAS v. VITHALDAS.

We cannot relieve them from the consequences of the provisions of section 18 of the Act as regards interest; here the law has left us no discretion. We so far accept this appeal that we direct the decree of the Court below to be modified by dissallowing all interest after the 23rd of November 1903, six months from the date on which the Collector of Ghazipur completed the fulfilment of the duty laid upon him. As regards the costs of the suit, we feel bound to take notice that the appeal has failed on the issues of fact to which the bulk of the evidence was directed. We order that the parties pay and receive costs in both Courts in proportion to success, but that the charges of printing and translating the record in this Court be borne entirely by the appellant.

Decree modified.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 504 OF 1911.

June 27, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

HARIDAS NANABHAI—APPELLANT

versus

VITHALDAS KISANDAS—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 179—Execution of decree—Limitation—Step-in-aid of execution —Application for time to procure copies of judgment and decree.

An application for time, made by a decree-holder after presenting a petition for execution of a decree, for procuring copies of the decree and judgment, is a step-in-aid of execution.

Kunhi Mannan v. Seshagiri Bhakthan, 5 M. 141, followed.

Kartick Nath Pandey v. Juggernath Ram Marwari, 27 C. 285, dissented from.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Ahmednagar, in Appeal No. 130 of 1910, confirming that passed by the first class Subordinate Judge of Ahmednagar, in Darkhast No. 162 of 1910.

Mr. K. H. Kelkar, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—We are of opinion that the application for time, which was made by the appellant after he had given the darkhast of November 1906, to enable him to procure copies of the decree and judgment, was a step-in-aid of execution. We agree with the judgment of the Madras High Court in Kunhi Mannan v. Seshagiri Bhakthan (1), and dissent from the judgment of the Calcutta High Court in Kartick Nath Pandey v. Juggernath Ram Marwari (2).

The decree is, therefore, reversed and the darkhast sent back to be disposed of according to law on the merits.

Costs hithero incurred will be costs in the darkhast.

Decree reversed.

(1) 5 M. 141.
(2) 27 C. 285.

Re WYSE, Ex parte CHOWKSEY.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 11 OF 1911.

February 13, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C.

Re H. WYSE, Ex parte K. B. CHOWKSEY.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 16 (3) and (5)—Reputed ownership, doctrine of, inapplicable to secured creditor—Sale of mortgaged property—Failure by mortgagee to object to sale—Assignment—After-acquired property—Covenant to replace goods sold by other goods—Lien—License—Equitable mortgage.

Under the Provincial Insolvency Act, a secured creditor cannot lose his security by the doctrine of reputed ownership. Section 16 (5) excludes the applicability of the doctrine to a secured creditor. After the insolvency of his debtor, a secured creditor is entitled to realize his security.

The effect of a receiving order under English law is not to divest the debtor of his property and to make him insolvent.

The property of the insolvent is only divested by the adjudication order.

The failure on the part of a mortgagee to object to the sale of the mortgaged goods does not deprive him of his interest in the goods, and his right to realize his security out of the sale-proceeds remains unaffected by the sale.

Where there was a mortgage of certain shop goods then lying on the premises to secure payment of a debt and the mortgagor covenanted to keep on the premises stock to the extent of the amount of the debt, re-placing sold goods by goods of equal value:

Held, (1) that the transaction was not a mere license but an equitable mortgage of the goods subsequently substituted for the goods previously existing;

(2) that there was a complete assignment of after-acquired property.

It is not necessary that the covenant as to after-acquired property should be one which could be enforced by a suit for specific performance. The only condition is that the goods, when they come into existence, should answer to the description of the assignment and be capable of being identified as the things assigned.

Mr. Wadhumal Oodharam, for K. B. Chowksey.

Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, for Haji Ahmed Karim Mahomed.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 11 was mortgagee by a deed, executed on the 31st October 1907 of the goods and chattels on the premises of the insolvent.

The mortgage was in the form of an assignment of the goods and chattels then lying on the premises and also of all outstanding debts due to the insolvent on condition that the assignment would become void on payment of the debt secured, that is, Rs. 9,000 and interest. There was also a covenant by the mortgagor, the insolvent, to keep on the premises stock to the value of Rs. 9,000 re placing sold goods by goods of equal value.

The mortgagor was, on 22nd March 1911, adjudged insolvent and his property vested in the Official Receiver.

The Official Receiver, on the 12th April 1911, sold the goods and chattels then existing on the premises and realized the sum of Rs. 3,621-7-0. The mortgagee applied to be paid this amount in realization of his security.

The Official Receiver, rejected the claim on the ground that the property had vested in the insolvent under the doctrine of reputed ownership. He also directed that the mortgagee should rank for dividend as an unsecured creditor.

The mortgagee has appealed against this order and the petitioning creditor has filed a Cross Appeal No. 10 objecting that section 31 is a bar to the mortgagee ranking with the unsecured creditors for his debt.

The doctrine of reputed ownership has been applied by the Official Receiver on the strength of various Indian cases decided under 11 and 12 Victoria, Chapter 21. But in that statute, there is no provision excluding secured creditors from the application of the doctrine. They have, therefore, no bearing in the present case which is under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907. In that Act, the doctrine of reputed ownership is enunciated in section 16 (3) and then para. (5) of the same section is as follows :—

"Nothing in this section shall affect the power of any secured creditor to realize or otherwise deal with his security in the same manner as he would have been entitled to realise or deal with it if this section has not been passed."

It seems very clear, therefore, that under the Provincial Insolvency Act, a secured creditor cannot lose his security under this doctrine.

Mr. Rupchand contends that the provisions of the English Bankruptcy Act, 1883, are similar and cites English cases in which the Courts have applied the doctrine to mortgagees. But the English Act is very different. Section 9 (1) provides that on the making of a receiving order, no creditor shall have any remedy against the property and person of the bankrupt. Para. (2) of the section then enacts that the section does not affect the power of a secured creditor to realize his security as if the section had not been passed. This section, however, does not in any way correspond with section 16 of the Provincial Insolvency Act for the effect of the receiving order is not to divest the debtor of his property or to make him insolvent, Rhodes v. Dawson (1). The property of the insolvent is only divested by the adjudication order under section 20 (1). There is no proviso to this section, saving the interest of secured creditors which may be lost under the doctrine of reputed ownership which is enacted in section 44 (iii).

Re WYSE, Ex parte CHOWKSEY.

Section 9 (2) of the English Act, therefore, falls very far short of section 16 (5) of the Indian Act.

Mr. Rupchand, however, seeks to support the order of the Official Receiver on the grounds which seem to me to be equally untenable.

His first contention is that the mortgagee not having appealed against the order of the Official Receiver selling the goods, he is not now entitled to claim payment out of the sale-proceeds. But the order for the sale of the goods does not deprive the mortgagee of his interest and was not expressed to be in any way adverse to him. It merely had the effect of converting the mortgagee's interest into cash, and if the mortgagee did not object to this, he was in no sense a person aggrieved nor was there any occasion for him to appeal. If the Official Receiver sold on behalf of the mortgagee, it is open to the mortgagee to ratify and adopt the sale. If the Official Receiver did not sell on behalf of the mortgagee, it is still open to the mortgagee to claim the sale-proceeds as belonging to him and not to the estate of the insolvent.

Next, it is contended that the form of the deed is similar to that of a Bill of Sale and that the Bill of Sales Act, 1878, invalidates any assignment of after-acquired property. It is sufficient to say that this English Statute is not law in India.

(1) (1886) 16 Q. B. D. 548 at p. 554; 55 L. J. Q. B. 134; 34 W. R. 240.

Next, Mr. Rupchand quotes the cases of Belding v. Read (2) and in In re D'Epineuil Tadman v. D'Epineuil (3), where similar covenants as to after-acquired property were held to be not sufficiently specific to support an assignment in equity.

Both these cases, however, were overruled in Tailby v. Official Receiver (4). It was there pointed out that it was not necessary that the covenant as to after-acquired property should be one which could be enforced by a suit for specific performance. There is only one condition, and that is, that the goods when they come into existence shall answer to the description of the assignment or in the other words that they should be capable of being identified as the things assigned. That condition is here fulfilled.

Lastly, Mr. Rupchand refers to the case of Thompson v. Cohen (5) and on its authority argues that the power to take the after-acquired goods was a mere license which did not convey any property in the goods and which was determined by the insolvency. But the deed in Thompson v. Cohen (5), made an assignment of present goods with a power to seize and sale, and then followed a covenant by which further goods "other than or in addition to" the said goods might be also seized and sold by the mortgagee. These future goods were, therefore, no part of the original security and the case was decided on the ground that there was no equitable mortgage of them as in the case of Holroyd v. Marshall (6), but that the covenant was merely a collateral license. The deed now under consideration is very different. There is an assignment of present goods as a security for Rs. 9,000 and then a covenant to always keep in the shop stock to the extent of Rs. 9,000 re-placing sold goods by goods of equal value.

The future goods are in substitution of the previously existing goods and a covenant to assign them as part of the security is clearly implied.

(2) (1865) 34 L. J. Ex. 212; 3 H. & C. 955; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 547; 13 L. T. 66; 13 W. R. 867.

(3) (1882) 20 Ch. D. 758; 47 L. T. 157; 30 W. R. 702; 51 L. J. Ch. 491.

(4) (1888) 13 A. C. 523; 58 L. J. Q. B. 75; 60 L. T. 162; 37 W. R. 513.

(5) (1872) 7 Q. B. 527; 41 L. J. Q. B. 221; 26 L. T. 693.

(6) (1860) 10 H. L. Cas. 191; 32 L. J. Ch. 193; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 213; 7 L. T. 172; 11 W. R. 171.

The case, therefore, falls within the rule of Holroyd v. Marshall (6), for a man can contract to assign future property and when it has come into existence, equity treating as done that which ought to be done fastens upon that property and the contract to assign, thus becomes a complete assignment. As to these goods, the transaction is an equitable mortgage and not a mere license.

The order of the Official Receiver admitting proof of the whole debt as an unsecured debt evidently proceeds on the assumption that the mortgagee has relinquished his security. As a matter of fact, he is realizing it and it will be open to him later on to apply for leave to prove the balance.

I reverse the order of the Official Receiver and direct the sale-proceeds to be paid to the applicant mortgagee. Appeal No. 11 allowed with costs.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 833 OF 1910.

September 17, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

PURUSHOTAMA DAS PRAGJI SAIT AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

JETA BHAI NAGJI SAIT AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Arbitration—Award of arbitrators made out of Court—Filing of award—Absence of reference in award to a matter in dispute—Duty of Court to remit award—Acting in excess of jurisdiction—Right of arbitrators to ignore any matter—Abandonment of claim.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J., (confirming the order of the lower Court).—An award of arbitrators is not a reasoned judicial decision and the arbitrators need not give reasons for their decision, and may even ignore any position advanced by the parties.

Nanjappa v. Nanjappa Rao, 23 M. L. J. 290; 12 M. L. T. 133; 16 Ind. Cas. 478; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 1091 and Ram Dhari Sahu v. Ram Charitar Sahu, 38 C. 143; 7 Ind. Cas. 333, referred to.

Arbitrators are not bound to decide a point, if the parties showed by their conduct that they did not want a formal decision thereon.

Ramji Ram v. Saligram, 14 C. L. J. 188; 11 Ind. Cas. 481, referred to.

The Court, in filing an award wherein the arbitrators have failed to give a decision on any matter, the subject of dispute, cannot be deemed to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, or to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law.

Per Sundara Aiyar, J.,—Arbitrators are bound to decide all matters in dispute in their award and their failure to do so cannot be condoned because the Court, on the merits, does not sustain the contention which was not dealt with by them.

The Court, in filing an award, wherein a subject of dispute has not been decided, acts with material irregularity and fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it to remit the award.

If the parties abandon any claim before the arbitrators, that need not appear in the award; the award would not be vitiated by absence of reference thereto, but it may be proved by the evidence of the arbitrators.

Petition, under section 115, Civil Procedure Code, praying for revision of the decree of the Subordinate Judge of North Malabar, in A. S. No. 197 of 1909, presented against that of the District Munsif of Cannanore in O. S. No. 19 of 1908.

The Hon'ble Mr. J. L. Rosario, Advocate-General, for the Petitioners.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Richmond, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

SUNDARA AIYAR, J.—This is a petition under section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code against the judgment of the Subordinate Court of North Malabar refusing to set aside an order passed by the District Munsif of Cannanore filing an award. The reference to arbitrators in the case was without the intervention of any Court; the arbitrators passed an award. Amongst the objections taken by the defendant to its being filed, one was that the arbitrators had not decided all the questions in dispute between the parties. Before proceeding further, it would be desirable to refer to the muchilika or karar by which the reference was made to the arbitrators. It states :—" You are empowered by us and with our consent to settle by arbitration all the disputes going on between Nos. 1, 2 and 3 herein regarding the ware-house No. 776 in Ward D of Cannanore town, the buildings included therein and the rent thereof which form the joint acquisition of myself, Purushothama Das Pragji Sait No. 1, and of Megji Anji Sait, the deceased father of Nos. 2 and 3, and which had been managed under the possession of myself, Purushotham Das Pragji Sait No. 1." The award is Exhibit J and, according to the statement in paragraph 4, the only dispute raised by the defendant was that he had given Rs. 400 to one of the plaintiffs in advance as a loan and that he was entitled to interest thereon. It will be observed that the muchilika, Exhibit A, itself does not state what the disputes between the parties were. The learned Counsel for the respondents does not deny the allegation of the appellant that one of the disputes before the arbitrators, in the first instance at any rate, related to the claim set up by the defendant to the share of one of the plaintiffs in the ware house in question under Exhibit II. The question was certainly a substantial and important one. There is no reference to it in the award of the arbitrators. The District Munsif was apparently of opinion that the claim under Exhibit II was given up before the arbitrators. If that was the fact, then I think the award would not be vitiated by the fact of no express reference being made in it to that claim. I cannot go so far as to hold, as the learned Advocate-General has asked us to do, that it must appear in the award itself that the claim was abandoned. I think the abandonment may be proved by the evidence of the arbitrators. But the Subordinate Judge, on appeal, does not, as far as I can see, find that the defendant abandoned his right under Exhibit II. He says:—" Exhibit II was a teer-deed by 1st plaintiff of his interest in the plaint shop. It would appear that it was a colourable creation intended to defeat 1st plaintiff's creditors. . . . . The arbitrators were, therefore, justified in dealing with these documents in the manner they have done." The arbitrators have not dealt with these documents at all in their award. The Subordinate Judge evidently meant to say that they were justified in not dealing with them, when he observed that they were justified in dealing with them in the manner they have done. The reason for justification given by the Subordinate Judge is that it appeared to him that Exhibit II was a colourable transaction intended to defeat the 1st plaintiff's creditors. His judgment then amounts to this: that because he himself was of opinion that Exhibit II evidenced a fraudulent transaction, the arbitrators were right in not dealing with it. It is hardly necessary to say that such a proposition cannot be sustained. The arbitrators were bound to decide any matter in dispute between the parties and their failure to do so cannot be condoned because the Court on the merits would not sustain the contention which the arbitrators did not deal with. The learned Counsel for the respondents says that in reality the Subordinate Judge intended to agree with the Munsif. Possibly he did; but I cannot find any support for that view in the Subordinate Judge's judgment. The District Munsif, in paragraph 28 of his judgment, observes with reference to Exhibit II that one of the arbitrators deposed that defendant had told him that his right under Exhibit II had ceased. This, indeed, is not the same as saying that Exhibit II was executed to defraud creditors. The other arbitrator deposed that the defendant told him that he had caused the teer-deed to be executed simply to defraud the creditors of the plaintiff's father. Having referred to the deposition of these two witnesses, the Munsif says: "The arbitrators, therefore, did not consider the teer-deed." He does not say that the defendant abandoned his right under Exhibit II. In paragraph 32, however, the Munsif observed:—"I find that the defendant's interests, if any, under Exhibits II and VI had ceased long ago and that he represented so to the arbitrators and that they were justified in not having considered Exhibits II and VI even if Exhibit VI had been shown to them." It is not clear to my mind whether the Munsif meant to say that the claim under Exhibit II was abandoned, or whether he intended to say that on account of the strong admissions contained in the statements before the arbitrators made by the defendant, they were justified in not considering Exhibit II. Probably he meant the latter. The arbitrators themselves do not seem to have stated in their depositions that the claim was abandoned. Apparently, they meant to justify themselves in making no reference to the defendant's claim under Exhibit II as the statements he made were against the sustainability of any such claim. However that may be, I cannot hold that the Subordinate Judge has found that the defendant's claim under Exhibit II was abandoned. Without such a finding, he could not hold that the arbitrators were right in not dealing with the claim. The law expressly requires that an award should be remitted if arbitrators fail to decide any of the matters submitted to them. The Subordinate Judge apparently agrees that one of the matters in dispute was not decided by the arbitrators. He had no power to confirm the Munsif's order filing the award without finding that the claim under Exhibit II was abandoned. In passing the order of confirmation without doing so, he must, in my opinion, be deemed to have acted with material irregularity and to have failed to exercise the jurisdiction vested in him to direct the award to be remitted, by entertaining a wrong impression that the failure by the arbitrators to decide a point submitted to them might be overlooked if the party urging the point had no substantial merits. It may also be said that he exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him in confirming the Munsif's order without finding that the claim under Exhibit II had been withdrawn. I would, therefore, ask the Subordinate Court to submit a finding on the question whether the defendant withdrew or abandoned his claim under Exhibit II. Mr. Richmond has contended that the appeal to the Subordinate Judge was incompetent as it was against the decree passed on the award. According to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, no appeal would lie against the decree in such a case except in so far as it might be in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award. At the same time, section 104 provides an appeal against an order filing an award. The Munsif's order directing the award to be filed was passed on the 23rd December 1906. The decree also was on the same date. No objection was taken before the Subordinate Judge with respect to the maintainability of the appeal. I think the appellant's contention may be upheld that the appeal was in reality against the order directing the award to be filed, especially as no objection was taken to it in the lower Appellate Court. The order passed on appeal was not itself appealable and the defendant adopted the proper course in filing a civil revision petition in this Court.

S. N. DAR... 38. ..., ... Court, SRINAGAR (...)

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—I am of opinion that this petition under section 115 ought to be rejected. The parties went to arbitration and executed a muchilika, Exhibit A, to the arbitrators and they referred all their disputes regarding a ware-house and the buildings appurtenant to the ware-house and the rent collected from the ware-house to the decision of the arbitrators. The award does deal with the ware-house and with the buildings and with the rents which were the matters referred to arbitration and it decides that the defendant should pay the plaintiffs certain compensation for their half share of the properties in dispute within a certain period and, in default, that the plaintiffs should pay to the defendant compensation for his half share and take the whole of the properties themselves. I do not see that this award has left any dispute between the parties as regards their rights undecided. No doubt, the defendant produced before the arbitrators the two documents, Exhibits II and VI. As regards Exhibit VI, I understood that the learned Advocate-General did not press any contention in reference to it. As regards Exhibit II, the arbitrators, notwithstanding its production, held that the defendant is entitled only to a half share in the disputed properties. They were not bound to state why they came to such conclusion. It has been held in Nanjappa v. Nanjappa Rao (1) that an award need not be a reasoned judicial decision, and that arbitrators need not even give their reasons for their conclusions and they are not even bound to record anything of the proceedings [see Ramdhari Sahu v. Ram Charitar Sahu (2)]. They need not have mentioned in their award the reasons why they ignored Exhibit II. One of the arbitrators says that he ignored it because the defendant did not put forward any claim before the arbitrators and, in fact, said that he had given up all claims under it. The other arbitrator says that he believed it to be a colourable document and, therefore, that it did not give any rights to the defendant as claimable under it. I think, under these circumstances, there is nothing illegal in the award and I am unable to say that the arbitrators failed to decide any of the matters referred to them for arbitration. The Munsif also finds that Exhibit II was a nominal document and that the defendant did not put forward before the arbitrators any right under it at the hearing before them [see Ramjee Ram v. Saligram (3) as to the arbitrators not being bound to decide a point if the parties showed by their conduct that they did not want a formal decision on it]. The Subordinate Judge refers to paragraphs 27 to 34 of the Munsif's judgment and he evidently means to adopt the reasoning therein without any reservation. He also seems to say that the arbitrators did consider the document, Exhibit II, and have dealt with it in some way, that is, they came to the conclusion that the defendant did or could claim no rights under it. At least, that is how I understand the Subordinate Judge's judgment. I do not find that the Subordinate Judge or the Munsif has exercised a jurisdiction not vested in either of them by law or failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in them or that they acted perversely in ignoring or refusing to follow any provision of law and I cannot find any material irregularity in either of the judgments. I must also point out that the Munsif's order filing the award became final because no appeal was filed against that order and, so far as the decree was passed by him in accordance with, and not in excess of, the award, no appeal at all lay against that decree even to the Subordinate Judge. The Subordinate Judge, to whom the appeal was made against the Munsif's decree, was, therefore, right in dismissing it as the decree was not in excess of the award. The present revision petition is against the Sub-Judge's decree dismissing the appeal preferred to him and, as I said just now, the Sub-Judge's said decree is perfectly right on the short ground that the Munsif's decree which was not in excess of the award, could not be interfered with in appeal [see Civil Procedure Code, second Schedule, clause 16 (2)]. Under these circumstances, I would dismiss this civil revision petition with costs. [See Ram Saran Das v. Mohammad Nawaz Khan (4) and Narpat Rai v. Devi Das (5), which show that neither appeal nor revision petition lies in such cases].

(1) 23 M. L. J. 290; 12 M. L. T. 133; 16 Ind. Cas. 478; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 1091.
(2) 33 C. 143; 7 Ind. Cas. 333.
(3) 14 C. L. J. 188; 11 Ind. Cas. 481.

ORDER.—The result is that the petition is dismissed with costs.

Petition dismissed.

(4) 9 Ind. Cas. 38; 7 P. W. R. 1911; 14 P.L.R. 1911.
(5) 14 Ind. Cas. 375; 16 P. W. R. 1912.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 122 OF 1912.

April 11, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson.

H. H. THE MAHARAJA BRIJ INDAR SINGH OF FARIDKOT—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BANSI LAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Custom—Hindu Law—Non-agricultural Banias of town—Adoption of sister's son, validity of—Occupancy-holding—Adopted son, whether succeeds—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), s. 59.

Non-agricultural Banias, who reside in a town, are not governed by the Customary Law, and amongst them the adoption of a sister's son is valid, and the adopted son succeeds to an occupancy-tenancy.

Hernaman v. Atma Ram, 24 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 437; Muhammad Din v. Jawaher, 69 P. R. 1907; 170 P. L. R. 1906; Chuttan v. Ram Chand, 86 P. R. 1904; Munsa v. Surta, 99 P. R. 1909; 16 P. L. R. 1910; 170 P. W. R. 1909; 4 Ind. Cas. 853; Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 21 A. 412 (P. C.); 26 I. A. 153; 3 C. W. N. 454, referred to.

Dad v. Bhag Singh, 34 P. R. 1883 (F.B.), followed.

Second appeal from the decree of the Additional Divisional Judge, Delhi Division, dated the 1st July 1911.

FACTS.—The facts of this case are as follows:—

One T. M., a Bania, held some agricultural land as the occupancy-tenant of the plaintiff. On his death, mutation in respect of the occupancy-tenure was effected in favour of the defendant, his sister's son, who had been adopted by him. The plaintiff contested the validity of the adoption, and brought a suit to have it cancelled. The Courts below found the adoption to be valid and dismissed the plaintiff's suit, whereupon the plaintiff appealed to the Chief Court who delivered the following judgment:—

Mr. Muhammad Tufail, for the Appellant.

Pandit Rambhaj Datta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The only question before me is whether or not the adoption in this case of a sister's son is valid. Both Courts have found in favour of the validity of the adoption as a form of adoption amounting in the tract in question to an adoption, and not a mere appointment of an heir. That in the South-East Punjab such adoptions are often recognized is quite certain and I see no reason, after consulting the rulings quoted, for differing from the two lower Courts in their finding that the adoption of a sister's son was valid [see Harnaman v. Atma Ram (1),

(1) 24 P. R. 1900; P. L. R. 1900 p. 437.

Muhammad Din v. Jawahir (2), Chuttan v. Ram Chand (3), Mansa v. Surta (4) and Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (5)—as discussed and explained in these rulings].

It was not really contested in the first Court that if the adoption was a real adoption and not merely the customary appointment of an heir, the adopted son could succeed to the tenancy. It was contested in the grounds of appeal, but is not urged in the grounds for revision here, though the learned Counsel argued the points. As to this, in face of Dad v. Bhag Singh (6), I see no ground to interfere specially as it is not specifically mentioned in the grounds raised under section 70 (1) (b) nor was notice specifically issued on this point. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 69 P. R. 1907; 170 P. L. R. 1906.
(3) 86 P. R. 1904.
(4) 99 P. R. 1909; 16 P. L. R. 1910; 170 P. W. R. 1909; 4 Ind. Cas. 853.
(5) 21 A. 412 (P. C.); 26 I. A. 153; 3 C. W. N. 454.
(6) 34 P. R. 1883 (F. B.).

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 23 OF 1910.
March 14, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

AJUMAL AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS
versus
THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—RESPONDENT.

Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 47 (1) (F)—North-Western Railway Tariff Rule No. 464 (V)—Construction of statutory rule—Plain meaning of words—Goods available for delivery—Loss by negligence of servants—Liability of Railway—Right to rescind contract—Partial failure—Proper course—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 39—Construction of contract or grant.

Tariff Rule 464 (V) of the North-Western Railway is a rule passed under section 47 (1) (F) of the Railways Act, and has the force of law.

The rule must be construed according to the plain meaning of the words used which are wide enough to include loss due to negligence of the Railway of its servants. Consequently, the Railway is exempted from liability to pay for damage caused to goods by the negligence of its servants after the goods have been made available for delivery to the consignee and the time fixed for taking delivery has expired.

The canons of construction applicable to contracts and grants are out of place in considering a statutory rule or order.

A party to a contract has no right to rescind the contract unless the other party fails to perform the contract in its entirety.

Where cotton consigned to a Railway is damaged, the proper course for the consignee is to take delivery and then sue for damages for deterioration of the cotton.

Obiter dicta:—In contracts by a common carrier, stipulations in general words exempting the carrier from liability will be held to limit his liability as an insurer, and not his liability for negligence, unless negligence is expressly included in the exemption.

Sheikh Mahomed v. The British Indian Steam Navigation Company, 32 M. 95; 4 M. L. T. 110 (F. B.); 18 M. L. J. 497; 1 Ind. Cas. 977 and Price and Company v. The Union Lighterage Company, (1903) 1 K. B. 750; 72 L. J. K. B. 374; 5 W. R. 477; 88 L. T. 428; 19 T. L. R. 328; 8 Com. Cas. 155; 9 Asp. M. C. 398, relied upon.

In all contracts or grants, words of exception are construed strictly against the party in whose favour they are inserted. The principle is founded on the maxim that no man shall derogate from his grant.

Appeal from the decree of H. N. Crouch, A. J. C.

The Hon'ble Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas, for the Appellant.

Rai Bahadur Lala Tekchand Udhavdas, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sued to recover the value of cotton consigned by their Tando Jam firm to their Karachi firm.

They had refused to accept delivery from the Railway because the cotton had been damaged by rain.

They claimed Rs. 5,066-4-0, the value of the cotton and Rs. 356 interest, in all Rs. 5,066-4 0.

The cotton had been carried by the Railway "at railway risk" and it is admitted that the cotton reached Karachi on the 4th June and that the liability of the Railway as carriers ceased at mid-day on the 6th June. The damage was caused by rain both before and after mid-day of the 6th June. As the plaintiffs refused to accept delivery, the cotton was sold by auction by the Railway in August for a sum of Rs. 2,238-4-5.

The lower Court awarded the plaintiffs the sum of Rs. 2,238-4-5 and Rs. 81 for damage caused to the cotton prior to mid-day of the 6th June. The Court further held that the defendant was not liable for damages caused to the cotton after mid-day of the 6th June, but directed that the defendant should bear his own costs.

Plaintiffs appeal on the grounds that—

AJUMAL v. SECRETARY OF STATE.

(i) the damages awarded for the period prior to mid-day, the 6th June, are inadequate,

(ii) that the defendant is liable for damage done after that time.

The defendant has filed cross-objections for costs.

As to the damage caused prior to mid-day the 6th June, it is sufficient to say that there is no evidence beyond that of the Station Master which the Judge has accepted. The plaintiffs made no survey on the 6th June and they have been unable to prove by any evidence of their own what part of the damage was caused in this period.

The damage subsequent to the mid-day of the 6th June was caused while the defendant company was in possession as a warehouseman. The liability of the Railway in this capacity is defined in Tariff Rule 464 (V), which provides that "besides incurring wharfage charges, goods will be entirely at the risk of the owner." The lower Court has held that this rule exempts the Railway from all liability. For the plaintiffs, it is strenuously contended in this appeal that the damage was due to the negligence of the Railway in not protecting the goods and that the general words of the rule do not cover negligence.

The case cited in support of this contention is that of Sheikh Mahomed v. The British India Steam Navigation Company (1). In that case, goods were shipped under a bill of lading which gave the Shipping Company the option of landing them—and the bill of lading contained the following stipulation: "In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the Company shall cease absolutely when the goods are free of the ship's tackle and thereupon the goods will be at the risk, for all purposes and in every respect, of the shipper or consignee." The shipping Company negligently landed the goods when rain was falling and it was held that the general words in the bill of lading did not exclude liability for negligence. There is a superficial resemblance between the two cases, for in both cases, the stipulation was that the goods should be at owner's risk and in both cases the damage was caused by exposure to rain while in the possession of the defendant. The resemblance, however, is merely superficial. The principle involved in Sheikh Mahomed v. The British India Steam Navigation Company (1) is that laid down in Price & Company v. The Union Lighterage Company (2) and cases there cited, that in contracts by a common carrier, stipulations in general words exempting the carrier from liability will be held to limit his liability as an insurer—and not his liability for negligence unless negligence is expressly included in the exemption. This rule follows on the more general principle that in all contracts or grants, words of exception are construed strictly against the party in whose favour they are inserted, and it is founded on the maxim that no man shall derogate from his grant.

But this canon of construction is out of place in the consideration of a statutory rule or order. Here the Railway Company have made no private contract to exempt themselves from liability as bailees. The exemption is made by law, for the Tariff Rule is a rule passed under section 47 (1) (F) of the Railways Act, IX of 1890, and has the force of law. The Tariff Rule must be construed according to the plain meaning of the words used and these words are wide enough to include loss due to negligence of the Railway Company or its servants. Section 75 of the Railways Act was so construed by the Bombay High Court in Balaram v. The S. M. Railway Company (3). The lower Court was, therefore, right in its conclusion that the defendant is not liable for damage done after mid-day the 6th June.

As to the cross-appeal, the defendant has not been allowed his costs as he was in possession of the sale-proceeds up to the time the suit was filed. But the defendant is not to blame on this account. The plaintiffs misconceived their rights from the beginning. They refused to accept delivery on the ground that the goods were damaged. This was tantamount to rescinding the contract and the suit has been filed on the basis of a contract rightfully rescinded for they claim the full value of the cotton by way of damages. But the plaintiffs had no right to rescind for the defendant had not failed to perform the contract in its entirety—section 39, Indian Contract Act. Their proper course was to take delivery and then sue for damages for the deterioration to the cotton. If they had done this, they would not have been deprived of the sale-proceeds of the cotton.

(1) 32 M. 95; 4 M. L. T. 110 (F. B.); 8 M. L. J. 497; 1 Ind. Cas. 977.

(2) (1903) 1 K. B. 750; 72 L. J. K. B. 374; 5 W. R. 477; 88 L. T. 428; 19 T. L. R. 328; 8 Com. Cas. 155; 9 Asp. M. C. 398.

(3) 19 B. 159.

We, therefore, confirm the decree of the lower Court, but direct that defendant should recover costs in proportion of Rs. 5,422-4-0, the total claim, to Rs. 81, decreed in the lower Court. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 119 OF 1912.

September 25, 1212.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

B. M. VENKATAPPA NAYANIVARU —PETITIONER

versus

RAMI REDDI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Inamdar, suit against, by proprietor of estate for jodi and fasli jasti—Small Cause suit—Jurisdiction of Revenue Court.

A suit by the proprietor of an estate against an inamdar for an amount made up of jodi and fasli jasti is a Small Cause suit and is not triable, by a Revenue Court.

Narayansawmi Naidu v. Venkatasubrayadu, 9 M. L. T. 315; 9 Ind. Cas. 642, referred to.

Petition, under section 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Chittur in Small Cause Suit No. 615 of 1191, dated 10th November 1911.

Messrs. V. Ramadoss and N. S. Narasimhachariar, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. Vencatasubba Row and Radha Krishnaya, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a petition to revise the order of the District Munsif of Chettur in a Small Cause suit filed by the proprietor of an estate against an inamdar. The plaintiff claims to recover a sum of Rs. 2-11-9. It appears from the plaint that the amount is made up of jodi and fasli jasti. The claim is made against the defendant on the ground that he is bound to pay it as inamdar. It is not, therefore, based on the relationship between the plaintiff and defendant as landlord and ryot. The claim is against the person who himself possesses an interest in the malvaram.

The suit was, therefore, not triable in a Revenue Court and was rightly instituted in the District Munsif's Court on the Small Cause side. See Narayanaswamy Naidu v. Vencata Subaraydu (1). We reverse the order of lower Court and direct that the plaint be restored to the file and the suit disposed of according to law. Costs will abide the result.

Petition allowed.

(1) 9 M. L. T. 315; 9 Ind. Cas. 642.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 6 OF 1910.

March 22, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

PARUMAL AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Wadero MAHOMEDALI AND OTHERS — RESPONDENTS.

Muhammadan Law—Pre-emption—Assertion of right before completion of sale—Formalities for pre-emption—Talab-i-istishhad—Reference to talab-i-mowasibat, when necessary—Co-owners' right to pre-empt per capita—Assignment—Right of third parties to impeach—Admissibility of oral evidence—Colourable transaction—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Merger in decree—Fraud.

The assertion of a right of pre-emption before the completion of a sale is premature and ineffectual.

Under Muhammadan Law, a pre-emptor must ordinarily comply with the following formalities after the completion of a sale:

(1) talab-i-mowasibat, or assertain of right immediately on receiving information of sale;

(2) talab-i-istishhad, or demand in the presence of witnesses made either to the buyer or to the seller or on the premises in dispute;

(3) the talab-i-istishhad should refer expressly to the talab-i-mowasibat.

Where, however, the occasion for performing the talab-i-mowasibat does not arise until all the conditions for a talab-i-istishhad had occurred, there is no scope for the operation of the rule that talab-i-istishhad should refer expressly to the talab-i-mowasibat and the maxim applies cessante ratione legis, cessat et ipsa lex.

Rajjab Ali v. Chandi Churn, 17 C. 543; and Mubarak Husain v. Kaniz Bano, 27 A. 160; (1904) A. W. N. 201; 1 A. L. J. 569, distinguished.

All persons having an equal right of pre-emption are entitled under Muhammadan Law to divide the property equally per capita.

Where an assignment is impeached on the ground that it is colourable and has the effect of defeating the rights of third parties, such third parties have the right to produce evidence to show the real nature of the transaction. Section 92 of the Evidence Act is no bar to the production of oral evidence by such third parties. It makes no difference that the transaction has merged in a decree, for decrees only bind the parties thereto or persons claiming under them.

PARUMAL v. MAHOMEDALI.

An assignment can be assailed by third parties on the ground of fraud.

Fraud is an extrinsic and collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of Justice.

Appeal from the decree of the Assistant Judge, Hyderabad.

The Hon'ble Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gopaldas Jhamatmal, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

JUDGMENT.—In this suit, the two plaintiffs seek to enforce a right of pre-emption arising out of a sale in 1908 by the first five defendants to the 6th defendant.

The original sharers in the porperty were :—

Plaintiffs, 8-annas.
Ghulam Hussain, 4-annas.
Mir Hassan, 4-annas.

In 1898, by a decree passed upon an award between defendant No. 6 as plaintiff and Ghulam Hussain and Bahadar, son of Mir Hassan, as defendants, the two 4-annas shares of Ghulam Hussain and Mir Hassan were given to defendant No. 6 in satisfaction of a debt of Rs. 5,000.

Ghulam Hussain's estate was then under management and it is clear that the decree could only give Ghulam Hussain's life-interest to defendant No. 6. There is a dispute as to the effect of the decree on the share of Mir Hassan. On the one side, it is contended that Bahadar represented all the heirs of Mir Hassan and that the whole 4-anna share passsd under the decree. On the other side, it is contended that there were three other heirs, two brothers, Sher Mahomed and Allahdino, and a sister ; that they were not parties to the suit and that their interest in the 4-anna share was not affected by the decree. As to the sister, a son of Ghulam Hussain, Exhibit 58, no doubt, says that there was a sister who died before Bahadar, but this sister is not referred to in the award and from the pleadings, it is clear that it was common ground between the parties that the heirs of Mir Hassan were the three sons, Bahadar and defendants Nos. 4 and 5—see plaint para. 2 and written statement, Exhibit 10, para. 5. The heirs of Mir Hassan alive at the time of the award were, therefore, three sons and only one of these sons joined in the award. The District Judge has found that the award and decree passed only the share of that one son Bahadar. We concur in that finding. Bahadar did not profess to represent his co-heirs. The statement in the award that the two brothers had relinquished their rights is opposed to the fact that they were parties to and received the consideration for the subsequent sale in 1908. The decree, therefore, only affected Bahadar's one third share of Mir Hassan's 4-annas and the life-interest of Ghulam Hussain.

At Ghulam Hussain's death, therefore, the shares in the estate were :—

Plaintiffs, 8 annas.
Defendant No. 6, $\frac{1}{3}$ by 4-annas.
Co-heirs of Bahadar, $\frac{2}{3}$ by 4-annas.
Heirs of Ghulam Hussain, 4-annas.

It was then that the sale-deed of 1908 was passed by the co-heirs of Bahadar and by the heirs of Ghulam Hussain to defendant No. 6 for the sum of Rs. 6,500 in order to perfect his title to the two 4-annas shares which the award professed to give him.

It is to this sale that the plaintiffs claim pre-emption and, on the facts recited above, the District Judge has awarded plaintiffs 4-annas on payment of Rs. 3,250 to defendant No. 6. It is, of course, obvious that the subject-matter of the sale was 4-annas plus $\frac{2}{3}$ by 4-annas, i. e., a share of 6-anna 8-pies and that the plaintiffs could only be entitled to pre-emption of such part of that share as the Muhammadan Law allows them.

Defendant No. 6 has appealed on three main grounds : (1) that the sale of 1908 is not a transaction which gives rise to the right of pre-emption, (2) that the plaintiffs have not observed the formalities necessary for the purpose of establishing a right of pre-emption, and (3) that the share of the pre-emptors is wrongly estimated. The plaintiffs cross-object that they should have been allowed to show by evidence that the award and decree of 1898 was collusive and that the transaction was a mortgage,

Kashmir University Library

PARUMAL v. MAHOMEDALI.

Now, it is difficult to understand why the transaction of 1908, which is embodied in the sale-deed, Exhibit 58, should not give rise to a claim for pre-emption. The argument advanced is that it was not a sale, but a confirmation of the transfer of title effected by the award and the decree of 1898. If Exhibit 58 had merely been an indemnity bond, by which the transferors or the heirs of the transferors of 1898 covenanted to indemnify the defendant No. 6 for any flaws in the title conveyed under the award and decree, there would have been much force in this argument. But the transaction was of a different nature altogether. Fresh consideration was paid and a conveyance obtained of all rights left outstanding by the decree. This was a perfect sale and there can be no doubt that it did give rise to a right of pre-emption.

The next question is as to the preformance of the formalities required by Muhammadan Law for the purpose of giving effect to the right.

The plaintiffs were informed of the intended sale while they were at their water-wheel in their village on the 1st March. They at once, in the presence of two witnesses, Exhibits 83 and 88, declared their intention to assert their right of pre-emption. They started at once for Hala to see if the deed had been executed. They made inquiries at the Mukhtayarkar Office and at Sub-Registrar's Office, but were unable to obtain any information. They returned on the 2nd to their own village and raised money to pay for the land in case their demand was complied with and then started for Hyderabad. They reached Hyderabad at dawn on the 3rd. They found defendant No. 1 and then they questioned him about the sale. He put them off and said he would speak to the other defendants about it. The plaintiffs then consulted a Pleader and at his advice went to the Court to see if any award effecting the transfer was being filed. They failed to obtain any information at the Court, but hearing that the defendants were going to Hala the next day, plaintiff, Ahmed, went also to Hala on the 4th and stood guard outside the Sub-Registrar's Office. He saw the defendants going into the Sub-Registrar's Office. He then sent for two witnesses and went into the office with them. He says that the first real information he had of the sale was when he entered the office and saw the deed in the Sub-Registrar's hand (Exhibit 82, lines 52 and 90). He then made a formal demand and assertion of his right in the presence of the parties and of the witnesses. The deed had been executed at 6 P. M. on the 3rd in a Pleader's office.

Now, it must be conceded that the talab-i-mowasibat on the water-wheel on the 1st was ineffectual—for it was made before the sale was completed. No right of pre-emption had, therefore, arisen and the assertion of the right was, therefore, premature. But it seems to us that what took place in the Sub-Registrar's Office was a sufficient compliance with all the formalities of the Muhammadan law. These are (1) talab-i-mowasibat, or assertion of right immediately on receiving information, (2) a talab-i-istishhad, or demand in the presence of witnesses made either to the buyer or seller or on the premises in dispute and it is also necessary, (3) that the talab-i-istishhad should refer expressly to the talab-i-mowasibat. But there is this special feature in this case that the occasion for performing the talab-i-mowasibat did not arise until all the conditions for a talab-i-istishhad had occurred The demand made in the Sub Registrar's Office was in itself an assertion of the right and there was, therefore, no scope for the operation of the rule that the talab-i-istishhad should refer expressly to the talab-i-mowasibat and the maxim applies that cessante ratione legis, cessat ipsa lex.

We are aware that the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Nundo Pershad v. Gopal (1), that the reference to the first talab may be omitted in the second talab, has been overruled by a Full Bench of that Court in Rujjub Ali v. Chandi Churn (2), which has been followed by the Allahabad High Court in various cases of which the latest is Mubarak Husain v. Kaniz Bano (3). But the facts in these cases were different. The talabs were performed on different occasions and the omission of a reference to

(1) 10 C. 1008.
(2) 17 C. 543.
(3) 27 A. 160; A. W. N. (1904) 201; 1 A. L. J. 569.

PARIMAL v. MAHOMEDALI.

the first talab was sought to be excused merely on the ground that the witnesses had themselves heard it. The reason was inadequate for the reference seems to be required not for the purpose of informing the witnesses but for the purpose of giving notice to the vendor or vendee that there has been no waiver of the right. The contention of defendant No. 6 is that the plaintiffs were informed by defendant No. 1 on the evening of the 3rd of the execution of the deed and that they neglected to perform the talab-i-mowasibat. Defendant No. 1 is the only witness on this point and we disbelieve him. If plaintiffs had received that information, then there was no occasion for them to have pursued the parties to Hala. We find, therefore, that the formalities of the Muhammadan Law have been observed and that the plaintiffs have established their right to pre-empt.

The property subject to the right of pre-emption is a share of 6-annas 8-pies. The other shafees were the two plaintiffs who had an 8-annas share and defendant No. 6 who had a share of 1-anna 4-pies. Plaintiffs claim that they are entitled to $\frac{2}{3}$ and not $\frac{1}{3}$ of the property that is liable to pre-emption. Defendant No. 6 contends that the two plaintiffs should be regarded as representing one share. We follow the rule, deduced from an examination of the original authorities in Amir Hasan v. Rahim Baksh (4), that all persons having equal right of pre-emption are entitled under Muhammadan law to divide the property equally per capita. Plaintiffs are, therefore, entitled to pre-empt as to $\frac{2}{3}$ of 6-annas 8-pies on payment of $\frac{2}{3}$ of Rs. 6,500.

This finding, however, proceeds on the assumption that the award and decree of 1898 operated as a sale. The plaintiffs contend that it was in reality a mortgage and that, therefore, the whole 8-annas share is subject to pre-emption. The plaintiffs were not allowed to lead evidence on this point in the lower Court on the ground that the decree could not be impugned by a third party having no interest in the transaction. Now, it is quite true that in the case of an assignment of a debt, it is not open to the debtor to impeach the assignment on the ground of want of consideration for that is a matter entirely between the assignor and the assignee. But when the assignment is impeached on the ground that it is colourable and has the effect of defeating the rights of third parties, different considerations apply. Here the provisions of section 92, Indian Evidence Act, are no bar to the production of oral evidence by such third parties and, moreover, the assignment can be assailed on the ground of fraud for, as Lord Hardwicke said in Chesterfield v. Janssen (5): "Particular persons in contracts shall not only transact bona fide between themselves, but shall not transact mala fide in respect of other persons who stand in such a relation to either as to be affected by the contract or the consequences of it." In such a case, though in England third parties except creditors may not challenge the transaction if it is by deed, yet in this country it is always open to third parties to show the real nature of the transaction —and this is the rule recognized in Mulji v. Nathubhai (6). It makes no difference that the transaction was merged in a decree for decrees only bind the parties thereto or persons claiming under such parties and fraud, it has been said, is an extrinsic and collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of Justice.

We, therefore, frame the following issue:—

(1) Was the transaction represented by the decree of 1898 in reality a mortgage?

and refer it for trial to the lower Court. Both parties to be at liberty to adduce evidence. Finding and evidence to be returned to this Court in two months.

On this judgment being read out, Mr. Gopaldas says that he does not wish to raise the issue as to the decree of 1898 being really a mortgage.

We, therefore, vary the decree of the lower Court and decree that plaintiffs do recover possession of a share of $\frac{2}{3}$ by 6-annas 8-pies in the property in suit on payment of $\frac{2}{3}$ of Rs. 6,500 to the 6th defendant—payment to be made within one month. Appellants to pay proportionate costs in both Courts.

Decree varied.

(4) 19 A. 466; A. W. N. (1897), 118.

(5) (1750) 2 Ves. 125; 1 Atk. 352.

(6) 15 B. 1.

RAJARAM RAO v. TULJARAM RAO.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 42 OF 1909.

October 21, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

T. V. RAJARAM RAO—APPELLANT

versus

T. V. TULJARAM RAO—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Compromise of subject-matter of appeal—Adjustment of 'all matters in dispute'—Oral evidence of independent agreement—Written compromise silent as to certain provisions.

Where the subject-matter of an appeal is compromised by the parties by means of a written agreemet which recited that 'all matters in dispute' were adjusted, it is not open to any of the parties to tender oral evidence of a separate agreement not comprised in the written deed of compromise on the ground that it related to a matter on which the compromise was silent.

Appeal from the decree of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Wallis in Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction in Suit No. 150 of 1906.

Mr. T. R. Venkatarama Sastri, for the Appellant.

Mr. V. Masilamani Pillai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Civil Suit No. 266 of 1886 was brought by a member of the family to which the parties belonged for partition against the other members of the family, the plaintiff, Rajaram Rao being the 3rd defendant and the present defendant, Tuljaram Rao, being the 4th defendant, in that suit. The present defendant, Tuljaram Rao, was the managing member of the family. He was held liable to account for Rs. 3,23,000 odd by the final decree passed on the original side of this Court. On appeal against the preliminary decree, he was held accountable for an additional sum of Rs. 1,40,000. The decree on the original side also declared that a half share of the Scottish Press which was purchased by Tuljaram Rao had been purchased by him on behalf of the family and that he must account to the family for a half of his drawings from the Press, which half amounted to Rs. 1,03,000 odd, so that he was accountable for a sum of Rs. 5,70,000 in all. The amount payable to the plaintiff in the present suit, who was then the 3rd defendant, amounted to over Rs. 86,000. It was also decreed that the present plaintiff and defendant were each entitled to $\frac{1}{4}$th share of certain jewels then deposited in Court by the 5th defendant in that suit. It also held that each of them was entitled to a fourth share of certain outstandings due from the Nadar family. An appeal was filed against the final decree by Tuljaram Rao, the 4th defendant therein. While the appeal was pending, the matters in dispute between all the parties were compromised. The agreements entered into between them were embodied in separate documents. The terms of the compromise differed as between them, apparently because the circumstances were different. Exhibit BB is a memorandum of agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant and it recites that "with a view to terminate the litigation that has been going on in the family for the past eleven years and more, and to make an amicable settlement of all matters in dispute between the several members of the family of the parties hereto" that agreement was entered into. Under Exhibit BB., the present plaintiff was to give up his claim for the Rs. 86,000 odd decreed to him; he was to enter up satisfaction of the decree in his favour for that amount; Tuljaram Rao was to withdraw his appeal which was then pending before the High Court and there were also certain other provisions to which it is unnecessary to refer. The plaintiff accordingly entered up satisfaction of the decree in his favour. The other parties did the same and the defendant Tuljaram Rao withdrew the appeal filed by him.

The plaintiff's case now is that, in ac 5 ion to the consideration therein set forth, 455 ram Rao further agreed to assign to him ed $\frac{1}{4}$th share of the jewels which, as we have already said, were deposited in Court by the 5th defendant and also his $\frac{1}{4}$th share of the outstandings which were recovered from the Nadar family. The plaintiff alleged that Tuljaram Rao also agreed to give him certain other properties; but, as they are not the subject-matter of the appeal, it is unnecessary to refer to them. Wallis, J., who heard the suit, decided that it was not open to the plaintiff to adduce evidence to prove this claim as the terms of the contract between the parties had been reduced to writing and the claim now put forward is opposed to those terms. The question which we have to decide is whether the learned Judge is right in taking that view.

It is contended before us that this was a separate oral agreement as to a matter on which the document is silent and that it is not consistent with its terms and, as such, it may be proved under the proviso to section 92 of the Evidence Act. This is clearly not so. Exhibit BB distinctly provided that the appeal against the decree in the civil suit was to be withdrawn, and the original decree was to regulate the right of the parties except in those cases where it was varied by the terms stated in Exhibit BB. According to that decree, Tuljaram Rao was to get his $\frac{1}{4}$th share in the properties now in dispute. There was no provision in the memorandum of agreement which varied that decree in this respect. The agreement set up, therefore, is quite inconsistent with its terms and we are of opinion, therefore, that it cannot be proved. Nor can this be treated as a case where a contract has not been reduced to writing. Exhibit BB., itself distinctly recites that the agreement was entered into to terminate the litigation that had been going on in the family for over 11 years and to make a settlement of all matters in dispute. It must be taken, therefore, that the contract has been reduced to writing and the plea advanced before the learned Judge, so far as we can judge from the evidence, was not that the contract between the parties was not reduced to writing but that this was an independent oral agreement with reference to which the contract was silent. We must, therefore, disallow this contention.

PARUMAL AILMAL v. MOTUMAL.

Another question which was argued in appeal had reference to a loan alleged to have been advanced to the defendant. According to the plaintiff, there was a loan advanced to Messrs. Graves, Cookson and Company, and there was another loan given by the plaintiff to the defendant personally on pledge of the defendant's own jewels. According to the defendant, there was only one transaction and there were not two distinct loans. Both the Commissioner and the learned Judge had disallowed the contention of the plaintiff. The Commissioner has fully discussed the evidence in the case and we see no reason to differ from his conclusion. We confirm the learned Judge's finding on this question. We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

The memorandum of objections is not pressed and we dismiss it also with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 44 OF 1911.

March 22, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

PARUMAL AILMAL—APPELLANT

versus

MOTUMAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7, cls. I, IV (d)—Suit for rent and declaration of title with injunction—Valuation—Jurisdiction.

A., as the heir of one D., brought a suit against B. and C. As against B., the relief claimed was the recovery of arrears of rent on the basis of a lease of the property in dispute by D. As against C. the relief claimed was a declaration of title and injunction as it was alleged that C. prevented B. from paying rent to A.:

Held, (1) that the suit was based on two distinct causes of action, for money and for declaration of title, with injunction;

(2) that the suit fell within clauses I and IV (d) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act;

(3) that the value for purpose of jurisdiction was the value for computation of Court fees.

Appeal against the order of the Sub-Judge, Sukkur.

Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, for the Appellants.

Mr. Parsram Tolaram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff sued to recover rents due to him by the first two defendants. The property had been leased to these defendants by the plaintiff's sister, Radhibai and plaintiff claimed to be entitled as heir of Radhibai—the other heirs having relinquished their rights in his favour. He joined as parties to this suit a brother of Radhibai and a brother of Radhibai's husband who, he said, were preventing the defendants from paying rent to him. The cause of action against the tenants was on the lease to Radhibai. The cause of action against the third and fourth defendants was on title for it was alleged that they were interfering with plaintiff's possession. There were thus two distinct causes of action (1) for money and (2) for an injunction. The second class Sub-Judge of Shikarpur refused to entertain the suit and returned the plaint for presentation to the first class Sub-Judge Sukkur. The first class Sub-Judge returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court.

This is an appeal from the order of the first class Sub-Judge.

We think the first class Sub-Judge was right. The plaint proceeds on the supposition, not clearly expressed it is true, but nevertheless clearly implied by the relief sought, that the plaintiff was in possession through his tenants. The suit, therefore, was one under clause I and clause IV (d) of section 7 of the Court Fees Act and was stamped ad valorem on each claim. Therefore, under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, the value as determinable for computation of Court Fees and the value for the purposes of jurisdiction are the same. See in this connection Vachhanni Keshabhai v. Vachhani Nanbha Bawaji (1). The value as computed for Court-fee was under Rs. 5,000 and, therefore, the 2nd class Sub-Judge had jurisdiction.

It may be that the plaintiff is not really in possession and, in that case, he will not be entitled to a decree against the 3rd and 4th defendants unless he sues for possession. It may also be that in view of the ruling Rathnasaba Pathi v. Ramasami Iyer (2), the relief by way of injunction cannot be decreed merely on a constructive possession through tenants. But these are matters which will be decided upon after the plaint is admitted. Prima facie, the 2nd class Sub-Judge has jurisdiction to try the suit in the form given to it by the plaint and it is not open to the defendants to contest the valuation which section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act enables the plaintiff to put upon the suit.

Mr. Rupchand wishes us to interfere in revision with the order of the second class Sub-Judge, but we decline to do so as no appeal has been filed against that order and, as we are not satisfied that the plaintiff has not brought his suit in its present form merely with a view to avoid paying Court-fee on the value of the property. For it is really the title to that property which is being litigated in the guise of a suit for rent.

We, therefore, confirm the order of the lower Court and dismiss this appeal. No order as to costs.

Application dismissed.

(1) 33 B. 307; 5 M. L. T. 230; 11 Bom. L. R. 30; 1 Ind. Cas. 108.

(2) 33 M. 452; 7 M. L. T. 311; 20 M. L. J. 301; 5 Ind. Cas. 630; (1910) M. W. N. 112.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1878 OF 1909.

June 29, 1911.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mookerjee, and Mr. Justice Carnduff.

MOTICHAND AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BAJRANG SAHAI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859), s. 9—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s. 69—Mortgage by co-sharer—Default in paying revenue by other co-sharers—Payment of their share by mortgagee—Suit by mortgagee for recovery of sums paid—Whether suit maintainable without specifying share of revenue payable by each co-sharer—Contribution suit, nature of—"Defaulting proprietor," meaning of—Person not proprietor paying revenue—Remedies.

A co-sharer proprietor of an estate mortgaged his share to the plaintiff. Under the terms of the mortgage contract, the Government revenue was payable by the mortgagor. The other co-sharers of the estate made default in the payment of the revenue, and the plaintiff was obliged to deposit several sums to avert the sale of the properties and save his interest. He then brought this suit for the recovery of the sums against the defaulting co-sharers:

Held, that the suit was maintainable on the principle recognised in section 9 of the Revenue Sale Law Act of 1859, and also under section 69 of the Contract Act; that the plaintiff was not bound to claim against each co-sharer the specific amount of Government revenue payable by him proportionate to his share in the estate, as the present suit was not a contribution suit.

Bholanath Chatterjee v. Inder Chand Doogur, 14 W. R. 373, Rujaput Rai v. Mahomed Ali Khan, 5 A. H. C. R. 215, Hira Chand v. Abdul, 1 A. 455 and Ibn Husain v. Ramdai, 12 A. 110, distinguished.

The nature of a contribution suit explained.

If the arrears of revenue due have been paid by a person who is not a proprietor he has a threefold remedy. If he is a party to a suit pending before a Court of Justice for possession of the estate, it is competent to the Court to put him temporarily in possession. In the second place, he is entitled to have a personal decree against the defaulting proprietors for the amount paid by him to save the estate from danger. In the third place, he is entitled to have a lien on the estate for the amount paid.

The expression "defaulting proprietor" in section 9 of the Revenue Sale Law Act of 1859 means, where there is more than one proprietor, the entire body of such proprietors.

The reasonable interpretation of section 69 of the Contract Act is that it applies only to cases in which the person who makes the payment is himself not liable to pay, but is interested in the payment of the money.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Saran, dated the 25th May 1909, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd Court of Saran, dated the 31st August, 1908.

Babu Jogendra Chandra Ghose, for the Appellants.

Babus Umakali Mukerjee and Surendra Nath Ghosal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the defendants first party in a suit for recovery of money alleged to have been paid by the plaintiff to satisfy the arrears of Government revenue in respect of an estate. The case for the plaintiff is that one Mukut Nath Prasad was interested to the extent of a third share in one of the Mouzahs by name Balapur included within the estate. On the 4th July 1874, Mukut Nath executed an usufructuary mortgage in favour of the plaintiff, and since then the plaintiff has been in possession of the properties covered by the mortgage. Under the terms of the mortgage contract, the Government revenue was payable by the mortgagor. In 1905, however, some of the proprietors of the estate made default in the payment of Government revenue, and the result was that the plaintiff was obliged to deposit several sums on various occasions to avert the sale of the properties. He now seeks to recover this sum from the defendants who are admittedly the proprietors of the estate. The suit was resisted principally by the first six defendants, who are the purchasers of the interest of the mortgagor of the plaintiff. Their defence was two-fold, namely, first, that the suit had not been properly constituted, because the plaintiff had asked for a joint decree in respect of the whole sum paid by him as against the entire body of proprietors; and secondly, that some of the payments, alleged to have been made by the plaintiff, were voluntary payments, because at the time they were made, the Government revenue had not actually fallen due

The Court of first instance held that both these objections were well founded and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff then appealed and it is not disputed that he abandoned a portion of his claim to which exception had been taken on the ground that the payments covered thereby were voluntary. The District Judge overlooked this point, and, as he came to the conclusion that the suit had been properly constituted, he made a full decree in favour of the plaintiff. The first six defendants have now appealed to this Court, and on their behalf it has been contended, first, that the frame of the suit is bad and, therefore, it ought to be dismissed; and, secondly, that if any decree is made in favour of the plaintiff, there cannot be a decree for an amount in excess of the value of the appeal presented to the District Judge. A subsidiary point has also been raised that the District Judge ought not to have allowed interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

In so far as the first ground urged on behalf of the appellants is concerned, it has been contended that the suit is in the nature of a contribution suit and the plaintiff is, therefore, bound to claim against each proprietor the specific amount of Government revenue payable by him proportionate to his share in the estate. In support of this proposition, reliance has been placed upon the cases of Poornochunder Gangooly v Kishen Chunder Ghose (1) and Gunga Gobind Mundul v. Ashootosh Dhur (2). In our opinion, the cases mentioned are clearly distinguishable and do not assist the appellants. It may be conceded, as laid down in the cases of Bholanath Chatterjee v. Inder Chand Doogur (3), Rujaput Rai v. Mahomed Ali Khan (4), Hira Chand v. Abdal (5) and Ibn Husain v. Ramdai (6), that a claim for contribution must distinctly set forth the amount due by each of the parties. That principle, however, has no application to the case before us, because the suit is not one for contribution within the meaning of this Rule. In a suit for contribution, the plaintiff alleges that he and the defendants were jointly liable to meet a specified demand, that he has been obliged to satisfy the demand by a payment in excess of his legitimate share, and that, consequently, he is entitled to call upon his co-sharers to contribute to the payment of this money. In a case of this description, the foundation of the claim of the plaintiff is that he has made a payment in excess of what is payable by him propor-

(1) 5 W. R. 112.
(2) 21 W. R. 255.
(3) 14 W. R. 373.
(4) 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 215.
(5) 1 A. 455.
(6) 12 A. 110; A. W. N. (1890), 31.

tionate to his liability; consequently, his share of the liability must, in the first instance, be ascertained. If there is an ascertainment of his share, there is no reason why the shares of the other persons should not equally be ascertained in the same litigation. If this principle were not followed, the result would be that the plaintiff would have a decree to be satisfied jointly by all the defendants; and each of the latter would be entitled to bring successive suits for contribution after the demand of the plaintiff has been satisfied. To prevent multiplicity of litigation, it is thus obviously desirable that in a suit of this description, the plaintiff should get a decree for an ascertained sum against each of the persons originally liable to satisfy the joint demand. In the case before us, the position is entirely different. The plaintiff asserts that under the terms of the mortgage contract he was not liable to pay any share of the Government revenue. He has, however, been compelled, by reason of the default made by one or more of the entire body of proprietors, to satisfy the demand of the Government. If he had not done so, the estate would have been sold, and not merely the interest of the proprietors but his own interest as mortgagee would have been completely destroyed. Under these circumstances he seeks to recover what he has paid from the entire body of proprietors. In our opinion, he is obviously entitled to do so on the principle recognized in section 9 of Act XI of 1859. That section deals with deposit by persons not proprietors. The Legislature has provided that if the arrears of revenue due have been paid by a person who is not a proprietor, he may have a three-fold remedy. If he is a party to a suit pending before a Court of Justice for possession of the estate, it is competent to the Court to put him temporarily in possession. In the second place, he is entitled to have a personal decree against the defaulting proprietors for the amount paid by him to save the estate from danger. In the third place, he is entitled also to have a lien on the estate for the amount paid. It was pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Nugender Chunder Ghose v. Sreemutty Kaminee Dossee (7), that it is open to a person, who has made such a payment, to obtain a personal decree against the defaulting proprietor; and it was pointed out by this Court, in the cases of Upendra Chandra Mitter v. Tara Prosanna Mukerjee (8) and Rakhohir Chattaraj v. Bipra Das Dey (9), that a person in this position is entitled to add the sum so deposited to his mortgage security. In the case before us, the plaintiff seeks a personal remedy against the defaulting proprietors. In answer to this claim, it has been argued that the defaulting proprietors are not all jointly and severally liable for the entire sum paid by the plaintiff, because, it is asserted, some of them deposited what they thought was proportionate to their share of the entire Government revenue. In our opinion, the answer suggested is obviously fallacious. In so far as the Revenue Authorities were concerned, as no separate accounts had been opened, the Collector was not bound to recognise any partial payment made by a co-sharer. If the entire demand was not satisfied, the estate was liable to be sold under the provisions of Act XI of 1859. Consequently, if one or more of the proprietors made a partial payment, they did not cease to be defaulting porprietors, because they were the component members of an entire body from whom the whole sum was legally recoverable. We are of opinion that the expression "defaulting proprietor" in section 9 of Act XI of 1859 means, where there is more than one proprietor, the entire body of such proprietors. It is clear, therefore, that under section 9 of Act XI of 1859, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed. We may add that the plaintiff is also entitled to succeed under section 69 of the Indian Contract Act. That section provides that a person, who is interested in the payment of money which another is bound by law to pay, and who, therefore, pays it, is entitled to be reimbursed by the other. The reasonable interpretation of this section is that it applies only to cases in which the person who makes the payment is himself not liable to make the payment. In the case before us, as already explained, the plaintiff was not bound to pay any portion of the Government revenue; the defendants, on the other hand, were so liable. The plaintiff was also interested in the payment of this money, because if the money was not paid, his interest as mortgagee was liable to be extinguished by the sale. He has accordingly made the payment. He is, therefore, entitled to be reimbursed by the others, that is, by the whole body of proprietors who were bound by law to pay the entire sum of the Government revenue. It is clear, therefore, that, from whatever point of view the case may be considered, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree as against all the proprietors. The suit, therefore, has been properly constituted.

(7) 11 M. I. A. 241; 8 W. R. (P. C.) 17.

(8) 30 C. 794; 7 C. W. N. 609.

(9) 31 C. 975.

In so far as the second contention of the appellant is concerned, it has been conceded by the learned Vakil for the respondent that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree only for the sum at which he valued his appeal to the District Judge. In fact, the point appears to have been overlooked by the Court below, and if the attention of the learned District Judge had been drawn to the matter, the error would have been avoided. The decree, therefore, will be varied.

In so far as the subsidiary point as to interest is concerned, there is no substance in it. No objection appears to have been taken at any stage of the suit that the amount claimed as interest was excessive. We see no reason, therefore, to allow interest at a rate lower than 12 per cent.

The result is that, subject to the variation in the amount of the decree, it will be affirmed. As the appeal has substantially failed, the appellants must pay the respondents their costs in this Court.

Appeal dismissed: Decree varied.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 111 OF 1911.

October 4, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

THUPPATI VEERI CHETTI AND OTHERS —APPELLANTS

versus

MOLUGUVAM RENGANAYAKULU AIYAR AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Accounts—Mutual, open and current accounts, test for determining—Limitation.

The test for determining whether accounts are mutual, open and current, is whether there were mutual demands and not mere payment by one party to the other on account of a debt due by the former to the latter. The fact that balances were constantly shifting, sometimes in favour of one party and sometimes in that of the other, affords no real test of mutuality, though this would be an important matter in considering whether there were mutual demands.

Shiv Gowda v. Fernandez, 34 M. 513; 8 M. L. T. 412; 8 Ind. Cas. 141; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 1; 21 M. L. J. 391 and Velu Pellai v. Ghose Mahomed, 17 M. 293; 4 M. L. J. 140, referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of Salem in A. S. No. 283 of 1907, preferred against that of the Principal District Munsif of Salem, in O. S. No. 67 of 1906.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Aiyar, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. Varadachariar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is by the defendants and the question argued is, that the suit is barred by limitation as there were no mutual, open and current accounts between the parties. The District Munsif and the District Judge both held that there were such accounts between them. The District Munsif proceeds mainly on the ground that the accounts showed that the balances were constantly shifting, sometimes in favour of one party and sometimes in that of the other. This is not the real test to be applied in deciding whether the accounts are mutual, open and current. The test is whether there were mutual demands and not mere payment by one party to the other on account of a debt due by the former to the latter. See Shiv Gowda v. Fernandaz (1) and Velu Pillai v. Ghose Mahomed (2). The fact that the balance was shifting between the parties would, no doubt, be an important matter in considering whether there were mutual demands. As the lower Courts seem to have proceeded on the footing that it would be sufficient if the balance was a shifting one, we cannot accept the finding that the accounts between the parties were mutual, open and current accounts. The question must be decided by applying the test we have already mentioned. We reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and remand the appeal for fresh disposal according to law. Costs will abide the result.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 34 M. 513; 8 M.L.T. 412; 8 Ind. Cas. 141; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 1; 21 M. L. J. 391.

(2) 17 M. 293; 4 M. L. J. 140.

EMPEROR v. CHANDA SINGH.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 219 OF 1912.

October 23, 1912.

Present:—Sir Arthur Reid, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Rattigan.

EMPEROR—APPELLANT

versus

CHANDA SINGH AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 417, 423 (a)—Riot case—Duty of Police to ascertain guilty party—Duty of Court —Re-trial of appeal, power of High Court to direct.

It is not the duty of the Police to determine in a riot case "which of two mutually destructive stories is the correct one." The Police are not called upon, nor is it within their province, to determine in a case of this kind which of the two parties concerned was in the wrong. It is for the Courts to determine upon the evidence on the record which of the two parties has been guilty of the offence charged against them, and none-the-less so because the record is lengthy and the case complicated and difficult.

The fact that a Sessions Judge obviously failed to apply his mind to the determination of questions before him, and declined to adjudicate therein himself, because the Police did not attempt to adjudicate as to the guilt or innocence of persons implicated, is an indication of a complete misconception of the respective duties of the Courts and the Police, and the High Court will in such a case, under the wide powers conferred upon it by section 423 (a) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, direct a lower Appellate Court to re-try an appeal which was before it for determination.

Queen-Empress v. Ganesh Khanderao, 13 B. 506, referred to.

Appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge, Amritsar Division, dated the 10th October 1911, reversing that of the Magistrate, 1st Class, Gurdaspur, dated the 29th August 1911, and acquitting the respondents.

Mr. Bevan Petman, Government Advocate, for the Appellant.

Lala Hukam Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This, and the connected case (Criminal Appeal No. 220 of 1912) are two appeals by the Local Government, under section 417 of the Criminal Procedure Code, from the orders of the Officiating Sessions Judge of Amritsar, dated the 10th October 1911, acquitting certain persons, who had been convicted by the Magistrate, 1st class, Gurdaspur, of various offences.

For obvious reasons, we have no desire, in view of the action which we have decided to take upon these appeals, to give expression to any opinion regarding the facts, but in order to explain matters, we may briefly summarise the findings of the Magistrate.

These were as follows:—On the 14th May 1911, a dispute arose between one Tahl Singh and his brother Ganda Singh, on the one side, and one Chet Singh, on the other side, regarding the construction of a water channel. Lachhman Singh, son of Hardit Singh, and his brothers, (Khushal Singh, Sangat Singh and Ganda Singh), happened to be present, and though not interested in the dispute, took sides with Tahl Singh, with the result that Lachhman Singh received injuries amounting to grievous hurt. For this offence, certain members of the opposite side (Ganda Singh, son of Sundar Singh; Mahan Singh; Amohal Singh; Ishar Singh; and Surain Singh) were charged under section 325, Indian Penal Code. Mahan Singh was discharged and Ganda Singh was acquitted by the Magistrate, who, however, found Ishar Singh, Amohal Singh and Surain Singh guilty and sentenced them, each to one year's rigorous imprisonment and to a fine of Rs. 40. On the following day (the 15th May), a riot took place in which the persons concerned were Lachman Singh and his supporters on the one side, and Fauja Singh and his supporters on the other side. In the course of this riot, one man, Sawan Singh, was killed and three persons, Tahl Singh, Narain Singh and Sundar Singh, suffered injuries amounting to grievous hurt, while Fauja Singh, Asa Singh, Lachhman Singh No. 2, (a different person from the Lachhman Singh previously referred to), Suchet Singh and Surain Singh received injuries amounting to simple hurt. Of all these nine persons, eight were members of the party of Fauja Singh, and one only (Surain Singh) belonged to the party of Lachman Singh No. 1.

The Police sent up both parties for trial, as also the persons alleged to have inflicted grievous hurt on Lachman Singh No. 1 on the 14th May.

The Magistrate in a somewhat lengthy judgment, which dealt with all these cases, found (as already stated) that three persons, (Ishar Singh, Amohal Singh and Surain Singh), were guilty of the offence of having caused grievous hurt to Lachman Singh No. 1 on the 14th May, and that in respect of the riot which occurred on the 15th May, the eleven persons of Lachman Singh No 1's party, who were charged with offences under sections 304, 325 and 148, Indian Penal Code, were guilty of offences under sections 325 and 148. Of these persons, all but Lachman Singh No. 1, were sentenced, each to three years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100, Lachman Singh No. 1, in view of the fact that owing to the injuries received by him on the previous day, he could not have taken a very active part in the affray being sentenced merely to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 25. All the 19 persons belonging to Fauja Singh's party were discharged.

From this order of the Magistrate, two appeals were preferred to the Sessions Judge (1) by the three persons who had been convicted of causing grievous hurt to Lachman Singh No. 1 on the 14th May, and (2) by the eleven members of Lachman Singh No. 1's party who had been convicted under sections 325 and 148, Indian Penal Code, for offences committed on the 15th May.

The learned Sessions Judge disposed of both appeals in one judgment. He has made no attempt to discuss the facts and has acquitted the appellants in both cases on the ground that "owing to the extraordinary inadequacy of the Police inquiry," the occurrences of the 15th May "are wrapped in mystery, that it is now impenetrable owing to the failure to make any attempt to ascertain which of the diametrically opposed stories regarding that day was the true one," and that it is "impossible to say anything at all with regard to the common intention of the parties in respect of the various acts done by them on the two days in question." He further adds that the "Police investigation in fact has been so unsatisfactory that it is now quite impossible for the Court to determine with sufficient certainty, to justify a conviction what did, and what did not occur, on the two days in question."

It is from this order of the Sessions Judge that the present appeals have been preferred by the Local Government.

In our opinion, these appeals must be accepted. We are unable to accept the view of the Sessions Judge that in cases of this kind, it is the duty of the Police Authorities to ascertain "which of two mutually destructive stories is the correct one." The Police are not called upon, nor is it within their province, to determine, in the case of a riot, which of the two parties concerned was in the wrong, and in sending both parties up for trial, the Police in the present case acted with propriety and in accordance with well recognized rules of practice in such affairs. It is for the Courts to determine, upon the evidence on the record, which of the two parties has been guilty of the offence charged against them, and none-the-less so because the record is lengthy and the case complicated and difficult. In the present case, we regret to say that the learned Sessions Judge has obviously failed to apply his mind to the determination of the questions before him. He has taken exception to the action of the Police and because the Police have not attempted to adjudicate as to the guilt or innocence of the persons implicated, he has declined to adjudicate therein himself. This is an entirely indefensible position for a judicial officer to take, and it indicates a complete misconception of the respective duties of the Courts and the Police in cases of this kind.

As a result of the Sessions Judge's action, the appeals before him have not been decided, as they should have been, on the merits, and the only course open to us is to accept those appeals and to return the record to the Court of the Sessions Judge, Amritsar, for re-trial of the appeals before him in accordance with law.

We do not feel called upon ourselves to determine those appeals and thereby to relieve the Sessions Judge of the duty imposed upon him by law. Under the wide powers conferred upon this Court by section 423 (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code, we are authorised to direct a lower Appellate Court to re-try an appeal which was before it for determination. [See Queen-Empress v. Ganesh Khanderao (1) and cases there cited]. We accordingly accept these appeals and reversing the orders of the Sessions Judge, we direct that the record be sent to the Sessions Judge, Amritsar, for the determination of the appeal before him in accordance with law.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 13 B. 506.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 10 OF 1912.

September 3, 1912

Present:—Mr. Justice Ayling and Mr. Justice Napier.

In re ADABALA MUTHIYALU—ACCUSED.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 397, 326—Robbery—Robbery not proved—Conviction for grievous hurt under section 326.

A Jury, in a Sessions case is competent, where a charge under section 397, Indian Penal Code, is not established, to convict the accused of an offence under section 326, Indian Penal Code, where the facts proved establish the commission of that offence.

Queen-Empress v. Anga Valayan, 22 M. 15; King-Emperor v. Krishna Ayyar, 24 M. 641 and the opinion of Bashyam Iyengar, J. in Pattikadan Ummaru v. Emperor, 26 M. 243, referred to.

Reference under section 307, Criminal Procedure Code, by the Sessions Judge of Godaveri, in Case No. 33 of the Calender for 1912.

FACTS,—The facts are sufficiently clear from the following charge of the Sessions Judge to the Jury:—

GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY,

The accused is charged, under section 397 of the Indian Penal Code, with having committed robbery of a kuttikantu and at the time of the committing of the said robbery with having used a knife and voluntarily caused grievous hurt to Mandapati Seshamma, the 1st witness for the prosecution. Seshamma was, at about lamp-lighting time on the 30th April last, going to a Komati's shop to buy soap-nuts. The shop was at a distance of about 70 or 80 yards from her house. Between the shop and her house, there were only two vacant houses. As she was going along the punta, was the accused rushed at her from the vacant house which was nearer to Seshamm's house and snapped the kuttikantu she was wearing on her neck. Seshamma held the kuttikantu fast in her hand and did not let it go. The accused then cut her at her neck with a knife and also stabbed her at the abdomen. She received an injury on the left thumb when she was holding the kuttikantu with her left hand. Seshamma fell down. The kuttikantu was not lost; but two gold beads and one five franc piece out of it, were found missing. She could not say whether the accused had taken away the gold beads and the five franc piece or whether they were lost in the scuffle. Pullayya, her brother, the 3rd witness, searched for the missing beads and the five franc piece near the spot but could not find them out. As soon as Seshamma was cut by the accused, she cried out according to her, "Adabala Mutyalu is cutting me away." The 3rd witness Pullayya, the brother of Seshamma, who had just then returned home from his field, heard the cry of his sister. He says the cry he heard was "Ammo Babo, he is stabbing me". He at once ran to the spot. When he was at a short distance from it, he saw the accused running away. Finding that his sister was lying on the ground with bleeding wounds, he did not run after the accused, but went to the help of his sister. Reddeyya, the Village Naick, who was following the Kernam and the Revenue Inspector, when they were going home after their field measurement, also heard the cry of some one. He at once ran to the spot. He found a person lying on the ground and another running away. He gave chase to the latter, but the man ran southwards towards the sea and disappeared. Returning to the very spot, he found that the person that had been lying there was not there. He heard some noise at Seshamma's house, and, going there, found Seshamma covered with injuries. Thence he went to the Kernam and reported the matter to him. Taking leave of him, he went home. The Village Munsif sent word to him to fetch the report books and, with the Village Munsif, the 6th witness again went to Seshamma's house. The 4th witness Reddeyya, the Village Naick, was not able to identify the accused or the person hurt. The husband of Seshamma, the 5th witness, was at his master's field. Word was sent to him that his wife had been cut. He returned home and questioned Seshamma as to her injuries. She is said to have narrated the same story. At the spot itself, Pullayya, the brother of Seshamma, had questioned her. She narrated the same story. Carrying her home and leaving her there, Pullayya went to the Village Munsif and reported the occurrence to him. The Village Munsif came to Seshamma's house and found the injuries upon her person. He sent her to the hospital at Rajole for treatment. He, at about 10 P. M., also despatched his report Exhibit B to the Magistrate, which corroborates the evidence of Seshamma.

2. The chief witness in the case is

In re ADABALA MUTHIYALU.

Seshamma herself. She had known the accused before and she distinctly says that she identified the accused as the person that had snapped the kuttikantu and cut her with a knife. The 3rd witness Pullayya had also known the accused. He, too, states that he saw the accused run away from the spot as soon as he went to her assistance. The 4th witness Reddayya's evidence will corroborate the other two witnesses' evidence Nos. 1 and 3. The Village Munsif, 6th witness, soon after the occurence sent his report, Exhibit B, to the Magistrate. In the report, these facts are set out. The distance from this Village to Rajole is about eight miles and the report reached the Magistrate, you will find from the endorsement on it, at about 3 A. M. Seshamma was taken to the hospital at 2-45 A. M. The medical witness, the 2nd witness, the Sub-Assistant Surgeon, examined her injuries and gave the certificate Exhibit A. There were three incised wounds, one at the neck, one at the abdomen and the other on the left thumb. The wound on the abdomen was an incised and penetrating one such as to endanger life. It was a serious wound. Seshamma was at the hospital for 21 days as an in-patient. On the 21st May afternoon, she left the hospital and did not return for treatment. At the time she left the hospital, the wound at the abdomen was not completely healed. During the 21 days she was at the hospital, according to the medical witness, she was unable to follow her ordinary pursuits of life.

3. The accused denies his guilt. He says he was not in the village at all on the night of the occurrence. He does not cite any witnesses.

4. Now, the principal question for your consideration would be, whether the evidence of these witnesses for the prosecution, namely witnesses Nos. 1, 3, 4 and 6, should be believed. There was nothing elicited in the cross-examination of these witnesses or mentioned in the statement of the accused, to show that these witnesses were not giving true evidence. The fact that Seshamma had received the injuries that night is clear from the evidence of these witnesses and also from the evidence of the Sub-Assistant Surgeon. Who had caused the injuries is the question for your consideration. You may take it that the occurrence took place between 7 and 8 P. M. that night. It was a moonlight night The accused had been known to Seshamma and her brother Pullayya. Seshamma had every opportunity of identifying the man when he caused the wounds. She says he was the accused himself. If any other had caused the injuries, there was no reason why she should foist the crime upon the accused and not upon the real offender. So, if you believe the evidence of the prosecution witnesses, you may take it that he snapped the kuttikantu and also caused these injuries to Seshamma.

5. Now, I shall briefly explain to you the law as far as it bears upon this case. You will remember that the accused was charged with robbery and, at the time of the committing of the said robbery, with having caused grievous hurt to Seshamma. The two offences embodied in this charge are robbery and voluntarily causing grievous hurt at the time of committing the robbery.

6. First, I shall explain to you what the charge of voluntarily causing grievous hurt is. Whenever any bodily pain is caused to any person, hurt is caused. It becomes grievous hurt when the hurt endangers life. Also, any hurt which causes the sufferer to be during the space of 20 days unable to follow the ordinary pursuits is grievous hurt. In this connection, you will remember that the medical evidence was to the effect that the injury at the abdomen was such as to endanger life. If that portion of the evidence alone is relied on, the hurt caused at the abdomen will be grievous hurt. Further, the medical witness has stated that, during the space of 21 days, Seshamma could not have followed her ordinary pursuits. Taking that portion of the evidence even, it would follow that the hurt caused to Seshamma was grievous.

7. Now, I shall explain to you the charge of robbery. Whoever, intending to take dishonestly any moveable property out of the possession of any person without that person's consent, moves that property in order to such taking is said to commit theft. Mere motion of the property in order to take it dishonestly from the possession of another would be sufficient to constitute the offence of theft. In other words, it is not necessary that the property, or any portion of it, should have been actually lost. It need not be carried away by the offender. If, in this case, Seshamma's evidence is believed, the accused snapped her kuttikantu. Apparently, if he had done so, his intention would have been dishonest. If he had snapped it, as deposed to by Seshamma, theft would be committed even though the property was not lost.

In re ADABALA MUTHIYALU.

8. Theft becomes robbery, if in order to the committing of the theft, or in committing the theft or in carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by the theft, the offender, for that end, voluntarily causes hurt to any person. In the present case, Seshamma has deposed that as she did not leave hold of her kuttikantu she was stabbed by the accused. If her evidence is believed, it would follow that the hurt was caused in order to the committing of the theft or in committing the theft and the act would amount to robbery.

9. Then, if, at the time of committing robbery, the offender uses any deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person, the act would fall under section 397. The charge against the accused is under section 397 of the Indian Penal Code. Section 397 is, as I have told you, a combination of offences, robbery and voluntarily causing grievous hurt. If, in the circumstances, it happens that you do not believe that any robbery was committed, but if you believe that the accused had voluntarily caused grievous hurt with a knife, then it would be open to you to find him guilty under section 326, Indian Penal Code, alone.

10. Thus, taking all the circumstances of the case into consideration as disclosed by the evidence for the prosecution and regarding also the statement of the accused, you will give your verdict. If there is any reasonable doubt in the case, the accused is entitled to the benefit of it and your verdict should lean towards acquittal.

11. One fact, I had forgotten to bring to your notice and I wish you will take that also into consideration in arriving at your verdict. The kuttikantu or the portion of it that remained was not taken possession of by the Police nor has it been produced before this Court. Seshamma states that she has it at her house and that she has not been using it since the occurrence in consequence of her wound at the neck. You will please take this circumstance also into your consideration in arriving at your verdict.

VERDICT OF THE JURY:—

Unanimous. Not guilty.

ORDER.—The Jury have unanimously found the accused not guilty of any offence. I am unable to agree with the verdict. I should find the accused guilty of voluntarily causing grievous hurt by means of a knife, an offence falling under section 326, Indian Penal Code, though I would give him the benefit of a reasonable doubt as regards the robbery. I am clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court. I shall accordingly do so."

Mr. L. A. Govindaragava Iyer, Acting Public Prosecutor, in support of the Reference.

JUDGMENT.—The Judge has referred the case under section 307, Criminal Procedure Code, on the ground that the evidence establishes an offence under section 326, Indian Penal Code.

On a consideration of the evidence and giving due weight to his opinions and that of the Jury, we think that is so.

According to the view taken by this Court in Queen-Empress v. Anga Valayan (1) and King-Emperor v. Krishna Ayyar (2), it would have been open to the Jury in this case to have convicted the accused of an offence under section 326, Indian Penal Code, and the same view was taken by Bashyam Iyengar, J., in Pattikadan Ummaru v. Emperor (3), though Benson, J., was of a different opinion. We follow these decisions and deem ourselves empowered under section 307, Criminal Procedure Code, to convict the accused of an offence under section 326, Indian Penal Code, which we accordingly do and sentence him to five years' rigorous imprisonment. The stab in the abdomen was a very serious wound which might have ended fatally.

(1) 22 M. 15.
(2) 24 M. 641.
(3) 26 M. 243.

WADHAWA SINGH v. EMPEROR.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.
CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 744 OF 1911.
April 9, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Chevis.
WADHAWA SINGH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—APPELLANTS
versus
EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 403(4), 213—Trial of several accused by Magistrate first class—Some acquitted, others convicted—Appeal by convicts to Sessions Judge—Power of Sessions Judge to direct commitment of acquitted persons for murder on same facts—Commitment under direction—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 148, 149, 302, 304, part 2, 325, 326—Unlawful assembly—Object—Death of one person by injuries caused—Murder—Death by rash act.

Certain persons were tried by a Magistrate, 1st class, for offences under sections 325, 326, 148, Penal Code. They were all convicted of the offences except A. and B., who were acquitted. On appeal by the convicts, the Sessions Judge quashed the convictions and directed that all accused persons, including A. and B., be committed for trial to the Court of Session as the offence committed was prima facie one of murder. In pursuance of that order, the accused were committed to the Court of Session and convicted of an offence under section 302:—

Held, (1) that the subsequent trial of A. and B. for the offence of murder was justified under section 403 (4), Criminal Procedure Code;

(2) that the order of the Sessions Judge directing their trial was legal;

(3) that the commitment of A. and B. to the Court of Session was valid.

Emperor v. Zuji Manu Dibrit, 5 Bom. L. R. 125, relied upon.

Baijanath Pandey v. Gauri Kanta Mandal, 20 C. 633, distinguished.

Certain persons who were reaping their crops were assaulted by the accused with sharp edged weapons and heavy sticks, the object being to prevent the latter by force from carrying away the produce.

As the result of the injuries inflicted on the attacked party, one of them died. It was not proved that the intention of the accused was to cause the death of any person or to inflict such bodily injuries as were likely to result in death:

Held, (a) that the accused constituted an unlawful assembly;

(b) that the offence of causing fatal injury was such as the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object;

(c) that each of the accused was, therefore, guilty of an offence under section 304, part 2, read with section 149, Indian Penal Code;

(d) that none of the accused was guilty of an offence under section 302.

Appeal from the order of the Sessions Judge, Lahore Division, dated the 7th November 1911.

Mr. Beschey, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bevan-Petman, Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is connected with Criminal Appeals Nos. 17 to 22 of 1912, and they can all be conveniently disposed of together.

The 15 appellants in the seven appeals have been convicted by the Sessions Judge of Lahore, of the offence of murder under section 302, read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, and they have all been sentenced to transportation for life. Hakim Singh, son of Sher Singh, who was also tried and convicted along with these appellants, has since died in Jail.

The facts of the case are fully given in the judgment of the Sessions Judge, and it is not necessary to recapitulate them here at length. In the year 1903, Hakim Singh, deceased, and Wadhawa Singh, appellant, mortgaged a plot of land situate in the village of Sandra to one Uttam Singh, but they retained possession of the land as tenants under the mortgagee. A dispute arose between the parties owing to non-payment of rent, and Uttam Singh was obliged to bring a civil suit for possession of the land against the mortgagors, and in due course, he obtained a decree, in execution of which he got possession on the 2nd October 1909. On the 3rd October, Uttam Singh gave a lease of the land to Kakku Arain of the adjoining village of Makhi Khurd, as no resident of Mauza Sandra was willing to take the land on lease for fear of incurring the displeasure of Hakim Singh and Wadhawa Singh who had a large and influential following in village Sandra. Kakku appears to have taken actual possession of the land and to have cultivated it for two or three harvests. Hakim Singh and Wadhawa Singh naturally resented the intrusion of Kakku into their village, and they resolved upon disputing his possession and interfering with his peaceful enjoyment of the produce of the land. On the afternoon of the 23rd October 1910, while Kakku, with his four sons and a nephew, was cutting and collecting jowar ears, Hakim Singh and Wadhawa Singh, accompanied by a large number of their relations and friends, altogether 15 in number, came to the field, armed with chhavis, choppers, and dangs and attacked Kakku and his party, and after having beaten them severely and causing more or less serious injuries to all of them, they collected the jowar in the chadars belonging to the Arains and made off to their homes. Mahni, a fifth son of Kakku, who was at that time in Mauza Makhi Khurd, was informed of the attack on his father and brothers by one Bhagtu, potter. Mahni came to the spot, accompanied by some fellow villagers, and took back the wounded persons on beds and ponies to his home. The night was spent in attending to the injuries of the wounded, and the next morning Mahni went to the lambardar to ask for help. The lambardar, who was anxious not to displease his fellow Jats—the attacking party—refused to accompany him to the thana, whereupon Mahni himself went off to make the report, reaching the thana at 11 A. M. In the report which he made there, he mentioned the names of seven persons out of those who had attacked his father and brothers, adding at the same time that he had forgotten the names of the rest, and that full details would be given later by the wounded persons themselves. The latter were in due course taken off to the hospital and all of them recovered from their injuries except Kakku, an old man of 60, who died in hospital on the afternoon of the 31st October.

WADHAWA SINGH v. EMPEROR.

The case was challaned by the Police under sections 325, 326 and 148, Indian Penal Code, there being at that time altogether 15 accused persons, including the deceased Hakim Singh. Atar Singh alias Dhannu was then absconding. The Magistrate, Lala Labhu Ram, who decided the case, acquitted Jowala Singh and Buta Singh and convicted the rest, some under sections 326 and 148, Indian Penal Code, and others under sections 325 and 148, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced them to various terms of imprisonment. This was on the 31st January 1911. On an appeal being preferred by the convicts to the Court of Session, the learned Sessions Judge by order, dated 19th May 1911, quashed the convictions and directed under section 423 (1) (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code that all accused persons, including Buta and Jowala who had been acquitted by the Magistrate, be committed for trial by the Court of Session. As regards the last named accused, action was taken by the learned Judge under section 403 (4), Criminal Procedure Code, and commitment was ordered on the ground that the offence committed by them was prima facie one of murder and that the Magistrate who had tried them, was not competent to try that offence. In pursuance of the order of the Sessions Judge, the appellants now before us were committed by another Magistrate, Sardar Sohan Singh, to the Court of Session to stand their trial for an offence under section 302, Indian Penal Code, and as a result, they have all been convicted of that offence and sentenced to transporation for life.

The first contention advanced by Mr. Beechey, who appeared for the appellants in this appeal (No. 744), was that the order of the Sessions Judge directing the commitment of Buta and Jowala Singh, appellants, who had been acquitted by the Magistrate Lala Labhu Ram, was illegal, and that the subsequent trial of these appellants in the Court of Session was one held without jurisdiction. We do not see our way to accept this contention. In our opinion, the subsequent trial of Buta and Jowala Singh for the offence of murder was justified under sub-section (4) of section 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code, notwithstanding the fact that they had been acquitted by the Magistrate of offences under sections 325, 326 and 148, Indian Penal Code, inasmuch as, although the subsequent offence with which they were charged was constituted by the same acts which, according to the Magistrate's finding, constituted the offences of which they had been acquitted by him, the Magistrate was not competent to try the offence of murder with which they were subsequently charged. The trial of these persons in the Court of Session took place after a valid order of commitment made under section 213, Criminal Procedure Code, and the said order was none-the-less valid because it was made in pursuance of a direction given by the Sessoins Judge. We are fortified, in our opinion, by a decision of the Bombay High Court reported as Emperor v. Zuii Manu Dibri (1), which is a case very similar to the present one. The ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Baijanath Pandey v. Gauri Kanta Mandal (2), which was relied upon by Mr. Beechey, has reference to section 436, Criminal Procedure Code, which relates to the power of a Sessions Judge to order commitment of an accused person in a case in which he has been improperly discharged by an inferior Court. It has no bearing on the point before us in this case, which is one covered by section 403 (4) of the Code, as the order by the Magistrate which we are considering was one of acquittal and not one of discharge. We accordingly hold that the trial of Buta and Jowala Singh in the Court of Session was one held with jurisdiction, and we overrule the first contention urged by Mr. Beechey.

(1) 5 Bom. L. R. 125.
(2) 20 C. 633.

On the merits, the case does not present many difficulties, the witnesses for the prosecution who have deposed to the assault by the appellants on Kakku and his party on the afternoon of the 23rd October 1910 fall into two groups:—

(1) The four sons of Kakku, namely, Jamna, Bhaga, Jamal and Shahab Din, and Kakku's nephew, Dina, and

(2) five persons who were present at the time of the assault in a neighbouring field and who are referred to in the judgment of the Sessions Judge as the Mahant's party. They are Mahant Mukand Das, his chela Sewa Das, a Brahmin, named Jiwan Ram, and two Kammis named Nabi Bakhsh and Ghoga, Telis.

The first set of prosecution witnesses give full details of the attack by the appellants upon themselves and upon Kakku, and, taken together, they identify all the appellants.

It was urged by Mr. Beechey that since in the first report the names of only seven appellants were mentioned by Mahni, those of the appellants, who were not named in the report, ought not to have been convicted. But Mahni was not an eye-witness of the occurrence, nor, it seems, was he personally acquainted with all the appellants. The names of the assailants were given to him by his father and brothers, and it is not to be wondered at that in his confused state of mind, and owing to the mental anxiety he was in, he should have forgotten the names of some of them; in fact, in the report he distinctly stated that he did not remember the names of some of the persons who had taken part in the assault and that full details would be given later by his father and brothers. As soon as the Police came to the spot for investigation, they examined Kakku and his sons, and the names of all the appellants were then mentioned to the Police and all the details of the assault were given. Exhibit P 7, which is a statement made by Kakku, deceased, to Amir Ali, Inspector of Police, on the 26th October, contains the names of all the appellants, and, in our opinion, the omission of the names of some of the appellants in the first report is sufficiently explained. There are doubtless some minor discrepancies in the statements of the first group of prosecution witnesses, but they are such as would naturally be found in the evidence of truthful witnesses, and they do not detract from the substantial truth of the prosecution story.

The second group of witnesses, namely, Mahant Mukand Das, Sewa Das, Jiwan, Nabi Bakhsh and Ghoga, give direct evidence in support of the prosecution, and we agree with the learned Sessions Judge that their evidence is worthy of belief. The Mahant and his party witnessed the assault from a distance of about 10 karams only, and we see no reason for disbelieving them as regards the main details of the assault. As the Sessions Judge points out, at least three men of this party, namely, the Mahant, Jiwan and Ghoga, knew all the appellants before and that they had no difficulty in recognizing them, as the assault took place in broad daylight and no attempt seems to have been made by the assailants to conceal their identity. In the evidence of the Mahant, we can find no indications of any animus against the appellants; the mere fact that he is mortgagee of the land of Wadhawa Singh, appellant, being insufficient, in our opinion, to establish any bias on his part in favour of Kakku and his party. No doubt, the Mahant and his companions did not intervene in the interests of the attacked party; but this does not show that they were not present on the occasion, it being quite natural for them to have studied their own safety by keeping aloof from an infuriated mob of Sikh Jats, who were armed with lethal weapons. Both groups of prosecution witnesses state that some of the appellants were armed with chhevis, others with choppers, and the rest with dangs; and the medical evidence on the record shows that sharp-edged instruments were used by the assailants. In our opinion, the evidence for the prosecution is amply sufficient to establish the participation in the assault of all the appellants before us, the only doubt being as regards the presence of Atar Singh alias Dhannu on the spot. There is considerable diversity in the evidence as to his presence there; about five of the witnesses, namely, Jamnu, Mukand Das, Ghogu, Nabi Bakhsh and Sewa Das, state that Dhannu was not present on the occasion; while five others, namely, Bhoga, Jamal, Dina, Shahab Din, and Jiwan Ram say that he was present. Of the last named five witnesses, the evidence of Jamal and Shahab Din is unsatisfactory on the point. Jamal did not mention Dhannu before the Committing Magistrate; while Shahab Din contradicted himself as regards his presence in his statement before the Sessions Judge. We think, therefore, that on evidence such as this it cannot be held proved beyond reasonable doubt that Atar Singh alias Dhannu, participated in the assault on Kakku and his companions; and, giving him the benefit of the doubt, we accept his appeal and acquit him.

As regards the remaining appellants, we hold that their presence on the occasion in question is fully established, and that they took part in the assault on the Arains.

The next question for decision is whether these appellants have been rightly convicted by the learned Sessions Judge of the offence of murder under section 302, read with section 149, Indian Penal Code. In connection with this part of the case, we think that there is considerable force in Mr. Beechey's contention that the medical evidence on the record shows that there was no intention on the part of the appellants to cause the death of Kakku or to cause such bodily injuries to him or to any of his companions as the assailants knew were likely to result in death. A full description of the injuries found on the persons of Kakku and his sons and nephew is given in the evidence of the Sub-Assistant Surgen, Faqir Chand, and Assistant Surgeon, Chaman Lal, and although it appears from that evidence that sharp-edged weapons were used by the appellants, they do not seem to have been used with any great force, or with a reckless disregard of consequences. On the person of Kakku, no incised wounds were discovered; the injuries found on him had been caused by blunt weapons. The cause of death was the fracture of the skull with hæmorrhage and consequent pressure on the brain. Two of his ribs were also broken. He lived for about five days after the assault; and it would seem from the medical evidence that it was only the head injury that proved fatal. The injuries caused to the sons of Kakku do not appear to have been very serious. Jamnu sustained one grievous hurt, the result of an incised wound; Shahab Din and Jamal had only slight injuries, all of them amounting to simple hurt; Bhoga had three incised wounds and one injury caused by a blunt weapon which amounted to grievous hurt; while Dina received four incised wounds, of which three constituted simple hurt and one grievous hurt. The Sessions Judge does not seem to be right in saying that the medical evidence hardly does justice to the injuries caused to Bhoga Those injuries are fully described by the Sub-Assistant Surgeon, Faqir Chand, and the fact that a year afterwards, the Sessions Judge saw huge scars on Bhoga's body is insufficient to show that he had received the wounds indicated by those scars on the occasion when he was assaulted by the appellant. He is not a man of very good antecedents, and it may well be that he has been a participant in many a fight or affray, and that some of the scars on his person were the remnents of the injuries he had received on those occasions at the hands of other people.

On the whole, we think that the appellants, though they were armed with sharp-edged weapons and dangs, did not use them with the intention which it was necessary for the prosecution to establish in order to bring their case within the purview of section 300, read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, and, in our opinion, they should have been convicted under the second part of section 304 only. We agree with the learned Sessions Judge that all the appellants assaulted Kakku and his companions in prosecution of a common object, which was to prevent them by force from taking away the produce of the land of which they were in rightful possession; that they (the appellant) constituted an unlawful assembly, and that the offence committed under section 304, part 2, by the members of that assembly who caused the fatal injury to Kakku was such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object. Each appellant is, therefore, guilty of an offence under section 304, part 2, read with section 149, Indian Penal Code, and we alter the conviction of each to one under the aforesaid section. As the assault was committed under circumstances showing utter defiance of law and authority, we think that the maximum punishment provided in the section should be awarded to each of the appellants, and we accordingly sentence all the appellants (except Attar Singh alias Dhannu who is acquitted) to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 10 years including three months' solitary confinement, and to pay a fine of Rs. 100, or in default, to undergo further rigorous imprisonment for one year each. Out of the fines, if realised, half the amount shall be paid to the complainants, namely, Jamnu, Shahab Din, Jamal, Bhoga and Dina in equal shares.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 652 OF 1912.

October 12, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson.

BAGGU MAL—ACCUSED—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526 (8) —Transfer—Magistrate's duty—Full opportunity not given—Proceedings void—Sufficiency or insufficiency of reasons by whom to be decided—Proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, whether can be transferred.

After an application for transfer has been made under section 526 (8), Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate is competent to hear and record all the evidence for the prosecution, if he considers that the grounds set forth as reasons for the transfer are insufficient and unlikely to be acceded to by a superior Court. But when the evidence for the prosecution is completed, it is the bounden duty of the Magistrate, irrespective of the sufficiency or insufficiency of the grounds set forth for transfer, to allow a fair and reasonable opportunity to the accused to apply for a transfer before calling upon him for his defence.

It is for the High Court, and not for a Magistrate to decide, whether the grounds set forth for a transfer are good or not.

Unless full opportunity is given to an accused who has made an application for a postponement of the case in order to enable him to apply for transfer before he is called upon for his defence, the proceedings are void.

This was a case under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, and the High Court directed it to be transferred from the District Magistrate to another Magistrate.

Petition, under sections 439 and 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for revision of the order of the Sessions Judge, Ferozepore Division, dated the 22nd April 1912, confirming that of the District Magistrate, Ferozepore, dated the 7th March 1912, ordering the petitioner to furnish a bond in the sum of Rs. 3,000 for a period of three years jointly and severally.

Mr. Beechey, for the Petitioner.

Lala Mul Chand, for the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—In this case, it is necessary to consider one question only, and that is whether it is not necessary to quash the whole proceedings in view of the illegal refusal of the Magistrate trying the case, to grant an adjournment to enable the accused to move this Court for a transfer, under section 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. In regard to this application, the District Magistrate has made the following remarks:—

"Similarly, is the application under section 526, Criminal Procedure Code. That application was put in at Mamdot, when I heard the case on the spot. I was able to tell his Counsel that I had had no share in ordering the inquiry or in taking part in it, and Mr. Whistler, Assistant Superintendent Police, showed that Baggu Mal had known for more than a month that he was to be sent up under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code. He was, therefore, in no way prejudiced, and my order was one rejecting the application at that the initial stage of proceedings, as it was intended to defeat the local inquiry, which I had arranged to make on the spot, where the truth could more readily and easily be obtained. Since then, though a further date was given at Jalalabad, and again here, Counsel has taken no step to make the application to the Chief Court and I, therefore, consider any further adjournment unnecessary. I would remark that Baggu Mal has throughout had the services of Counsel, and no effort has been spared to try to discredit the evidence."

BAGGU MAL v. EMPEROR.

The facts of the case, which it is necessary to state for the purposes of this order, are few and simple. On the 26th February last, a notice was issued to one Baggu Mal to show cause why the said Baggu Mal should not be called upon to give security to be of good behaviour, under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code. This summons was served upon Baggu Mal at Ferozepore on the evening of the 27th February for hearing at Mamdot on the 29th. Immediately when the case was called on for hearing on the 29th, an application was put in by the Pleader for the accused, under section 526 (8), Criminal Procedure Code, asking that the Magistrate, who was Magistrate of the District, would either transfer the case himself to some other Magistrate in the District, or would allow an adjournment to enable the accused to apply to this Court for transfer. The Magistrate proceeded to inquire what the grounds for transfer were, and considering them insufficient in his opinion, he declined to accede to the request of the accused, would not transfer the case to another Magistrate and did not allow any opportunity to the accused to move this Court. On the contrary, he proceeded to hear the evidence for the prosecution on the 29th. He then adjourned the case for hearing to the 4th March. That day being apparently devoted to the Horse fair at Jalalabad, the case did not come on; it was, however, taken up on the 5th March, certain of the accused's witnesses were heard on that day, an adjournment to hear other witnesses, who had been summoned through Court but who had not appeared was refused, and the case was set down for orders on the 7th March, upon which date the accused was called upon to furnish security. Other irregularaties are complained of, and some undoubtedly appear to have occurred, but I confine my attention to the question above stated.

Now, it appears perfectly clear that no opportunity whatever was accorded to the accused to make an application to this Court. Under section 526 (8), the Magistrate was perfectly competent to hear and record all the evidence for the prosecution if he considered that the grounds which were set forth as reason for the transfer were insufficient and unlikely to be acceded to by a superior Court. But when the evidence for the prosecution had been completed, it was the bounden duty of the Magistrate under the law, to allow a fair and reasonable opportunity to the accused to apply for a transfer before calling upon him for his defence. It was then for this Court, and not for the Magistrate himself, to decide whether the grounds set forth for a transfer were good or not. That no such opportunity was afforded is perfectly obvious. The case only came on for first hearing on the 29th February. On the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th March, the Court did not sit, these days being one a Sunday and the others holidays, on the 5th further evidence was taken and judgment was given on the 7th. All the authorities agree that unless full opportunity is given to an accused, who has made an application for a postponement of the case in order to enable him to apply for transfer before he is called upon for his defence, the proceedings are void and must be quashed. Some of the rulings go further and affirm that even though abundant opportunity has been given to apply for such a transfer, if the provisions of the law are complied with in the letter and an application has been made before the commencement of the hearing, it is imperative that an adjournment should be made in order to give an opportunity to the accused to make the desired application for transfer. But, be that as it may, the authorities quoted below are quite unanimous that unless such an opportunity has been given, the proceedings are void and must be quashed The only authority of this Court which was quoted to me [Emperor v. Ali Raza Shah (1)] is very emphatic on the point. The other authorities are Joharuddin Sarkar v. Emperor (2), Kali Charan Ghose v. Emperor (3), Queen Empress v. Virasami (4); Dhone Kristo Samanta v. Emperor (5).

It is not necessary to discuss the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge, much of which is irrelevant. It is clear that he has misunderstood the effect of the rulings quoted. The attention of officers trying cases for security, under section 110, may well be called to Sher Zaman Shah v. Queen-Empress (6) and Nur-ud-Din alias Kada v. Emperor (7).

(1) 24 P. L. R. 1904; 1 Cr. L. J. 109.
(2) 31 C. 715; 8 C. W. N. 910.
(3) 33 C. 1183; 10 C. W. N. 793; 3 C. L. J. 637; 3 Cr. L. J. 477.
(4) 19 M. 375.
(5) 6 C. W. N. 717 at p. 719.
(6) 10 P. R. 1899.
(7) 27 P. R. 1903 Cr.; 21 P. L. R. 1904; 1 Cr. L. J. 99.

EMPEROR v. KISAN KEVJI.

It is clear that the Magistrate acted illegally in this case in not allowing to the accused any reasonable opportunity to prosecute his application for transfer in this Court before calling upon him for his defence, and that this illegality is one which vitiates the whole proceedings. I accordingly quash the proceedings and the order of the District Magistrate, dated the 7th March 1912 and return the case for a re-trial. Under the circumstances, I direct that the re-trial shall take place before another Magistrate.

Case returned.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 123 OF 1912.

July 11, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR.

versus

KISAN KEVJI—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 110—Proceedings initiated under the section must be disposed of by the same Magistrate—Case cannot be sent up to another Magistrate—Bombay Regulation XII of 1827, s. 27.

Proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, should be disposed of by the Magistrate before or by whom they were initiated. The Code requires that he should pass the final order himself either discharging or taking security from the accused.

Therefore, where a 1st class Magistrate, before whom proceedings under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, were initiated recorded evidence in the case and then sent it up to the District Magistrate who, acting under section 27 of Bombay Regulation XII of 1827, placed certain restrictions upon the personal liberty of the accused:

Held, that the 1st class Magistrate had no jurisdiction to send up the case to the District Magistrate and the latter had no jurisdiction to dispose of it.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, for the Accused.

Mr. G. S. Rao, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The proceedings in this case were initiated under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Magistrate who initiated them ought to have disposed of them himself; but instead of doing so, he sent up the case to the District Magistrate for action under Regulation XII of 1827. That he had no jurisdiction to do. The Code requires that he should pass the final order himself, either discharging or taking security from the accused.

The District Magistrate, to whom the case was sent up by the first class Magistrate, assumed jurisdiction under Regulation XII of 1827 and has passed an order placing certain restrictions * upon the personal liberty of the petitioners.

Whether, if the District Magistrate had passed such an order independently of the proceedings under section 110, it would have been legal is not the question before us now. But the proceeding having been initiated under section 110, the Magistrate before whom it was initiated ought to have himself disposed of it. The District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to dispose of it.

On this ground, the District Magistrate's order must be quashed and the proceedings sent back to the Magistrate, first class, to be dealt with and disposed of according to law.

Order quashed.

---

* The District Magistrate's order against the accused was to the following effect:

"Whereas in the interests of the public peace and order it is desirable to keep a watch over your movements, the following instructions are hereby issued to you:

(a) You are required to attend the roll-call once in the morning and once in the night at the Police Chowri Borad before the Police Patil and should not leave your house after sunset and before sunrise.

(b) You are forbidden to leave the limits of your village without the permission in writing of the Police Patil of your village. Such permission shall state the period for which you intend to absent yourself from your village and the place you propose to visit and the purpose of your visit.

(c) And you are hereby warned that in the event of your failing at any time to comply with any order given above, or if you absent yourself from your village beyond the period covered by the permisson granted under clause (b), or if you are found in any town or village other than which you are permitted to visit, you render yourself liable to be punished with simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months."

Kashmir University Library
Accession No.....

GAJI v. JUMANSHAH.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 158 OF 1911.
February 8, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and
Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.
GAJI valad LALDINO—APPLICANT
versus
JUMANSHAH valad GHULAM HUSEIN AND OTHERS—OPPONENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 202, scope of—Preliminary inquiry—Order after issue of process—Judicial order—Construction.

An order under section 202, Criminal Procedure Code, is one by virtue of which the Magistrate decides to postpone issuing process against the accused.

Such an order can only be passed after recording reasons in writing.

An order for holding a preliminary inquiry under section 202 cannot be passed after process has been issued against the accused.

If a judicial order can be construed as either legal or illegal, the construction that makes it legal must prevail.

Mr. Achalsing M. Advani, for the Applicant.

Mr. T. G. Elphinston, for Opponent No. 1.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The applicant filed a complaint against the opponents of an offence under section 498, Indian Penal Code, on the 26th April 1911, before the Magistrate, second class, Garhi Yasin. The Magistrate held an elaborate preliminary inquiry, examining all the witnesses cited by the complainant and dismissed the complaint on the 17th May.

Against this order of dismissal, the applicant applied in revision to the Additional Sessions Judge who ordered further inquiry.

For the purpose of this further inquiry, the case was referred to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Shikarpur, who, on the 14th September, made the following order :—

"Summons to issue to accused and witnesses for September 29th, 1911, on payment of process fees."

Accused's summons were issued to the opponents to answer the charge preferred against them under section 498, Indian Penal Code. Nevertheless the Magistrate, on the 29th September 1911, elected to hold a preliminary inquiry under section 202 and this was confirmed in revision by the Additional Sessions Judge.

The applicant applies in revision that this order of confirmation to proceed under section 202 should be set aside.

Now, it may be conceded that the order of the Additional Sessions Judge for further inquiry did not restrict the Magistrate to any particular course of action. But, apart from this order, it seems to us quite clear, both in law and on the merits, that the Magistrate should not have proceeded under section 202.

The order under section 202 is one by virtue of which the Magistrate decides to postpone issuing process against the accused. The order is one that can only be passed after reasons to be recorded in writing. See also Sind Criminal Circular, page 63, of Magisterial Procedure. Here the Magistrate recorded no reasons and did, as a matter of fact, issue process. Therefore, on the 29th September, the case had passed the stage at which the Magistrate could exercise the option of holding a preliminary inquiry. Mr. Raymond contends that by the issue of process, the Magistrate did not intend to exercise a discretion not to proceed under section 202. But, if that were so, the summons issued to the accused were illegal and if the order of the 14th September can be construed as either legal or illegal, the construction that makes it legal must prevail.

Again, all the witnesses for the complainant had already been examined by the 2nd class Magistrate—it was surely then a futile proceeding to record all this evidence over again under section 202. Nor was there any object in so doing for the accused were present in Court and ready to answer to the charge. The procedure adopted by the Magistrate involved not only a waste of the complainant's money but also a serious waste of public time. If, in the course of the trial, the charge appeared to be unfounded, the Magistrate could at any stage of the case have discharged the accused under section 253 (2).

We accordingly reverse the order of the Magistrate ordering a preliminary inquiry under section 202 and direct him to proceed with the trial of the case.

Order reversed.

EMPEROR v. CHAGAN RAJARAM.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 21 OF 1912.

March 25, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Crouch, A. J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

CHAGAN RAJARAM AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

Jury—Charge—Misdirection—Death caused by injury with weapon—Omission to put case of grevious hurt before Jury—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 304 (2), 320 (8).

Where death has been caused by a blow with a weapon, that does not necessarily suggest an intention to cause such bodily injury as would, in the ordinary course of nature, cause death, and it is presumed, in the accused's favour, that he had no knowledge that the injury which he intended to cause was likely to cause the death of the person injured. In such cases, if the circumstances are such that an intention merely to cause hurt dangerous to life might not unreasonably be inferred, the Jury should be directed that it is open to them to find the accused guilty of the lesser offence, namely, of causing grievous hurt under section 320 (8) of the Penal Code.

Section 304 (2) is not appropriate to a case where there was a deliberate intention to inflict bodily injury to the person whose death resulted from such injury.

Mr. P. V. McInerney, for the Appellants.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—Appellants were convicted by a Jury, by a majority of three to two, of an offence under section 304(1), Indian Penal Code. The learned Judicial Commissioner in his judgment stated that his view of the evidence appeared sufficiently from the comments that he had made on it in the course of his charge to the Jury, that it was quite possible that Jivi, one of the eye-witnesses, may have seen the accused committing the assault and that he could not, therefore, assert affirmatively that the verdict involved such a clear miscarriage of justice as to necessitate a reference to the High Court. He found all the accused guilty and sentenced accused No. 1 Chagan to seven years' transportation and accused Nos. 2 and 3 to five years' rigorous imprisonment each.

In the course of his summing up, the learned Judge pointed out good reasons for disbelieving all four of the alleged eye-witnesses.

The case is, therefore, one in which it is difficult to avoid a suspicion that the Jury were labouring under some misunderstanding.

Mr. McInerney, for the appellants, contends that there were misdirections by the Judge on the following points:—

(1) The Jury were not explained the difference between the first and second parts of section 304, Indian Penal Code, nor were they told that the case might be held to come under the second part.

(2) The Jury should have been informed that it was open to them to find the accused guilty of grievous hurt, or simple hurt.

(3) The case of each accused should have been distinguished and the Jury should have had explained to them the sections dealing with common intention.

The passages in the heads of charge, which deal with the law questions involved, are the following:—

"Law explained" sections 304 and 299 read and explained to the Jury.

'Doctor's evidence shows that the bodily injuries—two wounds and two contusions on the head—caused death. You will have no difficulty in finding that these injuries were likely to cause death.

"The only question in the case is, were the accused the persons who inflicted these injuries?"

Now, the story of the prosecution was that the deceased was, on the night of the offence reciting prayers in a very small temple situated in the centre of a compound wherein a large number of people reside; that at about 2 A. M., the three accused, all of whom have quarters in the compound, came out of the house of one of their number, and made for the temple; that one of them picked up a stone weighing 195 tolas, near the temple, and with it struck the deceased several blows on the head. The other two were carrying, one a small stick, and the other a piece of wood shaped like a very small cricket bat, weighing 30 tolas, used by dhobis for beating clothes. The injured man died soon afterwards from rupture of one of the meningeal arteries.

Now, if the assailant intended to cause the bodily injury from which death resulted, he would have been guilty of murder under the third part of section 300, for the Surgeon's evidence is to the effect that the rupture was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death.

In re MAHADEV YADNESHWAR JOSHI.

But the charge was under section 304 (1); it was merely alleged by the prosecution that the assailant intended to cause such injury as was likely to cause death; nor was it imputed to him that he actually knew that the injury which he intended to inflict was likely to cause the death of the particular person, the deceased. Had such knowledge been imputed, the charge would, properly, have been of murder (section 300, secondly). Where, as in the present case, death has been caused by a blow with a weapon, that does not necessarily suggest an intention to cause such bodily injury as would in the ordinary course of nature cause death and it is presumed, in accused's favour, that he had no knowledge that the injury which he intended to cause was likely to cause the death of the person injured, and the circumstances are such that an intention merely to cause hurt dangerous to life might not unreasonably be inferred, we are of opinion that the Jury should be directed that it is open to them to find the accused guilty of the lesser offence, namely, of causing grievous hurt under section 320 (8).

We consider that section 304 (2) is not appropriate to a case where there was a deliberate intention to inflict bodily injury to the person whose death resulted from such injury, but we consider that the omission to put the case of grievous hurt under section 320 (8) to the Jury was a misdirection.

We are of opinion also that it should have been pointed out to the Jury that as the party approached the temple, one was unarmed, and the other two had weapons from which nothing more than an intention to cause simple hurt could be fairly inferred, that it was for them to determine whether or not the picking up of a heavy stone and dealing severe blows with it on the head of the deceased was in furtherance of the common object of all three; and that the omission to point this out to the Jury was a misdirection.

We consider that the misdirection on these two important points led to an erroneous verdict. The only question really put to the Jury was—did the three accused form the party by whom the assault was committed; and their verdict cannot fairly be construed as being any thing more than an affirmative answer to this question. To this extent, but no further, we consider we should accept it. We cannot treat it as a finding that all three accused had a common intention to inflict an injury which was likely to cause death or to endanger life, for the question whether or not they had such common intention was not put to them.

The actual assailant was, no doubt, guilty of a very serious offence, but that accused No. 1 was such assailant has not, in our opinion, been established beyond reasonable doubt nor was it so established in the opinion of the learned Judge or of two of the Jury. We do not, therefore, feel justified in holding that he was the actual assailant.

We alter the verdict and find all three accused guilty of an offence under section 323, Indian Penal Code, and reduce the punishment of each to six months' rigorous imprisonment.

Conviction altered; Sentences reduced.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION NO. 131 OF 1912.

July 11, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

In re MAHADEV YADNESHWAR JOSHI AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195—Perjury and its abetment during Police investigation of a theft case—Theft case ending in conviction—Sanction to prosecute, whether necessary—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193—Perjury during Police investigation.

The petitioners were placed for trial before a Magistrate under section 193, Indian Penal Code, for making and abetting the making of certain false statements during the Police investigation of a theft case which ended in a conviction. A sanction to prosecute the petitioners for perjury and its abetment was not obtained from the Court which had tried the theft case:

Held, that the sanction of the Court was necessary and without its sanction, the petitioners could not be tried.

The words "in relation to an offence" in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code are wide enough to include evidence which was adduced before a Court and which was heard by the Court.

In re Khanderao Yeshwant, 14 Bom. L. R. 362; 13 Cr. L. J. 527; 15 Ind. Cas. 799, followed.

Criminal application for revision of an order passed by the first class Magistrate of Ahmednagar.

Mr. K. H. Kelkar (with him Mr. G. K. Chitale), for the Applicants.

PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. ARUMUGAM CHETTY.

Mr. G. S. Rao, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—We must hold that in this case, a sanction is necessary and the offence cannot be tried in the absence of a sanction from the Court which tried Shelke and before which the evidence, which is now said to have been fabricated, was adduced.

The words "in relation to an offence" in section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code are wide enough to include evidence which was adduced before a Court and which was heard by the Court.

That has been the case here and this case falls within the line of the decision of this Court in In re Khanderao Yeshwant (1). Following it, we must hold that the trial is void in the absence of a sanction.

We, therefore, set aside the proceedings before the Magistrate and direct him not to try the case as he has no jurisdiction to try it for want of the requisite sanction.

Proceedings set aside

(1) 14 Bom. L. R. 362; 13 Cr. L. J. 527; 15 Ind. Cas. 9.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 197 OF 1912.

September 6, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Offg., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Napier.

THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR—APPELLANT

versus

ARUMUGAM CHETTY—ACCUSED.

Witness—Deliberate false statement—Prosecution for perjury—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 193.

A witness, who deliberately gives false evidence but who, when confronted with incontestable proof of his falsehood, admits it to be false, is guilty of perjury.

Appeal, under section 417 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, against the judgment of acquittal passed on the accused in Criminal Appeal No. 32 of 1911 by the Sessions Judge of Ramnad (C. C. No. 63 of 1911 on the file of the Joint Magistrate of Ramnad).

Mr. L. S. Viraragava Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. N. Aiya, for the Accused.

IMPERATOR v. KHUSHALDAS.

JUDGMENT.—The dictum of the Sessions Judge that a witness who deliberately gives false evidence, but who, when confronted with incontestable proof of its falsehood then admits it to be false, ought not to be prosecuted for perjury, is one that cannot be approved.

In the present case, the accused deliberately denied that his daughter was married to the son of the person in whose favour he was called as a witness. This was not a matter in regard to which he could have made any mistake. Indeed, in his statement next day he did not suggest any mistake but admitted the offence and asked to be excused. I must, therefore, set aside the acquittal by the Sessions Judge, and find the accused guilty of an offence punishable under section 193, Indian Penal Code.

As to sentence, it is urged on behalf of the accused that he is an elderly man of 50 years of age, and has already undergone rigorous imprisonment for 1 month and 7 days. The Public Prosecutor does not press for further imprisonment, being only anxious to have the correct view of the law maintained. In the circumstances, I refrain from imposing sentence of further imprisonment.

The sentence will be one of rigorous imprisonment for the period already suffered.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REPORT No. 161 OF 1911.

February 8, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

IMPERATOR—APPLICANT

versus

KHUSHALDAS TOPANDAS—ACCUSED.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 4 (h), 250—Complaint—Information laid by Police Officer—Police report—Compensation—Bombay District Municipal Act (IV of 1890), ss. 51, 68 (c).

The definition of complaint in section 4 (h) of the Criminal Procedure Code excludes only such Police reports as are made under section 173 after the conclusion of the Police investigation.

Ahmad Khan v. Empror 5 S. L. R. 1; 12 Cr. L. J. 92; 2 Ind. Cas. 492, relied upon.

KAMAL KUTTY v. UDAYAVARMA RAJA.

Where a Police officer lays an information against a person under section 51 or section 68 (c) of the Bombay District Police Act, such information is a complaint within the meaning of section 4 (h), Criminal Procedure Code; compensation can be awarded against the Police officer, if the case is frivolous or vexatious.

Emperor v. Sada, 26 B. 150; 3 Bom. L. R. 586, followed.

Queen Empress v. Sakar Jan Mahomed, 22 B. 934, dissented from.

Mr. Wadhumal Oodharam, for the Accused.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The District Magistrate, Sukkur, has reported to this Court a proceeding of the City Magistrate under section 250, Criminal Procedure Code.

The City Magistrate has fined, under section 250, a Police officer who had laid an information before him under section 68 (c) of the Bombay District Police Act.

The District Magistrate refers to the case of Queen Empress v. Sakar Jan Mahomed (1) but that case has been overruled in the case of Emperor v. Sada (2), which, we think, has been rightly decided. The information laid by the Police officer was in the form of a complaint and prayed for issue of process against the accused. No doubt the definition of complaint in the Code excludes a Police report. But the Police report here referred to is a report made under section 173, Criminal Procedure Code, after the conclusion of the Police investigation—see Ahmedkhan v. Emperor (3). The Police office is empowered under section 51 of the Bombay District Police Act to lay an information as such an information is a complaint within the meaning of section 4 (h) of the Code. The Magistrate, therefore, had jurisdiction to impose a fine if he decided that the case was frivolous or vexatious.

We, therefore, decline to interfere.

Interference declined.

(1) 22 B. 934.
(2) 26 B. 150; 3 Bom. L. R. 586.
(3) 5 S. L. R. 1; 9 Ind. Cas. 492; 12 Cr. L. J. 92.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 44 OF 1912.
CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 42 1912.
October 2, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ayling and Mr. Justice Napier.

T. KAMAL KUTTY AND OTHERS—SECOND PARTY Nos. 2, 3, 4 AND 6—PETITIONERS

versus

UDAYAVARMA RAJA VALIA RAJA OF CHIRAKAL—FIRST PARTY—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145, 439, 537—Revision—Charter Act, s. 15—Jurisdiction—Interference by High Court.

A petition does not lie under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, to revise proceedings under section 145 of the Code.

The words in section 439, "the record of which has been called for by itself," are not limited to cases where the High Court acts suo motu. They are not used in contradistinction to "which otherwise comes to its knowledge" but as contrasted with "which has been reported for orders" they have reference to the recognised channels by which the High Court becomes seized of the case; that is to say, either by calling for the records itself or by having the case reported to it under section 438 by a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate who has himself called for the records under section 435. In either case, the Court is acting both of its own motion and on petition. There is, therefore, no room for the reading of the words "otherwise comes to its knowledge" as having reference to petition.

Hurbullubh Narain Singh v. Luchmeswar Prosad Singh, 26 C. 188; 3 C. W. N. 49; Jagomohan Pal v. Ram Kumar Gope, 28 C. 416, Loke Nath Saha Chowdhry v. Nidu Biswas, 29 C. 382; 6 C. W. N. 489 and Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed, 33 C. 352 (F. B.); 2 C. L. J. 259; 9 C. W. N. 1059; 2 Cr. L. J. 637; Maharaj Tewari v. Harcharan Rai, 26 A. 144; A. W. N. (1903) 212; Jhingai Singh v. Ram Partap, 31 A. 150; 6 A. L. J. 113; 9 Cr. L. J. 382; 1 Ind. Cas. 482; In re, Pandurang Govind, 24 B. 527, In re, Pandurang Govind, 25 B. 179, referred to.

The words "or otherwise comes to its knowledge" in section 439 have no reference to any power outside the Criminal Procedure Code.

Nobin Kristo Mookerjee v. Russick Lall Laha, 10 C. 268, approved.

Under section 15 of the Charter Act, it has never been customary to interfere except when it can be said that the Magistrate's order was passed without jurisdiction.

Bhaskaruni Kesavarayadu v. Bhaskaruni Chalaptriyadu, 31 M. 318; 18 M. L. J. 343; 8 Cr. L. J. 205; 4 M. L. T. 301; Reid v. Richardson, 14 C. 361; Hurbullubh Narain Singh v. Luchmeswar Prosad Singh, 26 C. 188; 3 C. W. N. 49; Mahadeo Kunwar v. Bisu 25 A. 537; A. W. N. (1903) 102; In re Pandurang Govind, 24 B. 527, referred to.

The failure by a Magistrate to comply with any provision of the Code as to his preliminary procedure does not destroy his jurisdiction to take action under the Code.

KAMAL KUTTY v. UDAYAVARMA RAJA.

Nusserwanjee Pestonjee v. Meer Mynoodeen Khan wallud Meer Subroodeen Khan Bahadur, 6 M. I. A. 134, explained.

Subramania Aiyar v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 233; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 5 C. W. N. 866; 28 I. A. 257 (P. C.); Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed, 33 C. 352 (F.B.); Posuka Kulla v. Chikka Hiria, 4 M. L. T. 213; 8 Cr. L. J. 399; Sayid Mahomed Ghouse Sahib v. Sayid Khadir Badshaw Sahib, 16 M. L. J. 146; 3 Cr. L. J. 487; In the matter of Chinnappudayan, 30 M. 548; 3 M. L. T. 18; 7 Cr. L. J. 28, referred to.

Semble:—Such irregularity would be covered by section 537, Criminal Procedure Code. The essential requisite to give a Magistrate jurisdiction under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, is that he must be satisfied from information of some sort that a dispute exists likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning land or water or the boundaries thereof in his jurisdiction. Once he is so satisfied his jurisdiction is complete and his subsequent action must be considered in relation to procedure, not jurisdiction.

Petition, under sections 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, praying the High Court to revise the order of the Joint Magistrate of Tellicherry, in Miscellaneous Case No. 30 of 1909.

Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Aiyar, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. E. R. Osborne and V. Ryru Nambiar, for the Respondent.

ORDER.—This is a petition put in under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, asking for revision of an order of the Joint Magistrate of Tellicherry in Miscellaneous Case No. 30 of 1909 on the 16th October 1911, passed under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The preliminary objection is taken that the Court, in the exercise of its revisional powers under the Code, cannot deal with orders made under that section and reliance is placed on section 435, clause 3, which provides that proceedings under Chapter XII are not proceedings within the meaning of that section. It is contended, however, on behalf of the petitioners that the Court can exercise its powers under section 439 without calling in aid section 435. The point has been argued at great length and most ably by Mr. Seshagiri Aiyar. He relies on the words "which otherwise comes to its knowledge" in section 439, clause (1), and contends that that phrase has reference to action taken by the High Court on petition in contradistinction to action taken when the record has been called for "by itself" in the earlier words of the section which, he contends, is limited to action by the High Court suo motu. He further relies on similar words in section 438, which, he argues, entitles a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate likewise to examine records of proceedings of inferior Magisterial Officers otherwise than by calling for the records under section 435. He admits that the result of this interpretation of the sections would be that the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate cannot call for and examine and report for the orders of the High Court the records of proceedings of inferior Criminal Courts under section 144, Chapter XII and section 176, but that he can, under some power referred to as "otherwise," but the authority for which does not appear, get the record without calling for it, and report the case for the orders of the High Court under section 438. That is to say, that the ordinary channel by which proceedings under these sections and all other judgments and orders are examined by the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate and reported for orders, is blocked up by the Legislature with respect to these proceedings, but that those officers can still exercise the power of reporting if the record comes before them in some other manner not explained. Now, this could hardly have been the intention of the Legislature. The recognized procedure, by which those Courts exercise revisional jurisdiction over the proceedings of inferior Courts, isby calling for the records under section 435. The Legislature has taken away that jurisdiction, presumably intending that these proceedings, which are all of a special nature, should not be interfered with either by the High Court or the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate. These proceedings are none of them criminal or punitive. Sections 143, 144 and 145 are prohibitive in the interest of the public peace and public good. Section 176 is a special section empowering a Magistrate to hold an investigation where any person dies when in the custody of the Police. We have no doubt that the Legislature intended to leave action under these sections, where cause is shown, to the unfettered discretion of the local Magistracy; and we cannot, from the use of this word "otherwise" in section 438, infer a power in the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate to interfere with such orders when they are expressly forbidden by section 435 to call for the records. In our opinion, the words in section 439 "the record of which has been called for by itself" are not limited to cases where the High Court acts suo motu. It must be borne in mind that although when the earlier Criminal Procedure Codes were passed, the Legislature had chiefly in view the exercise of revisional powers by the High Court and those superior officers on inspection of the calendars, it recognized as early as 1872 that parties would invoke these powers by petition. But, in any case, whether the High Court or these officers act of their own initiative or on petition, they must call for the records and in fact the petition invariably asks them to do so in so many words. The reason why the limiting powers are found only in section 435 will be found on an examination of the history of this legislation.

KAMAL KUTTY v. UDAYAVARMA RAJA.

Act X of 1872 is the first Code after the establishment of the High Court. Chapter XXII is headed "Superintendence and revision" and begins with section 292 which empowers the High Court to issue general rules for the keeping of books, etc., by all Criminal Courts and for the preparation and transmission of any calendars or statements to be prepared and submitted by such Courts. Section 293 provides that all subordinate Courts shall send to the High Court such periodical statements or calendars of trials held by such Courts as the High Court prescribes exhibiting the offences charged, the offences of which the accused are convicted and the sentences or orders passed upon them. Section 294 proceeds to lay down that the High Court may call for and examine the record of any case tried by any Subordinate Court for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the legality or propriety of any sentence or order, and the regularity of the proceedings of such Court, and section 295 gives the same power to the Court of Session or the Magistrate of the District with regard to the sentences, orders and proceedings of Subordinate Courts. These four sections obviously set out the machinery for revision. The High Court has to make rules for the transmission of the calendars by all Courts. All Subordinate Courts are then required to send certain calendars, such as the High Court prescribes, direct to the High Court; and if, on the examination of a calendar, the High Court thinks that there may be something illegal or improper about the order, the next process is to call for and examine the record of such case. The language used in each succeeding section adopts the language of the prior section and it is obvious that these sections contain the machinery. Then comes section 297, which is practically identical with the present section 439, and this lays down what the High Court can do after examination of the record. It follows, therefore, that the words "called for by itself" in section 297 have reference to the whole of the powers of revision given by that Chapter to the High Court. The last clause of section 297 makes it clear that the High Court can hear any person either personally or by agent in the exercise of its powers of revision, which sufficiently indicates that the Legislature contemplated that these powers would be exercised on petition. It will thus be seen that the method by which the records came to the High Court was in one set of sections, namely, 294, 295 and 296 and the power of the High Court to deal with the record was in another section 297, just as now sections 435 and 438 provide the machinery and section 439 gives the power to dispose of the record.

Act X of 1882, the next Code, was practically the same as the present Code and continued this method of treatment and in this Code sections 143, 144 and 176 were excluded from the revisional powers. The only alteration made by the present Code is that orders under section 145 are added to those excluded. It seems clear, therefore, that the language in section 439, "the record of which has been called for by itself", is not used in contradistinction to "which otherwise comes to its knowledge" but as contrasted with "which has been reported for orders" and that it has reference to the recognized channels by which the High Court becomes seized of the case, that is to say, either by calling for the record itself or by having the case reported to it under section 438 by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, who has himself called for the records under section 435; and whether it has called for the record itself or is dealing with it where the record has been called for by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate and reported to it, in either case the Court is acting both of its own motion and on petition. There is, therefore, no room for the reading of those words "otherwise comes to its knowledge" as having reference to petition.

KAMAL KUTTY v. UDAYAVARMA RAJA.

It cannot be suggested that without those words or the word "otherwise" in section 437, the High Court, a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate could not act on petition. When once this is clearly understood, the difficulty raised by the omission of the Legislature to insert the words "section 439" in the exception clause disappears. Section 435 is the initial power whether exercised by the High Court or the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate, and whether of their own motion or on petition. When the Legislature took away this power, it cut off the jurisdiction of the High Court at its fountain head. The machinery, by which the High Court became seized of the case under the Criminal Procedure Code being gone, it was unnecessary to forbid the exercise of powers which depended on such seizin. This view of the meaning of the sections has been uniformly adopted by all the High Courts. It is the recognized practice of this Court never to interfere with the excepted proceedings under its revisional powers, but only under the Charter.—Hurbullubh Narain Singh v. Luchmeswar Prosad Singh(1); Jagomohan Pal v. Ram Kumar Gope (2); Loke Nath Saha Chowdhry v. Nidu Biswas (3) and Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed (4) all clearly establish the view of that Court that this jurisdiction of the High Court to revise under the Criminal Procedure Code is gone. Maharaj Tewari v. Harcharan Rai (5) and Jhingai Singh v. Ram Partap (6) show that the Allahabad High Court takes the same view. And In re Pandurang Govind (7) and In re Pandurang Govind (8) lay down the same principle. On the above reasoning and uniform authority of all the High Courts, we hold that a petition does not lie under section 439 to revise these proceedings.

It is next argued by Mr. Seshargiri Aiyar that these words "otherwise comes to its knowledge" might have reference to the power of the High Court under the Charter in the exercise of its superintendence and that the High Court can call for records under those powers and then proceed to exercise the powers under section 439. The answer to this is that the High Court, in its exercise of its powers under the Charter, has never purported to deal with cases except where there has been an improper exercise of jurisdiction. Further, it would be an extraordinary reading of the Criminal Procedure Code to suggest that it clothed the High Court in the exercise of its powers under the Charter with the whole of the powers that it can exercise on appeal, while at the same time it provided a special machinery apart from the Charter by which the High Court could exercise those powers.

It has never yet been suggested that the Criminal Procedure Code intended to set up two different procedures in revision; one, the ordinary procedure under section 435, 438 and 439; and another by the Charter Act and section 439. Whatever these words in section 439 and the word "otherwise" in section 438 have reference to, it must be some power which the Legislature assumed to exist in the High Court, the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate under the Criminal Procedure Code. This has been expressly decided with reference to the words in section 438 in Nobin Kristo Mookerjee v. Russic's Lall Laha (9), where the Court used the following language at page 272: "We think that these words 'or otherwise' being words of general import following the particular words 'under section 435' must be construed according to the usual rule and that they mean not in an any other way whatsoever but in any other way provided by the Code" and the Court declined to accept the contention that they gave the District Magistrate a power quite, independent of the power conferred upon him in cases in which he has proceeded under section 435. We entirely concur with this view. That these words "or otherwise" in section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot, of course, have reference to any power outside the Criminal Procedure Code, is clear from the fact that the Code created the Judicial Officers whose powers are dealt with therein and that their powers must necessarily be found within the four corners of the Code. That being so, there is no reason why a wider meaning

(1) 26 C. 188; 3 C. W. N. 49.
(2) 28 C. 416.
(3) 29 C. 382; 6 C. W. N. 469.
(4) 33 C. 352 (F. B.); 2 C. L. J. 259; 9 C. W. N. 1059; 2 Cr. L. J. 637.
(5) 26 A. 144; A. W. N. (1903) 212.
(6) 31 A. 150; 6 A. L. J. 113; 9 Cr. L. J. 382; 1 Ind. Cas. 762.
(7) 24 B. 527.
(8) 25 B. 179.
(9) 10 C. 268.

should be given to the words "or otherwise comes to its knowledge" in section 439 and reference sought to be made to the Charter to explain their meaning. If the words in section 438 are limited to powers to be found in the Code, as they must be, the words in section 439 should be similarly limited. They are not words which confer a power. They are words which save any power that exists and it is not unusual for statutes to contain saving general words of this nature.

The practical importance of the question we have just considered lies in this. If the order is open to revision under section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, the petitioners may ask us to go into the record of the case, at any rate, to the extent of considering whether there is evidence to support the Magistrate's conclusion, or whether any grave irregularity in procedure has been committed, and to bear such facts in mind in deciding as to whether to interfere or not. Of course, the power of interference in revision is discretionary; but under section 439, the advisability of interference would be determined on the same consideration as in an ordinary criminal case.

Under section 15 of the Charter Act, on the other hand, it has never been customary to interfere—certainly in cases of this class—except where it can be said that the Magistrate's order was passed without jurisdiction. This is most clearly laid down by a Bench of this Court in Bhaskaruni Kesavarayudu v. Bhaskaruni Chalapatriyadu (10), where their Lordships say: "The Magistrate had jurisdiction to act under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code and this Court has no jurisdiction to interfere."

Our attention has been drawn to a single case, in which interference has been exercised on other grounds—Reid v. Richardson (11). In that case, no doubt, the High Court found that the Magistrate had jurisdiction; but, nevertheless, went into the merits of the case, decided that an order under section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, was the proper order to be passed, and not that passed by the Magistrate under section 145, and disposed of the case accordingly. In so doing, they placed it on record that they were departing from the usual course and justified the departure on the unusual circumstances of the case. We cannot attach much importance to an isolated instance of this kind in the face of the otherwise uniform practice to the contrary; and we may say at once that we can discern no exceptional circumstances in the case before us which would justify departure from the usual course. In a later case of the same Court, Hurbullubh Narain Singh v. Luchmeswar Prosad Singh (1), the view taken was that, "although powers as a Court of Revision under the Code (Criminal Procedure Code) cannot be exercised, still, if an order challenged be without jurisdiction, that is to say, if it be outside those sections, the mere fact of the order purporting to be so passed would not bring it within those sections so as to debar the exercise of powers under section 15 of the Charter Act to set it aside as null and void and without jurisdiction." Precisely the same view is taken in Mahadeo Kunwar v. Bisu (12) and in In re Pandurang Govind (7).

We, therefore, propose, in dealing with the present case, to confine ourselves to considering whether the order of the Magistrate which we are asked to revise was passed without jurisdiction. The only ground on which the jurisdiction of the Magistrate in the present case is attacked is his failure to record in the preliminary order passed by him under the first clause of section 145, Criminal Precedure Code, the grounds on which he was satisfied that a dispute existed likely to cause a breach of the peace. The order itself runs as follows: "Whereas on information received from the Tahsildar of Chirakkal, and the Inspector of Police, Cannanore Division, I am satisfied that there is a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning the possession of * * *". Section 145 requires that the preliminary order shall be in writing and shall state the grounds of the Magistrate's being so satisfied. We do not think this requirement has been complied with in the present case. The contention of the learned Vakil for the petitioners is that failure to do so goes to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and renders all subsequent proceedings null and void and without jurisdiction. His chief reliance is on the principle

(10) 31 M. 318; 18 M. L. J. 343; 8 Cr. L. J. 205; 4 M. L. T. 301.

(11) 14 C. 361.

(12) 25 A. 537; A. W. N. (1903) 102.

laid in a Privy Council case reported as Nusserwanjee Pestonjee v. Meer Mynoodeen Khan wallud Meer Sudroodeen Khan Bahadoor (13). This ruling cannot, in our opinion, be extended to the case before us. The judgment delivered so long ago as 1855 deals with the effect of the failure to specify in a deed of submission to arbitration the time within which the award was to be given. Bombay Regulation VII of 1827, section 3, requires that this should be specified in the deed of submission, and the Privy Council held that the omission constituted a fatal objection to the validity of the award given thereunder. They stated that, "Where jurisdiction was given to a Court by an Act of Parliament or by a Regulation in India and such jurisdiction is only given upon certain specified terms contained in the Regulation itself, it is a universal principle that these terms must be complied with in order to create and raise the jurisdiction, for if they be not complied with, the jurisdiction does not arise." In applying these observations, the important words are, "Where such jurisdiction is only given on certain specified terms". That means where jurisdiction is "founded" on compliance with certain preliminary conditions. The Regulation under consideration in that case ousts under certain specified conditions the jurisdiction of the ordinary tribunals constituted by law and gives jurisdiction to a private tribunal constituted ad hoc and having no existence apart from the particular purpose for which it was constituted. Their Lordships held that these specified conditions must be rigidly and exactly fulfilled. In the present case, the section gives to ordinary tribunals in the shape of certain classes of Magistrates the power to do certain things and we are clearly of opinion that the principles laid down in the above ruling have no application to the case before us. If the jurisdiction of a Magistrate to take action under the Criminal Procedure Code is destroyed by failure to comply with any provision of the Code as to his preliminary procedure, then it would have to be held, for example, that failure to sign the complainant's statement on oath as required by section 200, Criminal Procedure Code, rendered any subsequent trial and conviction null and vied and without jurisdiction. It may be suggested that such an irregularity would be covered by section 537, Criminal Procedure Code. But that section might, with equal propriety, be invoked to cover the omission with which we are concerned.

We need do no more than refer to Subramania Aiyar v. King-Emperor (14) which, has been cited on behalf of the petitioners That ruling simply deals with the effect of disobedience to an express provision of law as to the mode of trial and in no way touches on the effect of an error of procedure antecedent to the trial or the jurisdiction of the Court. Indeed, it shows that the case in Moore's Indian Appeals cannot be read as contended for by Mr. Seshagiri Aiyar, for, if it should be so read, then the Privy Council, in this later case, would have held that the whole trial was without jurisdiction owing to the illegality of the charge which is at the inception of the trial.

The applicability of both these rulings to a case like the present has been carefully considered by two learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court (Rampini and Mookerjee, JJ.) in their order of reference in the case of Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed (4) and they have arrived at the same conclusions as ourselves.

The exact effect of an omission to set forth in a preliminary order under section 145 the grounds of the Magistrate's opinion has been considered in several cases both in this and other High Courts, the conclusions arrived at being by no means uniform. In this Court, we have on the one side the ruling of Munro and Sankaran Nair, JJ., in Posuka Kulla v. Chikka Hiria (15), and on the other side the ruling of Subramania Iyer, J., in Sayid Mahomed Ghouse Sahib v. Sayid Khadir Badshaw (16) and In the matter of Chinnappudayan (17) and of Wallis, J., in Posuka Kallu v. Chikka Hiria (15), which was the subject of a Letters Patent Appeal in the case first quoted. Opinions might, therefore, appear to be equally divided: but a consideration of the judgments in the above cases tends, in our opinion, strongly against petitioner's contention. Subramania Iyer, J., was, undoubtedly, of opinion that the failure to

(13) 6 M. I. A. 134.

(14) 25 M. 61; 11 M. L. J. 233; 3 Bom. L. R. 540; 5 C. W. N. 866; 28 I. A. 257 (P. C.).

(15) 4 M. L. T. 213; 8 Cr. L. J. 399.

(16) 16 M. L. J. 148; 3 Cr. L. J. 487.

(17) 30 M. 548; 3 M. L. T. 18; 7 Cr. L. J. 28.

record reasons in the preliminary order did not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. Wallis, J., was of the same opinion. He does not discuss the question but adopts the reasoning of the referring Bench in Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed (4), already referred to. Munro and Sankaran Nair, JJ., do not give reasons for differing from his view, beyond distinguishing the Calcutta case on the ground that in that order, a Police report was mentioned as the basis of the order. If this be a valid ground of distinction, we may point out that in the order in the present case, the Magistrate sets forth that he is satisfied "on information received from the Tahsildar of Chirakkal and the Inspector of Police, Cannanore Division." It is, therefore, by no means clear (to put it on the lowest ground) that the Bench would have held that the Magistrate's jurisdiction was defective in the present case.

But, apart from this, we may point out with great respect for the learned Judges composing the Bench that they do not appear to have considered the very weighty reasoning of Rampini and Mookerjee, JJ., in support of their views on their second point of reference. It is this reasoning which appears to have been relied on by Wallis, J., and in this reasoning we also concur. It appears to us to be so conclusive that we cannot usefully add anything to it.

It may, of course, be argued that the views of the referring Bench on this point have not been specifically endorsed by the Full Bench which confined itself to answering the 1st question propounded. But, as we have already stated, the arguments of the Bench are, to our mind, convincing even without other authority. The Full Bench has most certainly suggested no dissent therefrom; and we may add that having answered the 1st question in the negative, holding that the initial order was not substantially defective, they could not possibly have come to any other conclusion than one, that the omission to record grounds in the preliminary order did not affect the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.

This is the view which commends itself to us, although we are glad to fortify ourselves by the weighty authority and careful reasoning which we have quoted. The Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court having stated the law of that Court in Khosh Mahomed Sirkar v. Nazir Mahomed (4), it is not necessary to discuss the earlier Calcutta rulings relied on by the learned Vakil for petitioners. [Mohesh Sowar v. Narain Bag (18), Nityanund Roy v. Paresh Nath Sen (19), etc.] The essential requisite to give a Magistrate jurisdiction under section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, is that he must be satisfied from information of some sort that a dispute exists likely to cause a breach of the peace concerning land or water or the boundaries thereof in his jurisdiction. Once he is so satisfied, his jurisdiction is complete and his subsequent action must be considered in relation to procedure, not jurisdiction. For the above reasons, we decline to interfere with the Magistrate's order, and dismiss the petition.

It is none-the-less the duty of all Magistrates to comply strictly and fully with these and all other provisions of the Code and of District Magistrates, where necessary, to draw the attention of Subordinate Magistrates to this point.

Petition dismissed.

(18) 27 C. 981.
(19) 32 C. 771; 9 C. W. N. 621; 2 Cr. L. J. 342.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 316 OF 1912.
April 12, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Holmwood and Mr. Justice Imam.
JABBAR SHEIKH—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER
versus
TOMIZ SHEIKH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) s. 263—Summary trial—Refusal by Magistrate to take evidence, if legal—Recording evidence not same as hearing evidence.

Section 263 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not excuse a Magistrate from hearing the evidence of all witnesses. It only excuses him from recording the evidence of any of the witnesses. Recording evidence is not the same as hearing evidence. In all criminal trials, if the accused denies the charge, the complainant and such witnesses as he may produce must be examined and the case must be decided upon the effect of their evidence.

JAI GOVIND v. EMPEROR.

Rule against the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Tangail, dated January 4th 1912, acquitting the accused under section 245, Criminal Procedure Code.

Babu Atulya Charan Bose, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—This Rule must be made absolute on the ground on which it was issued. We are surprised to find that the learned Sub-Divisional Officer should so misapprehend the provisions of the law under section 263, Criminal Procedure Code. That section does not excuse the Magistrate from hearing the evidence of all witnesses. It excuses him from recording the evidence of any of the witnesses. But it is an elementary point that recording evidence is not the same as hearing evidence. In all criminal cases, if the accused denies the charge, the complainant and such witnesses as he may produce must be examined and the case must be decided upon the effect of their evidence. The order of acquittal is, therefore, clearly without jurisdiction, having been made without evidence having been heard.

The order of the lower Court is set aside and there will be a re-trial before any Magistrate the District Magistrate may direct.

Rule made absolute.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION No 19 OF 1912.

March 26, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Lindsay, A. J. C.

JAI GOVIND—ACCUSED

versus

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 110, 122—Joint trial of more persons than one—Evidence against each person—Persons of bad character seen with accused, effect of—Sureties not to be rejected merely on Police report.

Where a number of persons are tried jointly upon a charge under section 110, Criminal Procedure Code, it is incumbent upon the Magistrate to exercise great care and caution in dealing with the evidence and to insist that definite evidence be given against each person who is charged.

Where the evidence amounted to nothing more than that some persons said to be of bad character had been seen on occasions at the Kothar where the accused did his work:

Held, (1) that it did not justify the Magistrate in holding that the accused was a dangerous dacoit and extortioner and habitual protector and harbourer of thieves;

(2) that Magistrates have no authority to reject sureties merely upon an unfavourable report of the Police.

Emperor v. Parmeshur, 7 O. C. 113; 1 Cr. L. J. 459 and Ramanand Singh v. Emperor, 8 Cr. L. J. 344; 11 O. C. 267, approved.

Appeal against an order of the District Magistrate, Kheri, dated 19th January 1912, upholding that of the Deputy Magistrate, Kheri, dated 30th November 1911.

Mr. A. P. Sen, for the Applicant.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order passed in appeal by the District Magistrate of Kheri, upholding an order passed by a Deputy Magistrate, Abdul Latif Khan, by which he directed the applicant, Jai Govind, to furnish security for good behaviour for a period of one year. The grounds taken in revision are shortly that the evidence received by the Court of first instance was not of a character which was admissible to prove the facts charged against the applicant and that even if the order of the Magistrate can be justified on the merits, he has acted illegally in refusing to accept the security which was tendered in accordance with the order. In order to understand the nature of the case which was set up against Jai Govind, it is necessary to refer in the first instance to the order of the Court by which he was called on to show cause why he should not be bound over. It is stated in the order that the Magistrate had received information that Jai Govind was a very dangerous dacoit, that he was a habitual extortioner, that he was an associate of thieves and badmashes and gave them secret help. It is not quite clear from the language of this order under what particular clause of section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure it was intended to proceed against Jai Govind. The description of him as a dacoit would seem to show that one of the clauses under which he was supposed to be liable was clause (a); the reference to extortion would indicate that he was liable under clause (d) and the allegation that he was in league with thieves and badmashes and gave them secret help seems to show that he was considered also liable under clause (c). The description of him as dangerous

(khaternak) dacoit might also be taken as an indication that he was liable as well under clause (f). It is to be noted that 15 other persons as well as Jai Govind were called upon to show cause, and that all these persons were tried together jointly. While it may not be contrary to law to have a joint trial in this manner in all cases, it is perfectly obvious that in dealing with a large number of persons like this, it is incumbent upon the Magistrate to exercise great care and caution in dealing with the evidence and to insist that definite evidence be given against each person who is charged. It is quite clear from a perusal of the record in this case that these precautions were not observed. The Deputy Magistrate has written an incoherent and confusing order from which it is very difficult to extract what his findings really were; and in appeal, the District Magistrate has dealt with the case in a rather perfunctory fashion and has not considered the evidence with sufficient care in order to see how it affected each and every one of these accused persons. So far as I can gather from the confused order which the Magistrate has written, he seems to have come to the conclusion that Jai Govind, who is a Zilladar in a village called Korara, and Lalta Prasad, who is a Patwari of the village, were both in league with the other 14 accused who constituted a band of persons who were habitual dacoits and robbers. He seems to find that these two men got money from these dacoits and assisted them and protected them in order to enable them to carry on their criminal exploits. I have had to peruse all the evidence in this case which was tendered for the prosecution and the result of my examination is that, in my opinion, a great deal of it was altogether irrelevant and ought not to have been admitted. Taking it generally, what we find is this, that the witnesses deposed in the first place that all the accused persons were persons of bad character and bad reputation. After having made these vague and sweeping statements, they appear to have been asked in particular with regard to the Patwari and Jai Govind. With reference to these two persons, their statements were in most instances to the effect that they had seen various of the other accused associating at one time or another with Jai Govind and sitting at the Kothar or rent office where as a Zilladar he carried on his work. There is evidence to show that this Kothar is at the road-side and that the witnesses, who depose to having seen the other accused assembled there, merely saw them in a casual way as they passed along the road. One of the witnesses, indeed, went a good deal further than this. He is a man called Mata Din who was brought out of Jail to give evidence in the case. Mata Din admitted that he was a member of the gang of dacoit, along with the majority of the accused persons in this case. He stated that Lalta Prasad and Jai Govind were friends of the gang although they did not actually take part in any of the dacoities which had been committed. He stated that on one occasion, Jai Govind had supplied the dacoits with powder and shot. It is obvious that the statement of a criminal like Mata Din could not possibly be accepted without the most convincing corroboration of which there is really none in the record. It will not do, therefore, to rely upon the evidence of Mata Din in dealing with this case. I may refer now to some of the statements made by the other prosecution witnesses in the case. One of these, Ram Bharose is the headman of a neighbouring village. He stated that, with the exception of Lalta and Jai Govind, all the rest of the accused were thieves and dacoits. He stated that Lalta and Jai Govind were friends of these men and received from them a share of the property stolen in the course of robberies and dacoities. His own words are:—"They, that is, Lalta and Jai Govind, make profits from thieves and dacoits, so they call them into their houses and make them sit down." Obviously, this latter statement is a mere matter of inference, that is to say, the witness assumes that because these men associate with one or other of these dacoits, they must be making a profit out of them. When cross-examined, he said that Lalta and Jai Govind were heads of the gang because he had seen badmashes frequenting their houses (waisa hi uthte baithte dekha). Another witness Chhedi says that he knows Lalta and Jai Govind and that he knows that they are visited by men of bad character. In cross-examination, all he could say was that he had seen Lalta and Jai Govind in the bazar with two or three of these men on one occasion. He was unable to say when this occasion was or who the men were he had seen with these persons. Hira Lal, another witness, says that Jai Govind receives visits from these bad characters who assemble at Jai Govind's house to smoke tobacco and charas. The evidence of one of the witnesses named Dina is instructive. After stating that the badmashes paid visits to Lalta and Jai Govind, he added that there must be some profit in this friendship for otherwise why should these two men allow bad characters to come to their houses. Here, again, we have the witness deposing not to actual facts but to his inference from facts he has seen. There was also some evidence to the effect that on one occasion, certain crops had been cut down by one or two persons who were described as being servants of Jai Govind. So far as this part of the case was concerned, the statements of the witnesses who depose to this incident are extremely vague and in fact it would appear that their evidence on this point is nothing more than mere hearsay. It is hardly necessary to analyze the evidence in greater detail, for taken as a whole it amounts to nothing more than vague statements that some of the accused who are said to be of bad character have been seen on occasions at the Kothar where Jai Govind does his work. Beyond this, the evidence does not really establish anything against Jai Govind and, this being so, I do not think that the Magistrate was justified in holding that it made out the charges, which were preferred against Jai Govind, namely, that he was a dangerous dacoit and extortioner and habitually protected and harboured thieves. The whole of the evidence against this accused person is of an extremely vague and flimsy description. I have a few remarks to add about the conduct of the Magistrate with respect to the securities which were tendered to him. It appears that two persons offered themselves as sureties for Jai Govind's good behaviour. One of these was a man called Lalji. His security bond after being filed was sent to the Tahsildar who reported that the security offered was adequate. After this, the Deputy Magistrate sent the bond to the Sub-Inspector of Pasgawan Police Station. That officer reported that Lalji was a man of exceptionally good character but that by reason of his extremely good character he did not think he was a person who was likely to be able to control Jai Govind and keep an eye over his behaviour. On this, the Deputy Magistrate at once rejected the security. This was a most improper proceeding on the part of the Deputy Magistrate. It is, I must confess, a new experience to me to find a Police officer reporting unfavourably upon a person who has offered his security merely on the ground of his excessive virtue. As a rule, where a Police officer has anything to say against such a person being accepted as surety, it is on the ground of his vices and not of his virtues. However, be that as it may, it has been repeatedly ruled that a Magistrate is not entitled to reject a surety merely on the report of a Tahsildar or Police officer. The law is well explained in the case reported as Emperor v. Parmeshur (1), which was followed in another case to be found in Ramanand Singh v. Emperor(2). At page 115 of the former report, it was laid down by a Bench of this Court that there was no objection to a Magistrate's making a reference to a Tahsildar both as to the means and the respectability of persons who offered themselves as sureties but if the Tahsildar's report is unfavourable or if the Police officer offers any objection to the sureties, then before the sureties are rejected, notice of the report or objection should be given to the person bound over and the Magistrate should give both him and the Police an opportunity of adducing evidence. It was laid down that Magistrates have no authority to reject sureties merely upon an unfavourable report of the Police and in the case which I am referring to, the order of the Magistrate rejecting the surety on a mere Police report was set aside as bad in law. So much for the security offered by Lalji. The second surety, who came forward to make himself responsible for Jai Govind's good behaviour, was his own father Bans Gopal. He filed the surety bond which was reported on by the Tahsildar on 1st December 1911, as being adequate. Inquiry was then made from the Police station at Gola. The Sub-Inspector reported that he knew nothing against Bans Gopal's character and suggested that if the Magistrate thought fit, he might make a reference to the Police officers of Lakhimpur and Phulbehar. Accordingly, a report was called for from the officer-in-charge of the Lakhimpur Police station. That report was not unfavourable. Then a report was called for from the Phulbehar Police station on the 21st December 1911. After about a month, the Sub-Inspector of that Thana gave a satisfactory report about Bans Gopal. Sometime after this, the Magistrate seems to have thought that it was advisable to make further inquiry, so he sent for a report from the Police station of Pasgawan. On the 7th February, a report was sent from the latter Thana saying that there was no objection to Bans Gopal being accepted as surety. On the 13th February, that is, about 2½ months after Bans Gopal had filed the security, the Deputy Magistrate ordered it to be filed with the record until such time as the accused produced another surety in the place of Lalji who had been rejected. All this time, it will be remembered, Jai Govind was undergoing rigorous imprisonment in Jail. I consider that the conduct of the Deputy Magistrate in this case was most illegal and improper and I am surprised that some notice of it was not taken by the District Magistrate when the case came before him in appeal. Referring to the Civil List, I find that the Magistrate is a gentleman of between four and five years' service, who is in the sixth grade of Deputy Collectors. It might have been expected, therefore, that after a service extending over this period, he would havebeen able to deal with a case like this with some regard for the provisions of the law on the subject. But I am bound to say that from what I have seen of his proceedings in this case, I am of opinion that he is totally unfit to be entrusted with the investigation of cases under section 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(1) 7 O. C. 113; 1 Cr. L. J. 459.
(2) 11 O. C. 267; 8 Cr. L. J. 344.

I accept this application and set aside the order of the Court below. I direct that the order calling upon Jai Govind to furnish security be set aside and he be at once set at liberty.

Application accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 88 OF 1909.

September 26, 1912.

Present:—MR. Justice Ayling and Mr. Justice Napier.

SRI SRI NADADURU RAJAGURU SATAGOPALA CHARLU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SATRUGHNA BEHARA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 103, 165 (2) & (3)—Search—Failure to call witnesses—Illegality—"Conduct the search in person", meaning of.

Section 165 (2) does not mean that an officer-in-charge of a Police station or Investigating Officer personally conducting a search must himself make the search, e. g., ransack boxes, examine the roof, dig up the floor, or otherwise seek for the property. Nor is it necessary that all these processes must take place under his eye. The meaning of the section is, that the officer should be present on the spot and exercise a general supervision over the search, in contradistinction to the cases where he is unable to go to the spot, and deputes a subordinate by a written order to conduct the search in his place.

The failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses to a search, that is, failure to strictly comply with the provisions of section 103, does not make a search illegal.

Appeal from the decree of the District Court of Ganjam, in O. S. No. 1 of 1908.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Aiyangar, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit is brought to recover damages for the wrongful acts of denfendants (respondents) in maliciously searching plaintiff's (appellant's) house on 17th June 1907 in connection with a case of house-breaking and theft in 1st defendant's house. Second defendant is the Police Inspector who conducted the search.

It is not argued before us that there is any evidence of malice on the part of the 2nd defendant but is contended that the search was illegal in certain particulars and, therefore, wrongful such as to give rise to an action for damages.

On the evidence before us, we are unable to find any illegality in the search. The Inspector is said to have remained outside the house while the actual search was being made by two constables: and the learned Vakil for the appellant argues, relying on the ruling of Boddam, J., in Venkatapp Naidu v. Emperor (1), that this was L conducting the search in person within the meaning of section 165 of the Criminal Procedure Code. With all respect to the learned Judge who decided that case, we feel bound to differ from his view. We do not understand the section to mean that an officer-in-charge of Police station or Investigating Officer personally conducting a search must himself make the search, e. g., ransack boxes, examine the roof, dig up the floor, or otherwise seek for the property. Nor do we understand it to be necessary that all those processes must take place under his eye. What we do understand the section to mean is, that the officer should be present on the spot and exercise a general supervision over the search, in contradistinction to the cases where he is unable to go to the spot, and deputes a subordinate by a written order to conduct the search in his place.

(1) 17 M. L. J. 323; 6 Cr. L. J. 105.

It is next argued that the Inspector's failure to call inhabitants of the locality as witnesses to the search renders it illegal. For this, Inspector has given an explanation and the failure to strictly comply with the provisions of section 103, does not, in our opinion, make a search illegal [vide Queen Empress v. Raman (2).]

We find no illegality in the search.

As regards the 1st defendant, the search was admittedly made in consequence of information furnished not by him but by two dandasis. We can find nothing from which it could be inferred that these dandasis were instigated by 1st defendant nor can we infer malice from the fact that 1st defendant professed to identify a bag of money found in the search.

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 21 M. 83.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 1488 OF 1911.

January 17, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Holmwood and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

PRANKHANG AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Right of private defence—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 97, 99—Search of accused's house—Specific article—General search for stolen property, whether authorised by law—Further inquiry—Magistrate's power to direct further inquiry, whether absolute—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 94, 165, 435, 437.

Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99 of the Indian Penal Code, to defend property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling within the definition of criminal trespass.

The law does not empower a Police officer to search an accused's house for anything but the specific article which has been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized, and the law cannot be got over by using such an expression as "stolen property relevant to the case."

A right of private defence exists against such an unauthorized search.

A Magistrate has not an absolute right to order further inquiry in any case under section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code. If he finds no illegality, impropriety or irregularity and nothing incorrect in the proceeding of the Court below, he is not empowered to set aside an order of discharge upon other grounds, or upon no ground at all.

Rule against an order directing further inquiry in the case of the petitioners who were discharged, made by the Deputy Commissioner of Dibrugarh, on August 30th, 1911.

Mr. Bardalai, for the Petitioners.

Mr. K N. Chaudhuri, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This was a Rule calling upon the Deputy Commissioner of Dibrugarh to show cause why the order directing further inquiry into this case should not be set aside on the ground that the order of discharge was correct in law and could not be impugned in view of the ruling in Bajrangi Gope v. King-Emperor (1).

The learned Counsel who appears to show cause does not attempt to support the order on the ground taken by the learned Magistrate, that the point of law laid down in that ruling should be reconsidered. He takes a new point that whatever right of private defence the petitioner Prankhang may have had, his neighbours could have had no right to assemble and attack the Police, and he bases his contention on some remarks in this very judgment in the case of Bajrangi Gope v. The King-Emperor (1). There we said: "The search was, therefore, not a legal search and two, at any rate, of the petitioners who were the part-owners and occupiers of the house had the right of private defence. The common object of the riot, therefore, failed and the conviction under section 147 was also bad. But we see no reason to disturb the conviction under section 323. There was no justification for calling in the neighbours to beat the Police after they had gone out of the hut, and we uphold that part of the conviction." These remarks are no warrant whatever for holding that the neighbours in this case had not a right of private defence as laid down in section 97. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99, to defend property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling within the definition of criminal trespass. Now, what was found in the evidence here is that Prankhang, in the exercise of his right of private defence, pushed the Sub-Inspector, thereupon the Sub-Inspector ordered two constables to climb on his roof and break into the house; whereupon the villagers assumed a threatening attitude and threatened to cut them to pieces if they entered the house. They were, therefore, engaged in defending the property of another from an act which amounted to criminal trespass. Of course, if they had executed their threat and had cut the constables to pieces, they would not have been able to plead that they were not exceeding that right. But, as a matter of fact, the empty threat appears to have been quite sufficient and no further damage was done. We, therefore, think, on the ground urged by the learned Counsel, which is, of course, a ground on the merits, that there is no case for further inquiry.

(1) 15 C. W. N. 343; 38 C. 304; 13 C. L. J. 630; 9 Ind. Cas. 64; 12 Cr. L. J, 8.

PRANKHANG v. EMPEROR.

As regards the ground of law upon which further inquiry appears to have been ordered, we find that the learned Magistrate acted upon an erroneous opinion tendered to him by the Legal Remembrancer of the Eastern Province. That was the sole ground for ordering further proceedings except that he also claims absolute right to order further proceedings in any case under section 437, Criminal Procedure Code. The learned Legal Remembrancer apparently was of opinion that the ruling in Bairangi Gope v. King-Emperor (1), if it intended to lay down that a Police officer is not empowered to search an accused's house for stolen property relevant to the case, is not a correct statement of the law and the learned Magistrate in his explanation refers to the ruling in the well known case of The Nizam of Hyderabad v. Jacob (2), as supporting this contention. We need hardly point out, as the learned Counsel for the Crown has frankly admitted, that that case has nothing whatever to do with the question now before us, and we desire again to point out that the law does not empower a Police officer to search an accused's house for any thing but the specific article which has been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized and the law cannot be got over by using such an expression as "stolen property relevant to the case." Such expressions are vague and misleading and the terms of the law are extremely specific. As long as that law is not amended, the Police cannot be said to be empowered to make any search not authorized by that law.

We further wish to point out, with reference to the Magistrate's opinion that it is open to him to order further proceedings in any case under section 437, that that section is limited by the words "on examining any record under section 435" and that section 435 lays down that a Court may call for and examine any record for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court. It cannot, therefore, be said that, if a Magistrate finds no illegality, or impropriety or irregularity and nothing incorrect in the proceeding, that he is empowered to set aside an order of discharge upon other grounds, or upon no ground at all.

The Rule is made absolute. The order of the lower Court must be discharged and further proceedings against the petitioners dropped.

Rule made absolute.

(2) 19 C. 52.

EMPEROR v. GULSHAH.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 171 OF 1911.

March 21, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Crouch, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

GULSHAH valad BACHAL AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 97—Private defence, right of—Defence of property and body—Reasonable force to defend possession.

No person can take the law into his own hands and forcibly recover possession.

But the law allows every person to use reasonable force to defend his possessions from a trespasser.

Where A, as owner of cattle, is in possession of the cattle and B. endeavours to dispossess him by trying to seize the cattle, the right of private defence exercised by A. in such a case is in reality a right of private defence of the body, though exercised with the object of defending property.

Mr. Partabrai D. Punnawani, for the Applicants.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The applicants have been convicted of the offence of rioting in that they used force to oppose the taking of their cattle to the pound by the complainant.

The Sessions Judge finds that the cattle were not in the possession of the complainant and that the complainant had no right to seize them. He has, nevertheless, convicted the accused because they used force and because they had no right of private defence of their property under section 97 (2). This section has, however, no application, for the right of private defence exercised by the accused in this case, though exercised with the object of defending property, is in reality a right of private defence of the body. No doubt, if the complainant had taken possession of the cattle of the accused, then, however wrongful that act may have been, the accused would not be entitled to take the law into their own hands and forcibly recover possession. But here the accused, as owners of the cattle, were still in possession of the cattle and it was the complainant who by trying to seize the cattle was endeavouring to dispossess them. And there is no doubt that the law allows every person to use reasonable force to defend his possessions from a trespasser. The subject has been discussed in para. 233 of Mayne's Commentaries on the Indian Penal Code, where it is pointed out that "in such circumstances, a justification of a battery in defence of possession, though it arose in defence of the possession, yet in the end it is a defence of the person."

HEM CHANDRA KAR v. MATHUR SANTHAL.

It is said that the accused used more force than was necessary, but we do not find that the complainant was beaten or even seriously assaulted.

We, therefore, reverse the convictions and sentences.

Convictions and sentences reversed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 32 OF 1909.

May 5, 1909.

Present:—Mr. Justice Caspersz and Mr. Justice Ryves.

HEM CHANDRA KAR AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

MATHUR SANTHAL—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Stay of proceedings—Rule issued by High Court—Telegram sent by High Court Vakil to Court below—Disregard of telegram—Bias against accused—Transfer of case.

A Rule for the transfer of a case was issued by the High Court upon the application of an accused person staying further proceedings before a Magistrate and the direction given by the High Court was intimated to the Magistrate by a telegram sent by the Vakil who obtained the Rule, but the Magistrate proceeded with the case disregarding the telegram;

Held, that the Magistrate acted injudiciously in going on with the case, that the conduct of the Magistrate indicated clearly the bent of his mind and his bias against the accused, and that the case ought to be transferred to another Court.

Rule upon the District Magistrate of Bankura to show cause why the case against the petitioner pending before the Deputy Magistrate of Bishnupur should not be transferred to another Court.

Babus Dasarathi Sanyal and Suresh Chandra Mukherji, for the Petitioner cited Ratnessari Pershad v. Empress, 2 C. W. N. 498, and In re Surjaya Narayan Singh, 5 C. W. N. 110, referred to in the judgment.

EMPEROR v. ISARDAS.

Babus Srish Chandra Chowdhury and Jnanendra Nath Sarkar, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—A criminal case against the petitioners is pending on the file of the Sub-Deputy Magistrate of Bishnupur (Babu K. C. Haldar), who disposed of another case, apparently relating to the same dispute between the parties on the 21st December 1908. This Rule is for transfer of the said case. Cause is shown by Babu Srish Chandra Chowdhury, Junior Government Pleader, and by Babu Jnanendra Nath Sarkar, Vakil.

The Rule was issued for the transfer of the pending case on the ground that the Sub-Deputy Magistrate had arrived at findings adverse to the petitioners in the case disposed of by him on the 21st December 1908.

Babu Dasarathi Sanyal, who appears in support of this Rule, has informed us that the Sub-Deputy Magistrate did not pay any heed to the telegram which was sent by him intimating the direction given by this Court to stay further proceedings. A supplementary affidavit, with the original telegram, has been put in, and the learned Vakil has called our attention to two cases in the Law Reports in which the learned Judges commented somewhat severely on the action of the Magistrate in disregarding a similar intimation, and, in both these cases, this Court held that the conduct of the Magistrate indicated clearly the bent of his mind and his bias against the accused.

If the Sub-Deputy Magistrate had really any suspicion or doubt in the matter, he might have asked the Muktear who made the application to verify the telegram and to satisfy him as to whether the learned Vakil in this Court was acting under instructions in the case We think that the Sub-Deputy Magistrate acted injudiciously in going on with the case on his file without paying any attention to the direction of this Court to stay proceedings.

The facts of the case are somewhat complicated but we do not think it necessary to go into details. We have already expressed our opinion in regard to the action of the Sub-Deputy Magistrate, and that would certainly justify us in directing the transfer prayed for, but it also appears to us on the papers that the two cases are somehow or other connected, if not in fact, probably in principle. That being so, we think that the Rule should be made absolute in the following manner:—That the case be transferred for disposal by any competent Magistrate, other than the present Sub-Divisional Magistrate, to be nominated by the District Magistrate of Bankura, or, in the alternative, that the District Magistrate do arrange to send some stipendiary Magistrate (from head-quarters to Bishnupur) who will dispose of the case according to law.

We make the Rule absolute and direct the records to be sent down at once.

Rule made absolute.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION APPLICATION No. 13 OF 1912.

March 21, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

ISARDAS GHANSHAMDAS—APPLICANT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, illus. (b)—Accomplice—Evidence—Presumption—Corroboration—Rule of practice—Revision—Interference on the ground of want of corroboration.

Where the act of an accomplice imports no great moral delinquency, the presumption enacted in illustration (b) to section 114 of the Evidence Act does not apply. This is recognized as a consideration controlling or rebutting that presumption in the second explanatory illustration (b) to the section.

The rule as to corroboration being necessary to accomplice evidence is a rule of practice.

Even if this rule of practice has not been adhered to by the lower Court, the High Court will not interfere on revision unless the case presents exceptional circumstances.

Emperor v. Sheikh Sahib, 3 B. 197, followed.

Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas, for the Applicant.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The accused has been convicted of an offence under section 165, Indian Penal Code, by the District Magistrate, Upper Sind Frontier, and the conviction has been upheld on appeal by the Sessions Court of Sukkur.

The only point of law raised in this application for revision is that there is no evidence, but that of accomplices for the prosecution. The payer of the bribe, Gulsher, is, it is said, an accomplice and it is urged that the Bania Jeomal, who made the payment by a transfer in his books, is also an accomplice in that he thereby co-operated in the payment.

LALU v. GURDASMAL.

Now, in the first place, it is by no means clear that Jeomal is an accomplice. The mere transfer in his books does not show that he was assisting in the offence unless it is proved that he was aware of the purpose for which the money was being paid. Of this there is no evidence beyond the fact that Gulsher told him that the money was due for a kabulyat. This statement was consistent with the money being lawfully due.

But, even supposing that Jeomal did know the nature of the transaction, he is at least only a technical accomplice. He had nothing to gain himself by the transaction and he is not liable to the suspicion that he is giving false evidence in order to shift the blame on to another—for by his evidence he is virtually his own accuser. In cases where the act of the accomplice imports no great moral delinquency, the presumption enacted in illustration (b) to section 114, Indian Evidence Act, does not apply. This is recognized as a consideration controlling or rebutting that presumption in the second explanatory illustration (b) to that section.

Again, the Rule as to corroboration being necessary to accomplice evidence is only one of practice—and even if the rule of practice has not been adhered to by the lower Court in this case, we should not be justified in interfering in revision unless the case presented exceptional circumstances. Emperor v. Seikh Saheb (1). Here we are satisfied that justice has been done by the lower Courts.

We accordingly reject this application.

Application rejected.

(1) 3 B. 197.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 37 OF 1911.

February 2, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Pratt, J. C., and Mr. Hayward, A. J. C.

LALU valad KACHO—APPLICANT

versus

GURDASMAL LADHOMAL—OPPONENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195 (6) —Sanction to prosecute—Revocation of sanction by Appellate Court—Power of High Court to grant sanction.

Section 195 (6) does not limit the right of appeal to one superior Court only.

The higher Appellate Court has power not only to grant a sanction which has been refused but also to grant a sanction which has been revoked.

A sanction which has been revoked is in effect only a sanction which has been refused.

Muthuswami Mudaliar v. Veeriar Chetti, 30 M. 382; 2 M. L. T. 239; 17 M. L. J. 266 (F. B.); 6 Cr. L. J. 102, followed.

Application for revision against an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Sukkur-Larkana.

Mr Dayaram Dhanrajmal, for the Applicant.

Mr. Rupchand Billaram, for the Opponent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for grant of sanction to prosecute the opponent for fraudulently making a false claim in the Court of the Sub-Judge of Shikarpur.

The sanction was granted by the Sub-Judge, but was revoked by the Joint Judge.

It is objected that the application cannot be entertained by this Court as section 195 (6), Criminal Procedure Code, contemplates one proceeding only in a superior Court. We find nothing in the terms of the section to justify this narrow construction. It is argued that the Appellate Court has power to grant a sanction which has been refused, but not to grant a sanction which has been revoked. But there is no substance in this distinction for a sanction which has been revoked is in effect a sanction which has been refused. The point is covered by the Full Bench decision in the case of Muthuswami Mudaliar v. Veeri Chetti (1), with which we concur.

Sanction granted.

(1) 30 M. 382; 2 M.L.T. 239; 17 M. L. J. 266 (F.B.); 6 Cr. L. J. 102.

HASAN RAZA v. BASTI BEGAM.

OUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 1 OF 1912.

March 20, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Piggott, J. C.

Saiyad HASAN RAZA—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Nawab BASTI BEGAM—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Muhammadan Law—Widow's possession in lieu of dower—Right of husband's heirs to oust her.

Where the widow of a deceased Mahomedan is proved to have obtained possession of her husband's property after his death peacefully, quietly and without fraud in lieu of her unsatisfied dower-debt, his legal heirs are not entitled to oust her until that debt has been satisfied.

Ramzan Ali Khan v. Asghari Begam, 32 A. 563; 7 A. L. J. 614; 6 Ind. Cas. 405, Mohammad Ali Naki v. Ahmad-un-Nisa, 1 O. C. Supplementary Vol., p. 6, relied upon.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional Judge of the Court of Small Causes, Lucknow, exercising powers of a Subordinate Judge, dated 31st August 1911.

Mr. Nabi-ullah, for the Appellants.

Mr. Wahajuddin Hyder and Babu Salig Ram, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The essential facts of this case are that one Nawab Abid Husain Khan died childless, leaving a widow of the name of Basti Begam. He had no other surviving relatives nearer than Wazir Ali Khan and Saulat Bahadur, his sister's sons. The present suit relates to certain house property alleged to form part of the estate of late Nawab Abid Husain, now in the possesssion of his widow Nawab Basti Begam. The plaintiff is the transferee of the interest of the two nephews, and he sues for recovery of possession against the defendant, Basti Begam, on the allegation that the parties being Mahomedans subject to the law of the Shia sect, the defendant as a childless widow takes no interest in the immoveable property left by her husband. There was some question as to whether she would not in any case take some interest in the materials of the house in suit, but it is unnecessary to discuss this point in view of the decision arrived at by the Court below, in which I entirely concur. That Court has held that the defendant obtained possession of the property in suit on the death of her husband peacefully, quietly and without fraud, in lieu of her unsatisfied dower-debt, and that, consequently, the plaintiffs are not entitled to oust her until that debt has been satisfied. The latest authority on this point is Ramzan Ali Khan v. Asghari Begam (1), where the older cases are reviewed and the law is very clearly laid down. There can be no doubt whatever on the evidence in this case that Musammat Basti Begam obtained possession on the death of her husband "peacefully, quietly and without fraud," within the meaning of the above ruling. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that this ruling should not be followed in Oudh in view of the decision of this Court in Mohammad Ali Naki v. Ahmad-un-nisa (2). This being a Bench case is binding upon me sitting as a single Judge of this Court, and the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below seems to have felt some difficulty regarding it. He lays stress upon the fact that the late Sir William Burkitt, who is one of the Judges responsible for the decision of this Court, was subsequently a party to the decision in Amani Begam v. Muhammad Karim ullah (3), in which it is suggested that a different view was taken. It seems to me, however, that there is nothing whatever in the decision in Mohammad Ali Naki v. Ahmad-un nisa (2), which conflicts in any way with the two Allahabad cases already referred to. There were particular circumstances in that case on which the learned Judges who decided it found it necessary to lay stress, and it may be possible to quote isolated passages in the judgment which lend some support to the contention urged upon me on behalf of the appellant; but where the learned Judges of this Court proceed to lay down the law generally applicable to cases of this sort, they say that the heirs are not entitled to succeed in a suit like the present against the widow, "if she has lawfully and without force or fraud obtained possession." I am satisfied that they did not intend to lay down the law in any different sense from that accepted by the Allahabad High Court. It was further contended in support of this appeal that, as regards

(1) 32 A. 563; 7 A. L. J. 614; 6 Ind. Cas. 405.
(2) 1 O. C. Sup. Vol. p. 6.
(3) 16 A. 226; (1894) A. W. N. 52.

two of the items in suit (item No. 2, being three houses in Mohalla Naurbari, and item No. 4, being one house in Mohalla Mansurnagar), the defendant cannot contend that she obtained possession of the same in lieu of her dower-debt, inasmuch as she has set up a claim that they were really her own property and formed no part of the estate of her deceased husband. This is really a question of pleading, and it seems to me that the contention of the defendant to the effect that these houses, though purchased in her husband's name, had been acquired with her money and were really her own property, has been rightly regarded in the Court below as merely supplementary to her general contention that in any case the whole of the property in suit is in her hands subject to a charge on account of dower-debt exceeding the total value of property in suit.

On this last point, it was further contended before me that it is not proved that the amount of the defendant-respondent's dower-debt exceeds the value of the property in suit. It has, no doubt, not been proved because the question of the sum due to Musammat Basti Begam on account of her dower-debt was not put in issue or determined in the present suit, but was apparently left over by consent of parties, on the ground that it was in issue in a separate suit in which Musammat Basti Begam has come into Court as plaintiff. I think the learned Subordinate Judge might have been more careful to place on record exactly what the parties did agree to regarding this issue about the amount of the dower-debt, but it is certain that they tendered no evidence on the point in the present suit, and I think I am right in presuming that the Judge acted with the consent of parties when he said that this issue was to be determined in the other suit in which Musammat Basti Begam appeared as plaintiff. I notice that in that suit this lady, though stating the amount of her dower-debt at Rs. 50,000, contented herself with claiming Rs. 25,000, only and it has been urged upon me in argument that the total value of the property left by Nawab Abid Husain Khan in the possession of his widow can be shown from the plaint in the former suit to exceed the sum of Rs. 25,000. I do not myself think that the legal point sought to be raised by this objection is one which could in any case prevail; the widow's lien in respect of her dower-debt would seem on the authorities to extend to the whole of the property in her possession, and the husband's heirs could only recover possession of any part of the property in her hands after satisfying her claim for dower-debt. Apart from this consideration, however, I do not think that the fact that Musammat Basti Begam, when coming into Court as a plaintiff, limited her claim for dower debt to the sum of Rs. 25,000, can prevent her from pleading in this suit in which she is defendant that the real amount was Rs. 50,000. I have also referred to the file of another suit connected with the estate of the late Nawab Abid Husain Khan, which is referred to in the proceedings in the Court below and I have no doubt that the property of this deceased gentleman at present in the hands and under the control of his widow does not amount to Rs. 25,000.

It only remains to be considered, therefore, whether in any case the Court below was right in passing a final decree in the present suit before the issue regarding the amount of Musammat Basti Begam's dower-debt had been finally decided between the parties, either in the present or in some other suit, and also whether the decreee as passed, which is one dismissing the suit altogether, is just to the plaintiff. In the case of Ramzan Ali Khan v. Asghari Begam (1), a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff subject to payment of the amount of the dower-debt found due. In the Privy Council case, upon which later decisions of the Indian Courts have been founded, Musammat Bibi Bachun v Sheikh Hamid Hossein (4), although the decree passed was one dismissing the suit against the widow, some stress was laid upon the fact that mesne profits had not been claimed, and the decree was so framed as to safeguard the right of the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. I think the question of the sort of decree to be passed in a suit like the present must be decided largely on the frame of the suit itself and in view of the pleadings of the parties and the proceedings in Court generally. In the present case, the suit as brought was one for ejectment against a trespasser, subject only to a plea that if the defendant as widow of the deceased were held to be entitled to a portion of the property in dispute or to its price, a decree might be passed in favour of the plaintiff for possession on payment of a specified sum. I have no doubt that the reference in this paragraph was to the question whether the defendant might not be found entitled to a share in the materials of the houses; the plaintiff never admitted any right on the part of the defendant to retain possession in lieu of dower-debt, and never moved the Court to grant him as an alternative relief a decree for possession subject to payment of the ascertained amount of such debt. I think also, as I have already stated, that the plaintiff was at least a consenting party to the course adopted by the learned Subordinate Judge in declining to determine in this suit the issue as to the amount of the dower-debt. Under all the circumstances, I am not disposed to remand this case, or to direct further inquiry, for the sake of giving the plaintiff relief in the form of a decree for possession subject to payment of a specified sum on account of dower-debt. I think, however, that it would not be unreasonable to hold that the defendant, having also herself been a consenting party to the arrangement by which the issue as to the amount of the dower bebt was to be determined in another suit, is bound by that arrangement and should not be permitted hereafter to plead the decree in this case as an absolute bar to any future suit for recovery of possession subject to payment of the ascertained amount of the dower-debt. While, therefore, in other respects affirming the decision of the Court below and dismissing this appeal, I direct that the decree of the lower Court be modified by adding to it a declaration similar to that made by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Musammat Bibi Bachun v Sheikh Hamid Hossain (4) to the effect that the plaintiff's suit is dismissed subject to his right to enforce hereafter any claim which he may have in law to recover possession of the whole or of any part of the property in dispute on payment of the ascertained amount of the dower-debt due to the defendant-respondent. This appeal has substantially failed, and I think it reasonable to order the appellant to pay all costs.

(4) 14 M. I. A. 377; 10 B.L.R. 45; 17 W.R. (P.C.) 113.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
ORDINARY ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 533 OF 1910.
May 6, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Chaudhri.
KHETTERMONI DASSI—PLAINTIFF
versus
KADAMBINI DASSI—DEFENDANT.

Hindu Law—Widow—Right to inherit—Disqualification—Physical unchastity—Malignant hostility—Refusal to live with husband and co-wife.

The only disqualification for a widow to inherit her husband's estate is one of physical unchastity.

Where a wife refused to live with her husband and her co-wife:

Held, (1) that, she was not disqualified, in the absence of any misconduct on her part, to inherit her husband's estate after his death;

(2) that the refusal to live was, under the circumstances, no evidence of hostility.

Suit for partition.

Messrs. B. C. Mitter and N. Sircar instructed by Messrs. Fox and Mondal, Solicitors for the Plaintiff.

Messrs. B. Chakravarti, A. N. Chaudhri and M. N. Basu, instructed by Messrs. T. H. Wilson and K. L. Boral, Solicitors, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit brought by a Hindu widow against her co-widow, for partition of the estate of her husband, Nilmoni Dey, who died on the 22nd May 1910. The plaintiff was married in January 1860 and the defendant in 1866. It is admitted that these are the only two heirs whom he left him surviving. The defendant, however, questioned the plaintiff's right to succeed on the ground that she bore "malignant hostility and bitterness towards her husband all through her life." It has been strenuously argued on behalf of the defendant that, under the Hindu Law, she is under the circumstances not entitled to succeed The contention, as I have understood it, is this. That the word Patni (* *) in the text of Yajnavalkya, II, 136-137, means lawfully wedded wife, one married according to one of the approved forms of marriage. The word etymologically means a wife who is an indispensable associate of her husband in religious rites and observances. That being so, she must be a sadhwi (* *) which is defined in Manu thus:—

* * * *
* * * *

Manu V, 165.

The passage is rendered by Sir William Jones thus—"While she who slights not her lord, but keeps her mind, speech and body devoted to him attains her heavenly mansion and is called sadhwi by goodmen." I may mention that Haughton in his Institutes of Manu, Edition 1825, page 372, refers to this couplet and the next one as not found in the three copies of Medhatithi that he had the opportunity of consulting. These couplets, however, appear in Kulluk Bhatta's commentaries, and we may proceed upon the basis that they are not interpolations. His note is as follows:—

* * * *
* * * *

namely, that so far as Vak and Manas, speech and mind, are concerned, this verse contains the Vidhan (*) and that, so far as the body is concerned, the mention of it is an Anuvad (*) a repetition, superfluous or self-evident. It has to be remembered that the Manava Dharma Shastra (* *) is a book of mixed religion, morality and law, and in a great many instances contains appeals to one's moral side and it is impossible to accept the whole of it as a legal thesis. These couplets occur in a chapter of miscellaneous character, dealing with edibles, impurities, and methods of purification, and finally with rules relating to the duties of women (stridharma) and can hardly be looked upon as anything more than directions for regulating one's life, some of them in the way of precepts or moral injunctions. Verse 166 says that a woman by this course of life acquires high renown in this world, and in the next, the same abode with her husband. It is quite clear that the word sadhwi has not received the wider meaning that has been given to it in Manu Smriti in dealing with the question of inheritance. In Yajnavalkya the passage about the right of a widow to inherit is the subject of a long commentary. We find that Briddha Manu as there quoted says that "the widow succeeds keeping unsullied her husband's bed, and persevering in religious observances (* *)." Katyayana is also there quoted:—"Let the widow succeed to her husband's wealth, provided she be chaste," the word used being abyabhicharini (* *), which admits of no ambiguity. Then we find in the Vyavahara Mayukha, section 8, Part II, Katyayana is again quoted, followed by a quotation from "Harita" which has been thus translated:—

"If a woman, becoming a widow in her youth, be headstrong (suspected of incontinence), a maintenance must in that case be given to her, for the support of life," II Cole. Dig., 536, ccccix. The word used is (*) which has been translated as headstrong, (suspected of incontinence)—Sankitavyabhicharaya—See Viramitrodaya, Chapter III, Part I, section 10. In Vivadachintamani, Harita is again quoted. The passage has been thus translated:—"If a young widow is untractable," &c., II Cole. Dig., 538, ccccix. The commentator says that the chaste wife is entitled to the property. In the Vishwakosa, one of the meanings given to the word Karkasa is "unchaste" "Vyabhicharini." In Saraswati Vilash, § 528, Vishnu is quoted thus: "The share allotted to women who trangress their limits may be resumed"—"who trangress their limits" means "unchaste." Narada is quoted. The passage has been thus translated:—"His women if they keep their husbasd's bed inviolate shall be maintained till their death, but if they do not, they shall not be." Narada xiii, 26.

In the Dayabhaga, these passages from Briddha Manu and Katyayana are quoted, and also another from Vyasa which has been thus translated:—"After the death of her husband, let a virtuous woman observe strictly the duty of continence," Dayabhaga, Chapter XI, sec. 1, § 43, II Cole. Dig., 528, cccc. I do not think there is any doubt whatsoever that the only disqualification for a widow to inherit her husband's estate is that one of physical unchastity. To give it a more extended sense, that she forfeits her right or does not become entitled to inherit unless she has kept her mind, speech and body devoted to her husband is not justified by the interpretation which has been put upon the passages quoted. This is also the meaning put upon them by Srikrishna in his commentary. He says sadhwi (*) means "not adulterous." As regards the authority of Srikrishna, Mr. Justice Dwarka Nath

KHETTERNONI DASSI v. KADAMBINI DASI.

Mitter says that "he is considered a greater authority as being superior even to the authority of Dayabhaga." I know that a later commentator of note does not consider Srikrishna of such high authority. But there is no question, it seems to me, upon a comparison of all the commentaries on these passages, that sadhwi (* *) means a chaste woman who keeps the bed of her husband inviolate. These passages were elaborately discussed in what is known as the "Chastity Case" by Justice Dwarka Nath Mitter. See Kery Kolitany v. Moneram Kolita (1). The question raised and decided in that case was that a Hindu widow who was unchaste was not entitled to succeed. On page 19 of the judgment, the following passage occurs: "It has been said that some of the texts quoted above refer to many other virtues besides chastity, and that the argument in favour of forfeiture would be equally strong in the case of the widow's derilictions in respect of those virtues, as in the case of her failure to preserve her chastity. But the answer to this objection is very plain. A chaste widow who has failed to perform her duties to-day may perform them on some future date. But a widow, who has once sullied the bed of her lord, not only causes her husband's soul to fall into a region of torment, but becomes from that time absolutely incompetent to do anything, for his spiritual welfare." He held that if a Hindu widow failed in her other duties, she might expiate and inherit the estate, but their non-performance was not a disqualification.

It has been further argued that, according to Narada XIII, § 21, an enemy to his father (* *) takes no share of the inheritance, that such disqualification extends to "enmity to the propositus"—(Golap Shastri's Hindu Law, 4th Edition, page 362) and as all grounds of disqualification which exclude males apply equally as against female heirs (Mitakshara II, 10 §, 8, Mayne: 7th Edition, page 811), the plaintiff in this case is not entitled to inherit. It was further argued that if disobedience and hostility were minor grounds for forfeiture, removeable by penance, the plaintiff could not inherit until she had performed the prescribed penance, and the case of Bhola Nath v. Mt. Sabitra (2) was cited in support of the contention, but what the nature of the penance is to be, has not been suggested, and need not be considered. Now, the expression * * is thus explained in Saraswati Vilash, § 152:—"Those who hate their father, i.e., those who say, 'this is not my father, etc.'" For otherwise when the son hates his father because of the latter's partiality, a share is ordained for him. In the Dayakrama Sangraha, Chap III, section 3, "an enemy to his father" is interpreted as "one who ill-treats his father, during his life time, or one who is averse to performing his obsequies when dead." In Vivada Ratnakara, Chap. V, "He who hates his father" is thus interpreted: "He who hates his father is the enemy of his father. Such hatred terminates in compassing the death of the father when he is alive and in refusing to offer for the benefit of his soul libations of water, etc., when he is dead." In Vivada Chintamoni, the commentary is: "'Enemy of the father,' one who beats his father while alive and is averse to perform his sradha, etc., after his death." In Dayatatwa, "an enemy to his father" is said to mean "one who abuses him by beating and the like while he is alive, and who is unwilling to perform his funeral obsequies when he is dead."

Assuming that malignant hostility excludes, there is not a particle of evidence of such or any hostility against the plaintiff. The only witness was the defendant herself and most of her evidence was hearsay. She is also shown to be altogether unworthy of credit, as shown by the fact that she claimed properties in her deposition as gifts against her own written statement in this case. All that her evidence comes to is that the plaintiff refused to come to her husband when sent for. After the husband married a second time, the plaintiff found it impossible to live with him owing to the treatment she received. That is all that we have against her, which is no evidence of hostility The expression "dwesh" in Narad's text, according to the commentators, means physical violation coupled with a refusal to perform his sradh, etc, and one of them says that the hatred must be such as "terminates in compassing the death" of the propositus. I hold that the plaintiff is not disqualified because she did not live with her husband or even if she refused to live with him and her co-wife. There is no evidence at all that she was guilty of any misconduct, in body, speech or mind.

(1) 13 B. L. R. (F. B.) 1; 19 W. R. 367.
(2) 6 S. D. 62 at p. 71.

I, therefore, declare that she is entitled to inherit the estate of her husband equally with her co-widow. The parties agreed that if I took the view that the plaintiff was entitled to share the inheritance with her co-widow, the estate to be divided amongst them consisted of Government promissory notes of the value of Rs. 1,09,000 and a house No. 25, Hidaram Banerji's Lane. I direct that the Government securities be divided between them in equal shares. The house is also to be divided into two equal shares in the usual way. The estate is to be held by them as Hindu widows.

Costs of the hearing of the issues raised will be treated as costs in a partition suit, that is to say, each party will bear her own costs before the decree for partition. All subsequent costs will be according to their respective shares. The defendant will bear her own costs of the commission and pay the plaintiff her costs thereof taxed for three sittings only. Costs of the inquiry as to maintenance will be taxed as costs in the cause. The amount due from the plaintiff on account of Kali Charan Dey is to be debited to her share. All other undisposed of costs will be costs in the cause.

Suit decreed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 196 OF 1911.

June 18, 1912

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, Kt., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

BAI GULAB—APPELLANT

versus

THAKORLAL PRANJIVANDAS—RESPONDENT.

Majority Act (IX of 1875), s. 3—Hindu Law—Will—Power of minor Hindu to make Will—"Minor," meaning of.

A Hindu is not competent to make a Will, unless he has attained majority under the Majority Act.

The Majority Act has modified the Hindu Law on the question of minority except in respect of marriage and adoption.

First appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Broach, in Miscelloneous Application No. 19 of 1911.

Mr. L. A. Shah, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. K. Parekh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The question in this appeal is whether a Hindu minor is competent to make a Will. The right of a Hindu to make a Will is based upon the principle that he is competent to make a disposition of his property, to take effect after his death, to the same extent to which he can make a disposition of it in his own life-time as a gift. It is clear law that a Hindu minor cannot make a gift of his property in his life-time. If that is so, it follows that he cannot make a Will in respect of that property.

But it is argued in the present case that though the testatrix, having been under eighteen years of age, was a minor according to the Indian Majority Act, she was more than fourteen years old and that, therefore, under the Hindu Law, she was not a minor.

On that ground, we are asked to hold that, according to that law, she was competent to make a Will.

But the Indian Majority Act has modified the Hindu Law on the question of minority except in respect of dower, divorce, marriage and adoption.

It is argued, however, by Mr. Shah for the appellant that the Indian Majority Act has not affected the rule of Hindu Law on the question of minority so far as the competency of a Hindu to make a gift inter vivos is concerned. That argument is clearly unsustainable. It is true the Legislature has not modified the Hindu Law so far as the competency of a Hindu to make a gift or a Will is concerned, but the Legislature has laid down what the age of majority shall be for the purposes of that competency. The Hindu law having been repealed to that extent, the law now is that no Hindu can make a Will who is less than eighteen years of age.

This is in accordance with the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Harduari Lal v. Gomi (1). We must confirm the order with costs.

Order confirmed.

(1) 8 A. L. J. 385; 33 A. 525; 9 Ind. Cas. 1017.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORDINARY ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 697 OF 1911.

June 17, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fletcher.

KESRI CHAND KOTHORI—PLAINTIFF

versus

NATIONAL JUTE MILLS, CO. LD. AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 8—Plaintiff not giving evidence—Suit to be dismissed—Defendant not entitled to prove his case.

When the plaintiff offers no evidence, the Court has no jurisdiction except to dismiss the suit for want of prosecution. In such a case, the defendant is not entitled to prove his case.

But when the plaintiff has given evidence, in that case, notwithstanding that the Court has formed an opinion in favour of the defendant, the defendant can say that he is entitled to give evidence in proof of the case he has made in his own written statement, so that in the case of an appeal, there may be no remand, but the whole case may be disposed of.

Ex parte Jacobson, In re Pincoffs, (1882) 22 Ch. D. 312; 52 L. J. Ch. 561, 48 L. T. 197, 31 W. R. 554, referred to.

Messrs. Norton, Pugh and Pearson, for Defendant No. 1.

Messrs. Jackson, Gregory and Langford James, instructed by Messrs. Leslie and Hinds, Solicitors, for Defendant No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—There is nothing to say in this suit. The plaintiff does not appear and Mr. Jackson and Mr. Norton, on behalf of the defendant, say that they wish to open their case. That is a procedure which is not contemplated by the Code of Civil Procedure. The decision of Sir George Jessel in Ex parte Jacobson, In re Pincoffs (1) does not apply to this case at all. That case was that when the Master had heard the evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff, he said he was prepared to decide on the defendant's side without calling for any evidence to be given for or on behalf of the defendant. That, of course, is a position which the defendant is not bound to take up. Under our Code, notwithstanding that at the close of the plaintiff's case, the Judge has formed an opinion in favour of the defendant, the defendant can say that he is entitled to give evidence in proof of the case he has made in his own written statement; so that in the case of an appeal, there may be no remand but the whole case may be disposed of. That is not a case where the plaintiff offers no evidence. When the plaintiff offers no evidence, the Court has no jurisdiction except to dismiss the suit for want of prosecution. This case must be dealt with on that footing. The plaintiff must pay to the defendant the costs of this suit and of the commission to England on Scale No. 2.

(1) (1882) 22 Ch. D. 312; 52 L. J. Ch. 561; 48 L. T. 197; 31 W. R. 554.

Mr. Jackson.—Will your Lordship also include reserve cost, if any?

THE COURT.—Yes.

Suit dismissed.

Solicitors for the Plaintiff: Messrs. Fox and Mondal.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 408 OF 1911.

June 25, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

EKNATH PANDOBA KOSTI—APPELLANT

versus

DAGDURAM SAMBHURAM—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation—Mortgage decree—Claim by second mortgagee for lien—Rejection of claim—Suit to establish mortgage—Parties—Mortgagor necessary party—Exclusion of time occupied by conciliation proceedings—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 11—Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1879), ss. 47, 48—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85.

A, an agriculturist under the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act, mortgaged his property to B. Subsequently, he mortgaged the same property to C. B. obtained a decree on his mortgage against A. without impleading C. When B. sought to sell the property in execution of his decree, C. intervened claiming a lien on the property. C.'s claim petition was rejected on 19th June 1907. On the 15th July 1908, C. brought a suit against A. and B. to establish his mortgage and to get rid of the order made against C. in claim proceedings. Before filing the suit, C. had to obtain a conciliator's certificate as A. was an agriculturist. If the period taken up in conciliation proceedings were deducted, the suit was within time. B. contended that this period could not be deducted as A. was not a necessary party to the suit:—

Held: (1) that although A. was not a party to the order of 19th June 1907, he was, as a person interested in the mortgaged property, a necessary party to the suit to establish the mortgage;

(2) that the period occupied by conciliation proceedings should be deducted in computing the period of limitation prescribed for the suit;

(3) that the suit was, therefore, within time.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Ahmednagar, in Appeal No. 185 of 1909, confirming that passed by the Subordinate Judge at Rahuri, in Civil Suit No. 177 of 1908.

PANCH DUAR THAKUR v. MANI RAUT.

Mr. P. P. Khare, for the Appellants.

Mr. Coyajee, with him Mr. C. A. Rele, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—It is contended in support of this second appeal that the presence of the mortgagor as a party-defendant was not necessary and that, therefore, the Conciliator's certificate does not avail the plaintiffs to bring the suit within the period of limitation under Article 11 of Schedule II to the Limitation Act.

This point is urged on the following facts: Defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the present appellants, obtained a decree upon their mortgage against their mortgagor, defendant No. 3. The present plaintiffs were not parties to that suit. Having obtained a decree upon the mortgage, the said defendants sought to sell the property in satisfaction of their decree. Thereupon, the plaintiffs intervened, claiming a lien upon the property in virtue of a mortgage in their favour subsequent to the mortgage of defendants Nos. 1 and 2. In the miscellaneous proceedings in which they intervened, the Court held their mortgage not proved and their application that the property should be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage decree of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 subject to their own mortgage was rejected. That was on the 19th of June 1907. The present is a suit to establish their right founded on that mortgage and its object is to get rid of the order passed against them in the miscellaneous proceedings. Ordinarily, the suit should have been brought under Article 11 of the Limitation Act on or before the 19th of June 1908. But it was filed on the 15th of July 1908. Prima facie, therefore, the suit was barred by limitation.

The plaintiffs, however, seek to bring the suit within the period of limitation under Article 11 on the ground that as their mortgagor, defendant No. 3, was an agriculturist, they had to apply for a certificate from the conciliator under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. They claim deduction of the period occupied in obtaining the certificate.

It is conceded by Mr. P. P. Khare for the appellants that, if the period occupied by the application for the Conciliator's certificate is excluded, the present suit is in time. But it is argued that that period should not be deducted, because, the defendant No. 3 was not a necessary party to the suit. Mr. Khare argues that the suit was merely to set aside the order passed on the 19th of June 1907 in the miscellaneous proceeding. To that order, it is true, the defendant No. 3 was not a party, but whether he was a party to that order or not, the present suit is one brought on the strength of a mortgage and the Transfer of Property Act directs that all persons interested in mortgaged property should be made parties to a suit on the mortgage. Therefore defendant No. 3 was a necessary party and the suit must be held to have been in time.

The decree is confirmed with costs.

Decree confirmed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL NO. 109 OF 1911.

April 23, 1912.

Present:—Sir Lawrence Jenkins, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr Justice Chapman.

PANCH DUAR THAKUR AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

MANI RAUT—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Order determining valuation of immoveable property to be entered in sale proclamation, if appealable—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2, 47, O. XXI, r. 66.

An order determining the value of the immoveable properties, to be entered in the sale proclamation by the executing Court, under Order XXI, rule 66 of the Civil Procedure Code, is not appealable.

Deoki Nandan Singh v. Bansi Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 371; 16 C. W. N. 124; 14 C. L. J. 35, followed.

Appeal from the order of the Sub-Judge of Darbhanga, dated January 20th, 1911.

FACTS.—The decree-holder attached certain immoveable properties of the judgment-debtor. She alleged that the value of the properties was about Rs. 11,000. The judgment-debtor said that their value would not be less than Rs. 65,000. The Court upon inquiry held the value to be Rs. 38,000. The judgment-debtor appealed.

Babus Baldeo Narayan Singh and Jyotish Chandra Sarkar, for the Appellants.

Babu Shib Chandra Palit, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from an order, and it is objected on the part of the respondent that no appeal lies. The point in dispute is one that arises under Order

XXI, rule 66, and the only point we have to consider is whether a determination of a matter under that rule is a decree and as such within section 47 and so appealable. There are a number of decisions on the old Code, which favour the view that an appeal lies. On the new Code, however, there is one decision which has been brought to our notice, that is, the decision of Mr. Justice Mookerjee in Deoki Nandan Singh v. Bansi Singh (1). I am in complete agreement with Mr. Justice Mookerjee's view of this matter, and, having regard to the new definition of the word 'decree' in section 2, sub-section (2) of the Code, I do not feel that it is necessary to go back to the earlier decisions which were based on a different definition.

The result is that, in my opinion, the preliminary objection must prevail, and the appeal must be dismissed with costs, hearing-fee three gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 16 C. W. N. 124; 14 C. L. J. 35; 10 Ind. Cas. 371.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 311 OF 1911.
July 2, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Chamier and Mr. Justice Rafique.
ABDUL AZIZ—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
BASDEO SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Abatement of suit—Suit for recovery of rent against fixed-rate tenants—Death of one tenant during pendency of appeal—Joint and several liability.

The liability of fixed-rate tenants in respect of the rent of their holding is joint and several. Where a suit is brought against fixed-rate tenants for recovery of rent and one of them dies during the pendency of an appeal against them and no attempt is made to bring the legal representatives of the deceased on the record, the appeal abates only as far as the deceased respondent tenant is concerned and the liability of the others is not affected.

Joy Gobind Laha v. Manmotha Nath Banerji, 33 C. 580, followed.

Muhammad Askari v. Radhe Ram Singh, 22 A. 307, relied upon.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge of Jaunpur.

Mr. W. K. Porter, with him Messrs. Surendra Nath Sen and Muhammad Ishaq, for the Appellant.

Mr. Hamilton, with him Messrs. A. E. Ryves, Satya Chandra Mukerji and Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought against several persons for the rent of a fixed-rate holding. The suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance, and the plaintiff appealed to the District Judge. While the appeal was pending, one of the defendants-respondents died, and the plaintiff-appellant failed to apply to the Court within the prescribed time to make his heirs respondents in his place. The Court then held that the appeal was not maintainable against the remaining respondents, and, with reference to a prayer that the Court should consider the case under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the Court held that that section did not apply to the appeal. The result was that the appeal was dismissed. This is a second appeal by the plaintiff on whose behalf it is contended (1) that the liability of the defendants to the suit was joint and several and not joint only, and, therefore, the appeal should have been allowed to proceed against the surviving respondents; (2) that section 5 of the Limitation Act applied to the case. On the first point the case seems to be covered by the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Joy Gobind Laha v. Manmotha Nath Banerji (1). That was a suit against several persons for the recovery of the rent of a holding. After an appeal had been filed by the plaintiff, one of the defendants-respondents died, and no attempt was made by the appellant to get the legal representatives of the deceased respondent substituted on the record. The remaining respondents objected that the appeal could not proceed. The Court held that as the liability of the holders of the tenure was joint and several, the appeal could proceed against the surviving respondents, and that it abated only as far as the deceased respondent was concerned. There seems to be no reason for distinguishing between the liability of several holders of a fixed-rate tenure and the liability of several tenants of any other holding. The liability of fixed-rate tenants in respect of the rent of their holding appears to be joint and several. The case is, therefore, on all fours with the case decided by the Calcutta High Court. In this connection, we may refer to the case of Muhammad Askari v. Radhe Ram Singh (2), where the Court held that the effect of section 43 of the Indian Contract Act was to exclude the right of a joint contractor to be sued along with his co-contractors. We allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court, and remand the case to that Court to be restored to the pending file and disposed of according to law. Costs in this Court will be costs in the cause.

(1) 33 C. 580.

Appeal decreed; cause remanded.

(2) 22 A. 307.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1304 OF 1910.

June 14, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Stephen and Mr. Justice Richardson.

BATUK NATH MANDAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BEPIN BIHARI CHAUDHURI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—Decree for rent—Decree against recorded tenant—Sale of tenure of share of recorded tenant—Decretal amount paid by recorded tenant's co-sharer—Co-sharer's right to be reimbursed by recorded tenant—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 41—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 102—Appeal, Second—Small Cause suit.

Plaintiff was the owner of three-sevenths and defendant No. 1 of two-sevenths of a putni tenure; but the name of the defendant No. 1 alone was recorded in the landlord's books as the holder of the tenure. In 1307, the defendant No. 1 sold his share to a stranger, and the share passed to the vendee with effect from the beginning of 1308. Subsequently, the landlord brought a suit for recovery of arrears of rent in respect of 1307 and 1308 against the defendant No. 1, the recorded tenant, and obtained a decree. In execution of the decree, the tenure was sold by auction, but the sale was set aside upon the plaintiff depositing the necessary amount which was less than Rs. 500. The plaintiff brought the present suit against defendant No. 1 for recovery of two-sevenths share of the sum so deposited. Plaintiff did not implead the vendee of defendant No. 1 as a defendant nor did he ask for any relief against him.

Held, (1) that although at the date of the institution of the suit, the defendant No. 1 had no interest in the tenure, yet the suit did not fall outside the scope of Article 41 of Schedule II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act;

(2) that as the suit was not a Small Cause suit, a second appeal was competent;

(3) that when a decree was made against defendant No. 1, the recorded tenant, he became "bound by law to pay" the decreed amount to the landlord in the terms of section 69 of the Contract Act;

(4) that the plaintiff was a person interested in the payment of this debt, and he was entitled to be "reimbursed" by the defendant No. 1, although the assignee of the latter was benefited by the payment.

Appeal from the decree of the Additional Sub-Judge of Rajshahye, dated May 17th, 1909, modifying that of the Munsif of Nattore, dated May 16th, 1908.

Babu Jotindra Nath Lahiri, for the Appellant.

Babu Rama Kanta Bhattacharyya, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STEPHEN, J.—The plaintiffs and others including the defendant No. 1 were co-sharers in a certain putni tenure, the share of the plaintiff being three-sevenths of the whole and that of the defendant No. 1 two-sevenths. It appears, however, that the name of the defendant No. 1 was alone recorded in the landlord's books as the holder of the tenure. The tenure, therefore, so far as the landlord was concerned, was represented by that defendant. In that state of things in the year 1307, the latter sold his share of the tenure to a stranger who is not a party to the suit, and the case has been argued on the footing that the share passed to the vendee with effect from the beginning of the year 1308. Subsequently, the landlord brought a suit for recovery of arrears of rent of the tenure in respect of the years 1307 and 1308, and no steps having been taken for the rectification of the landlord's books in which the name of the defendant No. 1 still stood as the holder of the tenure, the suit was brought and a decree was obtained against him alone. In execution of the decree, the tenure was sold by auction but the sale was set aside under the provisions of section 310A of the Code of 1882 upon the plaintiff depositing in Court the sum of Rs. 383-8-6 consisting of the amount (Rs. 358-8-6) due under the decree and the amount (Rs. 25) due as statutory compensation to the auction-purchaser. The plaintiff's claim in the present suit relates to the sum so deposited and may be stated as follows. Deducting three-sevenths of the whole as payable in respect of his own share of the putni, he seeks to recover two-sevenths from the defendant No. 1, liability for the balance being assigned in the plaint to other share-holders who have since paid what was due from them and with whom in this appeal we are not concerned. The defendant No. 1 by his written statement denied all liability on the ground that he had parted with his share of the tenure. The first Court found in the plaintiff's favour and gave him a decree for the whole amount of his claim against the defendant No. 1. On an appeal preferred by the latter, the Subordinate Judge in the Court below held that he was liable only in respect of so much of the claim as could be attributed to default in the payment of rent due for the year 1307 and that no liability rested upon him in respect of the year 1308. The Subordinate Judge accordingly modified the decree of the first Court and reduced the amount recoverable by the plaintiff thereunder by one-half. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court on the ground that no such reduction should have been made.

BATUK NATH MANDAL v. BEPIN BIHARI CHAUDHRI.

Two questions have been urged before us. The first arises upon a preliminary objection taken on the respondent's behalf to the admissibility of the appeal. It is contended that, inasmuch as at the date of the institution of the suit, the respondent had no interest in the tenure, the suit falls outside the scope of Article 41 of the second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and being, therefore, a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, no second appeal lies (section 102, Civil Procedure Code). The second question is as to the liability of the respondent in respect of the year 1308. He no longer disputes his liablity in respect of the year 1307.

Before dealing with these questions, it will be convenient to indicate the nature of respondent's position in the suit brought by the landlord.

As regards the year 1308, the appellant's claim against the respondent is based upon the fact that the decree obtained by the landlord was made against the respondent alone. Now it may be—and for the present purpose it must be assumed—that the landlord was entitled to sue the respondent alone. But it must be admitted that as between himself and the other share-holders in the tenure, during the period to which the landlord's suit related, the respondent occupied the position of defendant in that suit in a representative capacity. He represented the share-holders for the time being. As regards the year 1307, he represented himself and others. As regards the year 1308, he had then ceased to have any interest in the tenure, and under the cloak of his name the real defendants were his vendee, the appellant and others.

The fact then that as between himself and the other co-sharers for the time being, the respondent as defendant in the landlord's suit filled a representative capacity has to be borne in mind in dealing with the questions which were argued before us.

The first of these questions is decided by the frame of the suit as disclosed in the pleadings. From this, there can be no doubt that the plaintiff's claim was based on the assertion that he was a co-sharer with the defendant. The plaintiff has, indeed, sued on the assumption that defendant No. 1 was a co-sharer in 1308, an assumption which is incorrect in fact, and the purchaser is not included in the suit as, perhaps, he might have been : but this cannot alter the nature of the suit as it stands. The case of Krishno Kamini v. Gopi Mohun (1), cited by the respondent, has no bearing on the present case, as it was not a suit for contribution between co-sharers, and was decided with reference not to Article 41 of the second Schedule to Small Cause Courts Act, but to an earlier enactment. As regards the second question, the case is not so clear. In the suit brought by the landlord, the present respondent alone was sued because he was the registered tenant. In so far as other persons, including his own vendee in 1308, were interested in the property in respect of which he was sued, he was, therefore, as between him and them their representative, and whether he was a co-sharer as was the case in 1307 or was not, as was the case in 1308, his position as their representative would be the same. Had he paid anything which was in fact due from them he might, no doubt, have his remedy against them. But his remedies against others cannot affect his liability to the landlord when once a decree against him is passed. He then becomes "bound by law to pay" the decreed amount to the landlord, in the terms of section 69 of the Contract Act. There is no doubt that the plaintiff was a person interested in the payment of this debt, and the consequence follows that he is liable to be "reimbursed" by the respondent. In terms, this seems to give the plaintiff a right to recover the whole of the money that he has paid to the landlord. It cannot, however, be supposed that he could compel the respondent to pay him money which the respondent became "bound by law" to pay as his representative. But is it necessary to read any further restrictions into the very general terms of section 69? No question arises here as to the respondent's liability to reimburse to the plaintiff the money which he paid, but which was really due from the other original co-sharers in respect of their shares; because those co-sharers have re-paid those sums to the plaintiff. But where the respondent has introduced a new co-sharer, whom he represents as much as he does the other co-sharers, is there any reason for saying that the reimbursement is to stop short of the money paid for the benefit of the assignee of the man bound by law to pay, who also represents him? No clear authority has been produced before us to show that this section should be considered not to apply to co-sharers; and if it does, the law seems to cast the burden of collection from defaulting co-sharers, whose common interests are affected by a decree, on the person bound by law to pay rather than on the person who in fact pays because he is interested in the payment, and this consideration applies with special force when such person is the assignor of one who may be taken to be a defaulting co-sharer. For these reasons, we consider that the appellant is entitled to recover from the respondent the amount he has paid in respect of the rent of the respondent's purchaser for 1308.

(1) 15 C. 652.

The appeal is, therefore, allowed. The decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside, and that of the Munsif restored. The appellant is entitled to his costs in this appeal.

RICHARDSON, J.—I agree to the judgment proposed by my learned brother with some hesitation as to the liability of the defendant No. 1 in respect of the year 1308.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 60 OF 1912.

July 8, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chamier.

MUHAMMAD HUSAIN AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

ILAHI BAKHSH—RESPONDENT.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 15 (1)—Grounds for dismissing application for insolvency—Petitioner trying to show his property as belonging to another.

A person, who petitions to be declared insolvent, not unfrequently at some stage or another of the proceedings, endeavours to keep back a portion of his property or pretends that property which belongs to him does not belong to him. An action of this kind on the part of a debtor or the suspicion or belief that such action is contemplated by a debtor is not a good ground for dismissing a debtor's petition in insolvency.

Such cases are distinguishable from cases in which the petitions are dismissed on the ground that they have been presented for inequitable or collateral purposes.

Kali Kumar Das v. Gopi Krishna Rai, 15 C. W. N. 990; 12 Ind. Cas. 48, followed.

Girwardhari v. Jai Narain, 32 A. 645; 7 A. L. J. 835; 7 Ind. Cas. 39, relied upon.

First appeal from an order of the District Judge of Gorakhpur.

Mr. Girdhari Lal Agarwala, for the Appellants.

Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru, for the Repondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal against an order of the District Judge of Gorakhpur, rejecting the petition of the appellants to be declared insolvent. The ground given for the rejection of the petition is that it was not presented in good faith and that the appellants' object was not really to surrender their property and to be cleared of their debts, but to evade payment by setting up a title in their father to certain property against the Receiver and to avoid imprisonment for debt. In appeal, it is contended that the case is covered by a decision of two Judges of this Court in F. A. F. O., No. 33 of 1912, delivered on May 31st last. In that case, the same learned District Judge had dismissed the petition of a debtor to be declared an insolvent on the ground that he had falsely pleaded that he was separate in estate from his father and brothers and his object was to prevent his creditors from touching certain family property of which he was, in fact, the manager. The District Judge had dismissed the petition on the ground that it was an abuse of the process of a Court and had relied on my decision in Girwardhari v. Jai Narain (1), in the course of which I said that an insolvency petition might be dismissed if it was presented not with the bona fide view of obtaining an adjudication but for an inequitable or collateral purpose. But this Court held that the petition ought not to have been dismissed. It seems to me impossible to distinguish the present case from that case. Here the District Judge thinks that the object of the debtors is to prevent their creditors from obtaining satisfaction of their claims out of family property. Indeed, the only possible distinction between the two cases is that the former case was the case of a Hindu family, and the present case is the case of a Mahomedan family. But as the members of this Mahomedan family are said to be carrying on a soap business jointly, there is really no distinction between the two cases. In the cases of Kali Kumar Das v. Gopi Krishna Rai (2), the petition of a debtor to be declared insolvent had been dismissed on the ground that the debtor had not produced the account-books of his business and had not satisfactorily explained the omission, and there were other grounds for doubting whether the petitioner had truly disclosed all the material facts. The District Judge said that he was not satisfied that the petitioner was unable to pay his debt. But the High Court set aside the order of the District Judge, observing that the fact that the Judge was unable to satisfy himself that the petitioner was unable to pay his debt, was not a ground for dismissing the petition. The case before me and the cases in this Court and the Calcutta High Court, to which I have referred, are cases of a very common type. A person, who petitions to be declared insolvent, not unfrequently, at some stage or another of the proceedings, endeavours to keep back a portion of his property or pretends that property which belongs to him does not belong to him. It appears to me that actions of this kind on the part of a debtor or the suspicion or belief that such action is contemplated by a debtor is not a good ground for dismissing a debtor's petition in insolvency. Such cases are easily distinguished from the cases referred to by me in Girwardhari v. Jai Narain (1), in which the petitions were dismissed because they had been presented for inequitable or collateral purposes. Moreover, on the evidence, I think, that it is not safe to hold on the evidence now on the record that the appellants in this case are interested in the soap business carried on by their father. Further evidence will, no doubt, be available hereafter, and what I say now must not be treated as a decision of the question. For the above reasons, I am of opinion that this petition ought not to have been dismissed. I allow this appeal, set aside the order of the District Judge and direct that the record be returned to him in order that the case be disposed of according to law.

Cause remanded.

(1) 32 A. 645; 7 A. L. J. 835; 7 Ind. Cas. 39.
(2) 15 C. W. N. 990; 12 Ind. Cas. 48.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
REFERRED CASE No 1 OF 1912.
October 1, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

KRISHNA DOSS PARAMANANDA DOSS—PLAINTIFF

versus

FREDERICK WILLIAM EMERY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS.

Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 69—Reference to High Court when permissible—Reasonable doubt by the referring Court.

Section 69 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, permits a reference to the High Court only when the referring Court entertains a reasonable doubt on the point referred.

Messrs. C. V. Anantakrishna Iyer and P. Gangadhara Aiyar, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. T. Narasimha Iyengar, for the Defendants.

ORDER.—This is a Reference by the learned Chief Judge of the Presidency Court of Small Causes under section 69 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, asking the opinion of this Court on certain points of law. According to section 69, as it now stands, a reference can be made only when the Court entertains a reasonable doubt. Under the section as it stood before, he was bound to make a reference, if either of the parties to the suit requested him to do so. We are inclined to think that this reference was made in forgetfulness of the change made in the section. We must, therefore, refuse to answer the question and we return the Reference. We make no order as to costs.

HABIBULLAH KHAN v. LALTA PRASAD.

Reference returned.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER NO. 55 OF 1912.

July 12, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rafique and Mr. Justice Piggott.

HABIBULLAH KHAN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

LALTA PRASAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 23—Decision on preliminary issue—Burden of proof wrongly placed—Ground for remand—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 142—Suit for alluvial land—Burden of proving title and possession within limitation—Nature of proof—Presumption—Settlment Records, entries in.

It is not a good ground for passing an order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23, to say that the preliminary issue has been decided by the Court of first instance on a wrong view of the burden of proof, unless the Appellate Court also finds that that decision was wrong.

Where in a suit for possession of certain land as having accreted to plaintiff's village by alluvion, the defendants deny plaintiff's title and also plead that the claim is barred by limitation, it lies on the plaintiff to prove both title and possession within limitation. To bring his claim within limitation, it is open to the plaintiff to prove that the land in suit had accrued by alluvion within limitation, or that although it had accreted more than 12 years before the institution of the suit, it had remained, within the limitation period, waste or jungle land, in respect of which the presumption would arise that possession went with title.

Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi, 8 A. L. J. 1176; 15 C. W. N. 887; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 101; 10 M. L. T. 157; 13 Bom. L. R. 806; 14 C. L. J. 319, 11 Ind. Cas. 542, relied upon.

There is a presumption until the contrary is proved that the possession of the parties is correctly shown in the Settlement Records.

First appeal from an order of the Additional Judge of Bareilly.

Mr. B. E. O'Conor, for the Appellants

Mr. J. M. Banerji (for Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji), for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in this case are the proprietors of village Bakhshpur in the Pilibhit District, and the defendants are the holders of certain muafi lands situated within the same village. It appears that the muafi lands held by the defendants are on the boundary of the village, at a point where it is subject to fluvial action by the Khakhra river. The real dispute between the parties is whether certain land, accreted to village Bakhshpur by alluvion through the action of the Khakhra river at this point, accrues to the muafi lands of the defendants and becomes a part of their muafi holding, or accrues to the village of Bakhshpur as a whole and becomes a portion of the village lands of which the plaintiffs are proprietors. This was the first point raised by the pleadings The defendants further pleaded that the plaintiff's suit was barred by limitation, as they had never been in possession within 12 years of the institution of the suit of any portion of the land claimed. The Court of first instance held that the plaintiffs were bound to prove their possession within limitation in respect of this land and finding that they had failed to do this, dismissed the suit on the issue of limitation only. On appeal, the learned Additional Judge has neither held that the suit is barred by limitation nor that it is not so barred. He says that the Court of first instance has mislaid the burden of proof and that it was for the defendants to show that they had been in possession for more than 12 years before the institution of the suit. On this, he has decreed the plaintiff's appeal, and remanded the case under Order XLI, rule 23, Code of Civil Procedure, for disposal on the merits. The effect of his order is to put the parties in a difficulty as it is open to question whether the learned Munsif, accepting the directions of the lower Appellate Court regarding the burden of proof, could still find that the suit is barred by limitation. In any case, it is not a good ground for passing an order of remand under Order XLI, rule 23, to say that the preliminary issue has been decided by the Court of first instance on a wrong view of the burden of proof unless the Appellate Court, also, finds that that decision was wrong. Regarding this question of the burden of proof, we have heard both parties, and we think it desirable to make one or two remarks. The suit as framed was, undoubtedly, one to which Article 142 of the 1st Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908), would apply, and the learned Munsif was right in saying that on the suit thus framed, it lies on the plaintiffs to prove both title and possession within limitation. We think, however, that the first Court did not fully realise the sort of evidence which might, perhaps, have been sufficient to discharge the burden of proof laid on the plaintiffs in this matter. If the suit is to be disposed of on the limitation issue alone without any finding on the question of title (and we are not sure that this is, in fact, a suitable way of disposing of the present case), that issue will have to be disposed of on the assumption that the plaintiffs are right and the defendants are wrong on the issue of title. Looking at the case in this way, it could be open to the plaintiffs to prove that the land in suit had accrued by alluvion within limitation, or that, although it had accreted more than 12 years before the institution of the suit, it had remained, within the limitation period, waste or jungle land, in respect of which the presumption would arise that possession went with title. The law on this point is laid down in Maharaja Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Rani Hemanta Kumari Debi (1). We may remark on this point that the evidence of the Settlement papers as to actual possession does not seem to have been considered at all by the lower Appellate Court; there is a presumption that the possession of the parties was correctly shown in those records until the contrary is proved.

We set aside the order of the Additional Judge and direct that Court to re-admit the appeal to its file of pending cases and dispose of it according to law, with due regard to the remarks made in this order. If the lower Appellate Court is of opinion that the case cannot be disposed of on the question of limitation without a finding on some other issue, it will, of course, be open to it to exercise its powers under Order XLI, rule 25, Code of Civil Procedure But the case should not be remanded under rule 23 of that Order unless the finding on the question of limitation is definitely reversed. Costs here and hitherto will abide the event.

Appeal allowed; Cause remanded.

(1) 8 A. L. J. 1176; 15 C. W. N. 837; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 101; 10 M. L. T. 157; 13 Bom. L. R. 803; 14 C. L. J. 319; 11 Ind. Cas. 542.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 1 OF 1912.

July 1, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, Kt., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

BAI RAMKORE—APPELLANT

versus

JAMNADAS MULCHAND—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Marriage—Right to give girl in marriage—Paternal uncle—Mother—Will—Construction—Right conferred by Will.

Under Hindu Law, the paternal uncle of a girl cannot betroth her or give her in marriage without the consent and concurrence of her mother.

The mother is, after the death of the father, the legal guardian of the girl and she has the right to be consulted as to the choice of a husband for her daughter.

S. Ramasevayam Pillay v. Annammai Ammal, 4 M. H. C. R. 339 and Shridhar v. Hiralal Vithal, 12 B. 480, relied upon.

A Will provided that the testator's brother, to whom the testator devised his property, should get the testator's girl married by expending money out of the testator's property with due regard to his status:

Held, that the right of giving the girl in marriage conferred by the Will was no more than the right under the Hindu Law and was, therefore, subject to the same limitations.

Appeal from order, passed by the Joint Subordinate Judge at Surat, in Appeal No. 111 of 1909, reversing that passed by, and remanding the suit to, the Joint Subordinate Judge at Surat, in Civil Suit No. 150 of 1907

Mr. P. B. Shingne, for the Appellant.

Mr. L. A. Shah, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The suit which has led to this appeal, was brought by the respondent to recover from the three appellants damages incurred by him on account of the giving away in marriage of his niece, Mangli, a minor, by appellants Nos. 1 and 2 to appellant No. 3, in contravention of the betrothal of the girl to one Hiralal, settled by the respondent, as her lawful guardian.

The respondent is the paternal uncle of the girl. By a Will of her father, he and a brother of his were authorised to get the girl married. Accordingly, the respondent (the other brother having died) betrothed the girl to one Hiralal. But appellants Nos. 1 and 2, who are respectively mother and maternal uncle of the girl, gave her in marriage to appellant No. 3.

The respondent complains that, in consequence of that marriage, he was unable to perform the contract of betrothal into which he had entered with Hiralal; that Hiralal demanded Rs. 2,000 as damages for the breach, and that the dispute was finally settled by an award of arbitrators under which he had to pay Rs. 1,000 to Hiralal as damages.

This sum he claims in his plaint from the appellants.

The respondent bases his claim upon his right to give the girl in marriage, (1) under the Hindu law, (2) under the Will of the girl's father, and (3) in virtue of a custom of the caste to which the parties belong.

The right claimed under the Hindu Law arises out of a text of Yajnyavalkya adopted by Vijnaneshvara in the Mitakshara and by Nilakantha, author of the Vyavahara Mayukha, in his Samskara Mayukha. According to that text, the persons entitled to give a girl in marriage are, "the father, paternal grandfather, brother, kinsman (sakulya), and mother," in the order stated. It follows from this text that the paternal uncle of the girl (who in this case is the respondent) had the right to give her in marriage before the mother. But to entitle the respondent to damages from the mother for having given the girl in marriage so as to exclude his right, regard must be had to the nature of the right itself and it must be established that the right is absolute and exclusive. The text only deals with the bare right to give a girl in marriage. Under the Hindu law, when her father dies, leaving her mother, the mother becomes the legal guardian of the girl. The text cited above does not deprive the mother of this right of guardianship but only specifies who can make a gift of her in marriage. The paternal male relations of the girl are placed above the mother for the purposes of that gift, because women are dependent and, moreover, they cannot perform certain ceremonies essential to or usual in a marriage. Even when, in default of paternal male relations, the mother makes the gift, she has to employ some one of her caste to act on her behalf at the marriage and perform the ceremony of giving which is called kanyadana. This is well-explained in the Dharma Sindhu: "Where the mother has to give her daughter in marriage, she herself must perform the ceremony of nandi shraddha. All other ceremonies she must get performed by a Brahmin:" See also to the same effect Sir Gooroo Das Banerjee's Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhan, 2nd Edition, page 45. The text of Yajnyavalkya does not say that the mother is to have no voice at all and may be altogether set at naught where there are paternal male relations of the girl, competent to give her in marriage. Had that been the intention of the Hindu law, there would have been express texts to that effect. We cannot infer such intention by mere implication, because that would lead to very undesirable results, especially in the present state of Hindu society. In that case, any distant male relation of the girl on the father's side might give her in marriage, whether he be interested in her and whether he be really anxious for her welfare or not, without consulting, and, having regard to the wishes of the person most interested, that is, the mother, who is the natural guardian of the girl. In the absence of the authority of express texts binding on us, the Hindu law-givers should not be held to have contemplated the total exclusion of the mother from her right as guardian to be consulted as to the choice of a husband for her daughter. This view is substantially supported by the judgment of the Madras High Court in S. Namasevayam Pillay v. Annammai Ummal (1); and it is a conclusion which fits in with the principle of the judgment of this Court in Shridhar v. Hiralal Vithal (2). Any other conclusion would be highly prejudicial to the best interests of Hindu family life and to the welfare of minor girls, whose marriages are made in many cases the source of profit by greedy relations.

The respondent also claims his right under the Will of the girl's father. The provision in the Will giving the right, is merely to the effect that the respondent and his brother, to whom the testator devised his property, should get the girl married (parnave) by expending money out of the testator's property with due regard to his status. The right under the Will is no more than the right under the Hindu Law and is, therefore, subject to the same limitations. Whether, if the testator had enlarged that right and removed the limitations by his Will, it would have been a valid provision legally enforceable is a question which does not arise in the present case; and, therefore, we refrain from expressing any opinion on it.

The respondent further asserts his right under a custom of his caste. But that right

(1) 4 M. H. C. R. 339.
(2) 12 B. 480.

also, according to the allegation, is the same as that under the Hindu Law and is, therefore, governed by the same considerations.

The nature of the right claimed by the appellant being not absolute but of a qualified character, and there being no allegation in the plaint that before betrothing the girl to Hiralal, he had consulted her natural guardian, i. e, her mother, and chosen the bridegroom with due regard to the interests of the girl and the mother's wishes, it follows that he had no right to enter into the contract and, consequently, he has no cause of action as against any of the appellants.

On these grounds, the order of remand of the lower Appellate Court must be reversed and the decree of the Court of first instance, dismissing the suit with costs, must be restored with the costs of this appeal and of the appeal to the District Court on the respondent.

Order reversed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NOS. 1388 AND 1485 OF 1911.

October 4, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

IN No. 1388.

A. RAGHAVA AIYAR AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

MURUGESA MUDALI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

IN No. 1485.

GANAPATHI MUDALI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAGAVA AIYAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Misjoinder of parties—Objection taken for first time in appeal—Inadmissible.

An objection as to misjoinder of parties cannot be taken for the first time in appeal, especially when the suit is decided upon the merits in the first Court.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of North Arcot in A. S. No. 183 of 1910, presented against that of the District Munsif of Arni in O. S. No. 133 of 1908.

FACTS.—The facts of the case are sufficiently clear from the following judgment of the lower Appellate Court:—

"Suit for specific performance of a contract of sale, made by defendants Nos. 1 and 2, the present reversionary heirs, entitled to the plaint lands, in favour of plaintiffs. Plaintiffs also seek for possession of the lands, from the other defendants alleging that they were in possession under defendants Nos. 1 and 2.

"2. The District Munsif found the plaint contract for plaintiffs, but refused specific performance of it holding that some of the lands had been alienated by the last female owner herself in favour of defendants Nos. 7 and 11 and have been in the enjoyment of the alienee defendants and that those alienations were binding on the reversioners, and that, as the contract could not be enforced in respect of those lands, it could not be enforced in regard to the remaining portion of the lands only. He, however, gave a decree for plaintiffs against defendants Nos. 1 and 2 for recovery of the money said to have been paid to them under the contract viz Rs. 400.

"3 The plaintiffs appeal.

"4 The contesting respondent's Vakil raised a preliminary objection to the suit that it was bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action but I disallowed it as it was not taken in the lower Court before the argument according to his own case. All objections as to misjoinder of parties and causes of action should be taken at or before settlement of issues, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen which is not the case here and as the objection was not so taken here at or before issues, it must be held to have been waived (vide Order I rule 13 and Order II rule 7, Code of Civil Procedure). Therefore, it is not open to the respondents to raise that objection now in appeal although it would be a good objection in my opinion, if taken at the proper stage.

"5. The above respondents then took another objection also to the effect that the plaint contract of sale was only a nominal one and could not be enforced for that reason but it is not open to them to take this objection either. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are the persons who made the agreement and they have allowed the suit to go ex parte without disputing the bona fides of the agreement and third parties in the position of contesting respondents have no right to take any objection in that respect.

"6. The points for decision in this appeal, therefore, now are,—

(i) Whether the plaintiffs are entitled to specific performance of the plaint contract of sale, if so to what extent?

(ii) On what terms are the plaintiffs entitled to the specific performance?

(iii) Are the plaintiffs entitled to sue for the possession of the lands in the possession of defendants Nos. 7 and 11, i.e. respondents Nos. 7 and 11 in this suit?

(iv) Are the alienations under which respondents Nos. 7 and 11 (defendants Nos. 7 and 11) claim the properties under them binding on defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and, therefore, on plaintiffs?

(v) To what relief are plaintiffs entitled?

"7. Point 3:—The respondents Nos. 7 and 11 have been in possession of the lands under them not under any title created by the plaintiffs vendors (defendants Nos. 1 and 2) subsequent to plaintiff's contract of sale but under titles created by Nos. 1 and 2 defendants' predecessors-in-title years before defendants Nos. 1 and 2 came to acquire any title to the same. The plaintiffs have no right to sue for recovery of those properties from defendants Nos. 7 and 11 before they acquire a completed title in themselves to the same and they had no such title to the said properties when they filed the suit. In fact they have not got any such title even now. Therefore, I think the plaintiffs had no cause of action at all when they instituted their present suit to sue defendants Nos. 7 and 11 for the recovery of the land under them. They must bring a separate suit against the said defendants after they have acquired a completed title to the properties in this suit. I accordingly find this issue in the negative.

"8. Point 4.—On my finding on the 3rd point, it is unnecessary to record any finding on this point. Were it, however, necessary to do so, I would hold that the alienation in favour of the 7th defendant evidenced by Exhibit II, is binding on plaintiff's vendors and plaintiffs but that the 11th defendant's alienation (Exhibit III and not Exhibit II) was executed in discharge of the prior mortgage land, Exhibit II (a), to which the then next reversioner was also a party himself and for other sums paid from time to time to female heir, Meenakshi, towards her cultivation and family maintenance expenses and there are also purposes justifying the alienation. As it is unnecessary to give a definite finding on this point, I refrain from discussing the matter any further.

"9. Points 1, 2 and 5. The plaintiffs alleged in their plaint that they paid Rs. 400 to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 under the plaint contract and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 did not deny the plaintiff's above allegation. The contract was formerly proved and it must be held, in the circumstances, that only Rs. 100 are due to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 under the contract. The plaintiffs are entitled to specific performance, therefore, on payment of the above Rs. 100 by execution of a proper deed of sale in the terms of the plaint agreement, without the question of the validity of the alienations set up by defendants Nos. 7 and 11 being determined in this suit [vide Kasuri Ramaraju v. Ivalury Ramalingam (1) and Srinivasa Reddy v. Sivarama Reddy (2)]. The plaintiffs are also entitled to possession of the lands to which claims are not set up except under the defendants Nos. 1 and 2.

"10. I accordingly modify the decree of the lower Court and give a decree for plaintiffs, without determining the question of the validity of the alienations set up by defendants Nos. 7 and 11, directing specific performance of the plaint contract of sale against defendants Nos. 1 and 2 by their execution of a proper deed of sale for all the plaint lands on the plaintiffs paying into Court for payment to them of the balance of sale money, viz., Rs. 100 within three months from this date and further order that on their getting such a title-deed duly executed to them by defendants Nos. 1 and 2 or by the Court on their behalf, they do recover possession of the plaint properties other than those claimed by respondents Nos. 7 and 11 (defendants Nos. 7 and 11) under Exhibits II and III. Defendants Nos 7 and 11 will recover thier costs both in this and in the lower Court from plaintiffs while the other defendants and the plaintiffs will bear their respective costs in both Courts in the circumstances of the case. I have not allowed the plaintiffs their costs, because their

(1) 26 M. 74; 12 M. L. J. 400.
(2) 32 M. 320.

coming into Court was not due to any default on 1st and 2nd defendants' part to execute their sale in terms of the plaint contract or improper refusal of the other defendants to give up the lands under them but to a compact between plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 for recovering possession of the lands in the enjoyment of third parties who were entitled to hold the lands against the plaintiffs until they had acquired as completed title to them themselves."

The plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 4, 16, 17, and 19 separately appealed.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, for the Appellants (in No. 1388).

Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar, for the Respondents (in No. 1388).

Mr. K. Srinivasa Aiyangar, for the Appellant (in No. 1485).

Mr, C. V. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for 1st Respondent (in No. 1485).

JUDGMENT.—The 7th and 11th defendants did not object to the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had no cause of action against them. The Court of first instance tried the question of the validity of the alienations in favour of those defendants and recorded a finding on the question. Assuming that, strictly speaking, the suit for specific performance would not be maintainable against the alienees from the widow, we do not think that, when no objection was taken on that ground, and after the question between them and the plaintiff had been decided on the merits, the Appellate Court should have entertanied the objection in appeal. It was open to the plaintiff to ask for a declaration that the alienation in favour of defendants Nos. 7 and 11 was invalid, and the only objection to his doing so would be misjoinder of parties and causes of action. By making them defendants, the plaintiff substantially wanted the Court to hold that defendants Nos. 7 and 11 had no valid right to hold the properties under the alienations in their favour. In this view, it is unnecessary to decide whether defendants Nos. 7 and 11 would be within the purview of clause (c) of section 27 of the Specific Relief Act, as persons claiming under a title which, though prior to the contract in plaintiff's favour, might have been displaced by the 1st and 2nd defendants. The Subordinate Judge did not deal with the question as between the plaintiff and these defendants as well as defendants Nos. 4, 16 and 17, as it was unnecessary to do so in the view he took of the case. These other defendants also did not raise any objection to the question between them and the plaintiff being tried in the suit We reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court so far as defendants Nos. 7, 11, 4, 16, 17 and 19 are concerned, and remand the appeal for fresh disposal according to law. Costs in this Court in both the second appeals will abide the result.

It is said by Mr. Anantakrishna Aiyar on behalf of the plaintiff, that he is prepared to accept a conveyance of whatever lands the 1st and 2nd defendants had a valid title to convey for the whole price agreed upon.

Appeal allwed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL NO. 359 OF 1899.

June 25, 1901.

Present:—Sir Francis Maclean, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerjee.

HEM CHANDRA BAKSHI—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

JADUB CHANDRA BAKSHI—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Memorandum of appeal not accompanied by copy of decree appealed against, though decree in existence when appeal was filed—Mis-statement at foot of memorandum of appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 541, 590—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 86—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5.

A decree was made in a Probate case by a District Judge on August 9th, 1899. On August 14th, the decree was drawn up. On November 30th, a memorandum of appeal, without a copy of the decree, was filed in the High Court but there was a note by the appellant's Vakil that no decree had been prepared. The appeal was admitted by the High Court in consequence of the statement of the Vakil:

Held, that the memorandum of appeal was bad as the provisions of section 541, read with section 590 of the Civil Procedure Code and section 86 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, had not been complied with, because a copy of the decree appealed against was not filed with the memorandum of appeal, and that there was no appeal which could be properly entertained by the High Court; and as no sufficient cause was shown for extending the time for appealing under section 5 of the Limitation Act, the appeal was dismissed.

HEM CHANDRA BAKSHI v. JADUB CHANDRA BAKSHI.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Hugli, dated the 9th August 1899.

Babu Manmotho Nath Mitter, for the Appellant

Babus Sarada Charan Mitter, Bepin Bihari Ghose and Khetter Mohan Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

MACLEAN, C. J.—A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of this appeal on the ground that the appeal was improperly admitted. The facts lie within a very narrow compass and they may be stated thus. The present appellant filed a petition for the revocation of the Probate of the Will of his father granted to his brother who is the respondent in the appeal, and a petition of objection was put in by the respondent to the appellant's petition. Eventually, the two brothers agreed to refer, and they did refer, the whole matter to arbitration. The arbitrators made an award on the 24th July 1899, and, shortly afterwards, the matter came before the District Judge of Hughli on the 9th of August 1899 for final disposal in the presence of the Pleaders on both sides, and it was ordered "that the Will of the late Radha Nath Bakshi, dated the 23rd Chait 1297, be declared to be genuine, and that the revocation case of the plaintiff be dismissed." No objection was then raised by the present appellant to the passing of that decree. That decree was signed on the 14th of August 1899. On the 30th of November 1899, the present appellant, who was dissatisfied with the award because the arbitrators had decided against him, filed a memorandum of appeal in this Court, and set forth various grounds upon which he alleged that the order of the District Judge was wrong, and there is this note at the foot of this memorandum of appeal: "I understand that no decree has been drawn up in this case and that the only final judgment is the order herewith affixed." That was a statement not based upon fact, as a decree had been drawn up on the 14th of August 1899, and the slightest inquiry would have elicited this fact. The appeal then was admitted by this Court under a misapprehension, and in consequence of the mis-statement at the foot of the memorandum of appeal.

An objection is now taken that, having regard to the provisions of section 541 of the Code of Civil Procedure, read with section 590, the appellant has not filed his memorandum of appeal in compliance with the provisions of the Code. Section 541 of the Code, which is made applicable to orders by section 590 read with section 86 of the Probate and Administration Act, directs that, "the appeal shall be made in the form of a memorandum in writing presented by the appellant and shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against, and (unless the Appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded." In this connection, I may refer to the cases of Chamela Kuar v. Amir Khan (1) and Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (2). But the language of the Code is sufficiently clear and precise on the point. The provisions of the Code, to which I have referred, have not been complied with by the appellant and, that being so, it seems to me that the preliminary objection must prevail. As I have pointed out, the appellant could have easily ascertained, if he had made any inquiry before filing the memorandum of appeal, that a decree had been drawn up. Under these circumstances, I think that the memorandum of appeal is bad, and it ought not to have been accepted by this Court, and that, consequently, there is no appeal which can be properly entertained by us. No valid memorandum of appeal then has been presented in time. If sufficient cause had been shown, we could have extended the time for appealing under section 5 of the Limitation Act, but no cause sufficient or otherwise has been suggested. Again, the points which it is now sought to urge on appeal before us were never raised or even suggested before the Court below, for no objection was taken to the decree of the 9th August 1899. Under these circumstances, we do not think that this is a case in which we ought to exercise the judicial discretion, which is vested in us, by granting further time to appeal. Furthermore, on the merits, the appellant's case does not look very hopeful.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing fee at seven gold mohurs.

BANERJEE J.—I concur.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 16 A. 77; A. W. N. (1893), 223.
(2) 17 A. 537 at p. 553; A. W. N. (1895), 212.

RAM DIN v. RAJ RANI.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 27 OF 1911.

May 14, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Stanyon, A. J. C. and Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

RAMDIN—APPELLANT

versus

RAJ RANI—RESPONDENT.

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 1 —"Legal representative"—Heir—Survival of right to sue —Substitution of sons for father—Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Suit for protecting reversionary estate from waste and rendition of accounts.*

In every case, under Order XXII, rule 1, Civil Procedure Code, the first point to be decided is whether the right to sue survives, and that must be decided with reference to the nature of the suit.

The continuance of a suit depends, not on the qualifications of the representative of the deceased plaintiff but on the nature of the suit. The survival of a right to sue does not depend on the presence, or even the existence, of an heir. The words "legal representative" in Order XXII have a very wide signification, and are not synonymous with the term "heir" or with the limited class governed by section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code for the purpose of the law of res judicata.

Dinamoni Chowdhurani v. Elahudad Khan, 8 C. W. N. 843; Amar Chandra v. Sebak Chand, 34 C. 642 at p. 652; 11 C. W. N. 593; 5 C. L. J. 491; 2 M. L. T. 207 (F. B.), relied upon.

A suit to declare an alienation invalid beyond the life-time of a widow, is a representative suit for the benefit of the eventual reversioner.

Under the terms of an award, a trust estate was managed by a Hindu widow. She was prevented thereby from alienating it. It was declared that on her death, the estate should devolve on the reversionary heirs, who were also given an authority to obtain rendition of accounts. The presumptive representative, asserting malversation and mismanagement of the trust estate in the hands of the widow, sued for the removal of the widow from the office of trustee and the substitution of the plaintiff for her, and further prayed for rendition of accounts and delivery of the balance of income to the newly appointed trustee. Plaintiff died during the pendency of the suit and his sons applied to be substituted in his place as his legal representatives:—

Held, (1) that the right to sue survived, as the right was appurtenant to the reversionary estate;

(2) that the sons of the plaintiff, as being the immediate reversioners charged with the duty of protecting the reversion, were proper legal representatives of the plaintiff for the purposes of Order XXII, rule 1;

(3) that the plaintiff was primarily acting for the benefit of the reversionary estate.

Chiruvolu Punnamma v. Chirurolu Perraju, 29 M. 390; 1 M. L. T. 183; 16 M. L. J. 307 (F. B.), followed.

Miscellaneous appeal, against the order of the District Judge, Narsinghpur, dated the 5th July 1911.

Dr. H. S. Gour, for the Appellant.

Sir B. K. Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—It is expedient to set out the material facts of this case, and the following genealogical tree will facilitate the statement and comprehension of them:—

Shanker Rajoria died possessed of considerable property, and was succeeded by Nathuram, his only son. For the purpose of applying the Hindu Law to this case, Nathuram was the propositus of the estate in dispute. After Nathuram's death and that of his sister Saraswati, Musammat Maharajo became the undisputed owner of the whole estate. She died on the 28th June 1889, and then disputes arose as to the succession between Musammat Raj Rani (who set up a Will in favour of her deceased husband) of the one part, and Sobharam, Gorelal and Chunnilal, the sons of Nathuram's step sister, of the other part. These disputes were wisely referred to a private arbitration, and an award was delivered on the 13th December 1889. It is Exhibit D-I in this suit. The award allotted the estate of Nathuram thus:—

Chunnilal	...	2-annas share.
Sobharam and Gorelal	...	2-annas share.
Musammat Raj Rani	...	2-annas share.
Charities	...	10-annas share.
		16-annas.

The charities to be benefited by the income from the 10-annas share set apart for them were not specified. The award contains a general direction that this income shall be applied to charitable purposes and invokes Divine displeasure upon any holder of the estate who shall fail to maintain this endowment. Musammat Raj Rani was appointed the first shebait or manager of this trust property, and it seems clear that she was intended to hold that office with rights and limitations analogous to those of a Hindu widow holding an estate of inheritance from her husband. She was directed to employ agents to carry on the management of the trust property and she was prevented from alienating it. She was given power to adopt one of the children of the other parties to the award if she so desired—so far as the arbitrators and parties could give such power: and it was decided that in the event of her death without making any adoption, the estate allotted to her, both personally and in trust, should devolve according to law, the endowment as such remaining unimpaired. The award also contained a clause which, translated, reads thus:—

"Chunnilal and Sobharam and Gorelal will have authority to obtain rendition of accounts from the agent so that the agent may be unable to cause injury to the estate."

On the 3rd March 1908, Sobharam and Gorelal being then dead, Chunnilal and his eldest son Ramdin lodged the suit out of which this appeal has arisen. The plaint recited most of the above circumstances, including the award; it asserted mismanagement and malversation of the trust estate in the hands of Raj Rani, giving numerous alleged instances thereof; and contained two distinct prayers for relief, namely:—

(i) that defendant Raj Rani should be removed from the office of trustee, and the plaintiffs, or either of them, should be substituted for her; and

(ii) that the defendants should render accounts for the period between the 13th December 1889, (the date of the award) and the date of the institution of the suit, and deliver to the newly appointed trustee the balance of income which should be in existence after allowing for proper expenditure.

This last relief was not valued, and the Court below accepted a plaint on a stamp of Rs. 20 only. The defendants impleaded were Musammat Raj Rani and two of her karindas employed in carrying on the management of the trust estate. The value of that estate was declared to be Rs. 70,000.

The defendants filed a long written statement, containing various pleas to only one of which it is necessary to advert for the purposes of this appeal. It was objected that Ramdin could not be a plaintiff during the life-time of his father. This objection was obviously sound, whether the suit was based on the award of 13th December 1889, or on the general right, under Hindu law, of Chunnilal, as the presumptive reversioner, to protect the estate against unauthorised alienation or waste by Raj Rani. Being a plea of misjoinder, it should have had immediate attention, and ought to have been disposed of before anything else was done. Unfortunately, it was ignored by the lower Court, not being included for consideration even among the preliminary issues framed as to the maintainability of the suit. The case proceeded to trial with both father and son as plaintiffs, and a considerable part of the trial had been completed when, on the 16th April 1911, Chunnilal died. On the 18th April 1911, the District Judge made the following order:—

"Plaintiff Chunnilal is dead. For bringing on heirs, case for 13th May 1911."

Thereafter, objection was taken on behalf of the defendants that the right to sue held by Chunnilal did not survive after him, and this ended in an order made on the 5th July 1911, that the power to call for accounts given by the award of 13th December 1889 to Chunnilal was a purely personal right, which could not be enforced by his sons after his death. The learned Judge, therefore, ruled that the suit had abated, and threw out the application of the four younger brothers of Ramdin to be brought on the record in substitution for their father. Ramdin was disposed of by the same order. The proceedings and order were confused, but it seems to us that we must treat the order as one made under Order XXII, rule 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, as such, appealable under Order XLIII, rule 1 (k).

At the hearing of the appeal, the case was very fully and instructively argued before us, and the contention for the appellants, who are the five sons of Chunnilal, was that they were entitled to continue the suit—

(a) because the right conferred on Chunnilal and his co-reversioners by the award was given to them as representatives for the time being of the reversionary estate; and

(b) because, assuming that so far as the award went, it recognized only a right in the persons named to supervise the management of the trust estate nevertheless, Chunnilal, and after him, and in his place, the appellants, were and are entitled, under the general Hindu Law, to maintain this suit.

On behalf of the respondents, it was urged—

(a) that so far as the award went, it dealt only with the rights of the persons upon whose reference it was made, and gave Chunnilal, personally, a right to demand accounts from Raj Rani's agents from time to time;

(b) that, over and above this, Chunnilal, as presumptive reversioner, had a right under Hindu Law to bring the present suit, but that right died with him, since appellants, though his sons, are not his legal representatives for the purposes of the reversion, but are reversioners under a direct title of their own from the propositus, independently of their father.

This subtle argument involving, as it does, a question of law of considerable complexity, was sustained by citation of the following authorities:—Sakhyahari Ingle Rao v. Bhavani Roy (1); Kommeneni Chinna Veerayya v. Kommeneni Lakshminarasamma (2); Bilak Puri v. Durga (3); and Rup Narain v. Gopal Devi (4). Reference was also made to Caspersz on Estoppel, 3rd Edition, page 166.

We are of opinion that this appeal must succeed whether the right claimed by the appellants to continue the suit of their father be placed upon the award or upon the Hindu Law. We will deal with the case from each stand-point.

* * * *

First, as to the award. [The learned Judges found that under the terms of the award the sons of Chunnilal were entitled to continue the suit.]

* * * *

Next, as to the Hindu Law. The last of the cases cited by the learned Advocate for the respondents does not afford any assistance, but the first three are clear authorities for the proposition that a reversioner's suit for a declaration that an alienation by a widow is invalid, abates on the plaintiff's death, and cannot be continued by the next reversioner. But it seems to us that the Madras High Court, which is cheifly responsible for the above view, has not been altogether consistent with itself. In Ayyadorai Pillai v. Solai Ammal (5), it was held that immediate reversioners represent the inheritance and that, on their failure to set aside an adoption by the widow within the six years prescribed by law, such adoption will be binding on more remote reversioners. This dictum obtained the express approval of a Full Bench of the same High Court in Chiruvolu Punnamma v. Chiruvolu Perraju (6), in which the learned Judges laboured to draw a distinction between a suit by the presumptive reversioner to set aside an alienation, and a suit by such reversioner to set aside an adoption by a Hindu widow. The following extracts from the opinion

(1) 27 M. 588.

(2) 22 M. L. J. 375; 11 M. L. T. 184; (1912) 1 M. W. N. 442; 15 Ind. Cas. 213.

(3) 30 A. 49; A. W. N. (1908) 6; 4 A. L. J. 783; 3 M. L. T. 181.

(4) 36 C. 780; 13 C. W. N. 920; 6 A. L. J. 567; 11 Bom. L. R. 833; 10 C. L. J. 58; 19 M. L. J. 548; 36 I. A. 103 (P. C.); 5 M. L. T. 423; 3 Ind. Cas. 382; 93 P. R. 1909; 68 P. L. R. 1910.

(5) 24 M. 405.

(6) 29 M. 390; 1 M. L. T. 183; 16 M. L. J. 307 (F.B.)

delivered by the Full Bench will be instructive:—

"Mr. Krishnaswami Aiyar's contention was that the right of a reversioner to impeach an alienation of property by a qualified Hindu female owner and his right to impeach an adoption by a Hindu widow rest in assence on identical grounds, and that logically, as well as according to the preponderance of authority, the right should be held to be no more than personal to each individual reversioner presumptive for otherwise.

The argument of Mr. Rangachariar on the other side was that in spite of the view generally adopted in recent decisions by this High Court and by the Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts in cases connected with alienations of property by qualified female owners, the view which best accords with principle is that the presumptive reversioner does occupy a representative position. * *

The question raised is by no means easy to answer, but on full consideration, we think that the view contended for by Mr. Rangachariar ought to prevail.

* * * * *

The result of the view that we take is that, though in suits relating to alienations by a qualified owner, the dicta of the Privy Council preclude our holding that the presumptive reversioner represents remote reversioners, yet in suits to set aside an adoption, the presumptive reversioner ought, on principle, to be held to represent the remote reversioner, provided the matter is decided after a fair trial. * * * * A further conclusion to which we have been led is that an unauthorized alienation by a qualified owner gives rise to a cause of action for a declaratory suit from the date of the alienation to all the reversioners."

We are unable, with due respect, to appreciate as logical the difference here made between two suits of the same character involving different forms of relief. In the course of their said opinion, the learned Judges referred to the dictum of the Judicial Committee in Rani Anund Kunwar v. The Court of Wards (7) that though all existing reversioners, presumptive and contingent, are entitled to sue to avoid an alienation by a Hindu widow, yet, ordinarily, only the presumptive reversioner should be allowed to bring the suit: and they went on to remark—

"The rule thus laid down furnishes, as Mr. Rangachariar urged, practically conclusive proof that the correct view of the law on the point is that a reversioner allowed to maintain such a suit does thereby act, not only for himself, but also on behalf of all the rest, for the selection of one out of a body of persons possessing a common or similar interest as the individual empowered to carry on legal proceedings for the vindication of such interest necessarily involves the concession to him of a representative capacity in the matter."

Confirmation was found for this view in certain remarks by Sir Barnes Peacock in Brojo Kishoree v. Sreenath Bose (8). In an earlier passage of their opinion, the Madras Full Bench argued thus as to declaratory suits by reversioners:—

"It is needless to add that the true purpose of the concession of a right of suit in all these cases is the protection of the interest of the person or persons who may eventually turn out to be the heir or heirs, and the object of the legal proceeding is really the perpetuation of testimony which, owing to lapse of time, might not be available for the heir when the succession actually opens. Now, as it is not possible either to determine beforehand who will be the actual successor or to predicate the existence of any substantial distinction between the right of one reversioner and that of another, in theory, it would seem that the right to take legal proceedings for perpetuation of testimony should be conceded to each and all of such persons."

It is clear from these remarks that the learned Judges regarded all reversioners, immediate and remote, as a class who hold the estate of reversion, and on whose behalf the presumptive reversioner is permitted to bring declaratory suits. This being the ratio decidendi, it seems to us that a suit to declare an alienation invalid beyond the widow's life-time, is as much a representative suit for the benefit of the eventual reversioner, as one to avoid an adoption, which, after all, is only a mode of alienating the estate in defeasance of the reversion. In the very recent case of Muthusami Mudaliar v. Masilamani (9), the same High Court laid down that "a declaratory suit by a reversioner brought not only on his own behalf but on behalf of the body of reversioners does not abate on the death of the plaintiff." In this case, the suit was one to avoid an alienation made by the widow of the last male holder.

(7) 8 I. A. 14 at p. 22; 6 C. 764; 8 C. L. R. 381.

(8) 9 W. R. 463 at p. 465.

The Allahabad case—Balak Puri v. Durga (3)—relied on by the learned Advocate for the respondents, was one possessed of special features which make it distinguishable. A person died after mortgaging his estate, leaving him surviving three daughters, of whom two were married and one unmarried. Subsequently, one of the married daughters died leaving children. The unmarried daughter claimed to be sole heir to the equity of redemption left by her father, and she sued to redeem the estate for her sole benefit, making her surviving sister, and her dead sister's children, co-defendants with the mortgagee. Pending the suit, the plaintiff died, and the surviving sister claimed to be substituted for her. The Court held that the suit had abated. It is clear that, as the suit was framed, the plaintiff not only did not represent her married sister, but set up a title adverse to her. Nevertheless, it must be conceded that, indirectly, the decision involves the dictum that the unmarried sister was only redeeming the estate for herself, though, if she had redeemed it and died unmarried, it must have gone to her sister. In Bhagwanti v. Sukhi (10), a Full Bench held that no reversioner under the Hindu Law, presumptive or otherwise, represents another reversioner for the purposes of limitation with reference to declaratory suit, and this view was adopted in Govindi Pillai v. Thayammal (11) and Abinash Chandra v. Hari Nath (12); but was practically, if not expressly, dissented from in the Madras Full Bench case already cited.

Upon a careful consideration of the subject, it seems to us that much of the difficulty which has arisen proceeds from the assumption that the only person who can continue a suit already begun by a plaintiff since deceased, is one who would have been bound by the decree if the original plaintiff had lived to complete the litigation. It is also assumed that the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, entitled to continue the suit, is necessarily the heir of the latter. We consider such assumptions to be fallacious. The continuance of a suit depends, not on the qualifications of the representative of the deceased plaintiff but on the nature of the suit. A man may die leaving an heir to his estate who may yet have no right to continue a pending suit—e. g., the case of a plaintiff who leaves a son and a pending suit for damages for defamation. On the other hand, the legal representative of a deceased person entitled to carry on a pending suit may not be his heir, e. g., the case of an executor or a creditor who has obtained Letters of Administration. In every case under Order XXII, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, the first point to be decided is whether the right to sue survives, and that must be decided with reference to the nature of the suit. Now a suit by the presumptive reversioner to obtain a declaration, in protection of the reversionary estate, against an alienation by the widow, is governed by Article 125 of the Limitation Schedule, and time begins to run from the date of alienation. Suppose A., being the presumptive reversioner, brings such a suit within a few months of an alienation by the widow, and dies a year later, leaving the suit pending. B. thereupon becomes presumptive reversioner. He only obtains the right to bring the particular suit covered by Article 125 when he succeeds to that status. Is he not clearly the successor of A. for the purpose of enforcing that right? The right is one for a declaration that the widow's death or re-marriage puts an end to the alienation for the benefit of whoever may then be the reversionary heir—not necessarily the plaintiff. Why should B.'s right to sue be regarded as something fresh? The nature of the suit is such that the right to sue survives though the suitor is dead. Therefore, we have to find a legal representative of the deceased suitor to carry on the suit, and he is found in the person who steps into the position by virtue of which alone the suit can be maintained. Any other view would mean that, if A died more than twelve years after the alienation, B., though presumptive

(9) 33 M. 342; 7 M. L. T. 17; 20 M. L. J. 49; 5 Ind. Cas. 42.
(10) 22 A. 33.
(11) 28 M. 57; 14 M. L. J. 209.
(12) 32 C. 62 at p. 72; 9 C. W. N. 25.

reversioner, would have no right of suit remaining: and this would be an unreasonable interpretation of the law. It is misleading to refer to the law of res judicata in dealing with the question whether or not a right to sue survives. The words 'legal representative' have a very wide signification, and are not synonymous with the limited class governed by section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which these words find no place. As already explained, the survival of a right to sue does not depend on the presence, or even the existence, of an heir. A person may die leaving no known heir-at-law, and his estate may lapse to the Crown, or be taken possession of by some authority empowered to administer unclaimed estates. Nevertheless, if at the date of his death, the deceased was carrying on a suit, say, for possession of land, the right to sue would survive, and the legal representative for the time being would carry on the proceeding. For the wide significance which we give to the phrase 'legal representative,' as used in Order XXII, Code of Civil Procedure, ample authority will be found in Dinamoni Chowdhrani v. Elahudad Khan (13) and Amar Chandra v. Sebak Chand (14). The right to sue for rendition of accounts, so as to check or restrain waste of the trust estate in the present case, is a right appurtenant to the reversionary estate; and it will remain exercisable for the benefit of that estate, so long as that estate exists—that is, so long as the reversion does not fall in. The present suit is one to enforce that right, and, in bringing it, Chunnilal was acting primarily for the benefit of the reversionary estate: that he acted also for his own benefit was a contingency when he brought the suit, and that contingency has failed. But, in our opinion, the right to sue survives, and the proper legal representatives to carry on the suit are those persons, or any one or more of them, who, by the death of Chunnilal, have become the immediate reversioners charged with the duty of protecting the reversion. We are not called upon to decide, and we do not decide, the question whether the decree in this case, if obtained by Chunnilal, would have bound his sons or other remote reversioners. As we have already stated, the survival of a right to sue, and the substitution of a legal representative to enforce that right, are not limited to cases where the successor is a person claiming under the deceased within the purview of section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908.

For the above reasons, we allow this appeal, and, reversing the order appealed against, we direct the lower Court to substitute the appellants as plaintiffs for Chunnilal deceased, and, after satisfying itself as to Court-fees, and recovering any deficiency, to proceed with the suit from the point where it was stayed by the death of Chunnilal. The respondent, Raj Rani, must pay the costs of this appeal. Costs in the lower Court will abide the result. We allow Rs. 100 as Pleader's fees in this Court.

Appeal allowed.

(13) 8 C. W. N. 843.

(14) 34 C. 642 at p. 652; 11 C. W. N. 593; 5 C. L. J. 491; 2 M. L. T. 207 (F. B.).

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 19 OF 1910.

September 10, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson Kt., Offg., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

IMMUDIPATTAM VIJAYA GANDIPA NACHIMUTHU OVALA KONDAMA NAICKER—APPELLANT

versus

S. ANNASAWMY AIYAR—RESPONDENT.

Contract—Sale of immoveable property—Agreement for payment of commission to person negotiating sale—Completion of contract, payment of commission on—Payment after realization of purchase-money—Document, construction of—Absence of alternative claim for decree—Quantum meruit, effect of.

A contract between plaintiff and defendant, providing for payment to the former of a certain commission on his effecting a sale of the latter's property, was in the following terms:—"We are by this bound to pay you a commission of Rs. . . . as remuneration for the trouble you take, out of the amount that may be realized by means of sale of . . . . our Rettiambadi Mitta for 4½ lakhs within the limited time of two months mentioned in the power-of-attorney executed by us in your favour this day . . . . The aforesaid commission amount shall be paid out of the amount which you may obtain and give for us."

Held, (1) that, under the said agreement, the commission was payable to plaintiff not when he concluded the contract of sale of the property, but when the defendant actually obtained the purchase-money or, at any rate, not before he had removed all the obstacles to the defendant receiving the amount:

Beringfield v. Kynaston, (1876) 3 T. L. R. 279, Geeen v. Mules, (1861) 30 L. J. C. P. 343, referred to.

(2) that it was not competent to the Court to decree any sum for plaintiff quantum meruit as there was no alternative claim in that behalf.

Krishan Prasad Sinha v. Purendas Narain Sinha, 15 C. L. J. 40; 16 C. W. N. 753; 11 Ind. Cas. 820 and Lott v. Duthwaite, (1893) 10 L. T. R. 76, referred to.

Appeal from the judgment of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Wallis, dated 3rd March 1910, in C. S. No 112 of 1908 in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court.

Messrs. S. Srinivasa Aiyangar and C. V. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the Appellant.

Messrs M. O. Parthasarathy Aiyangar and M. A. Tirunachariyar, instructed by Messrs. Short and Bemes, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Plaintiff sues to recover a sum of Rs. 37,500 with interest which he claims as commission due to him under a contract with the defendant by which the latter authorised him to sell a mitta. He cliams to have perf rmed his part of the contract. Wallis, J., who tried the case, found that the plaintiff brought about a contract of sale between the Court of Wards and the defendant which the latter could have enforced against the Court of Wards, but the defendant wilfully made default in complying with certain requisitions made by the Court of Wards and made them a pretext for withdrawing from the contract, and afterwards sold the property to one Veerappa Chetty for the amount for which the Court of Wards had agreed to purchase the property. He was of opinion that when the plaintiff brought about the contract of sale, he had performed his promise and become entitled to recover his commission, and accordingly passed a decree in his favour for the amount claimed.

In appeal, it is contended before us—

(1) that under the agreement, if any, between the plaintiff and the defendant, the former was only entitled to recover any commission on his obtaining the purchase-money for the zemindar; and that his right to commission did not arise on his concluding the contract of sale;

(2) that there was no concluded contract of sale as the Court of Wards imposed certain conditions with which the defendant was unable to comply;

(3) that the plaintiff was bound to have effected a sale before the 31st December 1906 and that as he did not carry out his promise before the stipulated period, he was not entitled to any commission.

We have, therefore, first of all to determine what the contract was between the parties. The question depends upon the construction of the documents (Exhibits A, B and E).

The defendant is the zemindar of Ayakudi. Under a decree of the High Court, confirmed by the Privy Council, he was entitled to redeem his zemindari which was under mortgage on payment of certain sum of money before the 31st December 1906. He had been making various unsuccessful attempts to raise the necessary sum for the payment of the mortgage-debt. The plaintiff was also one of the agents employed by him to raise the money. In August 1906, the defendant executed a power-of-attorney in favour of the plaintiff authorising him to raise a loan of $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of rupees on the security of the zemindari, or to sell the Rettiambadi Mitta which is a portion of that zemindari for that amount. The reasons for giving this power-of-attorney are set out in paragraph 10 of Exhibit A. The chief reasons are stated to be:—(1) "The non-payment of money due to the usufructuary mortgage of the aforesaid zemin, the time limited for the payment of the amount of the said debts approaching very fast." (2) The non-payment of the debts incurred for our household expenses, the creditors giving trouble on that account and there being "no means for the present household expenses. The creditors giving trouble on that account and there being no means for the present household expenses." The loan was to be raised within a period of two months. On the same day, Exhibit B was executed in favour of the plaintiff fixing the amount of the commission at Rs. 50, 000. The following is the material part of the instrument:—"We are by this bound to pay you a commission of Rs. 50,000 as remuneration for the trouble you take, out of the amount that may be realized either by means of sale of by debt which you may effect, either by obtaining a loan of $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs against our zemindari or by effecting a sale of our Rettiambadi Mitta for $4\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs within the limited time of two months mentioned in the power-of-attorney executed by us in your favour on this day, in pursuance of conditions therein. The aforesaid commission amount shall be paid out of the amount which you may obtain and give for us." This contract is modified later by Exhibit E, in which the amount to be raised was settled at not less than Rs. $3\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs in accordance with the above conditions, and the commission was fixed at 10 per cent on the amount.

The question that has been argued at length before us is, whether under this agreement, the plaintiff became entitled to get his commission when, as he alleges, he concluded the contract or whether he was to get his commission only after the defendant received the purchase-money.

Exhibits B and E, of course, must be read together. The plaintiff proceeded to take steps to effect the sale immediately after the agreement. The 1st petition which he presented on behalf of the defendant was on the 24th August 1906. Within the period of two months, the time fixed by the original agreement B, he was not able to raise the money. It was for that reason that the time to raise the loan was extended by the Exhibit E, up to 31st December 1906. The zemindar, according to the decree, had to redeem his property before that time. It appears, however, that nothing was finally settled up to that date. The proposals made by the zemindar were then under the consideration of the Court of Wards. The Court accordingly asked the zemindar on the 4th January to obtain an order from the High Court for the extension of time for the redemption of the estate. An application was accordingly made by the zemindar to the High Court, and on the 25th April 1907, the time for redemption was extended to December 1907. According to the original agreement, Exhibit A, if the matter was not settled within the time limited the time might be "extended by letter" at the discretion of the zemindar. So on the 29th and 30th December 1906, plaintiff submitted to the defendant two draft letters (Exhibits IV and V) to extend the time for the completion of the agreement. There was no reply. On the 17th January, the plaintiff again wrote a letter Exhibit VI, in which he complained of the zemindar's delay in not replying to his previous letters and requesting him to sign those letters. To this also there was no reply. Though there was thus no extension of time in writing, there can be no doubt but that the plaintiff did a great deal of work in January and February for the defendant to bring about a sale. See Exhibits K. L and M. The evidence is fully discussed in the judgment of the learned Judge and it is not necessary to refer to it in detail as we agree with his conclusions that the plaintiff continued his efforts to effect a sale with the consent of the defendant, the zemindar. Finally, on the 25th February, the Court of Wards declared its willingness to purchase the Rettiambadi Mitta from the defendant for Rs. 3,75,000 "on condition that he furnishes at his own cost a certificate from the Registration Department to the effect that there are no encumbrances on the property prior to the decree now under execution and that he obtains a certificate from the High Court under section 305, Civil Procedure Code, authorising him to sell the mitta to the Court of Wards." In reply, the defendant declared his willingness to part with his mitta for the amount named, and said that he would duly apply to the High Court for the required permission and to the Registration Department for the certificate of encumbrance. But he pointed out to the Board that the expenses incurred in connection with a sale are usually borne by the vendee and requested the Board, therefore, to defray the costs themselves, (Exhibit P). In reply, the Court of Wards offered to pay the fee for the drawing up of the conveyance, and stamp under the Registration Act, but informed the zemindar that "he should pay the sundry charges, if any, connected with the transaction, such as the cost of having release deeds by the previous mortgagees drawn up, executed and registered if the Court is advised that such a deed is necessary to secure a complete title for the purchaser." The certificate required from the High Court was obtained and produced and no question arises upon that. The certificate from the Sub-Registrar was also produced but it is not filed in this case.

There is no doubt that it was the plaintiff who took steps in order to obtain the encumbrance certificate. Then on the 29th March 1907, in reply to a letter from the plaintiff, in which he styled himself the agent of the zemindar, the latter in Exhibit Y repudiated the plaintiff's agency. He said:—"You are already well aware of the fact that you yourself being unable to complete the loan in accordance with the power letter written and given to you only in respect of settling the loan to us before, the aforesaid power letter has become cancelled (see Exhibit Y)."

The plaintiff did not accept the repudiation and he replied to the zemindar to inform him, "that if the business be not completed, I request you will take notice hereby I was not in the least responsible therefor." The plaintiff swears that even after this repudiation, the zemindar and his sister requested him to go on with the business; and though we have only the plaintiff's own evidence on the point, and it may not be safe to rely upon his uncorroborated testimony, there is very little doubt that he must have been again working in the interest of the zemindar and at his request because we find that, on the 15th May, in Exhibit AA, a communication from the zemindar to the Court of Wards, forwarding High Court order and the encumbrance certificate, there is a postscript in the handwriting of the plaintiff. Further, he wrote to the Court of Wards on the 26th May, on the 8th June and on the 23rd June, requesting the Court to complete the contract as soon as possible. According to his own evidence, in July he became ill, and he continued in that state for six months and did not know what passed afterwards. There were various communications between the zemindar and the Court of Wards (See Exhibits GG, HH, JJ, and LL) and, finally, on the 8th November, the Court of Wards informed him that he must furnish the Government Solicitor with registration copies of certain documents, and also with certain release-deeds giving up all claims against the mitta from certain persons whose names appear in the encumbrance certificate and that he must also agree to the Court of Wards paying off or retaining the amount sufficient to pay off all the encumbrances, subsequent to the decree, in their hands. To this last condition, the zemindar had no objection; but he said that it was not possible to comply with the other conditions stated in that letter and the contract thus came to an end. Neither the Court of Wards nor the defendant apparently cared to enforce it.

The question arises whether, on these facts, the plaintiff became entitled to the commission, when, according to him, the contract was concluded on the 25th and 26th February by the letters Exhibits O and P. We have already pointed out that it is impossible to believe that all that he did up to the 29th June was done without the knowledge of the zemindar and against his will. We agree on this point with Wallis, J., in holding that though the time limited had expired, the defendant certainly allowed the plaintiff and probably requested him to continue to negotiate for him and to bring about the sale, while, at the same time, there can be no doubt the zemindar continued deliberately to refuse to give the plaintiff any letter similar to Exhibits B and E. The plaintiff is entitled to his commission if he did carry out what he contracted to do. If, under the contract, he was bound to effect only the sale of the property he became entitled to his commission as soon as he had completed his portion of the bargain by bringing about a contract of sale between the Court of Wards and the defendant, which it was in the power of the defendant to enforce against the Court of Wards irrespective of anything that might take place subsequently between the defendant and the Court. But, if the contract was that the plaintiff should obtain the money for the defendant from the intending purchaser and that he was to get his commission only after he obtained such money, then it cannot be said that the plaintiff became entitled to his commission before the defendant obtained the money or, at any rate, before the plaintiff had removed all the obstacles to the defendant receiving the amount.

It is necessary to consider in this case the circumstances under which the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant was entered into.

As we have already pointed out, the agreement was entered into with the plaintiff on the 30th August 1906 to enable the zemindar to redeem the mortgage before the 31st December 1906. What the zemindar required was, not either a sale of his mitta or mortgage of his zemindari, but the required sum of money to redeem the mortgage before that date. The sale or mortgage after the expiration of the period would be absolutely useless to him. That there were two alternative courses allowed, i.e., either to sell a portion or to mortgage the whole zemindari, is also significant. The essence of the contract thus being the obtaining of the money before a certain date, it would seem to follow that a mere contract of sale before that date, even if it could have been enforced against the Court of Wards, would be of no avail to the zemindar. The other reasons given in Exhibit A, to which we have referred, i.e., the pressure of the creditors for payment of the debts incurred for household expenses, would also seem to suggest that what the zemindar mainly looked to was obtaining the money by some means or other to satisfy his immediate wants. Considered in relation to these circumstances, the words in Exhibit B. that "the commission is to be paid 'out of the amount' that may be realized either by means of sale or by debt which you may effect.....within the time of two months" and the words that subsequently follow that the commission amount shall be paid "out of the amount which you may obtain and give for us" indicate strongly that the commission is to be paid out of the loan or purchase-money which may be received by the zemindar. The words "you (plaintiff) may obtain and give for us" seem to show strongly that it was the plaintiff's duty to receive the loan or the purchase-money. The words in Bringfield v. Kynaston (1) were very similar. The auctioner in that case was to get his commission "out of the purchase-money." He found a person who agreed to purchase and paid the deposit. He, however, failed to complete it and the estate was sold to somebody else. It was held that, as the commission was payable out of the purchase-money, as in the case before us, the agent was not entitled to commission upon the amount agreed to be paid. Similarly, in Green v. Mules (2), the agreement was that, if the plaintiffs could induce one Newman to make an advance of money to the defendant, the latter would pay them £100 commission. It was held that the employment was to be at an end if Newman did not advance the money, and if he did, the plaintiffs were to have £ 100.

These cases show that, where the intention of the parties was that the commission should be paid only after the defendant obtained his money, then effect must be given to that intention. The plaintiff was not entitled to his commission until the defendant had obtained his money, or the plaintiff had put the defendant in a position in which there was no impediment in the way of his getting the money.

The facts of this case also strongly support the construction. The zemindar was then practically a man of no means. And the parties would have scarcely contemplated the payment of the commission to the plaintiff before he received the purchase-money himself. In this view, the plaintiff was bound not only to effect a sale but to do everything that was necessary to enable the defendant to receive the money.

Such seems also to have been the opinion entertained by the plaintiff himself. For, agreeing with Wallis, J., we find it is proved that, after the offer by the Court and acceptance by the defendant of the terms of the sale (Exhibits O and P), the plaintiff sent to to the zemindar from Madras a sum of Rs. 25 for obtaining the encumbrance certificates. He was also bound to see that the information asked for by the Government Solicitor and by the Court of Wards was supplied to them and that release-deeds were obtained from the persons indicated and given to the Court. Or, if he considered it unnecessary to give the Court the information and these release deeds for any reason whatever, he should have removed their objections by litigation or otherwise and enabled the zemindar to receive the money at any rate before the time for redemption expired. It was not for the zemindar to remove the difficulties himself. The plaintiff admits that from July till December, he was ill and was not able to do anything. If the defendant had neglected or refused to receive the purchase-money due to him, that would have raised a different question. It is not a case of the defendant preventing the plaintiff from earning his commission, nor is it a case of the principal taking the matter out of the agent's hands; because though there was a repudiation at one time it is clear from the documentary evidence in the case that the plaintiff continued to work for the defendant even after that, and we have already stated our agreement with the finding of the learned Judge that he must have so continued to work at the request of the defendant. We have considered whether any sum quantum meruit should be decreed to the plaintiff in return for the work which he did for the defendant, but we are of opinion that nothing can be decreed to the plaintiff on that account in this suit. The suit is based on the special contract, and there is no alternative claim for remuneration for work quantum meruit. In such a case, there can be no decree on the latter basis, Krishna Prosad Singha v. Purnendu Narain Sinha (3) and Lott v. Duthwaite (4), nor, indeed, is there material before us on which we could determine the proper remuneration. A question as to the jurisdiction of the Court was raised, but we agree with the learned Judge that the High Court has jurisdiction for the reason stated by him in the last paragraph of his judgment. In the result, the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed with cost throughout.

(1) (1887) 3 T. L. R. 279.
(2) (1861) 30 L. J. C. P. 343.

Appeal allowed.

(3) 15 C. L. J. 40; 16 C. W. N. 753; 11 Ind. Cas. 820.
(4) (1893) 10 L. T. R. 76.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2093 OF 1899.
February 25, 1902.
Present:—Mr. Justice Brett and Mr. Justice Mitra.

Sri Maharani BENI PERSHAD KOERI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAJ KUMAR CHOWBEY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Res judicata—Rent suit—Presumption—Considerations for determination—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 51.

A prior decision in a rent suit may be taken to determine the rent claimed in that suit, and to give rise, under section 51 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, to the presumption that the rents for subsequent years remained the same.

Bukshi v. Nizamuddi, 20 C. 505, Nil Madhab Sarkar v. Brojo Nath Singha, 21 C. 236 and Jotindra Mohan Tagore v. Shumbhu Chundar, 4 C. W. N. 43, relied upon.

The weight to be attached to the presumption thus raised must depend first on the conditions under which that decision was arrived at, that is to say, whether it was after an adjudication of the question of the amount of rent or the rate of rent or not. If in the prior suit there had been such an adjudication, it would be only open to the Judge in a subsequent suit for rent to look to subsequent circumstances and events to enable him to determine whether there had been any change in the relations between the parties since. If there was no adjudication of the question, it would be for him to consider the circumstances and events both prior and subsequent to that former suit in order to enable him to determine the relations existing between the parties and the rentals rightly due for the lands for the years in suit.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Shahabad, dated the 29th June 1899, reversing that of the Munsif of Buxar, dated the 24th January 1899.

Babus Raghu Nundan Pershad and Jogendra Chandra Ghose, for the Appellant.

Babu Karuna Sindhu Mukherjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this appeal, the plaintiff is the appellant. In the Court of first instance she sued to recover from the defendants arrears of rent for the years 1303 to 1305 on the allegation that the yearly jama payable by the defendants was Rs. 53-4-0.

The defendants contended that the yearly rent was Rs. 42-12. In support of her claim, the plaintiff relied on a judgment and decree dated the 20th January 1887, in which in a suit brought by her predecessor against the same defendants, the claim was decreed at the rental of Rs. 53 4-0 per annum. The defendants, on the other hand, relied on a judgment and decree dated the 21st December 1896 in which in a similar case, the plaintiff obtained a decree at the rental of Rs. 42-12-0. Before the Munsif, it was argued on behalf of the defendants that the plaintiff in this case was barred by the doctrine of res judicata from recovering rent at a higher rate than Rs. 42-12 which was decided to be the rental in the judgment of the 21st of December 1896. On the other hand, it was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that, having regard to the circumstances of the case and the previous judgment of 1887, that judgment could not be held to operate as res judicata. The Munsif did not accept the contention put forward by the defendants and, holding that the rental was Rs. 53-4-0 as claimed by the plaintiff, gave her a decree for the full amount claimed with costs and interest.

On appeal to the District Judge, that officer reversed the finding of the Munsif holding that the judgment and decree in the case decided on the 21st December 1896 operated as res judicata between the parties and was a bar to the plaintiff recovering rental at a higher rate than Rs. 42-12-0.

KONDA REDDI v. RAMASAWMI REDDI.

The plaintiff appeals to this Court. In support of the appeal, it has been argued that the judgment and decree of the 21st December 1896 cannot be regarded as finally deciding the question of rental as between the two parties, because, in that case, there was no actual adjudication on evidence as to the rent and the cases of Hurry Behari Bhagat v. Pargun Ahir (1); Bukshi v. Nizamuddi (2) and Neikajee Sheikh Nazir v. Nanda Dulal Bamkeja (3), have been relied on. For the defendants it is contended that the question of the rental was, in fact, adjudicated by the Court in the case which was decided on the 21st December 1896 and that, under the ruling, Kishore Lal Dey v. The Administrator-General of Bengal (4), that judgment would operate as a bar to the present claim. We are unable to find that the District Judge in this case really took into consideration the question whether, in the case which was decided on the 21st December 1896, there was an adjudication as to the rental for years other than those which were in contest in that suit. We think that, so far as the rents of the year which were in contest in that suit were concerned, the decision, no doubt, is an absolute bar under the doctrine of res judicata to any suit for the rents of those years. But so far as the rents or rates of rent of subsequent years are concerned, we do not think that that judgment can be held to be an absolute bar, so far as to prevent the parties from raising the question in a subsequent suit. In our opinion, the prior decision may be taken to determine the rent claimed in that suit, and to give rise under section 51 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to the presumption that the rents for subsequent years remained the same; that appears to be the view which was taken by the learned Judges in the case of Bakshi v. Nizamuddi (2) and that ruling was not dissented from in the judgment in the case reported in Neikajee Sheikh Nazir v. Nanda Dulal Bamkeja (3). It seems also to have been followed in the cases of Nil Madhub Sarkar v. Brojo Nath Singha (5) and Maharaja Jotindra Mohun Tagore v. Shumbhu Chunder Bhattachrriee (6). We think that the weight to be attached to the presumption thus raised must depend first on the conditions under which that decision was arrived at; that is to say, whether it was after an adjudication of the question of the amount of rent or the rate of rent or not. If in the prior suit there had been such an adjudication, it would be only open to the Judge in the subsequent suit to look to subsequent circumstances and events to enable him to determine whether there had been any change in the relations between the parties since. If there was no adjudication of the question, it would be for him to consider the circumstances and events both prior and subsequent to that former suit in order to enable him to determine the relations existing between the parties and the rentals rightly due for the lands for the year in suit. In the present case, the District Judge has not done this and has arrived at his decision acting on the assumption that the judgment of 1896 was absolutely binding. We do not consider that this is correct and we, therefore, set aside the judgment and decree of the District Judge and direct that the case be sent back to him for re-trial having regard to the remarks made above.

The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

Case remanded.

(1) 19 C. 656.
(2) 20 C. 505.
(3) 1 C. W. N. 711.
(4) 2 C. W. N. 303.
(5) 21 C. 236.
(6) 4 C. W. N. 43.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1461 OF 1910.

August 30, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

KONDA REDDI—APPELLANT

versus

RAMASAWMI REDDI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 15—Claim for title over land in possession of another—Evidence of ownership—Right negatived by evidence—Right to easement—Whether can be declared on proof thereof.

The words 'as an easement' in section 15 of the Indian Easements Act do not mean that the enjoyment should be in the assertion of claim of an easement. Illustration (b) to that section shows that the expression 'as an easement' was introduced in order to show that unity of title or possession during the period of 20 years, or a portion thereof, makes the possession useless to create a right of easement.

KONDA REDDI v. RAMASWAMI REDDI.

The claimant of a right of easement need not necessarily prove that he asserted, during his enjoyment, only a limited right of easement as opposed to ownership. He need only prove that the user was for the beneficial enjoyment of another land. The mere claim of the higher right of ownership would not, on failure to prove the same, prevent a person from acquiring the lesser right of easement, provided he can show that he asserted certain rights of enjoyment over the land in question for the benefit of another land belonging to him.

Narendra Nath Baruri v. Abbay Charan Chattopadhya, 34 C. 51; 4 C. L. J. 437; 11 C. W. N. 20; 1 M. T. 364 (F. B.), referred to.

Chuni Lal Fulchand v. Mangaldas Govardandass, 16 B. 592, not approved.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of South Arcot, in A. S. No. 344 of 1909, preferred against that of the District Munsif of Tindivanam, in O. S. No. 622 of 1908.

Mr. T. R. Vencatrama Sastri, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. L. A. Govindaragava Iyer and Mr. D. V. Nilamegachariar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit in this case was to establish the plaintiff's right to an easement of way over certain land belonging to the defendants, to remove the wall constructed by the defendants which, the plaintiff alleged, obstructed his right of way, and to restrain the defendants from interfering with his right of way. The defendants denied the right alleged by the plaintiff. The District Munsif found it established by the evidence adduced in the case. The plaintiff had instituted a previous suit, Original Suit No. 651 of 1899, in which he claimed the site, along which he now asserted a right of way, as belonging to him in proprietary right. That suit failed. The Court that tried that suit expressed an opinion in its judgment that the evidence showed that the plaintiff was entitled not to the ownership of the land but to an easement of right of way. As the plaintiff did not claim any relief with respect to an easement, that suit was dismissed. The District Judge has reversed the District Munsif's judgment. He says: "The evidence of plaintiff in the present case shows that he has not been enjoying the right of way as an easement", and he refers to the deposition of the plaintiff in which he said that he still asserted that he had been long walking along the way in the assertion of a right of ownership. Then, the District Judge, says: "A man cannot acquire a right of way over his own land as an easement. Evidence of immemorial user adduced in support of a right founded on ownership does not, when the right is negatived, tend to establish an easement." The plaintiff, who has preferred the second appeal, contends that this proposition of law is wrong.

We took time to consider our judgment, and we have arrived at the conclusion that the appellant's contention must be upheld. By adverse enjoyment, i e., by enjoyment without a lawful right, a person may acquire either an estate or property belonging to another or an incorporeal right of certain kinds. In the former case, it may be either an absolute estate or a limited estate. If the adverse enjoyment amounts to exclusive possession of the land of the true owner, then, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the trespasser would acquire the absolute ownership of the property. It would be open to the real owner to show that he did not, while in adverse enjoyment, assert the right to hold the lands as absolute owner, but asserted only a lesser right such as that of lessee or a mortgagee or a life-tenant. In that case, the animus possidendi of the adverse enjoyer would determine the title which he would acquire by prescription. It might also be open to the real owner to say that only an easement right was asserted by the person in adverse enjoyment; and, in that case, the right acquired would be only an easement. It is the adverse enjoyment, or enjoyment without a lawful right, that gives right to a title by prescription. No doubt, if the enjoyment was not adverse but by license of the real owner, then no right would be acquired. Now, if a person walks along the land of another for the beneficial enjoyment of another land, and if the enjoyment of the other's land does not amount to exclusive possession, there seems to be no reason why his walking along the land without the permission of the true owner, and in the assertion of a right to walk, should not create in favour of the enjoyer a prescriptive right of easement, simply because he mistakenly supposed that he is the owner of the land or asserts that his act of enjoyment is insufficient to give him the ownership by prescription. Reliance is placed for the respondent on the language of section 15 of the Easements Act. It lays down that, for acquiring a right of easement, the right of way must be enjoyed by a person claiming title thereto, as an easement, and as of right and without interruption for the statutory period. Now, the punctuation shows that title need not be claimed as an easement. The enjoyment is required to possess two properties, viz., that it must be as of right without interruption, and it must be as an easement. The first quality is intended to show that enjoyment by license or under a contract which would not amount to a grant of an easement, would be ineffectual to create a right by prescription. Then, the other quality is, that the enjoyment should be as an easement. The section does not say that the enjoyment should be in the assertion of a claim of an easement. Illustration (b) to the section explains what is meant by "as an easement." It is as follows:—" . . . . . the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that for a year of that time the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the servient heritage as lessee thereof and enjoyed the right as such lessee. The suit shall be dismissed, for the right of way has not been enjoyed 'as an easement' for twenty years". The illustration shows that the expression 'as an easement' is put in to show that unity of title or possession during the period of the 20 years or a portion thereof makes the possession useless to create a right of easement. The appellant has referred us to a case reported as Narendra Nath Baruri v. Abhay Charan Chattopadhya (1). There, the plaintiff claimed a right of ownership of a certain land and if the facts he would prove would not amount to that, he claimed to be entitled to a right of easement. Geidt, J., observes: "In a case like the present, the plaintiff may very well allege bona fide:—'I believe the land to be mine, but I may be unable to prove it, if I should fail to prove it, I can, at any rate, prove that I have been using the right of way as an easement uninterruptedly and as of right for over 20 years'. There appears to me no reason in principle why a claim like this in the alternative should not be tried or why the plaintiff should be forced first to bring a suit to establish his right of ownership, and, if that fails, then to bring a suit to establish the right of easement". It is, of course, impossible to prove an animus to hold the land as owner and at the same time in virtue of a right of easement. The judgment of the Calcutta High Court is inconsistent with the view that the claimant of a right of easement should prove that he asserted, during his enjoyment, a limited right of easement as opposed to ownership. The Court held in that case that the claim in the alternative was sustainable.

The District Judge refers in his judgment to the decision of the Bombay High Court in Chunilal Fulchand v. Mangaldas Govardandoss (2), where the observation is to be found that "evidence of immemorial user adduced in support of a right founded on ownership, does not, when that right is negatived, tend to establish an easement." It is not quite easy to understand what exactly the learned Judges who were parties to that judgment meant. It is, of course, true that evidence of immemorial user in support of a right founded on ownership will not, by itself, tend to establish an easement. In order that an easement may be acquired, it must be shown that the user was for the beneficial enjoyment of another land. If the learned Judges meant to say that the assertion of ownership during the period of user would make the acquisition of an easement right impossible, then with all deference to them, we are unable to agree with that view. The mere claim of the higher right of ownership would not prevent a person from acquiring the lesser right of easement provided he could show that he asserted certain rights of enjoyment over the land in question for the benefit of another land, belonging to him. We do not think the District Judge has really decided the question whether the plaintiff exercised the right to pass over the defendant's land as of right and without interruption for twenty years for the beneficial enjoyment of other land belonging to him as required by section 15 of the Easements Act. We shall, therefore, reverse the decree and remand the appeal for fresh disposal according to law. The costs of this second appeal will abide the result.

(1) 34 C. 51; 4 C. L. J. 437; 11 C. W. N. 20; 1 M. L. T. 364 (F. B.).

(2) 16 B. 592.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 60 OF 1904.

June 30, 1905.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ghosh and Mr. Justice Pratt.

GOBINDA CHANDRA BASU—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

KAMIJUDDI SOYAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Improvement—Excavation of tank—Burden of proof—Tenant to show purpose of excavating tank—Supply of good drinking water to tenant and his people, if sufficient—Co-sharer landlord, if entitled to bring suit to compel tenant to fill up tank wrongfully excavated—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 76, 188.

In order to make section 76 of the Bengal Tenancy Act applicable, it must be shown by the tenant in the first instance that the tank in question was excavated for the purpose of agriculture, or for the use of men and cattle employed in agriculture. It is not enough for the purpose of the section if the object of digging the tank was to supply good drinking water to the tenant and his people.

A suit for the purpose of compelling a tenant to fill up a tank which he has wrongfully excavated in one part of his holding and in the alternative for damages, may be instituted by a co-sharer landlord, for the suit is not one which the whole body of the landlords is required or authorised to bring under the Bengal Tenancy Act and consequently section 188 of the Act is not applicable to it.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Tipperah, dated December 9th, 1903, reversing that of the Munsif of Chandpur, dated July 22nd, 1902.

Babus Baikuntha Nath Das and Trailokya Nath Chakrabarti, for the Appellant.

Babu Jnanendra Nath Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit instituted by a co-sharer landlord against a raiyat for the purpose of compelling him to fill up a tank which the raiyat had excavated in one part of his holding. It appears that, at the time when the said excavation was made by the defendant, there was already a tank in the holding in question. Notwithstanding this, the defendant dug some of the mal lands appertaining to his holding and after raising the level of the ground by earth of the said tank, planted certain trees on the same. The Court of first instance gave the plaintiff a decree, being of opinion that the digging of the tank in question was not consistent with the purposes for which the holding had been let out, and that it was not really an improvement within the meaning of section 76 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The lower Appellate Court, however, has set aside that judgment and dismissed the plaintiff's suit upon the grounds that the tank was dug for the purpose of providing good drinking water to the defendant and his people, that this was in no way inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let out, and that the act of the defendant was an improvement within the meaning of section 76 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Referring to the matter of the other tank which existed at the time of the excavation of the tank in question, the Subordinate Judge makes the following observations: "Though before constructing the tank, there was another old tank near the defendant's house, there is nothing to show that it contained clear water fit for the purpose of drinking without any injury to health. Had it been so, the defendant would not spend a large sum of money in digging another new tank." Then, the Subordinate Judge goes into the question, whether the plaintiff being, one of the landlords, could alone maintain the action, and, having regard to the provisions of section 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, he has expressed the opinion that the suit could not lie at his instance alone without joining the other co-sharers. Another question was raised by the defendant and that was one of limitation. The Subordinate Judge has held that, inasmuch as the suit was not brought within two years from the date of the construction of the tank, it is barred by the two years' law of limitation as provided by Article 32 of the Indian Limitation Act.

Now, referring in the first instance to the question whether the tank dug by the defendant is an improvement within the meaning of section 76 of the Act, it will be observed upon clause (2) of the said section that the construction of wells, tanks, water-channels and other works for the storage, supply or distribution of water for the purpose of agriculture or for the use of men and cattle employed in agriculture are improvements within the meaning of the section until the contrary is shown. Now, in order to make that section applicable, it must, in the first instance, be shown that the tank in question was excavated for the purpose of agriculture, or for the use of men and cattle employed in agriculture. The Subordinate Judge has apparently not addressed himself to this matter. He seems to have considered that if the purpose for digging the tank was to supply good drinking water, it would be enough for the purpose of the section in question. Irrespective of this, we are informed by the learned Vakil for the appellant, and the learned Vakil for the respondent has not contradicted the statement so made, that there is absolutely no evidence upon the record that the tank in question was excavated for the purpose of providing the defendant and his people with good drinking water. If that is so, it is obvious that the requirements of section 76 to which we have referred have not been complied with. Moreover, as we have already mentioned, at the time of the excavation of the tank in question, there was an old tank near the defendant's house. The Subordinate Judge seems to think that it was for the landlord to show that it contained clean water, fit for the purpose of drinking without any injury to health, and because he, the landlord, did not prove this, it must be taken that the tank in question was required for the purpose of providing good drinking water to the defendant and also for the purpose of agriculture; for, otherwise, as the Subordinate Judge says, the defendant would not have spent a large sum of money in digging the tank. We are unable to affirm this proposition as correct. If there was a tank near the defendant's homestead, the defendant might have improved that tank and made it fit for the purpose of providing himself with good drinking water. However that may be, it was, in the first instance, necesssary for the defendant to show that this tank was required for the purpose of providing drinking water and for the purpose of agriculture. There is no evidence to that effect; and we think that the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, so far as this matter is concerned, cannot be supported.

So far as the second point is concerned, the learned Vakil for the respondent has very candidly admittted that the suit which the co-sharer landlord, the appellant before us, has brought is not an act which falls within the scope of section 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The suit was, as already mentioned, for the purpose of compelling the defendant to fill up a tank which he had wrongfully excavated in one part of his holding and, in the alternative, for damages. The suit in question was not one which the whole body of the landlords is required or authorised to bring under the Bengal Tenancy Act. That being so, we hold that the Subordinate Judge is wrong in the view that he has expressed in regard to the applicability of section 188 to this case.

Lastly, as regards limitation, Article 32 of the Indian Limitation Act provides for a suit against one who, having a right to use property for specific purposes, perverts it to other purpose, the limitation provided being two years from the time when the perversion first becomes known to the person injured thereby. All that the Subordinate Judge has found upon this matter is, that the suit has been instituted more than two years after the date of the construction of the tank. But that is not enough for the purpose of the Article in question. It must be found that the plaintiff landlord became aware of the excavation more than two years antecedent to the institution of the suit. The learned Vakil for the respondent, on the matter being put to him, admits that there is no evidence on the record showing that the plaintiff was cognizant of the excavation of the tank in question at any time more than two years antecedent to the suit. No doubt, it does appear that he is a resident of the same village where the holding of the defendant is situated. But it does not necessarily follow that he was aware of the excavation of the tank before the time when he says he became aware of it. Upon these grounds, we think that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court must be set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored with costs.

Appeal allowed: Suit decreed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 94 OF 1910.

September 16, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ayling and Mr. Justice Napier.

GILES SEDDON—APPELLANT

versus

THE DEPUTY COLLECTOR OF MADRAS —RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), ss. 49, 54—"Award or any part thereof"—Decision of Court under section 49, whether an award—Appeal.

The words "award or any part of the award" in section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, do not include the decision of the Court on a reference under section 49.

The decision of the Court on a reference under section 49 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, is not appealable.

Vencataratnam Naidu v. Collector of Godaveri, 27 M. 350; Nita Ram v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 30 A. 176; (1908) A. W. N. 63; 5 A. L. J. 166; Sarat Chandra Bose v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 10 C. W. N. 250, considered.

Balaram Bharamaratar Roy v. Sham Sunder Narendra, 23 C. 526; Sheo Rattan Rai v. Mohri, 21 A. 351 and Shiva Rao v. Nagappa, 29 M. 117, referred to.

Obiter: -A decision by the Court under section 49, would not prevent a claimant obtaining compensation for severance under section 23, sub-section (1) clause (3).

Appeal against the judgment of the Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes, Madras, dated 7th March 1910, in Land Acquisition Suit No. 2 of 1910.

Messrs. Branson and Branson, for the Appellant.

Mr. David, Government Solicitor, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a reference by the Deputy Collector of Madras to the Chief Judge of the Court of Small Causes under section 49 of the Land Acquisition, Act, I of 1894. The Chief Judge decided that the plot of ground referred to did not form " part of the house, manufactory or building" within the meaning of the section. Against that decision, the claimant appeals and the preliminary objection is taken on behalf of the Government that no appeal lies. The question turns on the construction of section 54 of the Act, and to make out a case for appeal, it must be shown that the decision of the Court under section 49 is " the award or any part of the award of the Court in any proceedings under this Act." Before disposing of the question whether this is an award, it is well to dispose of the argument on the words "any part of the award." It was suggested that these words would include any proceeding prior to the final award; but it is obvious that this language is used in exactly the same sense as it is used in the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, section 540, where the language is "an appeal shall lie from the decrees, or from any part of the decrees of the Courts, etc." It could not, of course, be suggested that under the Civil Procedure Code these words meant any thing but a part of the actual decree drawn up and the words in the Land Acquisition Act can have no wider meaning. The word "award" is not defined in the Act and its meaning must, therefore, be ascertained from the sections in which it is used and from an examination of the whole Act. It is applied to the adjudication of the Collector as well as that of the Court; but, in this section, it is confined to the adjudication of the Court. It has to be noted that the language of the section is not the decision of the Court, but the 'award' and, therefore, applying the analogy of the Civil Procedure Code, it would presumably be confined to the result of the decision as embodied in a formal document and would not include the judgment on which it is based. The first section to be considered is section 23, which has reference to the proceedings of the Court on a reference by the Collector under section 18 at the application of any person interested who has not accepted the award of the Collector. The language is:—"In determining the amount of compensation to be awarded for land acquired under this Act, the Court shall take into consideration etc." And sections 26 and 27 provide that "every award under this part shall be in writing signed by the Judge and shall specify the amount awarded" (under the various clauses of section 23) as also the amount of costs and the proportions in which they are to be paid. These are the only proceedings of the Court which are specifically called an award by the Act. There are, however, other proceedings. Under section 30, where the amount of compensation has been settled by the Collector but a dispute arises as to the apportionment or as to the persons to whom the same is payable, the Collector may refer such dispute to the decision of the Court. Under sections 31 and 32, where the Collector has tendered payment of the compensation awarded by him to the persons he considers entitled and they do not consent to receive it or where there is no person competent to alienate the land or where there is a dispute as to the title to receive the compensation or as to the apportionment of it, the Collector is required to deposit the amount of compensation in Court and then, if it appears to the Court that the land belongs to a person who has no power to alienate it, the Court is required to order the money to be invested in the purchase of other land to be held under the like title. Again, under section 35, where land is required for temporary occupation, if the persons interested do not agree as to the sufficiency of the compensation or apportionment thereof, the Collector is required to refer such difference to the decision of the Court, and, lastly, under section 48, where Government withdraws from the acquisition of any land, the Collector is required to determine the amount of compensation due to the owner for damage suffered by him and the provisions of part III which embody the reference to the Court are made applicable to such proceedings. There are, therefore, several matters on which the Court has to pass orders which are not styled 'awards' in the Act other than this decision by the Court under section 49. The language of section 49 is—:"In deciding on such a reference." Section 30 only uses the language, "the Collector may refer such dispute to the decision of the Court." Section 32 says:—"The Court shall order the money to be invested" and "direct the payment of the interest;" and section 35 says:—"The Collector shall refer such difference to the decision of the Court." It is important to consider at what stage these various decisions to be given by the Court arise and it is obvious that the decisions in the case now being considered must properly be given before the Collector can make his award. The first question that arises in land acquisition is what Government is to pay, for section 49 provides that "the provisions of this Act shall not be put in force for the purpose of acquiring a part only of any house, manufactory or other building." It is, therefore, necessary to ascertain what area must be acquired by Government at any particular place where Government wishes to take up land. Section 8 requires the Collector to cause the land declared to be needed for a public purpose to be marked out, measured and a plan to be made and section 9 provides for public notice to be given requiring all persons interested in the land to appear before the Collector to make any objections to the measurement and state the nature of their interests and the particulars of their claim to compensation. Such notice has also to be served on all persons known or believed to be interested in the land. On the date fixed for hearing, the Collector proceeds to inquire into the objections and the interests and to determine the compensation; and, in his award, he has to set out the true area of the land, the compensation and the apportionment. It is obvious that this cannot be done until the question has beed decided whether Government is seeking to acquire a part only of a house, manufactory or other building contrary to the wishes of the owner. That being so, the decision of the Court on a reference for this purpose must be a proceeding prior to the Collector's award, and it follows from this that it cannot be an award of the Court, as the award of the Court only comes into existence after the Collector's award.

The decisions of the Court under the other sections stands on a different footing. The decision on a reference under section 30 is after the Collector has made his award. So is the order for the purchase of other lands where the owner has no power to alienate. The decision of the Court as to the amount of compensation payable for temporary occupation of land is a proceeding analogous to the ordinary award of the Court under section 23. These matters stand, therefore, on an entirely different footing to the decision of the Court under section 49. The apportionment of the amount of compensation or the persons to whom the same is payable must form part of the actual award just as such decisions would form part of the decree of a Court and would be covered by the words in the appeal section, section 54, "award or any part of the award." The same will apply to the order of the Court for the investment of the compensation money in the purchase of other land under section 32. All these decisions being either parts of the award or awards in particular circumstances would appear to be appealable under section 54. It was expressly decided in Balaram Bharamaratar Roy v. Sham Sunder

BINAPANI DEBI v. SHASHIBHUSHAN SINHA.

Narendra (1) that a decision on an apportionment under section 30 was an award and appealable and the same view was taken by the Allahabad High Court in Sheo Kattan Rai v. Mohri (2) and it has been decided by this Court in Shiva Rao v. Nagappa (3) that an appeal lies from an order for investment under section 32. It is urged by the appellant that appeals from decisions of the Court made on a reference under section 49 have been heard by the various High Courts of this country and our attention is drawn to a case in Vencataratanam Naidu v. The Collector of Godaveri (4), where such an appeal was heard. In that, case, however, the Collector had given his award under section 11 and the claimant, in refusing to accept the same, filed a petition asking for the whole house to be taken. The Collector, therefore, referred the whole question under sections 18 and 49. We express no opinion whether the question could be taken up at this stage but in the present case, the reference was before any award by the Collector. The point that no appeal lay on this question was not taken. The case of Nita Ram v. Secretary of State for India in Council (5), relied on, was certainly a reference under section 49 only, but the point was not taken that no appeal lay and the same remark applies to the decision in Sarat Chandra Bose v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (6). It is contended before us that it is unlikely that the Legislature would have intended that no appeal should lie on an important question of this sort; but it is by no means clear that a decision by the Court on this point would prevent a claimant getting compensation for severance under section 23 sub-section (1) clause (3). We are inclined to the view that it would be open to the Appellate Court, at all events, to re-open this question and as far as the claimant is concerned, it would not matter to him whether he received the compensation for the land on the footing that Government was compelled to acquire it under section 49 or on the footing of severance under section 23. Whether this be so or not, we are unable, on the construction of the Act, to hold that the words "award or any part of the award" in section 54 include the decision of the Court on a reference under section 49. We, therefore, uphold the preliminary objection and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 23 C. 526.
(2) 21 A. 354.
(3) 29 M. 117.
(4) 27 M. 350.
(5) 30 A. 176; A. W. N. (1908) 63; 5 A. L. J. 166.
(6) 10 C. W. N. 250.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 216 OF 1910.
June 18, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

BINAPANI DEBI—PETITIONER—APPELLANT
versus
SASHIBHUSHAN SINHA—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Memorandum of appeal not accompanied by copy of decree appealed against, though decree was in existence when appeal was filed—Mis-statement in memorandum of appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 1 (1).

Where a copy of the decree appealed against was not attached to the memorandum of appeal as required by Order XLI, rule 1 (1) and the Vakil for the appellant stated that the decree had not been drawn up, although, as a matter of fact, the decree was in existence when the appeal was filed:

Held, that the memorandum of appeal must be rejected.

Kamala Dasi v. Tarapada, 14 Ind. Cas. 1006; 15 C. L. J. 498 and Hem Chandra Bakshi v. Jadub Chandra Bakshi, 17 Ind. Cas. 99; 16 C. L. J. 116, relied upon.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Bankura, dated the 11th January 1910.

Babu Sarat Kumar Mitra, for the Appellant.

Babu Samatul Chandra Dutt, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal plainly does not comply with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. A copy of the decree was not attached to the memorandum of appeal as required by Order XLI, rule 1 (1); and when objection was taken by the Deputy Registrar, the learned Vakil for the appellant was instructed to state that the decree had not been drawn up. The appeal was accordingly registered. As a matter of fact, it now transpires, the judgment was delivered on the 11th January 1910 and the decree was drawn up on the 15th January 1910. The appellant applied to the Court below for a copy of the judgment on the 1st February 1910. That copy was ready for delivery to her on the 5th February 1910. At that time, the decree was in existence. Consequently, there is no reason why an application should not have been made for a copy of the decree as well. The memorandum of appeal is thus not in conformity with the provisions of the statute which, it will be observed, authorises the Court to dispense with the production of a copy of the judgment alone and not of the decree also. That the production of a copy of the decree is essential has not been and cannot be disputed: Kamala Dasi v. Tarapada (1). The memorandum of appeal must, consequently, be rejected. The course we adopt is in accordance with that followed in Hem Chandra Bakshi v. Jadub Chandra Bakshi (2), mentioned in Khirode Sundari Debi v. Jnanendra Nath Pal (3).

SIVINI APPALANARASIMHULU v. MURADA SANYASI.

We may add that the appellant has not offered to produce a copy of the decree; but even if such an offer had been made, the memorandum when perfected would obviously be out of time, and could not be entertained without an order for its reception under section 5 of the Limitation Act; there are, however, no materials before the Court, at present, to justify an order under that section.

The appeal will stand dismissed, but without costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 15 C. L. J. 498; 14 Ind. Cas. 1006.
(2) 16 C. L. J. 116; 17 Ind. Cas. 99.
(3) 6 C. W. N. 283.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1218 OF 1911.
October 2, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar
SIVINI APPALANARASIMHULU AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS
versus
MURADA SANYASI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Madras Estates Land Act (Mad. Act I of 1908), s. 3, clauses (3) & (5), s. 189 and Sch. A. No. 8—Rent, meaning of—Inamdar of certain lands in village, whether a land-holder—Suit for rent by Inamdar—Jurisdictian of Revenue Court.

An Inamdar, to whom a grant only of some lands in his estate has been made by the zemindar, is a 'land-holder' within the meaning of section 3, clause (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, and a suit by him for rent against a ryot is cognizable by the Revenue Court.

Civil Revision Petition No. 895 of 1910, followed.

Second appeal against the decree and judgment of the District Court of Vizagapatam, in A. S. No. 272 of 1910, presented against that of the Court of the Sub-Collector of Parvatipur District, No. 67 of 1910.

Mr. B. Narasimheswara Sarma, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. Narayanamurti, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The question for decision in this case is, whether the Sub-Collector was right in holding that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit which was one for rent against a ryot by the proprietor of certain Inam lands in a village in the Sangam Vilasa zemindary. The Inam was admittedly one granted by the zemindar subsequent to the Permanent Settlement. The view taken by the Sub-Collector and the District Judge on appeal is that the plaintiffs are not land-holders within the definition of that word in section 3, clause (5) of the Estates Land Act, and a suit for rent by them is, therefore, not one coming within the purview of section 189 and No. 8 of Schedule A of the Act. The reason given by the lower Courts is that the land in question is a minor Inam and, therefore, not an 'estate' as defined by clause (2) of section 3. It has evidently been assumed by them that the plaintiffs cannot be land-holders if the land is not an estate. The definition of an 'estate' includes specifically two classes of Inams by sub-clauses (d) and (e). Sub-clause (d) refers to a village of which the land revenue alone has been granted in Inam to a person not owning the Kudivaram thereof, provided the grant has been made, confirmed or recognized by the British Government, or any separated part of such village. Sub-clause (e) relates to any portion consisting of one or more villages (of an estate) which is held on a permanent under-tenure. The Inam in question consists only of some lands in a village and not of a village or one or more villages of the 'estate' of Sangam Vilasa and is clearly, therefore, not an estate within the definition of that word. The fact that the Inam was granted subsequently would not necessarily show that it is not an estate if it consisted of one or more villages, as sub-clause (e) would include an Inam granted by the zemindar provided it consists of one or more villages, for it would then be a portion of the zemindar's estate held on a permanent under-tenure. Sub-clause (d) relates to a village which has ceased to be part of a zemindari and sub-clause (e) relates to an Inam which, being granted by the proprietor of the zemindari and held under him, has not ceased to be a portion of the zemindari. Although it is clear that the land in question is not an estate, that is not sufficient to show that the suit is not cognizable by the Revenue Court. For the test, which is decisive on the question of jurisdiction, is, whether the plaintiffs are land-holders. That word is defined as follows :— in clause (5) of section 3, 'landholder' means a person holding an estate or part thereof and includes every person entitled to collect the rents of the whole or any portion of the estate by virtue of a transfer from the owner or his predecessor-in-title, or of any order of a competent Court, or of any provision of law. The plaintiff is, undoubtedly, a person entitled to collect rent of a portion of the estate of Sangam Vilasa. There is no reason why the holder of an under-tenure should not be held to be a person entitled to collect rent of a portion of the estate out of which the under tenure is carved. The under-tenure holder, if he is liable to pay Kattubadi to the zemindar, is such a person holding under him and entitled to collect the rents of a portion of the zemindari as a lessee or usufructuary mortgagee of the whole or a portion of the zemindari. If the tenure-holder is not bound to make any payment to the zemindar for his tenure, he will then be a person owning a part of the estate and, as such, would come within the meaning of 'land-holder.' It is clear that the term 'land-holder' is wider than the owner of an estate.

No doubt, the word 'rent' is defined as 'whatever is lawfully payable in money, in kind or both, to a land-holder for the use or occupation of land in his estate for the purpose of agriculture,' but the expression 'his estate' cannot be taken to involve that only what is payable to the owner of the estate can be regarded as rent, for the definition would then exclude what is payable to a lessee or a usufructuary mortgagee. The definition of a 'land-holder' clearly includes every person entitled to collect the rents of any portion of an estate by virtue of any transfer. The plaintiffs, by reason of the transfer of the lands in question from the zemindar as an under-tenure, are persons entitled to collect the rent of the land. They must, therefore, be held to be land-holders and the suit for rent by them against the defendants is one cognizable by the Sub-Collector. This view is in accordance with the judgment of Abdur Rahim, J., in Civil Revision Petition No. 895 of 1910, who upheld the view taken by the Subordinate Court of Cocanada, although no reasons are stated in the judgment.

The decrees of the lower Court must, therefore, be reversed and the suit remanded to the Court of first instance for disposal according to law. No objection to jurisdiction was raised by the defendants. In the circumstances, all costs up to date must abide the result of the trial.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 562 OF 1911.

June 11, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

RAGHU SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SHEW PROSAD RAI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Restitution—Suit for possession decreed in first Court—Forcible possession taken by plaintiff—Subsequent reversal of decree—Application by defendant for restitution and mesne profits, if may be entertained—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144.

Section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code was enacted with a view to shorten litigation and afford speedy relief A narrow construction of the section so as to restrict its application should not be adopted.

Where a successful plaintiff in a suit for possession took possession of the property in suit by force and not by execution of the decree, and the decree was set aside on appeal;

RAGHU SINGH v. SHEW PROSAD RAI.

Held, that an application by the defendant for restitution of the property to him with the mesne profits enjoyed by the plaintiff in the interval by virtue of his possession was maintainable under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Section 144 is not limited to restitution of what may be technically described as mesne profits; if an appropriate order of restitution is made under the section no question of limitation arises.

The Court will not, in the interests of justice, be astute to force the parties to a separate suit, merely to allow the question of limitation to be raised.

Appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge of Bhagalpur, dated the 13th September 1911, affirming that of the Munsif of Beguserai, dated the 4th Jully 1911.

Babus Biraj Mohan Majumdar and Surendra Nath Ghosal, for the Appellant.

Babu Karunamoy Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against an order by which the Court of Appeal below, in concurrence with the Court of first instance, has refused an application for restitution under section 144 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908. The circumstances under which that application was made may be briefly stated. The respondents commenced an action against the appellants on the 9th February 1903 for declaration of title to immoveable property, for confirmation of possession, and, in the alternative, for recovery of possession. The suit was decreed on the 31st August 1903 by the primary Court, in these terms: "The plaintiffs do get confirmation of possession, and, in the alternative, khas possession." Upon appeal, this decree was confirmed by the District Judge on the 19th February 1904. On appeal to this Court, the decree of the District Judge was set aside on the 2nd March 1906 and the case was remanded for re-consideration. The District Judge, on the 18th August 1906, again affirmed the decree of the original Court. On appeal to this Court, this decree was set aside on the 6th April 1910 and the case was again remanded. On the 10th June 1910, the District Judge re-heard the appeal and discharged the decree of the Court of first instance. The decree of the District Judge has been this day affirmed by this Court. The position, therefore, is that the erroneous decree of the Court of first instance was in full operation from the 31st August 1903 to the 10th June 1910. The case for the appellants is, that, on the 2nd September 1903, the successful plaintiffs by force obtained possession of the disputed property; they pray, accordingly, that under section 144 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiffs-respondents be directed to deliver up the property together with the profits enjoyed in the interval by virtue of their possession. The Courts below have dismissed the application on the ground that it is not maintainable under section 144, inasmuch as, according to the case of the applicants, the respondents did not obtain delivery of possession by execution of the decree. The Courts have held in substance that the only remedy of the appellants is by way of a suit for ejectment and mesne profits. In our opinion, this view cannot be supported.

Section 144 provides that where and in so far as a decree is varied or reversed, the Court of first instance shall, on the application of any party entitled to any benefit by way of restitution or otherwise, cause such restitution to be made, as will, so far as may be, place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed: and for this purpose, the Court may make any orders, including orders for the refund of costs and for the payment of interest, damages, compensation and mesne profits which are properly consequential on such variation or reversal. Sub-section (2) of the section further provides that no suit shall be instituted for the purpose of obtaining any restitution or other relief which could be obtained by application under sub section (1). It is worthy of note that the section does not expressly state that the successful party becomes entitled to the benefit by way of restitution, only when he has been deprived of the property in execution of a decree which is ultimately set aside; and we ought not to adopt a narrow construction so as to restrict the application of this salutary provision of the law, which was enacted with a view to shorten litigation and afford speedy relief. In the case before us, on the 31st August 1903, the plaintiffs were declared to be the rightful proprietors of the property. If, as the appellants allege, the successful party subsequently obtained possession, that possession must be attributed to the decree in their favour. Indeed, it has not been suggested to us that after the date of the decree, the respondents could have taken possession of this property under any independent claim of right; and as they held the decree in their favour, their possession, at that stage at least, could not be deemed wrongful. No doubt, it has ultimately transpired that the decree was erroneously made and, therefore, the plaintiffs are liable to restore the property to the appellants. In so far as restitution of the property itself is concerned, it has not been seriously contended that a separate suit should be brought; in fact, it is conceded that the institution of a separate suit for the purpose would be an idle formality, as there could obviously be no pretence of an answer to the claim. But if, for the purpose of restitution of possession, section 144 is applicable, it is difficult to appreciate why, in so far as restitution of profits is concerned, the section should be differently interpreted. It may be conceded, as observed in Safaradti v. Durga Prosad (1), that section 144 does not create a new substantive right, but merely affords a convenient procedure. Here, however, no question can possibly arise as to the liability of the respondents to restore the profits received by them. What was said by Lord Cairns in President and Governors of Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts (2), namely, that when a voidable grant has been made, as the grant is valid till avoided, the right to mesne profits does not exist, is plainly of no assistance to the respondents. When the erroneous decree of the original Court was ultimately reversed, the only possible justification for their possession disappeared, and we cannot discover any conceivable principle of justice, equity and good conscience under cover whereof they may claim to retain the profits. Their learned Vakil has fully realised this position, and has, as a last resort, argued that the appellants should be driven to a new suit to recover the profits. He has frankly confessed that if the plaintiffs are thus driven to institute a new suit, they may be met by the plea that they are entitled to recover profits only in respect of three years antecedent to the suit, although, as a matter of fact, they have been kept out of possession of the property for nearly seven years. Whether a plea of limitation can be successfully taken under such circumstances, is at least open to serious doubt in view of the decisions in Surno Moyee v. Shooshee Mokhee Burmonia (3); Dhunput Singh v. Saraswati Misrain (4); Rangayya Appa Rao v. Bobba Sriramulu (5) and Holloway v. Guneshwar Singh (6). But, even if it be assumed that the plea of limitation may be urged with some plausibility in a suit for recovery of the profits, that is all the greater reason why relief should be afforded under section 144. That section, it may be observed, is not limited to restitution of what may be technically described as mesne profits, and if an appropriate order for restitution is made thereunder, no question of limitation arises. The Court will not, in the interests of justice, be astute to force the parties to a separate suit, merely to allow the question of limitation to be raised in a case of this description. The appellants were not in a position to institute a suit against the plaintiffs-respondents before the 10th June 1910, when the suit was ultimately dismissed; and they cannot now be justly driven to another suit to be restored to the position they would have occupied but for the erroneous decree. We may further point out that the principle embodied in section 144 is of much wider application than the section itself, as is clear from the decision in Beni Madho Singh v. Pran Singh (7), where the doctrine of restitution was applied to a case in which an auction-purchaser had taken possession of the property, and after the reversal of the sale, was held liable to make restitution to the judgment-debtor.

The result is, that this appeal is allowed, the orders of the Court below set aside, and the case remanded to the Court of first instance in order that the facts may be investigated. The appellants are entitled to their costs in this Court as well as in the Court of the District Judge. We assess the hearing fee in this Court at three gold mohurs. The costs in the Court of first instance will abide the result. All the papers which have been produced in this Court will be made part of

(1) 16 C. L. J. 83; 16 Ind. Cas. 966.
(2) (1879) 4 App. Cas. 324 at p. 334; 48 L. J. Ch. 579; 40 L. T. 466; 27 W. R. 602
(3) 12 M. I. A. 244; 11 W. R. (P. C.) 5; 2 B. L. R. (P. C.) 10.
(4) 19 C. 267.
(5) 27 M. 143.
(6) 3 C. L. J. 182.
(7) 15 C. L. J. 187; 14 Ind. Cas. 456.

the record and transmitted to the Court of first instance, which will consider the question of their admissibility.

Appeal allowed: Case remanded.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 34 OF 1910.

September 16, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Offg. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

Syed GAFFUR SAHEB AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Syed MOOSA SAHEB AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.

Trust—Trusteeship of Darga—Vesting of trurteeship in two persons—Succession to trusteeship, how to be determined—Per stirpes or per capita—Muhammadan Law.

Where the trusteeship of a Darga and the right of management thereof and the enjoyment of its emoluments vested in two persons:

Held, that the office of trustee with the right to the emoluments devolved, on their death, to their heirs, according to the rules of Muhammadan Law, per stirpes and not per capita.

Kunhi Beevi v. Abdul Aziz, 6 M. 103, referred to.

Appeal from the judgment of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Wallis, dated 11th August 1910, in the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court in Suit No. 116 of 1909.

Mr. C. Venkatasubramaniah, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. Guruswami Chetti, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The suit relates to the possession and management of the Darga of Hazarath Syed Moosa Qadiri, situated in Mount Road, Madras. The plaintiff's case is that his father, Syed Ismail, and one Gulam Dastagir, the father of the defendants, had been in possession and management with equal rights during their life-time, performing the duties of the office of Superintendent of the said Darga and enjoying the emoluments and gifts pertaining to it by inheritance. He contends that he is entitled to succeed his father Ismail Sahib in the management with the rights that he had and that defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are only entitled to the interest which their father Gulam Dastagir had. The contention of the defendants is that, all of them being the descendants of a common ancestor, the succession is per capita and that each of them, the plaintiffs and defendants, is entitled to one-third share in the management and in the emoluments pertaining to the Darga. Wallis, J., upheld the plaintiff's contention and decided that the 1st plaintiff and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are entitled to perform the duties of a Majawar (superintendent) by turns, the defendants being entitled to one moiety and the 1st plaintiff being entitled to the other moiety.

There is no evidence when the founder died; no evidence whether any rules of succession were established by him. Nor is there any evidence of any usage governing the succession to the management of this institution or of similar institutions in the locality.

It is conceded that the property is not devoted exclusively to religious purposes. After defraying the expenses of lighting and clearing the Darga, paying the watchmen, celebrating the annual saint's day, the balance of the income is appropriated by the parties to their own use. According to the plaint, the plaintiff got a moiety and defendants the rest. In the written statement that the plaintiff was paid a moiety is denied and it was stated that the defendants' father, who was in sole management after the death of plaintiff's father the plaintiff being a minor, paid something to the plaintiff's mother for her maintenance.

The plaintiff has not proved the allegation in the plaint and there is no finding in his favour. No other mode of succession having been set up, and both parties conceding that the right of management descends according to the laws of inheritance, the only question being whether it descends per capita or per stirpes, we are of opinion that succession must be governed by the Muhammadan law of inheritance. See also the case of Kunhi Bivi v. Abdul Aziz (1). The plaintiff is accordingly entitled to succeed his father and the defendants are only entitled to take their father's share. This view is supported by the authorities cited by Wallis, J., Macnaughten p. 341, Wilson's Digest, II Edition, 372, and Ameer Ali, Volume I, p. 426 (3rd Edition). The general statement in Macnaughten, p. 339, that charitable donations should be distributed among the heirs of the departed saint is not applicable to the present case which is not a case of succession to the departed saint.

(1) 6 M. 103.

We agree, therefore, with the learned Judge and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 954 OF 1906.
May 29, 1908.
Present:—Mr. Justice Mitra and Mr. Justice Bell.
BRAHAMDEO NARAIN SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus
RAMDOWN SINGH—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Non-transferable holding, purchaser of portion of—Rights of purchaser—Collusive decree by landlord against recorded tenant to defeat purchaser's right—Payment of decretal amount by purchaser—Suit by purchaser for amount paid by him and for declaration that the decree was fraudulent, whether maintainable—Fraud—Right of suit.

A purchaser of a portion of a non-transferable holding cannot be ejected. He has a subsisting right which cannot be denied, though the landlord may not recognise him and only looks to the recorded tenant.

Kabil Sardar v. Chunder Nath Nag Chowdhury, 20 C. 590, relied upon.

Therefore, a suit for a declaration that a decree obtained by the landlord (defendant No. 1) against his recorded tenant (defendant No. 2) for arrears of rent, is fraudulent and inoperative against the plaintiff who is the mortgagee of a portion of the non-transferable holding of the tenant, and for recovery of the sum of money paid by the plaintiff for satisfaction of the said decree, is maintainable.]

Appeal from the decree of the first Subordinate Judge, Mozafferpur, dated the 21st March 1906, affirming that of the Munsif of Sitamarhi, dated the 20th November 1905.

Babu Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Appellant.

Babus Umakali Mukherjee and Kulwant Sahai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal in an action for a declaration that the decree obtained by the defendants first party against the defendants second party for arrears of rent is fraudulent and inoperative as against the plaintiff and for recovery of the sum of money paid by the plaintiff for satisfaction of the said decree. The plaintiff said that he was compelled to pay the amount as his mortgage right, which he had obtained by assignment from the third party defendants, would have been jeopardized by the sale for arrears.

The lower Courts have held that the annual rental of the holding was Rs. 22, whereas in the rent suit the claim was at the rate of Rs. 60 and that no arrears were due and still the first party defendants had sued the second party defendants and obtained a decree. The lower Courts have accordingly found that the decree was fraudulent and was intended to defeat the right which the plaintiff had obtained by assignment from the defendants third party.

Two questions have been argued before us. The first is that the holding, to a portion of which the plaintiff has obtained a mortgage right, was not transferable by custom or local usage and the lower Courts did not come to any finding on this question. The second is that certain documents which were tendered in time were improperly rejected.

As regards the second contention, the lower Court excercised its discretion in rejecting the documents and no ground has been made out for our directing the lower Court to receive them.

As regards the first point, the contention raised is that, for the purposes of this appeal, it must be assumed that the holding was not transferable and the plaintiff, having a mortgage interest in respect of a portion, has no locus standi to sue and he cannot question the validity of the decree.

We are of opinion that this contention is not sound. In Kabil Sardar v. Chunder Nath Nag Chowdhry (1), the Court held that a purchaser of a portion of a non-transferable holding could not be ejected. He has a subsisting right though the landlord may not recognise him. The landlord only looks to the recorded tenant. But the right cannot be denied and in the present case, the right would have been seriously affected, if the amount of the decree had not been paid by the plaintiff. We cannot hold that the plaintiff had no locus standi. We accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 20 C. 590.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1263 OF 1911.

September 26, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

JAGADAMBAL AMMAL—APPELLANT

versus

RAMASWAMY IYENGAR—RESPONDENT.

Execution of decree—Attachment of properties, objections to, by parties—Inquiry in execution—Objection to plaintiff's purchase at auction sale—Objection by stranger.

All objections to attachment of property in execution of a decree raised by parties to the suit must be made in execution proceedings.

Ramaswami Sastrulu v. Kameswaramma, 23 M. 361 (F. B.), referred to.

If the attachment and sale were effected without the knowledge of the party objecting, the proper course for him is to get the sale set aside in execution proceedings.

An objection to the purchase of properties at a Court sale without the leave of the Court can only be raised by parties to the suit and not by strangers.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Trichinopoly in A. S. No. 374 of 1910, preferred against that of the District Munsif of Namakal, in O. S. No. 100 of 1908.

Mr. G. S. Ramachandra Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. C. Krishnamachariar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The questions arising in this second appeal are, no doubt, questions of law, but they have, in our opinion, all been decided correctly by the lower Appellate Court.

With respect to the objection of the plaintiff's purchase of the shares of the defendants Nos. 4 to 7 in Orignal Suit No. 3 of 1883 on the ground that they were not personally liable under the decree for the mortgage debt, those defendants were bound to raise any objection they had to the attachment of the property in execution proceedings. See Ramaswami Sastrulu v. Kameswaramma (1). The lower Courts have found that all rights in the land, including the shares of defendants Nos. 2 to 7, were attached. If, as is suggested, those defendants had no notice of the attachment and sale, the proper course for them would be to get the sale set aside in execution proceedings. The 1st defendant has been found to have no right in the property. The sale having become final against the defendants Nos. 4 to 7 in Original Suit No. 3 of 1883, the 1st defendant cannot now set up their title

With regard to the question of the plaintiff's purchase having been made without the leave of the Court, that is an objection that could be raised only by the parties to the suit and not by a stranger like the 1st defendant. We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 23 M. 361 (F. B.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1974 AND 2097 OF 1906.

July 23, 1908.

Present:—Mr. Justice Caspersz and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

GADADHAR GHOSE—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

MIDNAPUR ZEMINDARI CO. LD.—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Fraud—Person affected by fraud—Right of suit—Landlord and tenant—Non-transferable holding, purchaser of—Rights of purchaser—Suit by purchaser to set aside fraudulent decree obtained by landlord against plaintiff vendor, whether maintainable.

It is open to any person affected by fraud to impeach it and to sue to set aside the results accruing from such fraudulent conduct.

The purchaser of a portion of a non-transferable holding has a subsisting right in spite of the non-recognition of the same by the landlord.

Kabil Sardar v. Chunder Nath Nag Chowdhury, 20 C. 590 and Brahamdeo Narain Singh v. Ramdown Singh, 17 Ind. Cas. 125; 16 C. L. J 139, relied upon.

The purchaser of a non-transferable holding has sufficient interest to maintain an action for declaration that certain rent decrees were collusively and fraudulently obtained by the landlord against the purchaser's vendor, that the plaintiff is not bound by those decrees, and that the holding cannot be sold in execution thereof. He should not be shut out from showing that there was collusion between his vendor and his vendor's landlord.

Patit Sahu v. Hari Mahanti, 5 C. W. N. 126; 27 C. 789, distinguished.

Appeals from the decrees of the 2nd Subordinate Judge, Midnapur, dated the 11th June 1906, affirming those of the third Munsif, Midnapur, dated the 6th December 1905.

Babu Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Appellant.

GADADHAR GHOSE v. MIDNAPUR ZEMINDARI CO. LD.

Babu Tarak Chandra Chakrabarti, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff-appellant before us purchased a certain jote from one Arun Chunder Biswas, who had held that jote under the defendant Company. The defendant Company obtained two decrees for rent against Arun Chunder Biswas, and the plaintiff instituted two suits giving rise to the present second appeals for declaration that the rent decrees were fraudulent, that the plaintiff is not bound by those decrees, and that the jote could not be sold in execution thereof.

The suits have been dismissed in both the Courts below: but the substantial issue No. 7, "Whether the decree in question is fraudulent, and liable to be set aside," has not been gone into. The Subordinate Judge thought that the plaintiff claiming as transferee of the jote was entitled to maintain the suit, but he has also found, in agreement with the Court of first instance, that the jote was a non-transferable one, and that, therefore, the plaintiff had no interest to support his character as such. The arguments before us must proceed, and have proceeded, on the finding that the jote of Arun was found to be a non-transferable jote.

The contentions raised are the following:—first, that the plaintiff by his purchase obtained a sufficient interest to maintain the suit; secondly, that it was not necessary in the present litigation to prove that occupancy-rights are transferable by custom; thirdly, that in a suit based on an allegation of fraud, the plaintiff can succeed if he can prove the fraud alleged; fourthly, that the question whether occupancy-rights are transferable or not, is not relevant to the present inquiry; fifthly, that the case should go back for a determination of the seventh issue already mentioned; and lastly that the landlords, having withdrawn a certain amount deposited by the plaintiff, thereby recognised the transfer.

In the view that we adopt, it will be necessary to send back the case for a determination on the merits. In paragraph 4 of the plaint, there was a distinct allegation not only of fraud, but also of collusion between the landlord and the plaintiff's vendor. It is open to any person affected by such a fraud to impeach it, and to sue to set aside the results accruing from such fraudulent conduct. The learned Subordinate Judge has distinguished the case of Asgar Ali v. Asaboddin Kazi (1). From the observations of the learned Judges at pages 139 and 140, it will appear that they held that the transferee of a holding which has not been recognised is never-the-less entitled to protect what interest he has, and that he can, therefore, make application under sections 310A and 311 of the Civil Procedure Code; and in making these observations, they referred to the case of Kabil Sardar v. Chunder Nath Nag Chowdhry (2). The latter decision was approved (by Mitra and Bell, JJ.) in Brahamdeo Narain Singh v. Ramdown Singh (3), where it was said that the purchaser of a portion of a non-transferable holding has a subsisting right in spite of the non-recognition of the same by the landlord. Of course, the landlord will not recognise the right but the right transferred cannot be denied. The case before us appears to be even stronger, because the question of fraud has not been gone into. The plaintiff has been absolutely shut out from showing, if he is able to show, that there was collusion between his vendor and the vendor's landlord. If, owing to such fraud, the Court was prevailed upon to pass decrees which it should not have passed, the plaintiff is entitled to go into the matter and he has sufficient interest to maintain the action whether the jote is transferable or not.

The learned Vakil for the respondent relies, particularly, on the case of Patit Sahu v. Hari Mahanti (4). That, however, was not a case involving a mere declaration, but other reliefs, including confirmation of possession, and it may be clearly distinguished from the case with which we are now dealing.

For these reasons, we are of opinion that the judgment of the Appellate Court cannot be sustained, and we accordingly allow these appeals and send back the cases to the Court of first instance for disposal of the other issues in due course.

The plaintiff appellant is entitled to a refund of the Court-fees paid on his memorandum of appeal. The other costs will abide the result.

Appeal allowed; Case remanded.

(1) 9 C. W. N. 134.
(2) 20 C. 590.
(3) 16 C. L. J. 139; 17 Ind. Cas. 125.
(4) 5 C. W. N. 126; 27 C. 789.

NEELAKANDAN NAMBUDRI v. NARAYANAN NAMBUDRI.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 983 OF 1911.

September 16, 1912

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

SALLIJIB KOTAKAL MANAKAL NEELAKANDAN NAMBUDRI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS.

versus

SALLYIL KOTTAKAT MANAKAL, KARNAVAN and MANAGER NARAYANAN NAMBUDRI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Malabar Law and Usage—Uralans of temple—Saswatham, grant of, by devaswom to tarwad whose Karnavan is an urulan.

The grant of a Saswatham is prima facie an improper act and where it purports to be granted by a Devaswom to a tarwad, the Karnavan of which is himself the Uralan of the Devaswom, the Courts should ordinarily not enforce it.

Any transaction by which a trustee obtains an interest in properties belonging to the trust is to be deprecated, and where it can be set aside without injury to the trust, the Court should do so.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of South Malabar at Palaghat, in A. S. No. 675 of 1910, preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Ottapalam, in O. S. No. 144 of 1909.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the Appellants.

Messrs. T. R. Ramachandra Iyer and N. A. Vaidyanath Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit for a declaration that a Saswatham granted to the family of the 2nd defendant in 1897 is not binding on the Devaswom of which the 1st defendant, the managing member of the plaintiff's tarwad and the 2nd defendant, the manager of the family of defendants Nos. 2 to 9, are the Uralans. The Saswatham was granted by a karar executed between the 1st defendant and the 2nd defendant. Admittedly, the 2nd defendant's family did not possess any Saswatham rights in these properties before. The grant of a Saswatham is primafacie an improper act. It has been upheld in this case by the lower Courts on the ground that the Devaswom was not in a position to establish its title to at least four out of the six items of the properties comprised in the Saswatham. This finding is not open to any legal objection. With regard to item 2, one of the remaining two items, the jenmam title of the Devaswom was admitted by the Karnavan of the 2nd defendant's tarwad about the year 1863. According to the admission, the tarwad was then holding it on a Kanom under the Devaswom.

Whether in 1897 the Devaswom was in a position to recover the property by proving that the Kanom was not made more than sixty years before 1863, the date of the admission, appears to be very doubtful According to the finding of the Subordinate Judge, there is nothing to show what the date of the Kanom was.

With respect to item 6, however, the case stands on a different footing. The Devaswom had actually obtained a decree in ejectment against the 2nd defendant's tarwad. The 2nd defendant, though a minor at the time of the suit in which that decree was passed, was apparently a party to the suit and he could not have recovered the property back except by establishing that the decree was not binding on him on the ground of fraud or collusion. The position of matters then may be taken to be this: there were five items of property which it is not shown that the Devaswom could have recovered from the family of defendants Nos. 2 to 9. The 1st defendant, who was the Uralan representing the plaintiff's branch, entered into a karar by which he got an acknowledgment of Devaswom's jenmam title to these five items by giving a Saswatham over those five items as well as over the 6th item, the Devaswam's title to which had been established. The plaintiffs have not shown how much loss the Devaswom has sustained by grant of the Saswatham over the 6th item. We are not prepared to differ from the lower Courts and to hold that the circumstances, on the whole, do not warrant the finding that the Saswatham was for the benefit of the Devaswom. We cannot, however, conclude this judgment without expressing our strong disapprobation of the grant of a Saswatham to a family, the Karnavan of which is one of the Uralans. Any transaction by which a trustee obtains an interest in properties belonging to the trust is much to be deprecated; and, in our opinion, it is equally vicious to allow the members of a tarwad, the Karnavan of which is a trustee, to acquire an interest in the properties of the trust. We have no doubt that where transactions of this character could be set aside without injury to the trust, the Courts would be much disinclined to upheld them. The circumstances of this case, however, are rather peculiar. The tarwad of the 2nd defendant was apparently in possession of the properties for a long time before the grant of the Saswatham and the result of setting aside the karar which created the Saswatham's right might be injurious to the Devaswom, as the 2nd defendant's tarwad might then be in a position to assert its own jenmam right to the properties. Mr. Anantakrishna Iyer contends that the 2nd defendant's tarwad itself was the trustee and that any previous possession on its part would be of no avail as against the Devaswom. In the plaint apparently, there was an allegation that the tarwads of the plaintiffs and the 1st defendant, on the one hand, and of the 2nd defendant, on the other hand, were the Uralans of the temple. This allegation was denied in the written statement and it was stated that it was the Karnavans of the two tarwads that had the Uraima right. No issue was framed on this question. It is contended that the Subordinate Judge proceeded on the footing that the Uraima right was vested in the two tarwads. We do not think this argument is correct. The Subordinate Judge does, no doubt, use the language referred to; but we cannot help thinking that the language used was loose and was intended to signify no more than that the head of each tarwad was the Uralan. It is, of course, possible that all the members of two tarwads might be trustees of a temple. But where the Uraima right is said to be in several tarwads, the fact usually is that it is vested in the senior member of each of the tarwads. Very serious and anomalous consequences might follow, with respect to a temple in which there is a plurality of Uralans, who get their rights by virtue of their being the heads of tarwads, if it should be held that all the members of each of the tarwads are trustees. As the plaintiffs did not ask for an issue to establish their allegation, we do not think we should frame an issue at this stage. The result is that the second appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 19 OF 1911.

April 22, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Stanyon, A. J. C., and Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

SHIOLAL—APPELLANT

versus

NANHELAL—RESPONDENT.

Mortgage—Foreclosure—Foreclosure of same property twice under separate mortgages—Mortgage of undivided share of village—Mortgagee's right to sir—Nature of sir right—Proprietary and cultivating rights—Central Provinces Tenancy Act (IX of 1883), s. 42—Applicability to mortgages—Central Provinces Tenancy Act (IX of 1898), as amended by Act XXI of 1899, s. 45 (6)—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 8.

A mortgagee is fully entitled to foreclose twice on the same property. Where a mortgagee holds two mortgages by conditional sale over the same property, he can get a separate foreclosure decree under each of them, whether at the same time or one after the other.

The cultivating or occupancy-rights in the sir land do not come into existence on loss of the proprietary right in the land. The proprietary and cultivating rights are co-existing and component parts of the sir right.

Diwan Zalim Singh v. Chhaumilal, 11 C. P. L. R. 133, followed.

Consequently, a mortgagee, entitled to proceed against a mortgagor's rights in the sir land, can get a decree against what is left of those rights—the ex-proprietary cultivating rights in the land, although the proprietary right may have passed to the same mortgagee or to another person.

Section 42 of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act of 1883, applies only to sales of three specified kinds and not to mortgages, whether by conditional sale or of any other kind.

Behari v. Sadwar, 7 C. P. L. R. 25, followed.

Although a mortgage in India is not a transfer of property but only of an interest in property, yet section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to mortgages.

A mortgage of an undivided share in a village includes the sir rights and all other rights, which the mortgagor is capable of transferring, in the absence of any words showing an intentain to retain or exclude them.

Asghar Rizz Khan v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan, 30 C. 556; 7 C. W. N. 482, 30 I. A. 71 (P. C.), followed.

First appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Seoni, dated the 12th December 1910.

Mr. J. Mitra, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs sued for foreclosure on a mortgage executed in their favour on 23rd August 1888 by the defendant and four others now deceased. The property mortgaged was a third share in Mouza Dhaturia and a half share in Mouza Dongaria, the income of both shares and eight houses, four in each village. On the 13th May 1889, there was a second mortgage between the same parties of the same two village shares. The second deed does not mention the houses, and neither deed says a word about sir land. In 1896, the plaintiffs sued on their second mortgage, that of 1889, and obtained a foreclosure decree, which was made absolute. On that decree absolute, the first Court gave them cultivating rights in the sir land, but the two Appellate Courts refused it. The judgment of this Court (Obbard, J. C.) is dated the 22nd July 1899. The learned Judicial Commissioner held that section 45 of Act IX of 1898 was applicable and not section 42 of Act IX of 1883. It is to be remembered that both appellate judgments were given while Act IX of 1898 was in force as originally passed, and before the amendment of the sixth sub-section of section 45 by Act XXI of 1899, which came into force on the 8th September 1899.

The plaintiffs' prayer was for foreclosure, not of the whole of the property mentioned in the deed on which they are suing, but of the houses, which were not included in the other deed, and of the cultivating rights in the sir land which were held in the previous suit not to have been so included. It will be convenient to deal first with the houses. In regard to them, the defendant's pleading was as follows: "The houses referred to do not exist. Plaintiffs have already foreclosed them and taken possession under the deed, dated 13th May 1889. They were pulled down and destroyed long ago." The issue arising out of this was thus stated: "Is the defendant in possession of any of the houses mortgaged in the deed in suit?" The learned District Judge held that the evidence of the three witnesses examined by the plaintiffs conclusively proved the contention of the defendant, and thinking it, therefore, unnecessary to hear the defendant's evidence, found that the defendant is not in possession of any of the houses mortgaged. These are the very general terms used in the judgment for the finding and the reasons therefor. There is no definite finding that the houses have ceased to exist or that they passed into the possession of the plaintiffs under the mortgage of 1889 or otherwise. The finding of fact is contested in appeal, and it would not be necessary for us to discuss it, if it were not for what seems like an implied finding that the plaintiffs themselves took possession of the houses under their mortgage of 1889. Even if they have ceased to exist or have passed into other hands than those of the defendant, the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree in respect of the property admittedly mortgaged to them, and they can be left to follow up that property after foreclosure.

And even if the plaintiffs have already taken possession of the houses, it has been admitted before us, and it cannot be denied, that a mortgagee is fully entitled to foreclose twice on the same property. The second decree may be worth nothing or it may be worth a great deal to him, but that is no body's concern but his own. But we cannot find that any part of the defendant's contention is proved. Of the three witnesses, the first two speak only of the houses in Dhaturia and the third only of those in Dongaria. The first says merely that the defendant Nanha owns a house which he has lately built on the outskirts of the village on a site which formerly belonged to his cousin Deman Patel. The second witness, the Kotwar of Dhaturia, says the plaintiffs took formal possession of the four houses in the village under their foreclosure decree in the previous suit, but were never actually in possession; the sites of three of them are vacant and Behari, the Lambardar, has built a house on the site of the fourth. The third witness, who is Kotwar of Dongaria, mentions only three houses in that village, and says the plaintiffs never took possession of them, and then goes on to speak of two only. He says the defendant's father Amri pulled down one and took away the materials and "the other fell down." What he says in cross-examination seems to mean that two out of the three sites have since been built over by other persons and the third is still vacant. This very poor evidence is far from sufficient to prove that the defendant is not now in possession of the houses or that they have ceased to exist. The first witness knows nothing, so what it comes to is that the Kotwar of each village says the houses have passed out of the possession of the defendant and have ceased to exist. And they are both obviously mistaken, the first because he says the houses were foreclosed in the previous suit (and they are not mentioned in the deed or any of the three judgments on the record), and the other because he speaks of three houses only.

If a definite finding on this issue were required at this stage, the case would, undoubtedly, have to go back for the examination of the witnesses whom the defendant apparently was ready to produce. If it were apparent that there was no other property included in the mortgage and claimed in this suit, then it would probably be advisable to thresh out this matter, to save the Court from the absurd position of granting a decree in respect of property which had been alleged and could possibly be proved not to exist. But there are still the cultivating rights in the sir land, which, in our opinion, the plaintiffs are entitled to foreclose. In the conditional decree, we propose, therefore, to include the houses mentioned in the bond, leaving the question of their existence and identity to be settled at the proper time, that is, after the decree is made absolute.

It has been argued at some length before us that the cultivating or occupancy-right in the sir land only came into existence on loss by the defendant of the proprietary right in that land, but the view taken by Ismay, J. C., in Diwan Zalimsingh v. Chadamilal (1), that the proprietary and cultivating rights are co-existing and component parts of the sir right, seems to us so natural and obvious as to admit of no question. The occupancy-right now held by the ex-proprietor is the right which he held as proprietor to cultivate his sir land himself. Now, under section 45 (6) of Act IX of 1898, as amended by Act XXI of 1899, the rights of the parties in this case to occupy the sir land accrue as if that Act had not been passed. We have then to go back to the Tenancy Act of 1883 and we accept as the settled and unquestionable law of these Provinces the ruling in Behari v. Sadwar (2) that section 42 of that Act applies only to sales of three specified kinds and not to mortgages, whether by conditional sale or of any other kind. This takes us still further back for the law governing this case to section 8 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The slight difficulty suggested that a mortgage in India is not a transfer of property but only of an interest in property and that, therefore, the provisions of section 8 would not apply, is settled by the judgment of the Privy Council in Asghar Reza Khan v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan (3), where their Lordships held that the profit rents of a bazar were included in a mortgage of an undivided share in a village and bazar in the absence of any words showing an intention to retain or exclude them. We hold, therefore, in this case that the mortgage of 1888 included the cultivating rights in the sir land. The decree of the lower Court is set aside. In lieu thereof, a conditional decree for foreclosure will issue against the defendant-respondent in respect of the houses and the ex-proprietary cultivating rights in the land specified in the plaint and in the mortgage bond in default of the payment on or before the 22nd of October 1912 of Rs. 12, 228-15-0, the amount due for principal and interest on the mortgage on that date, together with the costs of the plaintiffs-appellants in the suit and in this appeal.

Decree set aside.

(1) 11 C. P. L. R. 133.
(2) 7 C. P. L. R. 25.
(3) 30 C. 556; 7 C. W. N. 482; 30 I. A. 71 (P. C.).

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 854 OF 1911.
September 11, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.
VELUTHEMANA alias PALLIKAT alias CHEERAKUSHI ILLOTH, KARNAVAN AND MANAGER ASHTAMURTI NAMBUDRI—APPELLANT
versus
KAPPAT PALAMPADIYAN KOYAMU'S DAUGHTER, PATHUMA AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Malabar Tenancy Improvements Act (Mad. Act I of 1900), ss. 6, 15—Tables prepared under clause 2 of section 15, object of—Tables prepared after disposal of suit and pending appeal—Remand of suit—Re-valuation—Admissibility of tables.

The preparation by Government of tables under section 15, of the Malabar Tenancy Improvements Act I of 1900, is not intended to create any fresh right in favour either of the tenant or of the landlord. They are admissible in evidence to prove the compensation to which the tenant is entitled and are presumptive evidence of the proper amount of compensation. The compensation, however, is itself determined by the provisions of section 6, viz., by the market-value.

Where the tables are prepared after the disposal of a suit and pending an appeal, the Appellate Court should not remand the suit for the purpose of determining the compensation according to the tables, though, if a re-valuation became necessary in execution or otherwise, the tables might be received in evidence.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Court of South Malabar, in A. S. No. 406 of 1910, preferred against the decree of the District Munsif of Manjeri, in O. S. No. 308 of 1909.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. R. Subramanya Sastri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case, the plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant for recovery of certain land. The defendant was entitled to compensation for improvements made by him according to the provisions of the Malabar Tenancy Improvements Act, I of 1900. Section 15 of the Act empowers the Local Government to prepare tables to regulate the manner in which the value of improvements should be computed. Clause 2 of the section provides that "the tables prepared under the section shall, on publication, be receivable in evidence and that the rates and the amounts therein specified shall be presumed to be the proper rate and amounts until the contrary is proved." The compensation due to the defendants was decided by the District Munsif by the appointment of a Commissioner for the purpose. The defendant appealed against the Munsif's judgment. After the judgment of the Munsif and before the presentation of the appeal, the Local Government prepared certain tables under section 15 of the Act. The Appellate Court was of opinion, when the appeal came on for hearing, that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of the rates provided for in the schedule prepared by Government. The District Judge remanded the case to the Munsif for assessing the compensation payable according to the Government tables. The District Munsif did so. The plaintiff apparently adduced no evidence to rebut the presumption that the compensation according to the tables was the proper amount to be awarded to the defendant.

The plaintiff, who has preferred this second appeal to this Court, contends that the District Judge was wrong in holding that on the publication of the tables prepared by Government, the defendant became entitled to compensation at the rates provided in them. We are of opinion that this contention must be upheld. Now, it must be noted that the preparation of the tables by Government is not intended to create any fresh right in favour either of the tenant or of the landlord. The tables are admissible in evidence to prove the compensation to which the tenant is entitled and are presumptive evidence of the proper amount of compensation. The amount to which the tenant is entitled as compensation is itself determined by section 6, namely, the market-value. It is open to both the landlord and the tenant to show that the actual market-value is not what is provided for in the tables. The District Munsif, therefore, had to decide at the original trial what was the actual market value of the improvements. He had to do so on evidence legally admissible then. The new tables prepared by Government did no more than bring into existence fresh evidence of the market value. That evidence was not available when the District Munsif decided the suit. The duty of the Appellate Court was to examine the correctness of the Munsif's judgment and to pass such judgment as the Munsif should have passed. It cannot be said that the judgment of the Munsif was wrong because it was not in accordance with evidence which was not available when he tried the suit. Our attention is drawn by the learned Vakil for the respondent to some provisions in the Act which, he says, show that the intention of the Legislature is that the new tables prepared should be admitted as evidence. Reference is made to clause 2 of section 15, which provides that the tables when published shall be receivable in evidence, and the rates and amounts therein specified shall be presumed to be the proper rates and amounts until the contrary is proved. If the Appellate Court had to take evidence of the value of the improvements, then the tables prepared would be admissible for the purpose. But clause 2 of section 15 would be of no help to the respondent unless the Appellate Court had the right to receive evidence regarding the compensatisn payable. The District Judge here did not distrust the report submitted by the Commissioner on which the Munsif acted, nor did he come to the conclusion that it was necessary, in order to determine the rights of the parties as they should have been adjudicated by the Munsif, that fresh evidence should be received. The clause does not say that the tables should be received in evidence whenever tendered. The preamble to the Act, in our opinion, does not help the respondent at all. It only shows that the object of the statute was to secure to the tenants the full market-value of their improvements. Reliance was also placed on section 6, clause 3, which entitles a tenant or landlord to a re-valuation of the improvements in execution proceedings when there is a change in the condition of the improvements after their valuation.

It is pointed out that, if a valuation becomes necessary, the tables would then be admissible in evidence. This is, no doubt, so; but that is because, in consequence of a re valuation becoming necessary, the Court has the power then to admit evidence, and whatever is then admissible in evidence could be received. It may be that, if the tenant in this case becomes entitled to a re valuation in execution, he may be able to claim the benefit of the new tables. But no claim to re-valuation was urged in the Appellate Court on account of any change in the condition of the improvements. Section 12 merely says that the mode of valuation most favourable to the tenant out of the modes mentioned in sections 9, 10 and 11, should be adopted by the Court. But that does not entitle the tenant to a value higher than he could claim according to the rules of evidence in force at the time when the value is determined. The District Judge must, therefore, be held to be wrong in directing re-assessment of the compensation according to the new tables. It is admitted that no evidence was adduced by the tenant to show that the valuation submitted by the Commissioner in the Munsif's Court was wrong. That valuation which was adopted by the Munsif must, therefore, be accepted.

We must reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the District Munsif with costs both here and in the lower Appellate Court. Time for redemption is extended to two months from this date.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 241-B OF 1911

April 29, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Stanyon, A. J. C.

SITARAM—APPELLANT

versus

LAXMAN—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Widow—Re-marriage, effect of—Custom—Re-marriage valid by custom—Kunbis of Berar—Personal law—Mitakshara—Mayukha—Unchastity of widow after inheritance—Widow's inheritance, essence of—Widow re-marrying, incapable of acting as guardian of sons by first marriage—Adoption, power to give in—Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856), scope of.

Among Kunbis of Berar, widow re-marriage, by a form called pat, is permitted and is treated as a valid union.

The personal law of the Berar Kunbis is the Mitakshara as interpreted by the Mayukha, called the Bombay School of Hindu Law.

In a community governed by the general Hindu Law, every custom at variance with that law must be strictly applied and cannot be made the basis of any other variation from the law.

A Hindu widow who contracts a valid re-marriage in accordance with a custom of her caste, is thereby transferred from the gotra of her deceased husband to that of her husband by re-marriage, and ipso facto forfeits all interest in any estate, which she may have inherited from the former, in favour of the next heir or reversioner of the deceased.

The Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act applies generally to all Hindu widows, irrespective of caste regulations concerning re-marriage.

Obiter dicta:—

Though unchastity in a wife will prevent her from taking an estate of inheritance from her husband, unchastity by a widow, after she has inherited such estate, will not divest what has already vested in her.

It is of the very essence of inheritance by a Hindu widow, as such, that she is the surviving portion of her husband, that, after physical death, he still lives in her as a sort of incarnation of his spiritual being.

By re-marriage, a Hindu widow becomes incapable of giving in adoption a son of her deceased husband or of being the guardian of her minor children by her former husband by virtue of motherhood.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Judge, West Berar, Akola, dated the 21st April 1911, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Morsi, dated the 30th November 1909.

Mr. M. R. Dixit, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Chuckerbutty, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The following genealogical tree will facilitate comprehension of this judgment:—

SITARAM v. LAXMAN.

The above genealogy is of a Kunbi family in Berar, and the last male holder of the property in dispute was Baliram, who died in June 1900 leaving a widow, Musammat Tani, and his mother, Musammat Tulsi, him surviving. In accordance with a custom of the caste allowing widow re-marriage, Musammat Tani re-married very shortly after the death of Baliram, and Musammat Tulsi obtained or retained possession of Baliram's estate. She died in 1906, but Musammat Tani is still alive. The plaintiff has brought the present suit for possession of the land as the nearest reversioner of Baliram, entitled to succeed to his estate after the death of Musammat Tulsi.

The defendants, who are the appellants in this Court, resisted the suit on the grounds—

(1) that Hari orally gifted the property in 1893, and left directions with his wife Musammat Tulsi to confirm the same by executing a deed, which Tulsi accordingly did on the 9th August 1901;

(2) that these defendants had held adverse possession of the land since 1893, and had, in any case, acquired a title therein by prescription; and

(3) that the plaintiff could not maintain this suit during the life-time of Musammat Tani, the widow of Baliram, as until her death the reversionary interest would not vest.

The Courts below have found that the alleged gift and adverse possession have not been proved, and that the fact of Musammat Tani being still alive is no bar to the suit as on her re-marriage, she forfeited her interest in the estate of Baliram. The claim of the plaintiff has, therefore, been decreed, and the contesting defendants have made this second appeal.

So far as the title set up by the appellants is concerned, they are concluded by the findings of fact arrived at in the Courts below. The only question to be considered in this appeal is whether the existence of Musammat Tani makes the suit premature and, therefore, unsustainable. This depends upon whether, on re-marriage with Jughroo, she ceased to be the heiress of Baliram. It is not disputed that among the Kunbis of Berar, widow re-marriage, by a form called pat, is permitted, and is treated as a valid union and the source of legitimate issue. It is also beyond question that, subject to diversions created by caste customs, the personal law of the Berar Kunbi is the Mitakshara as interpreted by the Mayukha, otherwise called the Bombay School of Hindu Law.

According to that law, no Hindu widow may re-marry; and if she does so, ipso facto she forfeits any estate she may have inherited from her deceased husband. In the eyes of the orthodox among the regenerate classes, such a re-marriage is an act of signal incontinency, necessarily involving a degradation from caste. But, under the present interpretation of the law, a claim for forfeiture of a Hindu widow's estate on re-marriage could not be based on the ground that such an union is an act of unchastity. It is now well established that, though unchastity in a wife will prevent her from taking an estate of inheritance from her husband, unchastity by a widow, after she has inherited such estate, will not divest what has already vested in her. This interpretation of the Shastras may be secular rather than "Brahminical" but it is an interpretation established by numerous decisions in India, and one which has also received the sanction of the supreme tribunal: Kery Kolitany v. Moneram Kolita (1); Parvati v. Bhiku (2); Nehalo v. Kishen Lal (3); Bhawani v. Mahtab Kuar (4); Sellam v. Chinnamma (5). Moreover, in a caste of Sudras, who have always allowed and recognized widow re-marriage, a union following that custom could not be called unchastity for any purpose.

SITARAM v. LAXMAN.

Nevertheless, there is ample authority for the proposition that in the absence of an express custom to the contrary, the re-marriage of a Hindu widow, even where legalized by caste custom, entails a forfeiture by her of any property which she may have inherited as the widow of her deceased husband: Murugayi v. Viramakali (6); Koduthi v. Madu (7) and Rasul Jehan Begum v. Ram Surun Singh (8). No doubt, there is also authority the other way: Har Saran Das v. Nandi (9); Dharam Das v. Nand Lal (10); Raniit v. Radha Rani (11) and Khuddo v. Durga Prasad (12). In Brijlal and Kevalpat v. Musammat Sakrasa (13), Second Appeal No. 399 of 1878, it was laid down by this Court that "a union between a Kurmi widow and a kinsman of her deceased husband carries with it neither the disgrace attaching to an irregular union, nor the disability which the law has imposed upon widows making a formal re-marriage". This decision probably recognizes a custom, legalizing the union and preventing forfeiture, which prevails in the locality from which the case came. It is within my personal experience that such a custom exists among some clans of Kurmis settled in the Northern Districts of these Provinces. The essentials of the custom are (1) that the second husband should be a kinsman of the deceased first husband, and (2) that he should take up his residence in the house of the widow. It closely resembles the custom among the ancient Israelites mentioned in the Bible—38 Genesis, v. 8 and 9—according to which one brother raised up seed to another and deceased brother. The above ruling of this Court is, therefore, distinguishable from the Allahabad cases. But the Allahabad view, which has now become a cursus curiæ in that Court, is directly in favour of the contention for the appellants before me, the case of Raniit v. Radha Rani (11) being between Kurmis. It is the fact that the Kurmis of the United Provinces and the Northern Districts of the Central Provinces are practically the same general caste of agriculturists as the Kunbis in our Southern Districts and the adjoining territory of Berar. The slight difference in designation is due to the difference of tongues—Hindi and Marathi—respectively prevailing in the two areas [See Sherring's Hindu Castes and Tribes, Volume II, page 100]. Kunbis or Kurmis are the true Sudras of the Hindu Text Books [Steele's Castes and Tribes, page 100], and are governed by the Common Hindu law, subject to local and caste variations. Widow re-marriage is almost universally recognized among all clans of them.

It is, therefore, necessary in this case to follow or dissent from the Allahabad view. With due respect, I am unable to accept that view as sound. It seems to me that, in a community governed by the general Hindu Law, every custom at variance with that law must be strictly applied, and cannot be made the basis for inferring any other variation from the law. According to the Kunbi custom, widow re-marriage is a valid marriage for all the purposes of Hindu Law. By that law marriage effected by any form or ceremony recognised as valid by the caste of the persons marrying, transfers the woman from her ante-nuptial gotra to the gotra of the man she marries. Therefore, when the widow of A. marries B., she is transferred from the gotra of A. to the gotra of B. Now, it is of the very essence of inheritance by a Hindu widow, as such, that she is the surviving portion of her husband—that, after physical death, he still lives in her as a sort of incarnation of his spiritual being. Therefore, it follows that her possession of his estate should only continue while she remains

(1) 13 B. L. R. 1; 19 W. R. 367.
(2) 4 B. H. C. R. A. C. J. 25 at p. 43.
(3) 2 A. 150.
(4) 2 A. 171.
(5) 24 M. 441.
(6) 1 M. 226.
(7) 7 M. 321.
(8) 22 C. 589.
(9) 11 A. 330.
(10) A. W. N. (1889) 78.
(11) 20 A. 476.
(12) 3 A. L. J. 729; A. W. N. (1906) 299.
(13) D. C. R., Pt. VIII, Section 7, No. 76.

his widow. Her widowhood comes to an end on a valid re-marriage with another man, and she becomes incapable of representing her former husband any further It is upon some such ground that it has been held that by re-marriage, a Hindu widow becomes incapable of giving in adoption a son of her deceased husband: Panchappa v. Sanganbasawa (14); or of being the guardian of her minor children by her former husband by virtue of her motherhood: Khushali v. Rani (15). The above Allahabad view as to non-forfeiture of a widow's estate on a re-marriage permitted by caste custom, has not been followed by any of the other High Courts as far as I know. It was not approved by the Calcutta Court in Matungini Gupta v. Ram Rutton Roy (16) and was more expressly dissented from by the same tribunal in Rasul Jehan Begam v. Ram Surun (8).

For these reasons, I hold that a Hindu widow, who contracts a valid re-marriage in accordance with a custom of her caste, is thereby transferred from the gotra of her deceased husband to that of her husband by re-marriage, and ipso facto forfeits all interest in any estate which she may have inherited from the former in favour of the next heir or reversioner of the deceased.

So far I have regarded the question at issue purely from the point of view of the Hindu law. I will now discuss the application of the Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act (XV of 1856) to the matter. There is a considerable conflict of judicial opinion on the question whether this enactment applies to Hindu widows who are under no disability to re-marry by reason of being members of a caste wherein their re marriage is permitted. The Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts have answered this question in the negative in some of the cases already cited: but in Vithu v. Govinda (17), a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court held that the Act applies generally to all Hindu widows, irrespective of caste regulations concerning re-marriage. The reasoning in this case commends itself to me as sound and incontrovertible, and I accordingly hold that, under section 2, Hindu Widows' Re-marriage Act, 1856 (as applied to Berar by Government of India, Foreign Department Notification No. 212-J., dated 24th October 1873), a Kunbi widow in Berar, who has inherited property from her deceased husband, forfeits, by re-marriage, her interest in such property in favour of the next heir of her deceased husband, notwithstanding that by the custom of her caste such a marriage constitutes a permissible and valid union.

It follows that, both under the Statute Law and the Hindu Law governing the devolution of the property in dispute, the existence of Musammat Tani, the ex-widow of Baliram, offers no obstacle to the plaintiff's suit. This appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(14) 24 B. 89.
(15) 4 A. 195.
(16) 19 C. 289 at pp. 292, 293 and 295.
(17) 22 B. 321.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 855 OF 1911.

September 11, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

PONNAYA TIRUMALAI VANDAYA THEVAR AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

KANDASAMI VENDAYA THEVAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 141—Property held by widow—Suit by reversioner to recover after death of widow—Adverse possession—Limitation—Tenant-in-common—Right to recover whole property.

One R., the holder of an impartible zemindari, died leaving two illegitimate sons, viz., 1st plaintiff and the father of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, a brother, 1st defendant, and a widow, P.

The zemindari fell to the 1st defendant. In a previous litigation relating to the private property of R., it was decided that the 1st plaintiff was entitled to one-fourth, the father of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 to one-fourth and P. to the other half. In the present suit to recover P.'s half share after her death:

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred under Article 141 of the Limitation Act, as P. did not hold her half share absolutely and plaintiffs' claim was as heirs of R.;

(2) that, though defendant's adverse possession might bar any suit by P. to recover her share after the expiration of 12 years, it would not bar the plaintiffs' right to recover the half share as heirs of R. after the death of P.

The right of a tenant-in-common to recover the whole property as against a trespasser is a right which he is entitled to assert only on behalf of himself and his co-tenants. He cannot do so in the assertion of a right to the whole property in himself.

PONNAYA TIRUMALAI VANDAYA THEVAR v. KANDASAMI VANDAYA THEVAR.

Kola Naiken alias Rama Naicken v. Muthayammal, 21 M. L. J. 997; 10 M. L. T. 265; 12 Ind. Cas. 76 and Dursun Singh v. Durbijoy Singh, 9 C. L. J. 623; 1 Ind. as. 530, referred to.

A tenant-in-common is not bound to make a claim on behalf of his co-tenants.

Second appeal against the decree of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Ramnad, in A. S. No. 295 of 1910, presented against that of the District Munsif of Srivallipattur, in O. S. No. 46 of 1908.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Iyer, for the Appellants.

Mr. T. Rangaramanujachariar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—We are of opinion that the judgment of the Appellate Court in this case is right. The plaintiff claimed to recover the properties in question as the reversioners of one Ramasami Tevar, a zemindar, who held an impartible estate. At the time of his death, he left a widow, Parvati, a brother, the 1st defendant in the suit, and two illegitimate sons, the 1st plaintiff and the father of the plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3. It was established in a previous litigation that the zemindari fell to the 1st defendant. Subsequently, Original Suit No. 25 of 1892 was instituted by the 1st plaintiff against the 1st defendant, in which the father of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 was made a party defendant. The claim in that case related to the private property of the deceased zemindar, Ramasami Thevar. It was held in that suit that the plaintiff there, that is the 1st plaintiff, was entitled to a one-fourth share and the father of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 to another one-fourth share, the widow Parvati being entitled to the remaining half. Parvati died recently and the present suit is for the recovery of the half share which belonged to her. The defendants, consisting of the 1st defendant and his issue, pleaded limitation. The Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiffs' right to Parvati's share accrued only at her death and, under Article 141 of the Limitation Act, the suit was not barred by limitation.

It is not contended in second appeal that Parvati was entitled to a half share absolutely and that the plaintiffs' claim must be taken to be as her heirs. Parvati, no doubt, intercepted a half share of her husband's (Ramasawmy's) estate from the plaintiffs so long as she lived, but the plaintiffs' claim is as heirs of Ramasami, a right which accrued to them only on the death of the widow. It is argued that the plaintiffs could and should have sued the 1st defendant for the whole of the property when he instituted Original Suit No. 25 of 1892, because, as against a stranger, a tenant-in-common is entitled to recover the whole estate. And it is further contended that, in consequence of the plaintiffs' failure to do so, the defendant's possession must be treated as adverse to the plaintiffs. We cannot accept this argument. Parvati was entitled to a half share during her life and the 1st plaintiff was entitled only to the remaining half. The right of a tenant-in common to recover the whole property as against a trespasser is a right which he is entitled to assert only on behalf of himself and his co-tenants. He could not do so in the assertion of a right to the whole property in himself. See Kola Naiken alias Rama Naicken v. Muthyammal (1) and Dursun Sing v. Durbijoy Singh (2). If he asserted an exclusive title in himself, the suit would be liable to be dismissed. A tenant-in-common is not bound to make a claim on behalf of his co-tenants. It is quite open to him to recover his own share. The adverse possession of the defendant might bar any suit by Parvati to recover her share after the expiration of 12 years, but it would not bar the plaintiffs' right to recover the half share as the heirs of Ramasami after the death of Parvati.

A point of minor importance is urged, namely, that it has not been found that the defendants are in possession of one-half of items Nos. 6 to 10, which they asserted were in the enjoyment of one Subramania Pillai and that, therefore, the plaintiffs are not entitled to a decree for mesne profits against the defendants for the half share of those items. This contention must be upheld, unless it be found that the defendants are in possession of all the properties. The learned Vakil for the respondents is willing to waive his claim for the mesne profits of half of items Nos. 6 to 10.

(1) 21 M. L. J. 997; 10 M. L. T. 265; 12 Ind. Cas. 76.

(2) 9 C. L. J. 623; 1 Ind. Cas 530.

PANDURANG v. NAGOJI.

The decrees of the lower Courts will, therefore, be modified by directing that the plaintiffs do recover mesne profits only on one-half of items Nos. 6 to 10. We affirm the decree of the Subordinate Judge in other respects and dismiss this second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 112-B OF 1911.

April 20, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, Offg. A. J. C.

PANDURANG—APPELLANT

versus

NAGOJI—RESPONDENT.

Cause of action—Right to sue—Custom—Vatandar Joshi—Suit to recover fees paid to usurper—Liability of yajman—Action against person procuring breach of contract.

A vatandar joshi is entitled to sue for the recovery of fees paid by his yajman to a usurper of the functions of the Joshi.

Yeshwant Rao v. Bhaskar Rao Patwari, 3 N. L. R. 47 and Vithal Krishna Joshi v. Anant Ram Chandra, 11 B. H. C. R. 6, relied upon.

Both the yajman and the intruder are jointly and severally liable to the Joshi for the amount of his fees.

Raja v. Krishnabhat, 3 B. 232, relied upon.

An action lies not only against a person who breaks a contract but also against any one who wilfully and with notice procures a breach of the contract to the detriment of the plaintiff.

Sher Ali v. Ahmed Ali, 13 C. P. L. R. 23, relied upon.

Second appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, West Berar, Akola, dated the 16th December 1910, modifying that of the Additional Munsif, Akola, dated the 4th October 1910.

Mr. J. Mitra and Rao Bahadar V. R. Pandit, for the Appellant

Mr. M. R. Dixit, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The learned Counsel for the respondent endeavoured to support the decree of the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the two concurrent findings of fact on which the decree rests are based not on insufficient evidence, but on no evidence whatsoever. These findings are that the plaintiffs hold the hereditary office of Joshi for the village, among others, in which they and the first defendant reside, and that the vastu is one of the ceremonies falling within what may be called the religious jurisdiction of the Joshi. Of the five witnesses called by the plaintiffs, every one says quite distinctly that they are the watandar Joshis of the village, as their father was before them, and are exclusively entitled to perform the duties of a Joshi. The first two also say that the vastu ceremony is one that falls within the province of the Joshi exclusively, and the other three that it does fall within his province.

The findings on both points were contested in first appeal, and the judgment of the lower Appellate Court on them is as follows: "As to whether plaintiffs are Vatandar Joshis of village Rajanda or not, the evidence is not as satisfactory as it should have been. No doubt, it has been shown that they and their father alone did Joshi's business in the village all along and they were also considered Vatandar Joshis. There is, however, no clear evidence that they asserted their rights as Vatandar Joshis and that such rights were admitted or acquiesced in by the villagers. However, I do not see sufficent grounds for holding that the lower Court's finding in this respect was wrong. As to whether vastu ceremony is one which a Joshi alone can perform, is a question which need not be determined by a Civil Court. But the evidence shows that such ceremony used to be performed by the plaintiffs as Joshis. The question is, however, not important in the present case." I take this to be a definite finding on each issue based on an examination of the evidence, though the learned Additional District Judge thought it was not really necessary to decide either of them for the purposes of the appeal before him.

The facts then with which we are concerned are these. The plaintiffs are exclusively entitled to officiate as Joshis at all vastu or house hanselling ceremonies in the village of Rajanda and to receive the fees therefor. The first defendant Nagoji, a resident of that village and aware of this right, engaged the second defendant, Lakshman, to perform this ceremony for him and paid him the sum of Rs. 12-3-3 as Joshi's fees. The plaintiffs sued both Nagoji and Lakshman for this sum. They claimed other reliefs as well, but we are not now concerned with them.

The first Court, that of the Additional Munsif, Akola, gave them a decree making the two defendants jointly and severally liable for the sum claimed. The defendant Nagoji alone appealed and the lower Appellate Court, that of the Additional District Judge of Akola, absolved him from liability, holding that the intruder alone was liable for the money had and received to the holder of the office, and not the employer or yajman. This is the one point to be dealt with in second appeal.

On this narrow issue, it is not necessary to discuss the rulings in Gourmoni Debi v. Chairman of Panihati Municipality (1); Ramakristna v. Ranga (2) and Krishna Aiyan v. Anantarama Aiyan (3), cited on behalf of the respondent in this Court, where it was held that there was no cause of action against either the intruder or his employer. That there is a cause of action in cases of this nature has always been the view, taken by the Bombay High Court, (whose rulings particularly in matters of custom must always have more weight in cases arising in Berar than those of other High Courts), and by this Court. Yeshwant Rao v. Bhaskar Rao Patwari (4) was a suit against the intruder only, and the question whether the employer would also be liable or not did not arise. Similarly, in Vithal Krishna Joshi v. Anant Ramchandra (5), the usurper of the functions alone was sued, but in the seven cases quoted with approval in the judgment, the liability of the yajman was recognised, though in regard to one of them West, J., said: "In the recent case, Special Appeal No. 291 of 1872, however, a Gramupadhya, holding under a sanad from the Peshwar, was held to have a good cause of action against the yajmans, who had employed another Bhat, but none against the Bhat whose employment by the villagers had been purely voluntary. It is clear that he could not be entitled to recover from both, and that if he obtained a decree against the yajmans, he could not obtain one against his rival Bhat also."

(1) 12 C. L. J. 75; 6 Ind. Cas. 864; 14 C. W. N. 1057.
(2) 7 M. 424.
(3) 2 M. H. C. R. 330.
(4) 3 N. L. R. 47.
(5) 11 B. H. C. R. 6.

Raja valad Shivapa v. Krishnabhat (6) was a suit against both yajman and intruder. The Court of first appeal, on the authority of the case last mentioned, absolved the intruder from liability, probably relying on the words quoted above, and the High Court restored the original decree making both employers and intruder liable to pay. But it is unnecessary to go abroad for authorities, as the point now in issue was examined at length in Sher Ali v. Ahmad Ali (7), a parallel case to this, in which the father and husband of a girl were sued for damages by the man to whom she had been betrothed. Ismay, J. C., dissented from a previous ruling of Stevens, J. C., in Behari Malwai v. Bhondu (8), in which it was held both the defaulting party to the contract and the instigator of the breach might be legally liable, but that the plaintiff must elect between his two remedies and could not sue both, and, after an exhaustive discussion of the authorities, held that an action lies not only against a person who breaks a contract but also against any one who wilfully and with notice procures a breach of that contract to the detriment of the plaintiff. In this view, I set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the first Court. Costs in this and in the lower Appellate Court will be paid by the respondent Nagoji, and in the first Court will be paid as already ordered by that Court.

Decree set aside.

(6) 3 B. 232.
(7) 13 C. P. L. R. 23.
(8) 8 C. P. L. R. 25.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 218 OF 1911.

October 15, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

S. T. P. L. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR—APPELLANT

versus

T. R. M. A. R. R. M. ARUNACHELAM CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Decree, assignment of—Assignment by agent acting under power-of-attorney — Absence of provision in power to transfer decree—Power of assignee to execute decree—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 188.

A power-of-attorney should be construed strictly. Such a construction does not disable an attorney from exercising all powers incidental to the execution of powers expressly conferred on him or from exercising powers which are necessarily implied and which may be termed 'medium' powers.

This is the principle laid down in section 188 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

The power to transfer a decree for a consideration is not incidental to any power expressly conferred in a power-of-attorney to execute the decree.

Where a power-of-attorney contained the following clause: "to execute all decrees in the name of my father or in any other name on my behalf or otherwise to attach and realize all monies due thereon:"

Held, that the agent acting under the power could not assign the decrees that he was authorized to execute.

Bryant Powis and Bryant v. La Bingredu Penple, Bryant Powis and Bryant v. The Quebeck Bank, (1893) App. Cas. 170; 62 L. J. P. C. 68; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600, referred to.

Appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Tuticorin, dated 20th October 1911, in E. P. No. 78 of 1911, in O. S. No. 9 of 1905.

Mr. V. Viswanatha Sastri, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. Sitaram Row, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The Subordinate Judge has dismissed the assignee's application for execution in this case on the ground that Aiyavaiar, who executed the assignment in his favour, acted beyond the powers given to him under the power-of-attorney, Exhibit A, in making the assignment. The scope of Aiyavaiar's agency under the power-of-attorney has been discussed at length at the bar; and we have examined the provisions of the document carefully. We are obliged to arrive at the same conclusion as the Subordinate Judge did. Arunachalam Chetti authorizes Aiyavaiar by Exhibit A to act for him for the purposes enumerated in the power-of-attorney. The enumerated powers include mortgaging and hypothecating lands, houses and property for debts due or to become due by the principal selling immoveable properties for any lawful purpose, demanding and suing for debts and other claims, giving valid discharges, receipts and releases for payments made, negotiating, accepting, endorsing and making promissory-notes and negotiable instruments, paying debts, compromising disputes and differences between the principal and other persons. There is a clause relating to the realization of decrees in these terms: "to execute all decrees in the name of my father or in any other name on my behalf or otherwise to attach and realize all monies due thereon." There is no clause of a comprehensive character which would show that the principal intended to confer plenary powers on his attorney to deal with all properties and rights belonging to him The clause relating to decrees does not in terms authorize the transfer of decrees. It is argued that it might be held to be comprised in the power to execute decrees. Execution of decrees would not, according to the ordinary meaning of the expression, include transferring decrees. The power to realize all monies due to the principal might be held to include a power to receive the money due under a decree by means of a transfer of it to a third person; but it would be difficult to make it include a power to transfer a decree for a sum considerably less than the amount due under the decree. No attempt was made in the lower Court to prove that there was any compromise with the debtor which reduced the amount of the decree. A power-of-attorney has, according to established law, to be construed strictly. Such a construction does not disable an attorney from exercising all powers incidental to the execution of powers expressly conferred on him or from exercising powers which are necessarily implied and which may be termed 'medium powers.' See Bowstead on Agency, 4th Edition, page 74; Story on Agency, section 68. Section 188 of the Indian Contract Act lays down the same rule. It is necessary to find any power contended for within the four corners of the instrument relied on. See Bryant Powis and Bryant v. La Banque dus Peuple, Bryant Powis and Bryant v. Quebeck Bank (1). It is not possible to hold that the power to transfer decrees for a consideration, which the attorney thinks reasonable, is incidental to any power expressly conferred under Exhibit A or is necessarily required for the execution of any of such powers. The appellant stated in his petition that Aiyavaiar was also a partner of the principal and that the transfer of the decree by Aiyavaiar was within the scope of his powers as partner. He also stated that the assignment of the decree was subsequently ratified by the principal; but he did not prove either of these facts. The diary of the case shows that the parties had an opportunity of adducing any evidence they wished to let in. There is nothing before us to show that any evidence tendered by the appellant was rejected by the Court. The order of the Subordinate Judge must, therefore, be confirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs.

(1) (1893) App. Cas. 170; 62 L. J. P. C. 68; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEAL No. 2 OF 1911.

April 13, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C.

BAJIRAO—APPELLANT

versus

GULABSINGH—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Mortgage by father—Foreclosure proceedings and suit against minor sons through their mother—Minor grandson not made party—Right to redeem—Regulation XVII of 1806, s. 8—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).

A. mortgaged certain ancestral property in 1875. After A.'s death, foreclosure proceedings under Regulation XVII of 1806 were taken against his sons in 1881; as the sons were minors, the notices were served on them through their mother. At that time, one of the sons had a minor son, B., who was not made a party to the foreclosure proceedings nor to the suit for possession brought by the mortgagee after the expiry of the year of grace. B. subsequently sued for redemption of the mortgage on the ground that he was not bound by the proceedings as he was not made a party:

Held, (1) that the case was not governed by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act;

(2) that B.'s interests were adequately represented in the foreclosure proceedings and the suit by his grandmother who was the guardian both of B. and his minor father.

If the person, who would naturally be the manager of the family, is incapacitated by minority from acting as manager and the other members are incapacitated by still greater minority, then the person, who is guardian of the minor, who would naturally be manager, takes the place of that manager as regards the other minors and fully represents them.

Pandit Gopal Rao v. Gangay, 2 C. P. L. R. 221, relied upon.

Miscellaneous appeal against the order of the Divisional Judge, Chhattisgarh Division, dated the 28th November 1910, remanding the case for re-trial by the Subordinate Judge, Raipur.

Mr. F. W. Dillon, for the Appellant.

Sir B. K. Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The suit for redemption out of which this appeal arises is brought on the ground, as stated in the plaint, that the plaintiff, Gulab Singh, was not made a party to the foreclosure suit brought against his father, Narayansingh, and others, although the mortgagees, of whom the present defendants are the representatives, had full knowledge of the existence of the plaintiff and of his interest in the family property.

The facts are that Sheoprasad and Lalsingh, sons of Dalpatsingh, mortgaged their ancestral property on the 23rd October 1875. They died before any proceedings were taken under the mortgage-deed. Sheoprasad had three sons, Narayansingh, Manoharsingh and Meherbansingh, and Lalsingh had one son, Amarsingh. Proceedings against these four sons were taken under Regulation XVII of 1806, and they were noticed on the 5th October 1881; as they were minors, the notices were served on them through their mothers. The year of grace having expired, a suit for possession was instituted against them on the 31st October 1882. This was after the Transfer of Property Act had come into force, but it is admitted in this Court that all the proceedings were taken under the Regulation. The plaintiff's case is that he was 18 months old on the 31st October 1882, so that he must have been, on his own showing, less than 6 months old at the date of the notice.

The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit as time-barred. He held that Article 144 of the Limitation Schedule was applicable and that the suit was time-barred as the defendants had been in adverse possession since the 10th September 1883. On appeal, the learned District Judge held that the suit was not time-barred and remanded the suit for trial on the merits. The defendants appeal to this Court on the ground that, in the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff has no right of redemption.

The learned Counsel on both sides adopt the position that the rulings under the Transfer of Property Act, as to whether or not a son may re-open a mortgage foreclosed against his father, have no application. The learned Advocate for the respondent supports the plaintiff's right of redemption on the following grounds. Under section 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806, the Judge, on receiving the application of the mortgagee to the effect that he intends to foreclose, "shall cause the mortgagor or his legal representative to be furnished ..... with a copy of it; and shall at the same time notify to him ..... that if he shall not redeem the property mortgaged in the manner provided for by the foregoing section, within one year from the date of the notification, the mortgage will be finally foreclosed". It is admitted that the property was ancestral in the hands of the mortgagors, and, therefore, the plaintiff on his birth had an equal share with his father. It is argued that he was entitled to be served with a notice, and if he was not so served, his right of redemption still subsists. It is conceded by the learned Advocate that if plaintiff's father, Narayansingh, had been a major, then the notice to his father would have been sufficient notice to him, for under Hindu law the minor son is sufficiently represented by the father. But the right of representation residing in the father is a personal right and a minor father's guardian cannot be said to represent the minor father's son. The notice was served on "Musammat Motin, guardian of Narayan, Manohar and Meherban". The minor son of Narayan was not mentioned and so it should be held that the plaintiff was not served with the notice. The right of representation is derived from paragraphs 27, 28 and 29 of Chapter I, section 1 of the Mitakshara.

The learned Counsel for the respondent argues that the fact that the father was a minor does not prevent him having represented his son. There is no authority for the contrary view. The father, who was under 18, was under the guardianship of his mother, who was not a certified guardian, but his guardian under the Hindu Law. His son was equally under her guardianship and the case is not affected by a separate notice not having been issued to her as his guardian. The notice informed her fully what the mortgagees intended, and she fully represented the interests of the family.

It appears to me that this case should be decided on the same principles as that of Pandit Gopal Rao v. Gangay (1), since it is not a case under the Transfer of Property Act. No exactly similar case to the present can be found, but it seems to me that if the person, who would naturally be the manager of the family is incapacitated by minority from acting as, manager, and the other members (in this case the son) are incapacitated by still greater minority, the person who is guardian of the minor, who would naturally be manager, takes the place of that manager as regards the other minors and fully represents them. In this case, their mother was the guardian of Narayan and his two brothers and of Narayan's son. In the ordinary course, Narayan or one of his brothers, would have been manager and the plaintiff would have been adequately represented by that manager. As things stood, I think he was adequately represented by the mother guardian of his father and uncles. On these principles, I am of opinion that he must be considered as having been served with the notice under section 8 of the Regulation. I set aside the order of the Divisional Judge and I dismiss the suit with costs in all Courts.

Suit dismissed.

(1) 2 C. P. L. R. 221.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 439 OF 1911.
July 12, 1912.
Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.
BHURCHAND HUNSRAJ DOSHI—APPELLANT
versus
VIRA CHAMPA KHACHAR—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 69, 70, Sch. III, s. 7 (1) (b)—Execution of decree—Decree awarding interest till realisation—Application for execution calculating interest to date of application—Execution transferred to Collector—Duty of Collector to calculate interest to date of payment—Nature of Collector's authority—Jurisdiction—Question of satisfaction of decree.

Under section 7 (1) (b) of Schedule III to the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, the Collector has to take into account the decretal amount with the whole of the interest awarded by the decree. That includes not merely interest up to the date of darkhast, but also interest which runs according to the decree up to the date of payment. It is the duty of the Collector to do so, even though the decree-holder has omitted to mention in his application the particular claim for further running interest. The Collector cannot return the decree to the Civil Court as satisfied till after the whole amount, including interest awarded by the decree up to the date of satisfaction, has been paid.

BHUROHAND HANSRAJ DOSHI v. VIRA CHAMPA KHACHAR.

Sections 69 and 70 of the Civil Procedure Code give authority to the Collector for the purpose of enabling him to determine the best mode or modes of satisfying the decree, whether it is to be satisfied by management by the Collector himself of the land attached in execution of decree, or whether it is to be by its sale or letting.

So far as the machinery necessary for the satisfaction of the decree is concerned, the Collector is the sole authority. The discretion is his and no Civil Court can interfere with that discretion. But that discretion does not extend to any jurisdiction in the Collector to determine whether the decree itself has been satisfied or not. The latter jurisdiction is the Civil Court's. It is that Court alone which is competent to determine the question judicially.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Ahmedabad, in Appeal No. 40 of 1911, reversing that passed by the Subordinate Judge at Dhandhuka, in Darkhast No. 1363 of 1895.

Mr. T. R. Desai, for the Appellant.

Mr. N. K. Mehta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHANDAVARKAR, J.—The District Judge has taken an erroneous view of the jurisdiction of the Collector, or rather the Talukdari Settlement Officer who exercised the powers of Collector under section 320 of the old Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and under sections 69 and 70 of the present Code of Civil Procedure (Act V of 1908), in respect of the execution of the decree concerned in this case. The Chapters, in which these sections respectively occur, deal with the functions of the Collector as the authority invested with jurisdiction to see that the decree is satisfied. The authority is given for the purpose of enabling the Collector to determine the best mode or modes of satisfying the decree, whether it is to be satisfied by management by the Collector himself of the land attached in execution of the decree, or whether it is to be by its sale or letting. So far, therefore, as the machinery necessary for the satisfaction of the decree is concerned, the Collector is the sole authority. The discretion is his and no Civil Court can interfere with that discretion. But that discretion does not extend to any jurisdiction in the Collector to determine whether the decree itself has been satisfied or not. The latter jurisdiction is the Civil Court's. It is that Court alone which is competent to determine the question judicially.

But it is argued in support of the decree of the lower Court appealed from that in any case, the decree must be upheld because the determination by the Talukdari Settlement Officer that the decree was satisfied is perfectly consistent with the facts of the case. And the facts relied upon shortly are, that the present appellant did not, by his darkhast, sent to the Collector for execution, ask for any running interest allowed to him by the decree, but he asked merely for execution in respect of the principal amount allowed by the decree and interest up to the date of the darkhast. Although that is so, if we have regard solely to the prayer in the darkhast, we must also have regard to the fact that the darkhast could not have been presented by the appellant in any other form. It was not necessary for him to ask for running interest because the law itself makes provision for its award in execution when the decree has been sent to the Collector. When it is so sent, the Collector has to see, not that it is partially satisfied, but that it is wholly satisfied. When interest awarded by the decree up to the date of satisfaction is running from day to day, the decree-holder being unable at the date of his darkhast to specify the day up to which interest can be calculated, it is the Collector who has to take into account the whole of the period, present and future, and he cannot return the decree to the Civil Court as satisfied till after the whole amount including interest awarded by the decree has been paid.

Section 7 (1) (b) of the third Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, provides that where the amount to be recovered and the property available have been determined as provided in paragraph 4 or paragraph 5, the Collector may, if it appears that the amount with interest (if any) in accordance with the decree may be recovered without such sale, raise such amount and interest. According to the plain language, then, of this section the Collector has to take into account the amount, with the whole of interest awarded by the decree. That includes not merely interest up to the date of the darkhast, but also interest which runs according to the decree thereafter.

On these grounds, the decree appealed from must be reversed and that of the Subordinate Judge restored with costs both of this appeal and of the appeal in the District Court on the respondents.

BATCHELOR, J.—I am of the same opinion. The most that Mr. Mehta could urge for the respondents in this case was that the appellant, in his darkhast of 1895, had not specifically prayed for interest up to the date of payment. That is true. He had asked in terms only for interest up to the date of his application, but in his application he had specifically referred to that clause in the decree which ordained that interest should run up to the date of realization. And under section 7 (1) (b) of the third Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code, it appears to me that, despite the appellants' omission to make the particular claim for further interest, it was the Collector's duty to arrange for the satisfaction of the decree with such interest as the decree itself awarded, that is to say, with running interest up to the date of payment. I agree, therefore, that this appeal should succeed.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 5 OF 1904.

April 11, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Batten, A. J. C. and Mr. Stanyon, A. J. C.

RATANLAL—APPELLANT

versus

BHASKAR—RESPONDENT.

Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881), ss. 136-R, 136-S—Revenue partition—Date of effect—Sanction by Commissioner—Previous private partition—Hindu law.

A revenue partition, under the provisions of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, does not take effect from the date on which it is sanctioned by the Commissioner but from the first day of the agricultural year next after the Deputy Commissioner has published a notification of the Commissioner's sanction under section 136-S. (1) of the Act.

A private partition was effected between two Hindu brothers and the share of each was ascertained. Subsequently, there was a revenue partition between the brothers, which was sanctioned by the Commissioner on 9th April 1894. The notification of sanction was published after 1st June 1894:

Held, (1) that the revenue partition did not take effect till 1st June 1895;

(2) that the revenue partition could only take effect according to Revenue law and the rule of Hindu law that partition dated from ascertainment of shares did not apply to the revenue partition.

First appeal against the decree of the Civil Judge, Saugor, dated the 8th July 1903.

Dr. H S. Gour and Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Appellant.

Messrs. J. Mitra and P. S Kotwal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal was originally made to the Court of the Divisional Judge, Jubbulpore, but it was transferred to the file of this Court with reference to section 28 (1) of the Central Provinces Courts Act II of 1904. Then Jamna Bai one of the appellants died, and there was a dispute as to who was her legal representative, which had to be determined by a suit under section 367 of the then Civil Procedure Code. After the decision of that suit, there was an appeal to this Court against the decision, and only after the decision of that appeal (Miscellaneous Appeal No. 6 of 1906) could this appeal be taken up. Then a preliminary objection was raised on behalf of the respondent, Bahadur Singh, that the stamp duty paid on the petition of appeal, namely, Rs. 10, was insufficient, and that an ad valorem stamp duty should be paid on the value of the subject-matter of the appeal. After hearing arguments, we held that the appeal is one to obtain a decree for sale of an estate, which has been entirely exonerated by the lower Court, the debt to be satisfied by such sale being Rs. 12,000, and we ordered that the appellants must pay the same Court-fee as was paid on the plaint, viz., Rs. 535. The deficient stamp duty was paid within the time allowed.

There is practically no dispute as to the main facts of the case. Two brothers, Krishna Rao and Gopal Rao, owned some twenty-one villages and a share in the village of Mohli in the Saugor District. In 1891, they separated and effected a partition privately under which each brother took a half share in each of the said villages. This arrangement apparently did not work well and in 1893 Gopal Rao applied for imperfect partiton in the Revenue Department. The order of the Commissioner sanctioning the partition was made on the 9th April 1894 (Exhibit P-3), but no mutation of names was effected until after the death of Krishna Rao, which occurred after June 1895. The principal village of Pithoria was divided into two equal shares, and of the remaining villages ten whole villages were allotted to each of the brothers, and the share of Mohli was allotted to Krishna Rao. It is noted in the final order that Gopal Rao had sir land in Bidwasan only and Krishna Rao in Kamrol only. The entire villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila as well as the share of Mohli fell to the share of Krishna Rao.

By documents, dated respectively the 9th March 1892 and the 9th March 1894, Krishna Rao had mortgaged, among other properties, his eight-annas shares in Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila, that is to say, the shares to which he was entitled under the private partition, to Lachmandas and Rampershad. On the 30th September 1894, Krishna Rao executed a mortgage-bond for Rs. 7,000 in favour of Girdhari Lal, Jawahir Lal and Musammat Maharani Bahu, the predecessors-in-title of the present plaintiffs, the property mortgaged as security being an eight-annas share in each of the villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila and a four annas share in the village of Mohli.

In 1895, Bansidhar, the 6th defendant in the present suit, obtained a money-decree against Krishna Rao for Rs. 3,756 and costs. In execution of this decree, which, with costs and interest, amounted to Rs. 4 320, he applied on 21st July 1896 for attachment of the eleven villages (including the half of Pithoria) which had been allotted to Krishna Rao by the partition. Apparently, however, only those villages and shares of villages were attached, which stood in Krishna Rao's name in the Collector's register. The attached property included an eight-annas share in each of the villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila. Execution of the decree was transferred to the Collector with a note of the incumbrances on the property including the mortgages already referred to. Subsequently, however, the decree-holder applied to the Collector, stating that the property attached was so heavily incumbered as to leave no margin for the satisfaction of his decree and asking that the case be struck off. The proceedings accordingly came to an end on the 27th July 1898, and two days afterwards, the decree-holder applied for the attachment of the shares which had not been encumbered. Amongst other property, an eight-annas share in each of the villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila was attached, and the decree was again transferred to the Collector for execution. For some reason, which does not appear on the record, Bansidhar had at that time assigned his rights to one Bahadur Singh, the 5th defendant in the present suit. While the sale was proceeding before the Collector, Ranchori Lal, the general Mukhtiar of Girdhari Lal, was examined and made the following statement :— "My master holds a mortgage-deed, dated the 30th September 1894, in favour of Jawahir Lal, Girdhari Lal and Maharani Bahu for Rs. 7,000. The property mortgaged is,—

Kamrol	...	8-annas.
Sewan	...	8 annas.
Atatila	...	8 annas.
Mohli	...	4-annas.

These shares belong to the judgment-debtor. The shares mortgaged are those formerly belonging to Krishna Rao, not those of Gopal Rao." Later on, and before the sale took place, Ranchori Lal made an application, dated the 6th May 1902, to the effect that the shares about to be sold were mortgaged to his master and asking that the attachment should be raised. On this application, the Collector passed the following order :— "The applicant should have objected long ago. The sale must now proceed as it has been sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner. Applicant must seek his remedy in the Civil Court."

Accordingly, the sale was held with the result that an eight-annas share in Atatila was purchased by Bahadur Singh, an eight-annas share in Sewan by Bansidhar for Ramdayal and Permanand, the 9th and 10th defendants in this suit, and an eight-annas share in Kamrol by Bihari, the 7th defendant.

On the 20th December 1902, the plaintiffs brought the present suit to enforce their mortgage, dated the 30th September 1894. The defendants, Shridhar Rao, Madho Rao, Mukund Rao and Raghunath Rao, are the sons of the mortgagor Krishna Rao; they admitted the mortgage and offered no defence. The defendants Bahadur Singh, Bansidhar, Bihari, Ramdayal and Permanand were joined on the ground that, under the circumstance already set forth in this judgment, they had purchased portions of the mortgaged property. The 8th defendant Pancham was joined on the ground that, he had purchased a four-annas share in the village of Mohli in 1900. He admitted the fact of the purchase and offered no defence. Thus, the only defendants who contested the claim were Bahadur Singh, Bansidhar, Behari, Ramdayal and Permanand. They asserted that the shares in the villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila, which were mortgaged by Krishna Rao to the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs, were the shares held under the private arrangement by Krishna Rao and not the shares which under that arrangement were held by Gopal Rao and which by the subsequent partition passed to Krishna Rao. The Court has held this plea to be established, and, so far as the villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila are concerned, has passed a decree for sale of the shares already mortgaged to Lachmandas and Rampershad. The defendants had also raised a plea of estoppel based on the first statement of the agent Ranchori Lal, but the finding on the main issue rendered any finding on the question of estoppel unnecessary.

Against this decree, the plaintiffs have appealed. It is argued for the appellants that on the 30th September 1894, the date on which the mortgage-deed sued on was executed, Krishna Rao was full owner of the villages of Kamrol, Sewan and Atatila, by reason of the Commissioner's order of the 9th April 1894, and that he was entitled to mortgage either the whole or a share in these villages. It is admitted that when the brothers Gopal Rao and Krishna Rao separated, there was no partition by metes and bounds. When, therefore, it is argued, Krishna Rao mortgaged his shares to Lachmandas and Rampershad, what he mortgaged was an undefined share in an undivided estate, such share to be ascertained by partition in the event of the mortgage being foreclosed or the mortgaged property brought to sale. It is an admitted fact that the shares in the three villages held by Bahadur Singh, Bansidhar and Behari are still undefined. Similarly, it is argued when Krishna Rao as full owner of the villages mortgaged a half share in each village, he mortgaged not a defined share but a share to be ascertained when partition (with his mortgagees) took place. He could not specifically mortgage either the share which he originally possessed under an arrangement with his brother or his brother's share which came to him on partition. It is argued that under section 65 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, the wording of which is similar to that of section 55 (2) of the Act,—there is an implied contract that the interest the mortgagor professes to transfer is transferable, and hence it must be presumed that the mortgagor covenanted that there was an unencumbered eight-annas share which he was transferring, and it follows that since the mortgagor did possess an unencumbered eight-annas share as well as an encumbered eight-annas share, what was transferred to the mortgagees in 1894 was the unencumbered eight-annas share. The problem before us may be put in another way. Let Krishna Rao's share, according to the private partition of 1891, before the Revenue partition, be called A. Let the other 8-annas share, which originally was with Gopal Rao and which Krishna Rao got on the Revenue partition, be called B. We have to see whether the plaintiffs got a mortgage of share A, or share B, or an undefined eight-annas share of A and B combined, and whether Bansidhar brought to sale A or B. We would here say, with regard to the argument that Krishna Rao mortgaged to Lachmandas and Rampershad an undefined share in an undivided estate, that the brothers had actually effected a private partition of their estate under which each had become the owner of an eight-annas share in each of the 22 villages. As regards each village, therefore, each brother was the owner of half. It was not a case in which neither of the brothers could say what his share in the family property was. Each was owner of a half share in each of the 22 villages, and it, in our opinion, makes no difference that they chose to enjoy each village as tenants-in-common instead of dividing the villages by metes and bounds. But as regards the mortgage of the 30th September 1894, two questions arise :—

(1) Did Krishna Rao intend to mortgage share B ?

(2) If not, still if he did not disclose his intention to mortgage only share A, must he not be held to have mortgaged share B ?

It is further argued for the appellants that as the auction-purchasers (the contesting respondents) purchased merely the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors, they are not helped by section 55 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act since it was not a sale under the Act.

As regards the first of the above questions, we agree with the lower Court that what Krishna Rao intended to mortgage was his share before the Revenue partition, viz, share A. Krishna Rao had all along objected to the Revenue partition, and was anxious that the status quo ante should remain, or that the Revenue partition should be on the lines of the private partition. Even after the Commissioner's order of 9th April 1894, Krishna Rao, on the 4th August 1894, petitioned the Deputy Commissioner objecting to the lines on which the new partition was being carried out (vide Exhibit D-23). The mortgage deed of the 30th September 1894 makes no reference to the Revenue partition, and there is nothing on the record to show that the mortgagees were even aware of the Revenue partition, or thought that they were getting an unencumbered eight-annas share transferred to them.

But as regards the second question, it appears to us that the contentions of the appellants would prevail if, as a matter of fact and law, the whole of the villages in suit were vested in the mortgagor at the date of the mortgage. But here a very serious objection is raised by the learned Counsel for the respondents, namely, that the Revenue partition did not come into effect until the 1st June 1895, so that at the date of the mortgage, Krishna Rao owned only an eight-annas share in each of the villages in suit under the private partition, and that this share was the same that had already been mortgaged to Lachmandas and Rampershad. The law as to Revenue partitions is contained in Chapter X-A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act. Section 136-R runs:—"On completion of the partition, the Deputy Commissioner shall submit the proceedings to the Commissioner, who may either uphold the partition proposed or modify it or quash the proceedings; and a partition shall not take effect until it has been sanctioned by him."

In this case, the Commissioner upheld the partition proposed. It is clear that the partition was only in the inchoate stage of a proposal until it was so upheld. The question remains whether the partition took effect immediately it was sanctioned by the Commissioner. Section 136 S runs:—"On a partition being sanctioned by the Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner shall publish a notification of the fact at his office and at some conspicuous place in the village or villages of the mahal of which the partitioned pattis formed part.

"(2) The partition shall take effect from the first day of the agricultural year next after the date of such notification."

After carefully weighing the arguments on both sides, we are of opinion that the partition did not come into effect and the share B did not vest in Krishna Rao on the passing of the Commissioner's order, but on the first day of the June following the publication of the Deputy Commissioner's notification under section 136-S (1). It is argued for the appellants that under Hindu law, partition dates from ascertainment of the shares, which were ascertained directly the Commissioner's order was passed. But there had already been a private partition in which the shares of each brother had been ascertained, and the new distribution according to the Revenue partition could only take effect according to the Revenue law, viz., from the date mentioned in section 136-S (2). This date must have been the 1st June 1895. It is extremely unlikely that the necessary formalities for the publication of the notification by the Deputy Commissioner could have been completed before the 1st June 1894, and the fact that the partition did not have effect until 1st June 1895 is established beyond reasonable doubt by the Amin's report, Exhibit D-24, dated 13th June 1895, and Gopal Rao's receipt, Exhibit D 23, dated 12th June 1895. Exhibit D-24, moreover, shows that Krishna Rao had not even then accepted the Commissioner's decision. For these reasons, we are of opinion that only what we have called share A was mortgaged by Krishna Rao to the predecessors-in-interest of the present plaintiffs. We, therefore, consider that the decree of the Court was correct and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MAGANCHAND v. VITHALRAO.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 483 OF 1911.
July 15, 1912.
Present:—Sir Basil Scott, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Beaman.
MAGANCHAND FULCHAND—APPELLANT
versus
VITHALRAO KAMALRAO—RESPONDENT.

Hereditary Offices (Vatan) Act (Bom. Act III of 1874), ss. 11, 11 A—Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4—Deshmukhi Vatan—Alienation of Vatan—Power of Collector to set aside alienation and resume possession—Order granting alienor's heir permission to recover possession—Adverse possession of alienee for more than 12 years—Suit by alienee—Injunction—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Decree, form of.

In 1877, A. came into possession of certain Deshmukhi vatan lands by virtue of a miras lease and mortgage executed by B. After the death of B. in 1892, A. remained in possession for 10½ years when B.'s son obtained an order from the Collector to the effect that the land in suit may be recovered from the possession of A. and given to B.'s son under the Hereditary Offices Act. The Collector did not summarily resume possession of the land or assess it at the rates prescribed. A. continued in possession even after the Collector's order.

In 1906, A. filed the present suit to restrain B.'s grandsons by a perpetual injunction from recovering possession of the lands, as his title had been perfected by adverse possession for upwards of twelve years:

Held, (1) that the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, was no bar to the suit as the order passed by the Collector was not authorised by the Hereditary Offices Act;

(2) that although A. might be obliged to yield to summary eviction at the hands of the Collector under section 11A of the Hereditary Offices Act, he was not obliged to submit to proceedings for recovery of possession at the hands of B.'s heirs;

(3) that the mere fact that the application was made to the Collector within 12 years from the death of the alienor did not interrupt the adverse possession of A.;

(4) that A. was entitled to an injunction against B.'s grandsons restraining them from taking proceedings in a Court of law or otherwise than under the Hereditary Offices Act, 1874, to recover possession from A.

Adverse possession runs in favour of the person in possession and will confer a title on him unless a suit is brought within twelve years.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Satara, in Appeal No. 41 of 1910, confirming that passed by the Subordinate Judge of Islampur, in Civil Suit No. I of 1906.

Mr. K. N. Koyajee, for the Appellant.

Mr. Jayakar (with him Mr. D. A. Khare), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, by virtue of a mirasi lease and mortgage, executed by the grandfather of the defendant No. 1 in 1877, came into possession of a certain land which has been held in the lower Courts to be Deshmukhi Vatan property and which, therefore, could not be alienated validly beyond the life of the alienor. After the death of the first defendant's grandfather, which occurred in 1892, the plaintiff remained in possession for 10½ years, when the son of the alienor applied to the Assistant Collector for a decree for possession on the ground that the land was Deshmukhi Vatan property. He obtained an order from the Assistant Collector in February 1905, declaring the alienation null and void under section 11 of the Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874) and ordering the land to be restored to the applicant. There was an appeal to the Collector from that order but the Collector dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff has now been in possession of the land adversely to the defendants for upwards of twelve years, and he brings this suit to restrain the defendants by a perpetual injunction from recovering possession of the land mentioned in the plaint.

The order of the Collector is referred to in paragraph 3 of the plaint as follows:—

"The first defendant has obtained an order from the Collector to the effect that the land in suit may be recovered from the possession of the plaintiff and may be given to the defendant under the Vatan Act. On the authority of the same, the defendants are about to take possession from the plaintiff. As to that, the said order which they have obtained being contrary to law, the defendants have no right under that order to take away the plaintiff's possession."

Now, it is contended that this suit is not maintainable by reason of the provisions of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, X of 1876, paragraph IV (a) of which provides:—"No Civil Court shall exercise jurisdiction as to suits to set aside or aviod any order under Bomaby Act III of 1874."

The question, therefore, is whether the order challenged as being contrary to law is an order under Bombay Act III of 1874. It is clear that under section 11, the Collector had authority to declare an alienation contrary to the terms of Vatan Act to be null and void. The validity of that declaration i not, however, impugned. Section 11A then prescribes what the Collector shall do in order to give effect to his declaration. He can do one of two things. He can either summarily resume possession of the property to which his declaration relates or assess it at the rate prescribed in clause 2 of section 9 as he may think fit and the said property shall thenceforth revert to the Vatan. Now, he has done neither of these things, but he has purported to authorise the defendants to recover possession from the plaintiff.

There is nothing in the Act which authorises him to pass any such order, and the plaintiff, although he may be obliged to yield to summary eviction at the hands of the Collector, is not obliged to submit to proceedings for recovery of possession at the hands of his opponents, the defendants.

The order is, therefore, not an order under the Vatan Act, and the Revenue Jurisdiction Act is no bar to the suit.

The learned District Judge was of opinion that, as an application had been made to the Assistant Collector within twelve years from the death of the alienor, adverse possession had not run against the defendants in favour of the plaintiff.

We cannot, however, find anything in the Limitation Act to justify such a conclusion. Adverse possession runs in favour of the person in possession and will confer a title upon him unless a suit is brought within twelve years. We, therefore, disagree with the finding of the District Judge upon issues 2 and 5, and the plaintiff, being prima facie entitled to the land by virtue of adverse possession, is entitled to an injunction against the defendants restraining them from taking proceedings in a Court of law or otherwise than under the Vatan Act to recover possession from the plaintiff. The words "otherwise than under the Vatan Act" must be inserted in the injunction in order to make it clear that this Court does not make any order purporting to interfere with or hamper the Collector in the execution of such powers as are given to him by section 11A of the Vatan Act.

The respondents must pay the costs throughout.

Decree reversed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REFERENCE No. 12 OF 1912.

November 9, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson and Mr. Justice Beadon.

MAJOR STEPHENSON—PETITIONER

versus

THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE, LAHORE—RESPONDENT.

Punjab Municipal Act (XX of 1891), ss. 44, 45, 62, 120H—Water-tax—When leviable—"500 feet from public water main", meaning of—Benefit to be derived from works.

Section 44 of the Punjab Municipal Act, XX of 1891, which prescribes the imposition of a water-tax upon buildings or lands so situated that their occupiers may benefit by the works, means buildings or lands so situated that their occupiers can derive benefit from the works as they stand, and not that by having further connections made and paying an additional tax they can put themselves into a position to benefit.

The expression "500 feet from the public water main" in a notification of the Punjab Government, sanctioning the imposition of water-tax on the rents of all houses and buildings, means the public water main from which "water can be drawn" and not "public water main absolutely closed and from which no one can benefit as it stands." A Municipal Committee, therefore, would not be justified in claiming such tax from the occupier of a house merely by reason that a closed water pipe passes within 500 feet of the house, and the nearest hydrant is not within 500 feet of it, as such occupier is not in a position to benefit by the water works.

Case referred, under section 84 of the Municipal Act, by the Commissioner, Lahore, with his No. 1781, dated the 28th November 1911, for the orders of the Chief Court.

Mr. Hari Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT—This is a case of very considerable importance. It appears that one Major Stephenson resides in a house situated on the Jail Road, Lahore. Along this Jail Road runs the main water-pipe with which Major Stephenson's house is not connected. The nearest hydrant to Major Stephenson's house is said to be at a distance of three-quarters of a mile. The Municipal Committee of Lahore called upon Major Stephenson to pay water-tax at the rate of Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. on the rent of his house. Now this occurrence took place, we may note, before the passing of the Act, which is at present in force, and comes within the purview of Act XX of 1891. The authority in the Act itself for levying any such tax appears to be contained in section 44, which runs as follows:—

"44. (1) Besides the taxes mentioned in the foregoing sections, a Committee, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, may, for the purpose of constructing or maintaining works for the supply of water to the Municipality or paying the principal or interest of any loan raised for the construction of such works, impose, in manner directed by this Act, a tax to be called the water tax, upon buildings or lands which are so situated that their occupiers can benefit by the works.

"(2) The rate or amount of the tax so imposed on different buildings or lands may be determined with reference, among other considerations, to their distance from the nearest point at which the water is deliverable by the works and to their level; but in fixing it regard shall be had to the principle that the total net proceeds of the tax, with the estimated income from payments for water supplied from the works under special contracts, should not exceed the amount required for the said purpose."

The procedure for imposing a tax is laid down in section 45.

Section 63 provides that the tax shall be paid by the occupier of the property. The only other section of the Act which was quoted to us as giving any authority for the levy of a water-tax is section 120 H., which runs as follows, and to which we shall have occasion to refer again later:—

"120 H. The Committee may, from time to time, fix the rates and charges to be made in respect of communications from and connections with mains or service cables, wires and pipes for the supply of lighting, telephonage, gas or water, and in respect of meters or other appliances for testing the quantity or quality thereof supplied, and may levy such rates and charges accordingly."

Under section 45, a notification was issued fixing the rate of water-tax to be levied in certain circumstances at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. That notification runs as follows:—

"Water-tax, No. 585, dated 8th December 1897. It is hereby notified that, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, the Municipal Committee of Lahore, in the Lahore District, in accordance with the provisions of section 45, sub-sections (7) and (8) of the Punjab Municipal Act, XX of 1891, has, at a special meeting held on the 30th October 1897, directed the imposition of a water-tax under section 44 (1) of the said Act at the rate of Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. on the rents of all houses and buildings in the Civil Station of Lahore which are situated within 500 feet from the public water main and are not connected with such main; provided that houses and buildings, the rental value of which does not exceed Rs. 40 per month, shall be exempt. The Municipal Committee has fixed the 1st April 1898, as the date from which the said tax shall come into force, and the payments shall be made by the occupiers of houses and buildings quarterly in advance on 1st day of April, the 1st day of July, the 1st day of October, and the 1st day of January of each year."

It appears that in 1905 a very similar case arose. The Municipal Committee made a similar claim, against which an appeal was made to the Commissioner of Lahore, and we think it best to quote the order passed by the Commissioner on that occasion in its entirety:—

"I think that the Lahore Municipal Committee will have been better advised to send their Secretary to attend my Court in compliance with my notice of the 8th May 1905.

"The facts of the present case are that a new main was laid down past appellant's house in January 1904, and that hydrants were not put up till October 1904. Appellant has been charged with water-tax under Notification No. 585, dated 8th December 1897, from January 1904. His contention is that he ought not to be asked to pay water-tax until the hydrants were put up. I am bound to say that this contention appears to me to be sound. In reply to a question what benefit the pipe was to appellant until a hydrant was put up, the Committee's representative states that appellant could have connected his house with the main. But the notification under which the tax is levied affects only houses and buildings which are not connected with the main. Such houses derive no benefit from the main until hydrants are put up, and should not, in my opinion, be taxed until hydrants are put up. Mr. McDonald has paid the tax from October 1904. The appeal is allowed with costs."

This case has arisen because the Committee, in their wisdom, are of opinion that the judgment passed by the Commissioner in a precisely similar case, to which they were parties, is not correct; and they have, we understand, in the face of that judgment, been calling upon house occupiers in the Civil Station of Lahore to pay this water-tax at Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. under the notification quoted above. Major Stephenson has resisted that attempt, and we are glad to see that the Committee were ordered to suspend the levy of this tax pending a reference to this Court. The reference has been made by Colonel Parsons, Commissioner of Lahore, under section 84 of the present Municipal Act, and this, again, we consider it desirable to quote in extenso. It runs as follows: —

"Read Committee's Resolution No. 86, dated 27th May 1911, and Major Stephenson's appeal therefrom. Read also my order of 8th November 1911, which may be read as part of this order of reference.

"The Municipality have suggested that I should state this case for the decision of the Chief Court.

"The point is whether, under section 61 (h) of the new Municipal Act (section 44 of the old) and Punjab Notification No. 585, dated 8th December 1897, the Municipality can levy water-tax from a person residing in a house within 500 feet of the water main (in the present case the main is outside the house door) when no water connection to the house has been established. The Commissioner in 1905 decided ex parte that there should, in such circumstances, be a hydrant within 500 feet to justify such levy.

"The case has been fully stated in the note of the Secretary of the Municipality, dated 8th April 1911, in the note of the President (Deputy Commissioner) dated 13th April, and the note of the Legal Adviser of the Municipality, dated 2nd May 1911, copies of which have been extracted from the Municipal file and are attached.

"The point, or a similar one, is most exhaustively discussed in a Full Bench ruling of the Madras High Court in G. E. Branson v. Municipal Commissioners, Madras(1). This was a ruling of 1879, G.E. Branson being appellant against the Municipal Corporation of Madras. One of the Judges dissented. The decision in this ruling was that a Municipality could levy water-tax even within a division of the Municipality into which water supply system had not been introduced. (The Madras Municipal Act was, however, there in force.)

(1) 2 M. 362.

This ruling contains many observations very apposite to the present question now being referred; and it is clear that the question is by no means easily to be decided. The question is of such general importance in Lahore and likely to crop up continually as house building extensions occur that I think an authoritative decision is desirable.

"My own opinion at first inclined to coincide with the Commissioner's decision of 1905, but after reading the Secretary's note of 8th April 1911, and the Madras ruling, I feel doubt. The argument that the occupier cannot force the owner to establish connection is an individual one. When the main runs near houses, the general result likely to occur if water-tax were levied on unconnected houses would be that people would not take them or would abandon them until or unless connections were established; thus, the general result would be that owners would, as a body, be forced to establish them, and it is general results that legislation has to keep in view. I mention this argument as it is one of the main arguments of Major Stephenson.

"I think the arguments for either side so considerable that I refer the point. I think it quite possible that the words 'so situated that their occupiers can benefit by the works' were imported to the Punjab Municipal Acts of 1891 and 1911 owing to the Madras ruling of 1879: the legislators being inclined to agree with the dissenting Judge. If this surmise were correct, then the intention of the Punjab Act would be that the Muncipality could not levy in a case like the one now referred. Pending the result of this reference, levy from Major Stephenson should be suspended."

With respect to this reference, we will proceed to deal first with the judgment of the Madras High Court, which apparently has been quoted by the Commissioner as the authority on the point before us. It is, however, of no use to us in this case. It was a judgment regarding the terms of a particular Act, which Act is not in force in the Punjab, nor is the wording of the Punjab Act at all identical with that of the Madras Act nor is the point before us identical with the point before them. Their decision was in that case that the Act gave the Committee power to levy a tax quite independently of any corresponding liability on the part of the Committee and we know that this view has been taken in regard to certain Acts of the Legislature in England of late years. We have no reason to doubt that the ruling of the Madras Court was, on the point before it, quite correct, but the point before us is quite a different one. Section 44 provides that a tax may be levied upon buildings or lands so situated that their occupiers may benefit by their works. A notification by the Local Government, No. 585 of 8th December 18 7, indicates certain classes of persons as coming within the purview of section 44. We have to decide whether or not Major Stephenson comes within this category. That notification issued under section 45 of the Act, which, so far as we can see, is the only authority under which the Committee could levy a tax of this kind. For purposes of comparison, we asked the learned Pleader for the Committee to point out to us under what further notification a tax of 5 per cent., which we understand is levied upon houses which are connected up with the main, has been levied. But he is unable to produce any, and states that this tax is levied in accordance with rules passed under section 120-H, a section which we note was only imported in the Act in the year 1900, and apparently has no connection at all with the actual tax under discussion but provides for a charge being made for connections and plant. We, therefore, can get no assistance in interpreting the notification under discussion from any other similar notification.

We find that section 44 provides that for certain purposes a tax,to be called a water-tax, may be levied upon buildings or lands which are so situated that their occupiers can benefit by the works. In the notification issued under section 45, it is provided that the tax should be levied at the rate of Rs. 2-8-0 per cent. on the rent of houses and buildings in the Civil Station of Lahore which are situated within 500 feet from the public water main and are not connected with it.

We have given the point our most careful consideration and we are unable to accept the contention of the Municipal Committee that the occupier of a house is in a position to benefit by the works merely by reason that a closed water-pipe passes within 500 feet of his house. The interpretation placed upon the notification by the Commissioner, which we should have supposed would have been held binding upon the Municipal Committee, in 1905, until reversed by competent authority, seems to us to be a reasonable one in its intention. We think that section 44 clearly means buildings or lands so situated that their occupires can derive benefit from the works as they stand, and not that by having further connections made and paying an additional tax, they can put themselves into a position to benefit. The section does not say that those are liable who can by taking connection get themselves into the position to benefit, but that they are so situated that the occupiers can benefit from the works. No doubt, the words used in the notification are 500 feet from the public water main, but we think a reasonable and proper interpretation is, "the public water main from which water can be drawn" and not "public water main absolutely closed and from which no one can benefit as it stands." We do not know that the benefit can be restricted to hydrants. There may be other methods by which occupires could benefit, but it is not alleged that any such exist and we know that in this case the nearest hydrant is not within 500 feet of Major Stephenson's house. We hold that the principle laid down by the Commissioner of Lahore in his order, dated the 19th May 1905, is correct, and that the Notification No. 585 of December 1897, does not justify the Committee in claiming this rate from Major Stephenson, and we reply to the reference accordingly.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT NO. 272 OF 1911.

April 1, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Macleod.

BHAGVANDAS PARASHRAM—APPELLANT

versus

BURJORJI RUTTONJI BOMONJI—RESPONDENT.

Pakka Adatia, position of—Suit by Pakka Adatia—Wagering, defence of—Evidence—Surrounding circumstances—Interrogatories, questions to be asked.

A pakka adatia is a person who enters into a contract of employment with his constituent for reward. He obtains instructions from his client what contracts to enter into. But, generally speaking, the constituent is not concerned with the method in which his instructions are carried out.

In the Bombay Presidency, it is open to the constituent to prove, in a suit by the pakka adatia, that the contracts made by the latter were wagering contracts.

BHAGVANDAS v. BURJORJI.

A party relying on the defence of wagering must prove that at the time the contract was entered into, it was the common intention of both parties neither to give nor receive delivery, but merely to pay or receive differences according to the market-rate at the due date. In determining the question what was the common intention of parties at the time of the contract, the Court can look to the surrounding circumstances, as it hardly ever occurs that there is direct evidence of a common intention to wager.

A party seeking discovery by interrogatories is entitled to put questions for the purpose of extracting from his opponent information as to the facts material to the questions between them, which he has to prove on any issue raised between them, or for the purpose of securing admissions as to such facts in order that expense and delay may be saved or to destroy his opponent's case or to support his own case.

The mere fact that the questions would be admissible in cross-examination of a witness, does not make them good as interrogatories.

Interrogatories must not be exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, nor be prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous. Nor should interrogatories be allowed which are sought to be administered obviously for the purpose of fishing out a case.

In cases where the defence of wagering has been set up, the party setting up this defence should not be allowed to interrogate his opponent generally as to his business transactions apart from the particular transactions in suit. It is manifestly unfair to compel a man to disclose his general dealings on the chance that thereby his opponent may discover something which will support his case.

Mr. Robertson, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Jardine, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs filed this suit against the defendant in April 1911, alleging that in June 1910 defendant requested them to act as his pakka adatias, that in consequence of such instructions they entered into contracts for the sale of large quantities of cotton and linseed which resulted in heavy losses. These they seek to recover from the defendant after giving him credit for a large sum which, it is alleged, he deposited with them as margin money.

The defendant pleads that he entered into cotton and linseed contracts with the plaintiffs as principals and that the common understanding between the parties was that no delivery was to be given or taken but that differences alone should be dealt in. He denies that the plaintiffs acted as his pakka adatias.

On the 19th January 1911, the defendant obtained leave to administer interrogatories to the plaintiffs. The affidavit of the managing clerk of defendant's Solicitors supporting the application states that in order to answer the questions, the plaintiffs would have to refer to their books and if those questions were put to them in cross-examination, a good deal of the Court's time would be wasted.

The following five interrogatories were administered in pursuance of the leave so obtained: —

"1. What were the daily cash balances from 1st September 1910 to 1st October 1910 of the plaintiffs' firm as appearing in their daily cash book?

"2. What were the daily bank balances during the same period?

"3(a) How many contracts did the plaintiffs' firm enter into for the sale and purchase of linseed in Samvat year 1964, Samvat year 1965, and Samvat year 1966, and what quantity was agreed to be sold or purchased in each case as per the said contracts?

"3(b) Which of the said contracts were purchased by you by actually weighing out and giving delivery and which by actually taking delivery on weighment?

"4. In all these years from 1964 to 1966, what was the amount of linseed for April-May delivery and what for Bhadarwa delivery?

"5. How many contracts for April-May delivery were performed by actual weighment of ready linseed and how many contracts for Bhadarwa delivery were so performed?"

The plaintiffs filed their answer on the 29th February 1912.

They objected to answering interrogatories 1 and 2 on the ground that they had no possible reference to the defences raised in the suit.

They objected to answering interrogatories 3, 4 and 5 on the following grounds, that they were administered solely with the object of fishing out a case for the defendant and getting information of the plaintiffs' general dealings and transactions, and their general business; that they were irrelevant to the issues to be tried and, in any event, could only be asked in cross-examination; that as the defendant admitted that his application was made expressly for the purpose of saving the time of the Court at the hearing, the plaintiffs now knew what questions the defendant wished to ask, and would be ready with the answers from their books if the Judge at the hearing allowed the questions.

BHAGVANDAS v. BURJORJI.

The defendant thereupon obtained a summons on the 13th March calling upon the plaintiffs to show cause why they should not forthwith fully answer the interrogatories on the ground that they were relevant and material to his defence, and were neither fishing, nor made to annoy the plaintiffs.

The first issue on these pleadings will be whether the plaintiffs acted as pakka adatias for the defendant A pakka adatia has been held by the Court to be a person who enters into a contract of employment with his constituent for reward. The pakka adatia obtains instructions from his client what contracts to enter into, but, generally speaking, the constituent is not concerned with the method in which his instructions are carried out. It would appear, however, that in the Bombay Presidency, it is open to the constituent to prove that the contracts made by the pakka adatia were wagering contracts. So the issue of wager will arise whether the plaintiffs contracted direct with the defendant or acted as his pakka adatias.

According to the decisions of the Court, a party relying on the defence of wagering must prove that at the time the contract was entered into, it was the common intention of both parties neither to give nor receive delivery, but merely to pay or receive differences according to the market-rate at the due date. The Court, in determining the questions what was common intention of the parties at the time of the contract, can look to the surrounding circumstances, as it hardly ever occurs that there is direct evidence of a common intention to wager. Each party hopes to win, and it is only when the due date has arrived and it is apparent which party has lost, that the looser sets up the defence of wagering. He is always ready to swear he was wagering, he has to prove that his opponent was likewise wagering.

Now, 'surrounding circumstances' is a very loose expression and it is quite impossible to foresee what questions will be allowed by the Judge at the hearing to be put to the plaintiffs in cross-examination. The party seeking discovery by interrogatories is entitled to put questions for the purpose of extracting from his opponent information as to the facts material to the questions between them, which he has to prove on any issue raised between them, or for the purpose of securing admissions as to such facts in order that expense and delay may be saved, or to destroy his opponent's case, or to support his own case.

The mere fact that the questions would be admissible in cross-examination of a witness does not make them good as interrogatories. Interrogatories must not be exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, nor be prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous. Nor should interrogatories be allowed which are sought to be administered obviously for the purpose of fishing out a case.

It may be difficult to decide where the line is to be drawn between interrogatories which should be allowed to be administered, and those which are prolix, vexatious or fishing, but in cases of doubt, it is advisable to leave the questions to be put at the hearing. I have hitherto, in cases where the defence of wagering has been set up, refused to allow the party setting up this defence to interrogate his opponent generally as to his business transactions apart from the particular transactions in suit, on the ground that it is manifestly unfair to compel a man to disclose his general dealings on the chance that thereby his opponent may discover something which will support his case, and I am not disposed to decide differently on this summons.

The plaintiffs are asked to disclose their daily cash balances and daily bank balances from the 1st September 1910, till the 1st October 1910, to disclose the whole of their contracts for the sale and purchase of linseed during these specified years with the particulars of each contract, the quantity agreed to be sold or purchased in each contract and how each contract was performed.

Further, they are asked what was the total amount of their linseed contracts for April-May and Bhadarwa deliveries and how many contracts were performed by actual weighment.

I presume that the defendant hopes to discover that the plaintiffs' cash and bank balances in September to October 1910 were so small, and that the contracts for linseed during the years 1965 to 1966 which were performed by actual weighment, if any, were so few, that the Judge at the hearing will find those are surrounding circumstances which prove the intention of the plaintiffs in the contracts in question was merely to pay or receive differences.

PROSONNO KUMARI DEBI v. RAM CHANDRA SINGHA.

In the General Stock Exchange v. Bethell, (1), the plaintiffs sued on the balance of account on stock exchange transactions. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiffs had not bought and sold stocks as authorized by him and sought to obtain particulars of the dates of the purchases and sales and the names of the persons to or from whom the shares had been sold or bought and of the amounts paid by the plaintiffs on his behalf and the mode of payment of such money.

The Judge in Chambers refused to order the plaintiffs to give further and better answers to interrogatories administered to them. In appeal, Manisty, J., said that the appeal must be dismissed as the order asked for by the defendant was a mere attempt to get hold of some technical defence to the action. Mathew, J., concurring, said that the only effect of allowing the appeal would be to delay the trial and to make an order oppressive to the plaintiffs.

In Petre v. Sutherland (2), the plaintiff, a stock broker, sued the defendant, his client, for the balance of an account. The defendant who had had dealings with the plaintiff for fifteen years, claimed to have the accounts re-opened for the whole of that period, and with that view to be allowed to examine the plaintiff's books for that period. It was held by the Court of Appeal that the discovery would be useless, unnecessary and oppressive. The defendant was dealing for differences and had taken moneys, but when he was sued for losses, he sought to set up a technical defence and to obtain that discovery to assist him. Bowen, L. J., observed that the power of discovery was too often abused and its exercise was a matter of discretion. On the other hand, in the Universal Stock Exchange Co. v. Crowther (3), the defendant, who was disputing a claim by his stock-brokers on the balance of an account for dealing in shares, was allowed to interrogate the plaintiffs as to whether they had, if they acted as brokers, at any time in their possession, or were the owners of, and were entitled to, the various stocks which they claimed to have bought on behalf of the defendant. In the account, the same shares appeared to have been bought on one side and sold on the other, and for that reason, the interrogatory was allowed.

In this case, however, the interrogatories relate not to the particular transactions on which the plaintiffs sue but to their general dealings and the decision in Petre v. Sutherland (2) seems directly in point.

In my opinion, therefore, the summons should be dismissed. Costs reserved to the hearing.

The defendant appealed.

On the 20th August 1912, the Appeal Court (Scott, C. J., and Chandavarkar, J.) confirmed the order with costs.

Attorneys for the Plaintiffs: Messrs. Tyabji & Co.

Attorneys for the Defendant: Messrs. Mulla & Mulla.

(1) (1886) 2 T. L. R. 683.
(2) (1887) 3 T. L. R. 275.
(3) (1892) 8 T. L. R. 650.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 173 AND 148 OF 1910.

July 23, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

PROSONNO KUMARI DEBI—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

RAM CHANDRA SINGHA AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY—RESPONDENT.

*Appeal—Memorandum of appeal not accompanied by copy of decree appealed against, though decree was in existence when appeal filed—Copy of decree given to Vakil but not filed—Subsequent death of Vakil—Appeal ordered to be admitted after time—Sufficient cause—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 5—Letters of Administration—*Debuttar property—Whether Letters should be granted where no estate to be administered—Device to secure decision on contested question of title.

The omission to file a copy of the decree appealed against, along with the memorandum of appeal, is a fatal defect, and the Court has no power under the Code to exempt the appellant from producing a copy.

Hem Chundra Bakshi v. Jadab Chandra Bakshi, 17 Ind. Cas. 99; 16 C. L. J. 116 and Binapani v. Sashi Bhushan Sinha, 17 Ind. Cas. 119; 16 C. L. J. 133, relied upon.

Where an appellant obtained a copy of the decree to be appealed against and made it over in proper time to a Vakil who filed the appeal, but by mistake, the precise nature of which could not be explained as the Vakil had since then died, the copy was not filed with the memorandum, the High Court, at the time of the hearing of the appeal, accepted the copy of the decree by extending the time for filing the appeal under section 5 of the Limitation Act

Where there is no estate which stands in need of administration, no suggestion that any creditors have to be paid or any debts due to the estate have to be collected, and an application for Letters of Administration is a transparent device to secure from the Probate Court a decision upon a contested question of title to the estate, there is no occasion for the grant of Letters of Administration.

Lakshmi Narain Chatterjee v. Nanda Rani, 3 Ind. Cas. 287; 9 C. L. J. 116; Lalit Chandra Chowdhury v. Baikuntha Nath, 5 Ind. Cas. 395; 14 C. W. N. 463; 15 C. L. J. 305 and Parsania v. Hari Charan, 16 Ind. Cas. 588, referred to.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Bankura, dated January 10th, 1910.

Babus Ram Chandra Majumdar, Biraj Mohan Majumdar, Amarendra Nath Bose and Hari Bhushan Mukherji, for the Appellant.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chakravarti, Dwarka Nath Mitter, Manmotha Nath Mukherji, Sarat Kumar Mitra and Hira Lal Sanyal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is directed against a decree whereby Letters of Administration, in respect of the debuttar properties of the Bishunpur Raj, have been granted to the respondent, to continue during the minority of her son. The properties were admittedly in the possession of Raja Ram Krishna Singha down to 1889, when he died leaving two widows, the senior Rani Dhajamoni and the junior Rani Prosonno Kumari. Upon his death, Rani Dhajamoni became the shebait and managed the properties till 1892 when she died. It is alleged that, shortly before her death, she executed in 1891 an arpannama or deed of gift in favour of one Nilmoni Singh, who was thus constituted the shebait of the debuttar properties. This arpannama has not been produced or proved in this case, and the Court is, therefore, not in a position to pronounce any opinion upon the question of the execution of the alleged deed of gift by Rani Dhajamoni and its true legal effect. It is stated, however, that upon the death of Rani Dhajamoni, Nilamoni Singh became the shebait and managed the properties till 1903, when he died, leaving a minor son, Ram Chandra Singh, and a widow, Churamoni. On the 1st January 1909, Churamoni applied for Letters of Administration, on behalf of her infant son Ram Chandra Singh, in respect of the debuttar properties. The application was opposed by Rani Prosunno Kumari, the junior widow of Raja Ram Krishna Singh, and in her turn, she applied on the 1st April 1909 for Letters of Administration to that very estate. The District Judge has taken evidence and has come to the conclusion that the title of Rani Prosunno Kumari has been extinguished by lapse of time, as the properties were in the possession of Nilmoni Singh from the time of the death of Rani Dhajamoni in 1892 to the time of his death in 1903 In this view, the District Judge has granted Letters of Administration to Churamoni for the benefit of her minor son, to continue till the latter comes of age. The District Judge has also dismissed the application for Letters of Administration by Rani Prosunno Kumari. The present appeal has been preferred by Rani Prosunno Kumari against the grant of Letters of Administration to Churamoni.

A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that the memorandum is not in conformity with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as a copy of the decree was not attached thereto. It has not been disputed on behalf of the appellant that this is a fatal defect and that the Court has no power under the Code to exempt the appellant from the production of a copy of the decree against which the appeal is preferred. [Hem Chandra Bakshi v. Jadab Chandra Bakshi (1) Binapani Debi v. Sashibhusan Sinha (2)]. An application has, however, been made on behalf of the appellant to the effect that a certified copy of the decree may now be received and allowed to be attached to the memorandum of appeal. It is competent to the Court to make an order of this description, if it is satisfied that the discretion vested in it under section 5 of the Limitation Act should be exercised in favour of the appellant. It has been explained in an affidavit that the copy of the decree now tendered was obtained before the appeal was lodged in this Court, that it was made over in proper time to the learned Vakil who filed the appeal but that by a mistake, the precise nature of which cannot now be explained as the learned Vakil has since then died, the decree was not attached to the memorandum of appeal when it was filed. We are of opinion that the appellant ought not to suffer by reason of what was very possibly an accidental mistake or oversight on the part of her Vakil. We, therefore, grant the application for extension of time and direct that the copy of the decree now produced be accepted and attached to the memorandum of appeal. We may add that a similar order was made by this Court in the case of Surja Kant Roy Chowdry v. Bihari Bholliachya (3).

(1) 16 C. L. J. 116; 17 Ind. Cas. 99.
(2) 16 C. L. J. 133; 17 Ind. Cas. 119.

The question next arises, whether the order for grant of Letters of Administration ought to have been made. In our opinion, it is obvious that the order cannot be sustained. In fact, this case illustrates how statutory provisions may be abused and misapplied in a manner never contemplated by their framers. The application of the respondent to the Court below purports to be one for Letters of Administration in respect of debuttar properties, but there is manifestly no estate which stands in need of administration. Even if it be assumed, as was held in the case of Ranjit Singh v. Jagannath Prosad Gupta (4), that Letters of Administration may be granted in respect of debuttar properties in certain events, though the contrary view was indicated in Jib Lal Gir v. Jaga Mohan Gir (5), there is clearly no occasion for a grant here. There is no suggestion that any creditors have to be paid or that any debts due to the estate have to be collected; in fact, no foundation is laid for a possible theory that the estate really needs what is technically meant by administration. This is confirmed by what we have already stated, namely, that Nilamoni Singh died in 1903 and the present application was not made till six years later; prima facie, therefore, there is no estate of which administration can be granted. But we may add that we are not satisfied that this is at all a case under section 37 of the Probate and Administration Act of 1881. That section provides that where a person dies, leaving properties of which he was the sole or surviving trustee or in which he had no beneficial interest on his own account and leaves no general representative or one who is unable or unwilling to act as such, Letters of Administration limited to such property may be granted to the beneficiary or to some other person on his behalf. It has not been proved that the infant, on whose behalf the application has been made, is a beneficiary within the meaning of section 37 and the case thus falls within the rule recognised in Jib Lal Gir v. Jagan Mohan Gir (5). We are further of opinion that the application for Letters of Administration in this case is a transparent device to secure from the Probate Court a decision upon a contested question of title to the debuttar properties. But, as laid down in Lakshmi Narain Chatterjee v. Nanda Rani Debi (6); Lalit Chandra Chowdhury v. Baikuntha Nath Chaudhri (7) and Parsania v. Hari Charan (8), the Court will not allow the provisions of the Probate and Administration Act to be misapplied for such a purpose. If there is any controversy between the parties as to the shebaitship of the disputed properties, they must seek for its decision in a title suit properly framed for the purpose.

The result is, that this appeal is allowed, the decree of the District Judge set aside and the application dismissed.

It is conceded that the other appeal (Regular Civil Appeal No. 148 of 1910) stands on precisely the same footing. In that appeal, however, the decree of the Court below will be affirmed and the application for Letters of Administration will stand dismissed. There will be no order for costs here or below, in either of these cases.

Appeals allowed.

(3) (1910) R. A. No. 86 of 1908.
(4) 12 C. 375.
(5) 16 C. W. N. 798; 16 Ind. Cas. 453.
(6) 3 Ind. Cas. 287; 9 C. L. J. 116.
(7) 5 Ind. Cas. 395; 14 C. W. N. 463; 15 C. L. J. 305.
(8) 16 Ind. Cas. 588.

BASAVESWARASWAMI v. HAVALIGI HUSSAIN.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 1331 AND 1334 OF 1910.

September 11, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

IN NO. 1 31.

BASAVESWARASWAMI, BY DHARMA-KARTHA ASPALLI PANCHAPPA—APPELLANT

IN NO 1334.

HAVALIGI HUSSAIN SAHEB—APPELLANT

versus

1. THE BELLARY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL
2. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL, REPRESENTED BY THE COLLECTOR OF BELLARY—RESPONDENTS.

Streets and drains in Municipal towns—Ownership in Government—Right of Municipality vesting in Municipality by statutory provisions—Construction by house owner of pial over drain—Adverse possession — Prescriptive right — Limitation -- Extinguishment of title in Municipality after 12 years—Encroachment—Right of Municipality to remove pial—Madras District Municipalities Act (IV of 1884), s. 168 (1)—Injunction—Prayer for declaration, granting of—Subsidiary relief.

The streets and the drains therein in Municipal towns are vested in the Municipalities by Government for purposes for which they were constituted. Their right is not a mere right of easement, but a special kind of property in the site previously unknown to the law, but created by statute.

Sundaram Iyer v. The Municipal Corporation of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council, 25 M. 635; 12 M. L. J. 37, Rolls v. Vestry of St. George the Martyr Southwark, 14 Ch. D. 785 at pp. 795, 796; 43 L. T. 140; 28 W. R. 867; 44 J. P. 680; 49 L. J. Ch. 691, Municipal Council of Sydney v. Young, (1898) App. Cas. 457; 67 L. J. P. C. 40; 71 L. T. 365; 46 W. R. 561, referred to.

Though the Municipalities cannot give up the rights of the public in the streets or affect their right of way by any act of their own, it would not affect the capacity of a person in hostile possession to acquire rights which would affect the public.

Midland Railway Co. v. Wright, (1901) 1 Ch. 738; 70 L. J. Ch. 411; 49 W. R. 474; 84 L. T. 225; 17 T. L. R. 261, referred to.

Although the soil may belong to one person, another person may be the owner of a building above the soil, and the right to occupy a portion of the space above the soil may be acquired by limitation.

Laybourn v. Gridley, (1892) 2 Ch 53; 61 L. J. Ch. 352; 40 W. R. 474; Bevan v. London Portland Cement Co., Ld., 67 L. T. 615; 3 R. 47; Mohan Lal Jechand v. Amrat Lal Bechardas, 3 B. 174, referred to.

The construction of a pial over a drain by a house owner in front of his house is a user by him adverse to the Municipality and 12 years' adverse enjoyment (before 1906) extinguishes the right of Municipality to the space of the pial, and 60 years' adverse enjoyment extinguishes the rights of the Government.

The Municipality, however, has the right under section 168 (1) of the District Municipalities Act, the statutory right to demolish the pial as 'an encroachment,' notwithstanding the existence of a prescriptive title as against it and Courts have no jurisdiction to restrain the demolition by an injunction.

Where plaintiff sought to have it declared that he had acquired a prescriptive right to the site of a pial built by him over a drain and for an injunction restraining the Municipality from demolishing it:

Held, that the Court would not grant him the declaration, though he succeeded in establishing his prescriptive right to the site, as it was only subsidiary to the substantial relief asked for, viz., injunction, which could not be granted.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Bellary, dated 7th April 1910, in A. S. Nos. 2 and 18 of 1907, respectively, preferred against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Bellary, in O. S. Nos. 185 and 174 of 1905, respectively.

Mr. J. C. Adam, for the Appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. L. A. Govindaragava Iyer, for 1st Respondent.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Iyer, for 2nd Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

SUNDARA AIYAR, J.—This is a suit by the owner of a house in Bellary for a declaration of his right to a pial and for restraining the Municipal Council of the town from removing it. At the instance of the Municipal Council, the Secretary of State for India in Council was made a party to the suit. The plaintiff's case was that the pial belonged to him and that the Municipal Council had, therefore, no right to remove it as it threatened to do. The Council denied the plaintiff's right to the site of the pial and the Government set up its ownership to the site. The issues framed in suit raised the questions, how long the suit pial was in existence, whether the plaintiff acquired a prescriptive title to the site of the pial, if he was not the original owner, and whether the Municipality was entitled to demolish it.

Both Courts have found that the street was dedicated to the public by the Government. The houses were built on sites originally belonging to Government, which it gave to the people when they were compelled to remove from houses occupied by them within the fort of Bellary. The lower Court also found that the land over which the pial stands was not part of the plaintiff's house. These findings are binding on us in second appeal. It has also been found by the lower Courts that the pial was constructed about the year 1883 or 1884, that prior to its construction, there were loose slabs of stone which were used for the purpose of vending various articles but that the Municipal servants used to remove these slabs when necessary for the purpose of repairing the drain.

It was argued before us that the plaintiff's possession must be taken to date from the time when the loose slabs were in existence; but, having regard to the fact that the slabs used to be removed when the Municipality wished to do so, it is not possible to regard the plaintiff's possession as having been effective until the present pial was constructed in 1883. If the Municipality had the right to the space above the drain up to the portion occupied by the plaintiff, its right to possession was not disturbed in an effective manner by the use of the loose slabs of stone. From 1883, however, the plaintiff must be taken to have obtained an effective and exclusive possession of the pial. The learned Pleader for the Municipal Council argued that this possession was not adverse to the Municipality, inasmuch as, for the purposes of its functions, it was not necessary for the Municipality to use the site of the pial. This contention I am entirely unable to accept. According to the decision in Sundaram Iyer v. The Municipal Corporation of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council (1), the street, which on the findings must be taken to include the drain, was vested in the Municipality for the purposes for which the Council was constituted. Their right was not a mere right of easement, according to the view adopted by the learned Judges who decided that case, but was a special kind of property in the site previously unknown to the law but created by statute. This was also the view adopted by James, L. J., in Rolls v. Vestry of St. George the Martyr Southwark (2). See also the judgment of Lord Morris in Municipal Council of Sydney v. Young (3). Sundaram Iyer v. The Municipal Council of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council (1), regards a Municipal Council as having a right both to the surface of the street and to a portion of the soil beneath and the space above so far as would be necessary for the discharge of its functions as the authority bound to maintain, protect and repair the road. If, then, the Municipality was the owner of the site occupied by the pial in 1883, it must be taken to have been dispossessed by the plaintiff when he constructed the pial. The rights to possession would be extinguished when, according to the Limitation Act in force, a suit for possession instituted by it became barred. As the law stood before 1900, the time within which the Muncipality could institute such a suit was twelve years. In 1895 or 1896, therefore, the Municipal Council's right to the site of the pial became extinguished and the rights of the public incidental to their right of way also became extinguished according to the view taken in Sundaram Iyer v. The Municipal Council of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council (1). Although it was not open to the Municipality to give up the rights of the public or to affect the right of way possessed by the public by any act of their own, that would not affect the capacity of a person in hostile possession to acquire rights which would affect the public. See the judgment of Byrne, J., in Midland Railway Co. v. Wright (4). A similar principle applies in other cases. Thus, a trustee cannot alienate trust property except in certain circumstances, but a person can acquire a right by limitation to trust properties by adverse possession. Similarly, the trustee's office itself is extra commercium but the right to it may be acquired by limitation. Mr. Govindaraghava Iyer drew attention to an observation of Benson, J., in Sundaram Iyer v. The Municipal Council of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council (1), in support of his argument that the possession of the plaintiff was not adverse to the Municipality so long as the Council did not require the site for the discharge of its function. But the question whether possession was adverse or not, does not depend on the needs or requirements of the owner, but on the character of the occu-

(1) 25 M. 635; 12 M. L. J. 37.
(2) (1880) 14 Ch. D. 785 at pp. 795, 796; 43 L. T. 140; 28 W. R. 867; 44 J. P. 680; 49 L. J. Ch. 691.
(3) (1898) App. Cas. 457; 67 L. J. P. C. 40; 71 L. T. 865; 46 W. R. 561.
(4) (1901) 1 Ch. 738; 70 L. J. Ch. 411; 49 W. R. 474; 84 L. T. 225; 17 T. L. R. 261.

BASAVESWARASWAMI v. HAVALIGI HUSSAIN.

pation of the person in possession. It may, no doubt, be held that fugitive or unimportant acts of possession would not be sufficiently effective to make the possession adverse and that the license of the owner may be implied in such cases. But I cannot conceive what could be more effective occupation than building up the pial and occupying it exclusively. It must be taken to be now well established that, although the soil may be in one person, another person may be the owner of a building above the soil and that the right to occupy a portion of space above the soil may be acquired by limitation. See Lightwood's Time Limit on Actions, pages 17 and 18 and Laybourn v. Gridley (5). In Midland Railway Co. v. Wright(4), it was held that the right to surface level over a tunnel could be acquired by prescription. In Bevan v. The London Portland Cement Company Limited (6), it was held that the right to a tunnel itself could be acquired by adverse possession. A similar view was held in Mohan Lal Jechand v. Amrat Lal Bechardas (7) by a Bench of which West, J. was a member. It must, therefore, be held that, as against the Municipal Council, the plaintiff acquired a right to the pial by limitation on the expiration of 12 years from 1883 or 1884. I must observe that the view, taken in Sundaram Iyer v. The Municipal Council of Madura and The Secretary of State for India in Council (1), that the right of a Municipal Council by virtue of streets vesting in it includes the right of possession, was not questioned by any of the parties during the arguments. If the Municipal Council had no right to the possession of the space above the drain but only a right of user for the discharge of its functions with respect to the drain, the plaintiff's position would even then not be worse, for, as the person in possession of the pial, he would have a right to it as against all but the true owner, namely, Government in this case; and the Municipal Council would have no right to interfere with his possession or to demolish the pial. So far, then, as the right of ownership is concerned, the plaintiff's right must, be taken to be established as against the Municipality. As against Government, however, the plaintiff has not succeeded in establishing a title. The presumption of title arising from possession is of no use to the plaintiff in this case, because it has been found that the ownership of the site of the drain belonged to Government before the plaintiff took possession of the site of the pial. Until 1883, either the Government or the Municipality must be taken to have been in legal possession on the site; and the plaintiff has not been in possession for a period of 30 years so as to acquire a title by limitation as against Government.

The next question is, whether the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction restraining the Municipal Council from removing the pial. That question depends on the construction of section 168 of the District Municipalities Act. The right of the Municipal Council to the drain has not been affected by the acquisition of title to the pial by the plaintiff. According to section 168, the Municipality is entitled to "cause any projection, encroachment or obstruction made against or in front of any land in any public street to be removed or altered as they think fit." Now, the pial must be regarded as an obstruction made on land in the public street. As it appears that the pial is only three feet above the drain, it must be regarded as an obstruction of the drain in the street. The right of the Municipal Council to remove an obstruction does not depend on its title or right to the possession of it, as is clear from clause 3 of section 168, which entitles a person lawfully erecting an obstruction to reasonable compensation for the removal. The right to remove is given in the interests of the public to prevent encroachment on the public roads and is not dependent on the Municipal Council's ownership. The injunction must, therefore, be refused. No claim was made in the plaint for compensation, nor does it appear whether the pial itself had been removed at the date of the suit; it does not even appear whether it has been removed now. It was argued by Mr. Seshagiri Aiyar, who appeared for Government, that the Municipal Council had received the sanction of Government for the removal of the pial and had, therefore, the right to remove it, but the Municipality did not set up the plea that its act was justified by the orders of Government. Nor does it appear in what capacity, if at all, Government sanctioned the removal. I consider it somewhat extraordinary that, after allowing the plaintiff to construct and occupy his pial for nearly a quarter of a century, the Municipality should claim to remove it without any compensation, and I take leave to doubt whether the Government would sympathise with and authorise such conduct on the part of the Council. As the prayer for a declaration of title was only incidental to the substantial relief asked for, namely, injunction, no declaration can be granted in this suit as against the Municipality. The second appeal must, therefore, be dismissed with 2nd respondent's costs.

(5) (1892) 2 Ch. 53; 61 L. J. Ch. 352; 40 W. R. 474.

(6) (1893) 67 L. T. 615; 3 R. 47.

(7) 3 B. 174.

Second Appeal No. 1334 follows.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—The plaintiff is the appellant before us. The finding of the lower Court is that he had been in possession of the pial in front of his house for only 25 or 30 years before the suit. This pial is built so as to cover the Municipal drain and is 3 feet high from the road level, the drain being $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet in width The lower Appellate Court found that the plaintiff has not acquired a prescriptive title to the land over which the pial in question projects either against the Bellary Municipal Council in whom the street and the drain sites were vested or against the Government and hence dismissed plaintiff's suit which was brought for an injunction against the Bellary Municipal Council to restrain them from removing the pial as an encroachment on the drain and road.

I shall first shortly consider the question whether the drain and the road over which the pial is built belong to the Municipal Council or the Secretary of State or both. In The Municipal Commissioners for the City of Madras v. Sarangapani Mudeliar (8), Collins, C J., and Parker, J., state as follows:— "The English maxim 'once a highway always a highway' is based on the theory that the property in a highway is in the owner of the soil subject to an easement in favour of the public. In the case before us, this legal fiction peculiar to English Law cannot arise; for there is no question of any easement whatever. The street itself and the soil thereof is vested in the Municipality in trust for the public. Both are united in the same person, that is, the 'proprietor," and then they held that the defendant acquired a perfect title to a part of the road site which had been encroached upon by him "more than 12 years before the suit" brought by the Municipal Commissioners of the City of Madras to eject him from the encroached site. In that case, the learned Judges further stated that "when the Crown has once ceded property to an individual or Corporation, the grantee of the property stands in respect of the property granted in the same position as any other proprietor," i. e, they clearly held that the Government "lost all right of proprietorship in the street and the drain sites adjoining the street after they had once vested it in the Municipality." Next, we come to the case in Sundram Iyer v. The Municipal Council of Madura and the Secretary of State for India in Council (1), where Bashyam Iyengar, J., dissented from the above decision in The Municipal Commissioners for the City of Madras v. Sarangapani Mudaliar (8) and introduced all the fine distinctions known to English Law and held that the Municipal Council did not become, by the vesting of the street and the drains in it, the full owner of the site or soil over which the street exists, that it did not own the soil from the centre of the earth usque ad coelum and that it had only the right to manage and control the surface of the soil and so much of the soil below and of the space above the surface as was necessary to enable it to adequately maintain the street as a street. With the greatest deference, I might be permitted to express some regret that the complications known to English Law were thus introduced into this Presidency throughout this judgment of Bashyam Iyengar, J. The result has been, as pointed out by that very learned Judge himself, that there sprang up a sort of divided ownership between the Municipal Council and the Secretary of State, that there has been introduced different periods of limitation as against the Municipal Council and as against the Secretary of State and that, further, "the curious result" of the new Article 146 A of the Limitation Act, I. of 1908, would be that, on the expiration of 30 years from the date of the dispossession of the Municipality, the Crown will have the land freed from the burden of the highway, both the Municipality and the man who had been in possession adversely to the Municipality losing all their rights. However, it is probably now too late to go back on these distinctions which were based upon the view of the English and Scotch Law that the site of public highways is presumed to be in the conterminous proprietors and that they merely allow the public to impose a servitude upon the highway, a view which need have no place in a country where porambokes, streets, streams, water etc., almost invariably belong to Government till a private person is able to acquire a title by grant or prescription.

(8) 19 M. 154

The plaintiff has acquired the right as against the Municipality in the present case to have the pial filled over to the drain site by enjoyment for 12 years, (which was the period for the perfection of title by prescription even against a Municipality before the amending Act of 1900 was passed), for his adverse possession against the Municipality of this stratum of space at the height of 3 feet over the level of the drain began about 1880 and the 12 years' possession was completed in 1892 ; Mohanlal Jechand v. Amratlal Bechardas (7) and Ratnavelu Mudiliar v. Kolandavelu Pillai (9); but so far as the Government is concerned, he had not had possession for 60 years before the suit and hence his title against Government has not been perfected.

Now, even in the case of the Municipality, though plaintiff's title to the stratum of space at the 3 feet height above the drain covered by the pial has been acquired by prescription, the Municipalty has, under section 168 of the District Municipalities Act, 1884, (clause 3), power to cause projections, encroachments or obstructions in any public street to be removed, and the definition of "street" under section 3, clause (2) includes the drian space on either side of the street. There can be no doubt that though the Municipalfty may not have vested in it the right to the space up to the sky over the drain and street, it must have had such a right at least up to a height of about 12 feet over the level of the street in order that it might properly exercise its power of repairing, widening and altering, cleansing and doing other duties in connection with the street and the drain. The pial is, therefore, clearly an encroachment, a projection and an obstruction in the street. They have the right accordingly to remove it and this suit for an injunction against their removal of such projection was rightly dismissed by the lower Appellate Court. I would, therefore, confirm its decree, though not on the grounds on which the lower Court based its decision. The appellant must pay the costs of the 2nd respondent, the Secretary of State.

Second Appeal No. 1334 of 1910 follows.

Appeals dismissed.

(9) 29 M. 511; 16 M. L. J. 281.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 118 OF 1911.

June 19, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

RAJ KRISHNA DEY—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

BEPIN BEHARY DEY—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Court-fee—Suit for declaration that plaintiff is sole shebait and for injunction—Valuation for jurisdiction identical with valuation for Court-fees—Plaintiff not to assign arbitrary value on suit—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7 (IV) (c) and (d), Sch. I, Sch. II, Art. 17 (iii)—Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8.

A suit in which the plaintiff seeks for a declaration that he is the sole shebait of a certain idol and also for an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with his possession of the endowed properties, falls within section 7, clause 4, sub-clause (c) of the Court Fees Act, 1870, and the value, as determined for purposes of jurisdiction, must, under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, also determine the value for the purpose of Court-fees.

Where the plaintiff valued his suit for the purpose of jurisdiction at Rs 11,005, but for the purpose of Court-fees valued the prayer for injunction at Rs. 1,000, and paid Rs. 10 as Court-fees for the declaration under Schedule II, Article 17 (iii) and Rs. 75 for the injunction under Schedule I, read with section 7 (iv) (d) of the Court Fees Act:

Held, that the plaintiff was bound to pay ad valorem Court-fees upon the plaint and memorandum of appeal, on the basis that the value of the relief claimed was Rs. 11,005.

In cases falling under section 7 (iv) of the Court Fees Act, although the plaintiff is to state the amount at which he values the relief sought, the Legislature never intended that he should be at liberty to assign any arbitrary value and thus be free to choose capriciously the forum of trial or appeal.

Umatul Batul v. Nanji Kuar, 6 C. L. J. 427; 11 C. W. N. 705; Dayaram v. Gordhandas, 31 B. 73; 8 Bom. L. R. 885, relied upon.

Boidyanath v. Makhanlal, 17 C. 680, referred to.

RAJ KRISHNA DEY v. BEPIN BEHARY DEY.

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Midnapur, dated the 23rd August 1909.

Babu Hara Kumar Mitter, for the Appellant.

Babu Tarak Chandra Chakravarty, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—A preliminary objection has been taken to the competency of this appeal. The appeal arises out of a suit in which the plaintiff seeks for declaration that he is the sole shebait of Lakhi Baraha Jieu, and the principal defendant is not a shebait of the idol, and also for an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with his possession of the endowed properties. In the plaint as originally framed, there was no prayer for an injunction. Objection was thereupon taken by the defendant to the effect that the suit was not maintainable in view of the proviso to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act. The plaintiff then amended the plaint and inserted the prayer for injunction to which reference has just been made. He valued the suit for the purpose of jurisdiction at Rs. 11,005, but, for the purpose of payment of Court-fees, valued the prayer for injunction at Rs. 1,000. He then paid Rs. 10 as Court-fees for the declaration under Schedule II, Article 17(iii) and Rs. 75 for the injunction under Schedule I, read with section 7 (iv)(d) of the Court Fees Act, 1870. The suit was heard on the merits and dismissed. The plaintiff has appealed to this Court, and upon the memorandum of appeal, he has paid Court-fees in the same manner as in the Court of first instance. It has been contended on behalf of the respondents that under section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, the valuation for the purpose of Court-fees is identical with the valuation for the purpose of jurisdiction, and that, consequently, if the value assigned by the plaintiff for purposes of jurisdiction be accepted, the plaint and the memorandum of appeal are both insufficiently stamped, while, if the value assigned by the plaintiff for purposes of Court-fees be accepted, the appeal lies to the District Judge and not to this Court.

Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act provides as follows: "Where in suits other than those referred to in the Court Fees Act, 1870, section 7, paragraphs 5, 6 and 9 and paragaph 10, clause (d), Court-fees are payable ad valorem under the Court Fees Act, 1870, the value as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same." The suit as framed falls within section 7, clause 4, sub-clause (c) of the Court Fees Act, 1870. Consequently, the value as determined for purposes of jurisdiction, namely, Rs. 11,005, must also determine the value for the purpose of payment of Court-fees.

The same conclusion follows from another point of view. Section 7 (iv) (c) of the Court Fees Act provides that the amount of fee payable in suits to obtain a declaratory decree, where, as here, consequential relief is prayed, shall be determined according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal. It was pointed out by this Court in the case of Umatul Batul v. Nanji Kuar (1) that in cases falling under section 7(iv) of the Court Fees Act, although the plaintiff is to state the amount at which he values the relief sought, the Legislature never intended that the plaintiff should be at liberty to assign any arbitrary value and thus be free to choose capriciously the forum of trial or appeal. The same view was taken in Dayaram v. Gordhandas (2), and is implied in Boidyanath v. Makhanlal (3). In the case before us, there is no room for controversy that the prayer for injunction has been arbitrarily under-valued. The plaintiff contends that he is the sole shebait of the idol Lakhi Baraha Jieu, and is entitled, as such, to exclusive possession of the disputed properties on behalf of the idol. He further contends that the principal defendant has been improperly placed in joint possession of the endowed properties under an erroneous order of the Revenue Authorities made on the 6th May 1908. If he succeeds in these contentions, he will obtain exclusive possession of the endowed properties, of which, according to his allegation, he was in joint possession at the date of the commencement of the suit. The value of the prayer for injunction, therefore, is the value of the relief claimed by the plaintiff, and upon the facts stated, that value, as estimated by the plaintiff himself, is Rs. 11,005. The plaintiff is, therefore, bound to pay ad valorem Court fees upon the plaint and memorandum of appeal, on the basis that the value of the relief claimed is Rs. 11,005. The Court-fees payable upon Rs. 11,005 is Rs. 520; but the plaintiff has paid only Rs. 75; he is thus liable to pay the difference, Rs. 445, both upon the plaint and the memorandum of appeal; he is accordingly directed to pay Court-fees to the extent of Rs. 890 within three weeks from this date. If the amount is paid, the appeal will be heard. If it is not paid, the Court will consider what further order should be passed. The appeal will stand adjourned for three weeks.

(1) 6 C. L. J. 427: 11 C. W. N. 705 at p. 710.
(2) 31 B. 73; 8 Bom. L. R. 885.
(3) 17 C. 680.

The respondents are entitled to the costs of this hearing. We assess the hearing fee at five gold mohurs.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 49 OF 1910.

September 16, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Offg. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

KARRAY MANGIAH CHETTY—APPELLANT

versus

KANACHI RAMIAH CHETTY AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Insolvent Debtors Act (11-12 Vic. c. 21), s. 39—Set-off—Right of petitioning creditor to set-off costs payable by him to insolvent as against his debt.

A petitioning creditor in an insolvency proceeding cannot set-off the costs payable by him to the insolvent as against his debt as the former is an asset of the insolvent's estate in which all the creditors are entitled to share.

Such a case is not a case of "mutual credit."

In re a Debtor, (1907) 2 K. B. 896, Robarts v. Buce, L. R. 8 Ch. Div. 198 at p. 200; 47 L. J. Ch. 414; 26 W. R. 393; Collett v. Preston, 15 Beav. 458 and Throckmorten v. Crowley, L. R. 3 Eq. 196, relied upon.

Appeal from the order of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Wallis, Commissioner in Insolvency, dated 7th November 1910, in Insolvency Petition No. 139 of 1908, on the file of the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors at Madras.

Mr. K. Narain, Row, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. K. Ramaswami Aiyar, for the Insolvents.

JUDGMENT.—Ramiah Chetty filed his insolvency petition and schedule on the 21st July 1897 and a vesting order was passed the same day. He obtained his personal discharge on the 28th September alleging that he had paid all his creditors. He applied in 1906 to have his petition dismissed, when Mangiah Chetty, the appellant before us, came forward to prove his claim, which was rejected by the Official Assignee. He applied to Mr. Justice Boddam, who rejected his application with costs to be paid to the insolvent on the 21st January 1907. This order was reversed by the Appellate Court and the case was remanded to the Commissioner in Insolvency for a re-hearing. The costs incurred up to the date of the appellate order were also to be dealt with by him. Wallis, J., again dismissed the application on the 16th November 1908 and ordered Mangiah Chetty to pay the costs of the application and the appeal to the insolvent's attorney.

It was argued before us, on behalf of Mangiah Chetty, that Mr. Justice Boddam's order of the 21st January 1907 is a subsisting order. We are of opinion that that order was set aside in appeal and the order on 16th November 1908 is the final order now in force.

Mangiah Chetty obtained a decree on the 17th December 1907 against Ramiah Chetty, the insolvent, and his son Adinarayana Chetty for Rs. 3,000 and costs in Original Suit No. 94 of 1905. Of this, a sum of Rs. 1,602 is still said to be due.

Ramiah Chetty and his son have now filed their insolvency petition and schedule, and the vesting order was passed on the 1st July 1908.

Mangiah Chetty now applies that the costs he had been ordered to pay to the insolvent's Solicitor amounting to Rs. 615-4-0 might be set-off against the decree debt of Rs. 1,602 due to him.

Wallis, J., has rejected the application and this is an appeal against his order. The set-off claimed in insolvency proceedings does not rest on the same principle as the set-off in ordinary suits which is intended to prevent a multiplicity of suits. The debt due by Mangiah Chetty is an asset of the insolvent's estate in which all the creditors of the insolvent are entitled to share while Mangiah Chetty is only entitled to his dividend. Section 39 of sections 11 and 12 Vic. Ch. 21 introduces an exception to the ordinary rule of distribution of all assets among the creditors of the insolvent by enacting that where there has been mutual credit given to the insolvent and any other person or persons, one debt or demand may be set against another. The reason is obvious.

The case before us in which Mangiah Chetty has to pay 'costs' under a decree is obviously not a case of mutual credit.

The order for costs against him has nothing to do with the decree in his favour. They are two entirely different matters. There is no other provision of law which allows a set-off.

It is the practice in England to set off costs against costs in bankruptcy proceedings between the same parties But a petitioning creditor is not allowed to set-off his debt against costs. See In re a Debtor (1).

It is pointed out in Robarts v. Buce (2) that the Master of the Rolls decided in the case of Collett v. Preston (3) that where the proceedings were different, one being an action at law on a covenant, and the other a suit in equity, there could not be set-off. "That is in accordance with sound sense, and the distinction there taken was recognised by Vice-Chancellor Wood in the case of Throckmarten v. Crowley (4), where set-off was allowed in regard to costs arising in the same suit, but not allowed where the costs had arisen in matters which were different." According to these decisions, Mangiah Chetty is clearly not entitled to set-off his debt against the costs payable by him.

We agree with the learned Judge and dismiss the appeal with taxed costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1907) 2 K. B. 896.
(2) 8 Ch. D. 198 at p. 200; 47 L. J. Ch. 414; 26 W. R. 393.
(3) 15 Beav. 458; 92 R. R. 507.
(4) 3 Eq. 196.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL NO. 74 OF 1910.
June 19, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

KANTA LAIK—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

LACHMAN OJHA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Decree for arrears of rent—Sale in execution—Purchaser to acquire property free from incumbrances—Decree should be one for arrears due in respect of under-tenure—Single decree obtained for rents of two tenures—Sale in execution of such decree—Rights of purchaser—Rent Recovery Act (X of 1859), s. 105—Sale of Under-tenures Act (VIII of 1865 B. C.), ss. 4, 6, 16.

Section 4 of Bengal Act VIII of 1865 makes it essential in order that the purchaser may acquire the property free from all incumbrances under section 16, that the decree under execution should be one for arrears of rent due in respect of the under-tenure brought to sale.

If a single decree is obtained for arrears of rent of two distinct tenures, it operates as a decree for money when in execution thereof either tenure is brought to sale.

Hridoy Nath Das v. Krishna Prosad Sircar, 11 C. W. N. 497; 34 C. 298; 6 C. L. J. 153; Baikanta Nath Roy v. Thakur Debendro Nath Sahi, 11 C. W. N. 676; Nanda Lal v. Sadhu Charan, 7 C. L. J. 96; Bipra Das v. Rajaram, 3 Ind. Cas. 306; 13 C. W. N. 651; 36 C. 365; Mulluk Chand Das v. Satish Chandra Das, 3 Ind. Cas. 306; 11 C. L. J. 56; 14 C. W. N. 335, and Rash Mohini Dasi v. Debendra Nath Sinha, 13 Ind. Cas. 604; 16 C. W. N. 395, relied upon.

The rent is not regarded as due from the person against whom the decree is obtained, but is due in respect of the tenure.

Sham Chand Kundu v. Brojonath Pal Chowdhry, 21 W. R. 94; 12 B. L. R. 484, referred to.

Therefore, if the landlord seeks to recover by the sale of a tenure, not merely arrears due therefor, but an additional sum not realisable in respect of that tenure, the purchaser at the execution sale does not acquire the special status mentioned in section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 B. C.

Appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Manbhum, dated the 12th October 1909.

Babus Dwarka Nath Mitter and Mohini Mohan Chatterjee, for the Appellant.

Babus Dwarka Nath Chakrabutty and Jnanendra Nath Sarkar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The substantial question in controversy between the parties to this litigation, relates to the true effect of an execution sale held on the 7th April 1902. The events antecedent to that sale may be briefly narrated. Prior to the year 1870, three brothers Chatradhar, Godadhar and Sarobar were in joint possession of the disputed properties on a jagir tenure under the Raja of Pachete. In 1878, default was made in the payment of rent, and on the 15th July of that year, the jagir was sold in execution of a rent-decree at the instance of the landlord, and was purchased by himself. Three suits for reversal of the sale were then commenced by the tenants, each in respect of a third share of the property. The suit of Chatradhar abated, while those commenced by Godhadhar and Sarobar were dismissed by the Court of first instance on the 30th September 1893. Upon appeal to this Court, these two suits were decreed on the 2nd March 1896. The Raja appealed to the Judicial Committee only against the decree in the suit of Godadhar. Upon the death of Godadhar, shortly after the decree of this Court, that appeal was contested by his brother Sarobar in whom his interest had vested by survivorship ; on the 9th December 1899, the decision of this Court was reversed by the Judicial Committee in Tara Lal v. Sarobar (1). The ultimate result of the litigations, therefore, was that, in so far as Chatradhar and Godadhar were concerned, the Raja of Pachete became the owner of their interest in the tenure ; but the tenure continued in operation in respect of the interest of Sarobar. Meanwhile, default had again been made in payment of rent, and, on the 6th March 1901 the Raja obtained a decree for rent of the years 1896 and 1898 for the two shares of the tenure originally belonging to Godadhar and Sarobar. That decree was subsequently executed and the present appellant became the purchaser at the execution sale held on the 7th April 1902. His contention is that the effect of the sale is to annul all incumbrances created on the property by the tenure-holder. This position has been negatived by the Court below; in our opinion, that decision cannot be successfully challenged.

KANTA LAIK v. LACHMAN OJHA.

It was finally determined by the Judicial Committee on the 9th December 1899 that the interest of Godadhar had vested in the Raja of Pachete ; consequently, after that date, it was not open to the Raja as landlord to sue for arrears of rent in respect of that share, though he might possibly have claimed mesne profits. The decree obtained by the Raja on the 6th March 1901 was thus essentially a decree for arrears of rent of the share of the tenure still held by Sarobar and for damages for use and occupation of the share of the tenure once held by Godadhar. In execution of this decree, the third share of the tenure owned by Sarobar was brought to sale. The question thus arises whether this was a sale under section 105 of Act X of 1859 read with section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 B. C.

Section 105 of Act X of 1859 provides that if the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-tenure, which by the title deeds or the custom of the country is transferable by sale, the judgment-creditor may make application for the sale of the tenure, and the tenure may thereupon be brought to sale in execution of the decree according to the rules for the sale of under-tenures for the recovery of arrears of rent due in respect thereof contained in any law for the time being in force. Section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 B. C. then provides that the purchaser of an under-tenure sold under the Act shall acquire it free from all incumbrances which may have accrued thereon by any act of any holder of the said under tenure, his representatives, or assignees, unless the right of making such incumbrances shall have been expressly vested in the holder by the written engagement under which the under-tenure was created or by the subsequent written authority of the person who created it, his representatives or assignees. This section has to be read with section 4 which provides that whenever a decree for an arrear of rent, due in respect of an under-tenure saleable under the provisions of section 105 of Act X of 1859, shall have been obtained and an application for the sale of the said under-tenure under the same section shall have been made and allowed, the Collector shall thereupon cause certain notices to be served. This section, therefore, makes it essential, in order that the purchaser may acquire the property free from all incumbrances under section 16 that the decree under execution should be one for arrears of rent due in respect of the under-tenure brought to sale. In the case before us, the decree executed against one-third share of the tenure, the property of Sarobar, was not only for arrears of rent due on account of that share, but also for a sum due in respect of the share of Godadhar, which had finally vested in the landlord himself. Consequently, it is plain, upon a construction of section 105 of Act X of 1859 and sections 4 and 16 of Act VIII of 1865 B. C., that the purchaser has not taken the property free from all incumbrances. This view is supported by the terms of section 6 of Act VIII of 1865 B. C., which describes the procedure whereby the sale may be stopped. If the sum due under the decree together with interest to date of payment and all costs of process be paid into Court, at any time before the sale commences, whether by the defaulting holder of the under-tenure or any one on his behalf or any one interested in the protection of the under-tenure, such sale shall not take place, and the provisions of section 13 of Regulation VIII of 1819 for the recovery of sums paid by other than the defaulting holder of the under-tenure to stay the sale of the under-tenure, shall be applicable to all similar payments made under the section. It is fairly clear, therefore, that the payment contemplated by this section is payment of arrears due in respect of the under-tenure sought to be brought to sale. It was never contemplated by the Legislature that the person who seeks relief under section 6 might be called upon to pay the arrears due in respect of not only the tenure sought to be brought to sale but also some other property. To put the matter briefly, if a single decree is obtained for arrears of rent of two distinct tenures, it operates as a decree for money when in execution thereof either tenure is brought to sale; this view is supported by a long series of decisions: Hridoy Nath Das v. Krishna Prosid Sircar (2), Baikanta Nath Roy v. Thakur Debendro Nath Sahi (3), Nanda Lal v. Sadhu Charan (4), Bipra Das v. Rajaram (5), Mulluk Chand Das v. Satish Chandra Das (6) and Rash Mohini Dasi v. Debendra Nath Sinha (7). The contention of the appellant to the contrary is opposed to the fundamental principle that the purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent, under section 16 of Act VIII of 1865, B. C., acquires the property free of all incumbrances, only because the sum sought to be realised forms a first charge on that property. As was observed by Sir Richard Couch, C. J., in the case of Sham Chand Kundu v. Brojonath Pal Chowdhry (8), the rent is not regarded as due from the person against whom the decree is obtained but is due in respect of the tenure. If, therefore, the landlord seeks to recover by the sale of a tenure, not merely arrears due therefor, but an additional sum not realisable in respect of that tenure, the purchaser at the execution sale does not acquire the special status mentioned in section 16 of Act VIII of 1865, B. C. Consequently, the purchaser in the present case is not entitled to the privileges assigned to a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent under that section. We may finally observe that even if the purchaser could claim the status of a purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent, there would still be considerable difficulty in his way, because the incumbrance he seeks to annul by right of his purchase on the 7th April 1902 is not an encumbrance imposed on the property by the defaulter; it is admittedly a putni created more than twelve years before on the 16th January 1879 by the superior landlord during the time he was in possession as owner, after his purchase at the sale of the 15th July 1873 and before its partial reversal by this Court.

(1) 27 C. 407; 27 I. A. 33; 4 C. W. N. 533.

The result is that the decree of the Subordinate Judge is affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(2) 34 C. 298; 6 C. L. J. 153; 11 C. W. N. 497.
(3) 11 C. W. N. 676.
(4) 7 C. L. J. 96.
(5) 13 C. W. N. 650; 36 C. 765; 3 Ind. Cas. 306.
(6) 11 C. L. J. 56; 3 Ind. Cas. 306; 14 C. W. N. 335.
(7) 16 C. W. N. 395; 13 Ind. Cas. 604.
(8) 21 W. R. 94; 12 B. L. R. 484.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1609 OF 1911.

October 7, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

NEELAGARA LINGAMMA—APPELLANT

versus

KINNAHAL HAMPIAH—RESPONDENT.

Possessory tittle—Suit for recovery of land—Right of suit against person having no title.

A person, who has merely a possessory title to land, is entitled to a decree for possession against a person who has no title.

Second appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Bellary, in A. S. No.

219 of 1910, preferred against that of the District Munsif of Bellary, in O. S. No. 159 of 1909.

Mr. S. Ranganatha Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. Prakasam, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—It is first contended that the plaintiff had no title to recover the land at the time of the institution of the suit, and that the subsequent execution of a sale-deed in his favour would not entitle him to maintain the suit. But the plaintiff had an unregistered sale-deed in 1901 and we take the finding of the Subordinate Judge to mean that, after he got that sale-deed, he was in possession of the land by leasing it out to others until dispossessed by the defendant. He had, therefere, a possessory title which was sufficient to entitle him to a decree for possession against the 1st defendant who had no title.

It is next argued that plaintiff ought not to have been allowed to amend his plaint by adding a prayer for possession.

We do not think there are sufficient grounds to interfere with the discretion of the lower Appellate Court in allowing the amendment.

The last point relates to the award of damages to the plaintiff. According to the plaintiff, he was not able to cultivate the land owing to the defendant's obstruction. According to the defendant, he was himself in possession of the land and was cultivating it. In either case, the plaintiff is entitled to damages. We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 259 TO 262 OF 1905.

March 5, 1907.

Present:—Sir Francis Maclean, KT., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Fletcher.

BIPRODAS PAL CHAUDHRI—PATNIDAR, CLAIMANT—APPELLANT

versus

SARAT CHANDRA SINGHA AND OTHERS—ZEMINDARS, CLAIMANTS—RESPONDENTS.

*Land Acquisition—Apportionment of compensation money—*Zemindar and patnidar—No abatement of rent for acquisition of land within patni tenure—Compensation, whole of, to go to patnidar—Chance of patni coming to end, monetary value of.

Where the terms of a patni lease debar the patnidar from claiming any abatement of rent on account of diminution of his tenure by reason of compulsory acquisition, he is entitled to the whole compensation money. It is difficult to appreciate the monetary value of the chance of the patni lease coming to an end by sale or forfeiture.

Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee, 30 C. 801; 7 C. W. N. 810, referred to.

Appeals from the decrees of the District Judge of Nadia, dated the 4th April 1905.

Babu Amarendra Nath Bose, for the Appellant.

Babu Soroshi Charan Mitra, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

MACLEAN, C. J.—This case arises under the Land Acquisition Act, and the dispute is as to how the compensation money is to be apportioned between the zemindar and the patnidar whose rent is not liable to enhancement. It appears that under the terms of the patni pattah, if any portion of the land comprised in the pattah is taken by Government under the Land Acquisition Act, still the patnidar is to go on paying the same rent to the zemindar. It appears that some 20 bighas of land were taken by Government. The patnidar used to pay rent for this land at the modest rate of 2 annas a bigha which would bring the total rent to something between Rs. 2 and Rs. 3 a year. This rent the zemindar still continues to get under the terms of the contract with the patnidar: and so, he has lost nothing. In cases like this, the Court has to find out, in making its apportionment, as was pointed out in the case of Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee (1), what are the respective interests of the zemindar on the one hand and of the patnidar on the other. As I have pointed out, the zemindar here loses nothing by the fact of the land having been taken by Government, as the patnidar has still to go on paying the rent. The only thing of which he could be said to have been deprived is the chance of the patni lease coming to an end by sale or forfeiture. But there is no evidence as to the pecuniary value of such a chance and for the simplest of all reasons that it is difficult to appreciate what the monetary value would be. In these circumstances, the learned District Judge has divided the compensation money equally between the zemindar and the patnidar. That was, as I have already remarked, a somewhat rough and ready method of dealing with the matter which has not met with the approval of subsequent decisions. It seems to me in this matter that the zemindar has lost nothing: the property is really the property of the patnidar being held upon a permanent lease at a fixed rent not liable to enhancement and the only interest the landlord has now in it is the chance to which I have referred, the monetary value of which it is difficult to appreciate. I think, therefore, that the view of the District Judge is wrong and that the patnidar is entitled, in the circumstances, to the whole compensation money.

(1) 30 C. 801; 7 C. W. N. 810.

The decrees of the lower Court must, therefore, be reversed and the patnidar, the appellant, be paid the whole compensaction money.

The appellant is entitled to his costs in all the appeals. We assess the hearing fee in No. 259 at three gold mohurs and in each of the three other cases at one gold mohur.

FLETCHER, J.—I agree.

Appeals allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1074 OF 1911.

August 15, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

GOVINDA MUDELEY AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

R. MUTHUSAWMY PILLAY—RESPONDENT.

Document, execution of—Executant executing document as guardian of another—Liability of person for whom guardian acts—Recital in document as to guardianship, whether necessary.

Where a document is in fact executed by a person for himself and asguardian of another, it is not necessary, to render the latter liable, that the executant should describe himself as the guardian of the person who is sought to be bound by it.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of North Arcot, dated 28th February 1911, in Appeal Suit No. 10 of 1911, presented against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Tirupati, in Original Suit No. 252 of 1908.

FACTS.—This was a suit upon a simple bond executed by the 1st defendant, the undivided father of the 2nd defendant, in favour of one Manonmani Ammal on behalf of her sons, Subramania Pillai and Thangavelu Pillay, then minors. The bond was since assigned over to the plaintiff by Subramania Pillai under Exhibit G aforesaid after he attained his majority, his younger brother, Thangavelu, being of unsound mind.

The District Munsif dismissed the suit holding that the plea of discharge set up by the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was proved and that the suit was further barred by limitation.

On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed the Munsif's decree.

The defendants preferred a second appeal to the High Court.

Mr. N. Rajagopalachariar, for the Appellants.

Mr. A. Krishnaswami Aiyar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The chief question argued in second appeal is that, under Exhibit G the share of Subramania Pillai's insane brother was not transferred to plaintiff. The executant, Subramania Pillai, it is true, does not describe himself as making the transfer as guardian of his brother. The Subordinate Judge has found that, as a matter of fact, he made the transfer both on behalf of himself and on behalf of his brother. This finding is borne out by Exhibit G itself to a certain extent. The bond transferred is referred to; it was in fact in favour of both Subramania Pillay and his brother. Part of the consideration for the transfer is stated to be due by Manonmani Ammal, that is really by both the brothers as the money was due from Manonmani Ammal as guardian of both. The whole amount of the bond due to both the brothers is transferred. No authority has been cited to show that it is necessary that the executant should describe himself as guardian of a person who is sought to be bound by the bond.

It is argued that, in arriving at the finding that the bond was not discharged, the lower Appellate Court omitted to consider Exhibit I and that if that document had been considered the Sub-Judge might not have found Exhibits IV and V to be forgeries, but we find nothing in Exhibit I that would throw any light on the genuineness or otherwise of Exhibits IV and V. We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 367, 382 AND 383 OF 1907.

March 1, 1910.

Present:—Mr. Justice Brett and Mr. Justice Sharf-ud-din.

Raja RAM RANJAN CHAKRAVARTI BAHADUR—Zemindar CLAIMANT—APPELLANT

versus

BUNWARI LAL MITTER AND OTHERS—Patnidars CLAIMANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Land acquisition—Apportionment of compensation money—Zemindar and patnidar—No abatement of rent for acquisition of land within patni tenure—Compensation, whole of, to go to patnidar.

Where there is no abatement of rent by the landlord to the patnidar in respect of lands within the patni, acquired by the Government, the landlord is entitled to no portion of the compensation.

Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee, 30 C. 801; 7 C. W. N. 810, followed.

Appeals from the decrees of the District Judge of Birbhum, dated the 19th July 1907.

Babus Sivaprasanna Bhattacharya and Joy Gopal Ghosha, for the Appellant.

Babu Khetra Mohan Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In our opinion, these three appeals must fail. The question which the lower Court had to determine in these cases was what was the proportion in which the landlord and the patnidar were entitled to receive the compension money. The lower Court, following the principle, which has been laid down by this Court in the case of Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee (1), has held that, as there was no abatement of rent by the landlord to the patnidar in respect of the land acquired, the landlord is entitled to no portion of the compensation. The learned Pleader for the appellant has invited us to a lengthy discussion of the cases which were fully considered in the case above referred to, but we think that no useful purpose will be served by employing our time in such a consideration. In our opinion, the view taken by the learned Judges in the case on which the District Judge has relied is correct and it has been followed by this Court ever since that judgment was delivered. In these circumstances, we see no reason to hold that the view taken by the lower Court is not correct. We, therefore, dismiss all the three appeals with costs. We assess the hearing fee at three gold mohurs in Appeal No. 367 and at one gold mohur in each of the two Appeals Nos. 382 and 383.

Appeals dismissed.

(1) 30 C. 801; 7 C. W. N. 810.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 586 OF 1911.

July 30, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

SHIVRAM NARSINGRAO—APPELLANT

versus

MAHADEV NARAYAN KULKARNI—RESPONDENT.

Hereditary Offices (Vatan) Act (Bom. Act III of 1874), s. 5—Vatan—Sale in execution—Collector levying full assessment—Character of land not charged—Right of auction-purchaser—Right of next holder after death of judgment-debtor—Limitation.

Certain vatan land was sold in 1872 in execution of a decree against the holder of the vatan and purchased by A. Because of the Court-sale, the Collector levied the full assessment and assigned it for remuneration for service:

Held, (1) that the land did not lose its character as vatan property merely because the Collector levied full assessment and altered the mode of remuneration;

(2) that A. merely took the right, title and interest of his judgment-debtor, and on the death of the latter, his right under the Court-sale ceased;

(3) that, consequently, the next holder of the vatan became entitled to the property and could recover it within 12 years from the death of the previous holder.

A vatan continues in that character even when the Gordon Settlement has been applied to it and service has ceased to be demanded as a consequence of the Settlement.

Second appeal from the decision of the District Judge of Satara, in Appeal No. 107 of 1910, confirming that passed by the Subordinate Judge of Karas, in Civil Suit No. 141 of 1909.

Mr. K. N. Koyajee, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. S. Rao, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Courts below have held that the land in dispute ceased to be vatan after the Collector had levied the full amount of assessment on it and assigned that amount as remuneration for service. But there is no provision in the Vatan Act or any other law to support that view. It has been held by this Court that a vatan continues in that character even when the Gordon Settlement has been applied to it and service has ceased to be demanded as a consequence of that Settlement: Appaji Bapuji v. Keshav Shamrav (1) and Bhau v. Ramchandrarao (2). In the present case, it is conceded by the learned Pleader for the respondent, and indeed the Courts below have found, that the land in dispute had been vatan before in 1872; it was sold by the Court to the defendant in execution of a decree against the person who was then the holder of the vatan. The Collector levied the full assessment and assigned it for remuneration for service because of the Court-sale. But the land as vatan did not lose its character merely because the Collector altered the mode of remuneration.

If, then, the land continued as vatan after the Court-sale in favour of the defendant, he took merely the right, title and interest of his judgment-debtor and on the death of the latter in 1905, his right under the Court-sale ceased. It was then that the plaintiff as the next holder of the vatan became entitled to the property and this suit brought within twelve years from 1905 is in time. That is in accordance with Radhabai v. Anantrav Bhagvant Deshpande (3) and Ramgauda bin Hirgauda v. Gopal Sadashiv (4).

Decree reversed and claim awarded with costs throughout on respondent.

Decree reversed.

(1) 15 B. 13.
(2) 20 B. 423 at p. 427.
(3) 9 B. 198.
(4) (1898) P. J. 30.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 521 OF 1910.

July 24, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Holmwood.

Rai GANPAT SINGH BAHADUR AND ANOTHER—Zemindar, CLAIMANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MOTI CHAND AND OTHERS—Patnidar, CLAIMANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Land Acquisition—Apportionment of compensation—Lands in patni—Transferee of patni tenure—Non-registration of name in zemindar's book, effect of—Zemindar not allowing abatement of rent to patnidar —Claim to portion of compensation money—Chance of forfeiture of patni—Remoteness—If chance may be valued.

The rights of a transferee of a patni are perfected upon the transfer by the patnidar, and are not in any way contingent for their validity upon the payment of the fee and the security under section 6, paragraph 1, of the Patni Regulation.

Joykrishna Mukhopadhya v. Sarfannessa, 15 C. 345 and Chunder Pershad Roy v. Shuvadra Kumari, 12 C. 622, relied upon.

Luckhinarain Mitter v. Khettro Pal SinyhRoy, 20 W.R. 380 (C. P.); 24 W. R. 407 note; 13 L. R R. (P. C.) 146, referred to.

The only effect of his failure to secure registration of his name by the payment of the fee and the security, is that the landlord is not bound to recognise his purchase, and may sell up his tenure in execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained against the registered tenant.

Matangini Choudhurani v. Sreenath Das, 7 C. W. N. 552, relied upon.

Mangal Das v. Dhunput Singh, 25 W. R. 152, dissented from.

Therefore, where lands included in a patni tenure are acquired by the Government, the purchaser of the patni tenure is entitled to claim the compensation money even though he has not registered his name in the books of the zemindar.

A zemindar is not entitled to any share of the compensation money when he has not allowed any abatement of rent to the patnidar.

Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee, 30 C. 801 at p. 807; 7 C. W.N. 810, relied upon.

Godadhar Dass v. Dhunput Singh, 7 C. 585; 9 C. L. R. 227 and Khetter Kristo Mitter v. Dinendra Narain Ray, 3 C. W. N. 202 not followed.

Raye Kissory Dassee v. Nilcant Dey, 20 W. R. 370, Biprodas Pal Chowdhury v. Sarat Chandra Singha, 11 C. W. N. cli (s. N.); 16 C. L. J. 209; 17 Ind Cas. 168 and Raja Ram Ranjan Chakrabarty v. Bunwari Lal Mitter, 14 C. W. N. cxxii (s. N.); 16 C. L. J. 211; 17 Ind. Cas. 170, followed.

The chance of forfeiture of the patni is very remote and it was held that the zemindar in the present case wholly failed to establish the value of this remote chance of possible loss.

Appeal from the decree of the first Sub-Judge of Bhagalpore, dated August 11th, 1910.

GANPAT SINGH BAHADUR v. MOTI CHAND.

Babus Dasarathi Sanyal and Debendra Narain Bhattacharji, for the Appellants.

Babu Tarakeswar Pal Chowdhury, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the zemindars in proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act for apportionment of compensation money. The dispute is between the zemindars and the patnidars as to the mode in which the apportionment is to be effected. The Subordinate Judge has awarded the entire compensation money to the patnidars on the ground that as the zemindars have not allowed any abatement of rent on account of the land acquired, they are not entitled to a share of the compensation money. On behalf of the zemindars, it is argued in this Court, first, that as the patnidars did not get themselves registered in the book of the zemindars under the provisions of the Patni Regulation of 1819, their title has not been perfected and they are, consequently, not entitled to claim any portion of the compensation money; and secondly, that although no abatment of rent has been allowed by the zemindars to the patnidars, yet the zemindars are entitled to a share of the compensation money. In our opinion, there is no foundation for either of these contentions.

In so far as the first point is concerned, section 3 of the Patni Regulation of 1819 makes a patni tenure capable of being transferred by sale, gift or otherwise at the discretion of the holder in the same manner as other real property. Section 5 provides for the registration of the name of the purchaser in the books of the landlords. The landlord may demand a fee and security and he is entitled to refuse to give effect to the transfer till such fee and security have been paid; this is clear from the first paragraph of section 6. But it cannot be maintained that the omission to pay the fee and the security affects in any way the title of the purchaser. His rights are perfected upon the transfer by the patnidar and are not in any way contingent for their validity upon the payment of the fee and the security. This view is supported by the cases of Joykrishna Mukhopadhya v. Sarfannessa (1) and Chunder Pershad Roy v. Shuvadra Kumari Shaheba (2).

(1) 15 C. 345.
(2) 12 C. 622.

Reference may also be made to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Luckhi Narain Mitter v Khetro Pal Singh Roy (3). In that case, a dar-patnidar had paid money to save the patni from sale. He subsequently claimed a refund and the question arose whether the claim was affected by his omission to register his name in the office of the superior landlord. It was ruled by this Court [Khetter Paul Singh v. Luckhee Narain Mitter (4)] that his title had been perfected and he was entitled to a refund, notwithstanding that his name had not been registered in the office of the superior holder. The only effect of his failure to secure registration of his name is that the landlord is not bound to recognise his purchase and may sell up his tenure in execution of a decree for arrears of rents obtained against the registered tenant. Substantially the same view was taken in the case of a permanent tenure in Matangini Choudhurani v. Sreenath Das (5) and the contrary opinion, implied in Gossain Mungal Das v. Baboo Roy Dhunput Singh Bahadur (6), cannot be regarded as good law. In other words, as observed in the case of Okhoy Coomar Chatterjee v. Dhiraj Mahtab Chund, The Maharajah of Burdwan (7), the status of a patnidar or dar-patnidar does not depend upon the registration or consent of the zemindar. The patnidars in the present case are, consequently, entitled to a share in the compensation money.

In so far as the second point is concerned; it has been broadly contended that the zemindars are entitled to a share of the compensation money even though they have not allowed any abatement of rent to the patindars. In support of this view, reference has been made to the cases of Gadadhar Dass v. Dhunput Singh (8) and Khetter Kristo Mitter v. Dinendra Narain Roy (9). In the case of Dinendra Narain Roy v. Sitaram Mukerjee (10), it was pointed out, however, that the observations of Sir Richard Garth, C. J., in the case of Gadadhar Dass v. Dhunput Singh

(3) 20 W. R. 380; 24 W. R. 407 note; 13 L. R. (P.C.) 146.
(4) 15 W. R. 125.
(5) 7 C. W. N. 522.
(6) 25 W. R. 152.
(7) 22 W. R. 299.
(8) 7 C. 585; 9 C. L. R. 227.
(9) 3 C. W. N. 202.
(10) 30 C. 801 at p. 807; 7 C. W. N. 810.

SREE KANTA PERSHAD v. IRSHAD ALI SARKAR.

(8), which were followed in Khetter Kristo v. Dinendra Narain (9), were obiter dicta and were not binding upon this Court. It has not been seriously questioned that the view that the compensation money should be divided in equal halves between the zemindars and patnidars notwithstanding the fact that the zemindars, have not allowed any abatement of rent to the patnidars, cannot be maintained on principle. It has not also been disputed that the view militates against the decisions in Raye Kissory Dassee v. Nilcant Day (11); Biprodas Pal Chaudhury v. Sarat Chandra Singha (12) and Raja Ram Ranjan Chakrabarty v. Bunwari Lal Mitter (13). If we look at the matter as one of principle, it becomes manifest that the claim of the zemindars is clearly unfounded. The compensation money in the hand of the Collector represents the value of the land acquired by the State. That sum has to be distributed amongst the holders of interests of different degrees in the land acquired. Each claimant can prove the value of his interest, in other words, the measure of the loss sustained by him by the acquisition, and when he does this, he becomes entitled to a proportionate share of the compensation money. If the zemindars allow an abatement of rent to the patnidars, the rent abated primarily represents their annual loss, and they may reasonably claim out of the compensation money the capitalised value of that rent. But if they do not allow any abatement of rent, if they recover from the patnidars the whole of the original rent, although the latter have lost the income derivable from the acquired portion of the land, what is the measure of their loss? Plainly, they do not suffer any immediate loss by reason of the acquisition. It has been ingeniously suggested, however, that although the rent is not abated, the zemindars may in certain events suffer loss; namely, their security for the rent is diminished in value and if the perpetual lease is ever forfeited, they will get back a smaller quantity of land than what was comprised in the original tenancy. This chance of forfeiture is indisputably very remote, indeed. Whether under the terms of the patni in the present case it can ever be at all forfeited is by no means certain. But even if it be assumed that there may be a forfeiture of the patni in certain contingencies, the zemindars have wholly failed to establish the value of this remote chance of possible loss; they are, consequently, not entitled to any share of the compensation money.

The result is that the decree of the Court below is affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs. We assess the hearing-fee at two gold mohurs.

Appeal dismissed.

(11) 20 W. R. 370.
(12) 16 C. L. J. 209; 11 C. W. N. cli; 17 Ind. Cas. 168.
(13) 16 C. L. J. 211; 17 Ind. Cas. 170; 14 C. W. N. cxxii.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO 47 OF 1893.
March 19, 1894.
Present:—Mr. Justice Norris and Mr. Justice Banerjee.

SREE KANTA PERSHAD HAJARI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
IRSHAD ALI SARKAR—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 52, cl. (c), 74—Abatement of rent—Land left uncultivated for embankment—Payment of rent in full—Abatement to be claimed in subsequent years—Stipulation for presents and free labour besides rent, illegality of—ABWAB.

A claim for abatement of rent does not come within the purview of section 52, clause (c), of the Bengal Tenancy Act, where the remission is claimed not on account of land not found in the possession of the tenant, but on account of land which, though included in his tenure, he was obliged to leave uncultivated on account of the necessity of having to erect embankments to protect other land, and remission for land so left out is provided for in the written contract between the parties.

Prima faice, the tenant is entitled to remission for all the years for which the land had been so left uncultivated. But when the tenant has paid the rent in full without any abatement for a certain period, he is not entitled to remission for that period, but is entitled to abatement only in respect of the subsequent years for which rent has been claimed by the plaintiff.

In a kabuliat, the fixed rent mentioned was Rs. 360. Then there was an additional item under the heading of "price of presents and unpaid labour" amounting to Rs. 17-4. These two sums were added together and put down as amounting to Rs. 377-4 under the heading of "total rent". The kabuliat then provided:—

SREE KANTA PERSHAD v. IRSHAD ALI SARKAR.

"Besides, I shall every year, at the time of the Durga Puja, give you four goats as presents and shall supply you labour without wages for five days, which if I fail to do, I shall have no objection to your realising the sum of Rs. 17-4, the price of the said presents and labour, in addition to the amount of rent."

Held, that the sum of Rs. 17-4, which was the money equivalent of the presents and labour, was in the nature of an imposition in addition to the actual rent within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and could not be recovered.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Chittagong, dated the 5th September 1892, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge of Chittagong, dated the 25th February 1892.

Moulvis Serajul Islam and Mahomed Habibulla, for the Appellant.

Babus Hem Chandra Banerjee and Akhi Chandra Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit for arrears of rent for the years 1250, 1251 and 1252 Maghi, based on a kabuliat. The defence, so far as it is necessary to consider it for the purposes of this appeal, was that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything on account of bhet and begar, that is, presents and labour, as the items claimed under this head were in the nature of abwabs; that he was not entitled to claim anything on account of road fund; that he was not entitled to recover anything as damages, and that the defendant was entitled to abatement of rent on account of the area that was occupied by embankments or had to be left out on account of the erection of the embankments.

The first Court allowed some of these objections and decreed the claim of the plaintiff in part. Against the first Court's decree both parties, appealed; and the learned Judge below has modified the decree of the first Court and given the plaintiff a decree in modification of the claim.

Against that decree of the lower Appellate Court, the plaintiff has preferred this appeal, and the defendant has raised certain objections, under section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The points argued on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant are these:—namely, first, that the Court of Appeal below ought not to have given any effect to the clause in the kabuliat with reference to remission of rent in regard to the years for which rent had been paid in full, but should have limited the effect of that clause to the years for which rent was claimed; second, that the Court of Appeal below was wrong in allowing remission on account of an area of 13 kanis odd; third, that the Court of Appeal below ought to have allowed interest at the rate stipulated for in the kabuliat; and fourth, that what was claimed on account of road fund should have been allowed: and the objections urged on behalf of the defendant-respondent under section 561 are these, namely, first, that the Courts below ought to have disallowed the claim for bhet and begar, presents and labour, amounting to 17 rupees 4 annas a year; second, that the decree of the lower Appellate Court has erroneously allowed the plaintiff damages although the judgment distinctly disallowed the same; and third, that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have made the defendant liable for the whole of the Amin's costs.

We shall consider the points urged in the plaintiff's appeal first, and then those urged by the defendant by way of cross-objections.

As to the first point urged on behalf of the plaintiff; the learned Judge in his judgment observes: "The wording of section 52 (b) of Act VIII of 1885 leads me to believe that the rents for 1249 M. S. and backward having been paid, the reduction is operative for the years in suit and those years only but such a result seems somewhat hard on the defendant in view of the conditions of the tenancy;" and then towards the close of his judgment, he says "the abatement will take effect from 1246 M. S., there being a running account between the parties." We think the learned Judge is wrong in the view that he has taken of this matter. We may observe that the claim for abatement of rent in this case does not come within the purview of section 52, clause (b). Remission is here claimed not on account of land not found in the possession of the tenant, but on account of land which, though included in his tenure, he was obliged to leave uncultivated on account of the necessity of having to erect embankments to protect other land, and remission for land so left out is provided for in the written contract between the parties. That being so, prima facie, no doubt the defendant was entitled to remission for all the years for which the land had been so left uncultivated; but then it is admitted by the defendant himself in his written statement, paragraph 5, and it has been found by the learned Judge below, that rent for all the years down to 1249 has been paid; and what the defendant urges in support of his claim for remission is given in these words in the 5th paragraph of his written statement: "The plaintiff, on receiving the rent of the said land from the defendant, promised to remit it afterwards." A special promise to remit rent on account of the years for which rent had been paid in full, is what is here relied upon in the defence; but no such promise has been made out and the learned Judge below does not base his decision upon any such promise. We are of opinion that the only ground urged for having effect given to this stipulation in the kabuliat for remission in regard to the years for which rent had been paid in full, has not been made out, and that the defendant was, consequently, entitled to abatement only in respect of the years for which rent has been claimed.

As to the second point urged for the plaintiff; no reason has been shown to us why we should hold that the area in respect of which remission has been allowed was too large.

As to the third point, we observe that no interest was claimed in the plaint at the rate stipulated for in the kabuliat. What was claimed in the plaint was damages at the rate of twenty-five per cent., and that the learned Judge disallows, holding that this was certainly not a case where damages could be allowed for rents wilfully withheld. And then as regards the last point urged, the first Court says: "The plaintiff himself, it seems, has not got to pay anything as road fund to Government, and so he cannot realise it from the defendant." That finding does not appear to have been successfully challenged in appeal before the Judge; and we think it is too late for the plaintiff to ask us here to interfere on that point.

The plaintiff's appeal, therefore, succeeds only as to the first point, and the remission that has been allowed for the years 1246 to 1249 should be disallowed and the decree of the lower Appellate Court modified accordingly. Then, as to the defendant's cross-objections, we are of opinion that the first one is entitled to succeed. In the kabuliat, we find that the total assessable area given is 15 drones and the mokrari jama or fixed rent mentioned, is 360 rupees. Then, there is an additional item under the heading of "Price of presents and unpaid labour," amounting to 17 rupees 4 annas; and these two sums are added together and put down as amounting to 377 rupees 4 annas under the heading of "Total rent"; and it is upon the fact of the entire sum of 377 rupees 4 annas being placed under the heading of "Total rent", that the judgments of the Courts below in favour of the plaintiff are based. But in addition to this fact appearing on the face of the kabuilat, there are other parts of the document, which, in our opinion, have a very important bearing on the question before us, and those parts of the document are the following: The tenant first of all stipulates to this effect "that after paying at your zemindari sherishta the aforesaid rent from year to year according to the instalments mentioned above, I shall take dakhilas for the same. If I become a defaulter by dishonestly omitting to pay the said rent, then I shall not be competent to make any excuse or objection against your realising the rent in arrear together with interest thereon at 2 rupees 8 annas per cent. per mensem as well as costs and damages by sale of this etmami under Regulation VIII of 1819, and also by any other means provided by the laws now in force and those that may hereafter be enforced." And then the kabuliat goes on to provide: "Besides, I shall every year at the time of the Saradia (Durga) Puja give you four castrated goats as presents and shall supply you labour without wages for five days, which if I fail to do, I shall have no objection to your realising the sum of 17 rupees 4 annas as the price of the said presents and labour in addition to the amount of rent." These provisions of the kabuliat go, in our opinion, distinctly to show that what was regarded as the actual rent was the sum of 360 rupees, which, we may observe in passing, bears a clear and definite proportion to the assessable area of 15 drones; and that the sum of 17 rupees 4 annas, which was the money equivalent of the bhet and begar or presents and labour, was in the nature of an imposition in addition to the actual rent within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and must, therefore, be held to be illegal, and the stipulation for the payment of the same must be held to be void. We may further observe that not only is this distinction between the actual rent and these additional items made in the kabuliat, but it is also observed in the plaint itself, in which the plaintiff says: "The defendant having on 2nd Pous 1246 (Maghi) executed an etmami kabuliat in favour of the plaintiff, agreeing to pay annually 360 rupees as rent and 17 rupees 4 annas as the value of bhet (presents) and begar (unpaid labour), is by virtue of etmami title in possession of the land contained within the boundaries given below." There is not, therefore, in our opinion, any room for doubt that the sum of 17 rupees 4 annas claimed as part of the rent is really abwab and, therefore, not realizable.

The second contention urged on behalf of the defendants, namely, that the decree has erroneously allowed damages though the judgment has disallowed that part of the claim, must also succeed; the learned Vakil for the plaintiff-appellant does not question the correctness of the contention of the defendant.

As to the third point urged by the defendant; we think that must fail. It was quite in the discretion of the lower Appellate Court to have apportioned the costs of the amin in any way it thought proper, and in the exercise of that discretion the lower Appellate Court has considered it fit to make the defendant liable for it. The part of the judgment we do not think we ought to interfere with on second appeal.

The cross-objections, therefore, succeed in regard to the item of 17 rupees 4 annas, which we disallow as abwab and also in regard to the amount of 237 rupees 5 annas 6 pies, which has been erroneously allowed in the decree as damages.

The result then is that both the appeal and the cross-objections succeed in part, and the decree must be modified accordingly; but under the circumstances, we make no order as to the costs of this appeal.

Appeal and cross-objection allowed in part.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 200 OF 1903.

July 22, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

KONDU KANHUJI DHAVDE—APPELLANT

versus

VISHNU MORESHVAR BHAT—RESPONDENT.

Construction of deed—Transfer—Sale—Contract of sale—Registered deed—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 54—Registration Act (III of 1877), ss. 17 (b) (c), 44.

Whether a registered deed has the effect of creating a sale must depend on the circumstances of the case.

Words of conveyance are not absolutely necessary to create a transfer. All depends on the intention and acts of the parties.

Two persons entered into a transaction which they embodied in a deed of sale. The deed was described as a contract of sale but it was registered and it distinctly provided that on certain events happening, the property should be regarded as sold to the vendee. The vendee was put in possession of the property in consequence of the registered deed:

Held, that there was a transfer in consequence and by operation of the registered deed when the conditions of the deed were fulfilled.

Second appeal from the decision of the Joint First Class Subordinate Judge, at Poona, in Appeals Nos. 100 and 107 of 1905, varying that passed by the Subordinate Judge of Poona, in Civil Suit No. 268 of 1903.

Mr. G. S. Rao, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. V. Vidwans, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The Transfer of Property Act provides that in the case of a sale of immoveable property of the value of Rs. 100 or more, the transfer shall be only by a registered deed. Whether in any particular case there being a registered deed, that deed has the effect of creating the transfer contemplated by the Legislature must depend upon the circumstances of the case. Words of conveyance, it has been held, are not absolutely necessary to create a transfer. All depends upon the intention and acts of the parties. Now, in the present case, what the parties did was that they entered into a transaction, which they embodied in a deed. That deed, no doubt, is described as a contract of sale, but it was also registered, and it distinctly provided that on certain events happening the property should be regarded as sold to the vendee. And we have on the evidence the fact found by the Court below that it was in consequence of this registered deed that the vendee was put into possession of the property, so that we have here a registered deed which has, as a matter of fact, taken effect as transfer. The only question is whether it has that effect in law. That is a question of fact and it has been found by the Court below that there was a transfer in consequence and by operation of the registered deed in the case. On these grounds, the decree must be confirmed with costs.

Decree confirmed.

S. N. DAR ... LL. B.,
Vakil High Court,

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 2357 OF 1908.
August 1, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Holmwood.

MATHURA PRASAD AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

TOTA SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 74—Abwab—Illegal cess—Construction of kabulyat—Claim whether part of rent.

Whether a sum claimed by the landlord is or is not an illegal cess, must depend upon the construction of the contract before the Court. If upon a fair interpretation of the terms of the contract, the sum claimed can be deemed part of the actual rent, the tenant is bound to pay it; if it can only be regarded as an imposition in addition to the actual rent, the stipulation for its payment is void.

Where throughout a lease, the yearly rent was described a certain sum assessed at a certain sum per bigha, upon the area demised, and at the end of the lease, in a clause, entirely distinct from the one wherein the rent was assessed, a provision was made for delivery of certain articles or in default their value:

Held, that the articles or their value were in the nature of an illegal cess and not recoverable from the tenant.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Bhagulpore, dated July 20th, 1908, modifying that of the Sub-Judge of that District, dated April 6th, 1908.

Babu Jogesh Chandra Dey, for the Appellants.

Babu Khetra Mohan Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the plaintiff in a suit for recovery of arrears of rent. The sole question in controversy is, whether an annual sum of Rs. 40 claimed by the plaintiff falls within the description of an illegal imposition within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The defendants hold under a lease, dated the 18th September 1877. In this instrument, the area of the land is stated to be 77 bighas, 14 cottahs and 13 dhurs, whereon rent is assessed at the rate of Rs. 3-4 a year per bigha; the total rent is stated to be Rs. 252-6-7 to be paid in one instalment in the month of Baisakh, and in the event of default of payment, to carry interest at the rate of two per cent. per month. In the concluding portion of the lease, it is further stated that the tenant would deliver annually four cart-loads of husk of wheat and gram, and that if he failed to deliver the husk according to the terms of the contract, he would pay for the price thereof at the rate of Rs. 5 per cart-load. The plaintiff claimed in the Court below the price of the four cart-loads of husk at the present market-rate, namely, Rs. 10 per cart-load. The defendant resisted the claim on the ground that this was an imposition in addition to the actual rent, within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and that, consequently, the stipulation for the payment thereof was void. The Court of first instance negatived the contention of the defendant. Upon appeal, the District Judge has taken the contrary view, on the authority of the decision in Krishna Chandra Sen v. Sushila Soondury Dassee (1). On the present appeal by the plaintiff, it has been argued that the amount claimed is part of the rent and is not an illegal cess within the meaning of section 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. After careful consideration of the arguments addressed to us on both sides, we are of opinion that the appeal ought not to succeed.

The answer to the question, whether the sum claimed by the plaintiff is or is not an illegal cess, must depend upon the construction of the contract before the Court. If, upon a fair interpretation of the terms of the contract, the sum claimed can be deemed part of the actual rent, the tenant is bound to pay it; if, on the other hand, the sum claimed can only be regarded as an imposition in addition to the actual rent, the stipulation for its payment is void. In the case before us, throughout the lease, the yearly rent is described Rs. 252-6, assessed, as already stated, at the rate of Rs. 3-4 a bigha, upon the area demised. It is only at the end of the lease, in a clause entirely distinct from the one wherein the rent is assessed, that provision is made for delivery of the husk, valued at Rs 5 per cart-load. But this additional sum of Rs. 20 is not, expressly or by implication, made part of the rent. Under section 54 of Regulation VIII of 1793, which was in force at the time when this contract was made, in order that an amount of this description might not be deemed an abwab, it was essential that it should be consolidated with the asal jama into one specified sum; and under section 55, the imposition of a new abwab under any pretence whatever, was strictly prohibited. Tested in the light of these principles, the contention of the appellant entirely fails. We may add that the view we take is supported by a series of decisions of this Court. One of the earliest cases in point is Sonnum Sookul v. Shaikh Elahee Buksh (2), where there was an agreement to deliver a prescribed quantity of molasses on every maund manufactured on the premises; it was held that the article agreed to be delivered was over and above the regular money rent paid for the land, and, consequently, fell within the description of abwab. In the case of Raj Narain Mitra v. Panna Chand Singh (3), the tenant had agreed to pay Rs. 10 annually in lieu of molasses; it was held that this amount could not be recovered, because it was neither stipulated for as part of the rent, nor included in either of the instalments in which the rent was specified to be paid. In the case of Gayratulla Sardar v. Girish Chandra Bhaumik (4), the tenant had agreed to deliver two goats at the time of the Saradya Puja or to pay three rupees as the price thereof. This obviously was a case of abwab, because it could not possibly be suggested that the goats formed an integral part of the rent. In the case of Krishna Chandra Sen v. Sushila Soonduri Dassee (1), the tenant had agreed in addition to a cash payment to deliver jack fruit, bamboos, and fish. This agreement was contained in a clause different from the one in which the rent was assessed, and the Court held that the imposition was an abwab. In this case, there was the additional feature, which does not exist in the present litigation, that whereas the rent was payable quarterly, the value of the articles deliverable was payable only annually. The decisions mentioned, thus, all clearly tend to negative the contention of the appellants. Much reliance, however, has been placed in support of the appeal upon the case of Radha Charan Roy v. Golapchandra Ghose (5). But that case is clearly distinguishable. There the amount sought to be recovered as collection charges was not only expressly made part of the rent and consolidated therewith, but the aggregate amount was distributed into various instalments expressly stated to be payable as instalments of rent. In the case before us, even if there were, upon the terms of the contract, any doubt as to the true nature of the sum sought to be recovered, that doubt would be completely removed upon an examination of the plaint In the fourth paragraph of the plaint, the plaintiff allows a deduction of Rs. 28-6 for unculturable land and seeks to recover arrears at an annual rate of Rs. 231 besides the husk; in the sixth paragraph, he asks for the principal amount of rent with cesses thereon, and the price of the husk. These two paragraphs plainly indicate that, in the opinion of the plaintiff, at any rate, the price of the husk claimed is not an integral part of the rent. The matter, however, is placed beyond all doubt when we find that the plaintiff claims cesses only upon the amount stated to be rent and not upon the amount claimed as price of husk. If the latter amount had borne the character of rent, the plaintiff would have been entitled to claim cesses thereon, and, what is more, he would have been liable to pay to the State cesses on the basis of the rent thus realized. In our opinion, the terms of the contract, as also the interpretation put thereon by the plaintiff himself, leave

(1) 26 C. 611; 3 C. W. N. 608.

(2) 7 W. R. 453.
(3) 7 C. W. N. 203; 30 C. 213.
(4) 12 C. W. N. 175.
(5) 31 C. 834; 8 C. W. N. 529.

no room for serious controversy that the sum claimed as the value of husk does not form part of the consolidated rent, but is an independent item falling within the description of an imposition in addition to the actual rent, though it may not have been specifically described in the contract or claimed in the plaint under the denomination of abwab, as was done in some of the cases in the books: [Tilukdhari Singh v. Ghulhan Mahton (6); Radha Prosad v. Balkowar Roer (7)]. The view we take is amply supported by the decision in Sreekanta Pershad v. Irshad Ali Sarkar (8), which has many features in common with the case now before us.

The result is that the decree of the District Judge is affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs. The cross-objection filed on behalf of the respondent is not pressed, and is, consequently, dismissed without costs.

Appeal and Cross-objection dismissed.

(6) 17 C. 131; 16 I. A. 152.
(7) 17 C. 726.
(8) 16 C. L. J. 225; 17 Ind. Cas. 173.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 295 AND 416 OF 1911.
September 30, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.
IN No. 295.
ITTICHERI EDATHIS SAMANTHAM OTHENAN NAMBIAR AYOTHIA RAMAN KAIMAL—APPELLANT
versus
T. V. ANANDA PISHAROTI AND OTHERS —RESPONDENTS.
IN No. 416.
THEKKEVITTIL ANANDA PISHAROTI —APPELLANT
versus
ETTISHERI EDATHIL SAMANTHAN AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Hereditary office, claim to - Nature of proof—Long possession—Presumption of right—Proof of creation of right unnecessary

In a claim for a hereditary right, the Court can infer such right from proof of long possession. Though, by itself, long possession is not sufficient to create a hereditary right, yet a presumption in favour of such right is not improper, as in most cases, proof of the creation of a hereditary right at some particular time is not to be expected.

Second appeals against the decree of the District Court of North Malabar. in A. S. No. 166 of 1910, preferred against that of the District Munsif of Cannanore, in O. S. No. 381 of 1909.

The Hon'ble Mr. J. L. Rosario (Advocate-General), for Appellant in No. 295.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, for Respondent in No. 295.

Mr. C. V. Ananthakrishna Aiyar, for Appellant in No. 416.

The Hon'ble Mr. J. L. Rosario (Advocate-General), for Respondent in No. 416.

JUDGMENT.—We cannot regard the judgment of the District Judge in this case as satisfactory. The suit is to recover the emoluments of the office of Kazhakam to which the plaintiff alleges his familly has a hereditary right and for certain other sums. The plaintiff was dismissed from the office by the Urallan of the temple. The District Munsif found that the office was hereditary in the plaintiff's family. The District Judge has reversed this finding, but has given a decree for the plaintiff for the whole amount sued for, including the emoluments of the office subsequent to the dismissal. It is quite clear on his finding that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for the claim in so far as it related to the emoluments of the Kazhakam office.

We are unable to accept the finding on the question of hereditary right. It appears clearly from Exhibit B that the plaintiff's tarwad had been in possession of the office for a period of about three-quarters of a century. There is no evidence as to the original creation of a hereditary right. Such evidence cannot be expected in most cases of claims to inferior offices of the kind in question. Long possession is not in itself sufficient to create a hereditary right; but the Court would be justified in inferring such right from possession for a long time. The District Judge was apparently under the impression that, with regard to a hereditary office, there must be "definite proof." We understand him, by that expression, to mean proof regarding the actual creation of the hereditary office at some particular time.

This is a standard of proof which it would be impossible to comply with, as already stated, in many cases. There is nothing peculiar to a hereditary office which makes a presumption from long possession improper. Exhibit B affords some indication that the office is hereditary in plaintiff's family. It provides, inter alia, for payment annually of 540 seers of paddy as interest on a sum of 1760 fanams which was found due to a member of the plaintiff's family in the year 1857 on settlement of his accounts relating to the management of the temple for some time. There is no promise to re-pay the amount on any specified date; nor is there a provision that the sum would be re-paid when the family ceased to hold the office. Mr. Sitarama Rao also relies on the fact that it is the family of Thekke Vittu that is stated in Exhibit B to be entitled to the emoluments of the office. He argues that the family, including the women and children, would not be stated to have the right to the emoluments if any particular member of the family was holding it by appointment. We cannot say that this argument is altogether without weight, although it is quite possible that a whole family may be appointed to an office to which it has no hereditary right. We think it is necessary that the question should be decided afresh. If the plaintiff succeeds in establishing that his right to the office is a hereditary one, he would be entitled to a decree for the whole amount claimed, as no attempt was made to justify his dismissal. If the right to a hereditary office is not made out, then the plaintiff cannot be entitled to the emoluments of the office, that is, 540 seers of paddy a year. He would be entitled, however, to the amount of 540 kuzhams a year for interest on the sum of 1760 fanams which was found due in 1857. The exact nature of the remaining 720 kuzhams claimed does not clearly appear. It seems to be claimed on an agreement which was based on certain special services rendered by a member of the plaintiff's tarwad to the temple. Whether the services were of such a nature as to justify an agreement binding the temple for ever, and whether there was such consideration moving from the members of the plaintiff's tarwad as to justify a promise to pay 720 kuzhams for ever, are questions which have not been properly discussed in the judgment of either of the lower Courts. We reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and remand the appeal for fresh disposal according to law with reference to the above observations. Both parties may be allowed to adduce fresh evidence on the question of the nature of the claim relating to the 720 kuzhams of paddy a year. The costs in this Court will abide the result.

We may point out that the decree to be passed in favour of the plaintiff should be against the temple.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2031 OF 1909.

June 18, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Beachcroft.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

A. H. FORBES—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Lease—Covenant for renewal—Permanency—Lease for term of years—Option of renewal—Option exercisable by lessee and his representative—Where no terms stated, lease to be renewed on former terms—Perpetual renewal—Covenant for renewal, if runs with land—Suit in ejectment—Lessee ready to accept renewal on proper terms—Covenant still specifically enforceable—Construction—Grant to be construed in favour of grantee.

A lease recited the prior settlements upon the termination of the last of which the lease was renewed at enhanced rent. It then provided that if the lessee stood in need of constructing any house, he could build on obtaining sanction therefor from the lessor, the Collector. If the lessee failed to pay rent, the Government might realise the arrear under the laws in force, and take possession of the land. The lessee, his heirs and representatives, would have the right to dwell on the land. After the expiry of the term, the Government would have power to re-settle the land with the lessee on a fair rent:

Held, that the last clause was intended to be a covenant for renewal.

A renewal clause in a lease does not necessarily import permanency; but if it did, the clause requiring sanction of the Collector to the erection of a building, is not necessarily inconsistent with the theory of a permanent grant; the object of such sanction may be not so much to prevent the erection of a building as to secure that the building should be of a suitable type from a sanitary or architectural or other similar point of view.

SECRETARY OF STATE v. FORBES.

An express covenant to renew in appropriate technical language is not essential, and the habendum may be so framed as to amount in substance to a covenant for even perpetual renewal.

Chamber v. Gaussen, 2 Jones & La Touche 99; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 575; Taylor v. Pallard, Lyne on Leases, App. 62 and Sheppard v. Doolan, 3 Dr. & War. 1; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 6, referred to.

A lease, which creates a tenancy for a term of years, may yet confer on the lessee an option of renewal.

Moss v. Barton, L. R. 1 Eq. 174; 35 Beav. 197; 13 L. T. 623, relied upon.

If the lease does not state by whom the option is exercisable, it is exercisable by the lessee only.

Lewis v. Stephenson, 67 L. J. Q. B. 296; 78 L. T. 165, referred to.

The option is exercisable not merely by the lessee personally but also by his representative-in-interest.

Buckland v. Papillon, 2 Ch. App. 67; 36 L. J. Ch. 81; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92, referred to.

If the option does not state the terms of renewal, the new lease will be for the same period and on the same terms as the original lease, in respect of all the essential conditions thereof, except as to the covenant for renewal itself.

Lewis v. Stephenson, 67 L. J. Q. B. 296; 78 L. T. 165; Austin v. Newham, (1906) 2 K. B. 167; 75 L. J. K. B. 563; 95 L. T. 490; Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & C. 82; 41 R. R. 222; 4 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. Eq. 3 and Rickards v. Rickards, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 419 at p. 427; 7 Jur. 715, referred to.

There is no sort of legal presumption against a right of perpetual renewal. The burden of strict proof is imposed upon a person claiming such a right. It should not be inferred from any equivocal expressions which may fairly be capable of being otherwise interpreted. The intention in that behalf should be clearly shown; otherwise, the agreement is satisfied and exhausted by a single renewal.

Job v. Banister, 2 K. & J. 374; 110 R. R. 273; Hare v. Burges, 4 K. & J. 45; 27 L. J. Ch. 86; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 1294; 6 W. R. 144; 116 R. R. 255; Davis v. Taylor, 3 Ridgeway P. C. 395; Moore v. Foley, 6 Ves. 232; 5 R. R. 270, and Iggulden v. May, 9 Ves. 325; 7 East. 237; 3 Smith 269; 2 Bos. & P. (N. S.) 449; 8 R. R. 623, referred to.

A covenant for renewal runs with the land.

Simpson v. Clayton, 4 Bing. (N.S.) 758; 44 R. R. 841; 6 Scott. 469; 1 Arn. 299; 8 L. J. C. P. 59; 2 Jur. 892; Roe v. Hayley, 12 East. 464; 11 R. R. 465; Brooke v. Bulkeley, 2 Ves. Sen. 498, referred to.

The position of a lessee, who has been always ready and willing to accept a renewal on proper terms, is the same in equity as if a proper lease had been granted. Where the covenant for renewal was still specifically enforceable at the commencement of a suit for ejectment against the lessee, the position of the lessee in equity is the same as if it had been specifically enforced.

Walsh v. Lonsdale, 21 Ch. D. 9; 52 L. J. Ch. 2; 46 L. T. 858; 31 W. R. 109; Bibi Jawahir Kumari v. Chatterput Singh, 2 C. L. J. 343; Singhee Ram v. Bhagbat Chander Nundi, 11 C. L. J. 543; 6 Ind. Cas. 63 and Sarat Chandra v. Sham Chand, 14 Ind. Cas. 701 16 C. L. J. 71; 39 C. 663, relied upon.

Per Beachcroft, J.—A meaning must be given to every clause where possible, and if there is ambiguity in a grant, it must be construed in favour of the grantee.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Bhagulpore, dated the 16th July 1909, reversing that of the Sub Judge, Monghyr, dated the 30th November 1908.

Babu Ram Churn Mitter, for the Appellant.

Babu Mahendra Nath Roy and Moulvi Mahommed Mustafa Khan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

MOOKERJEE, J.—This is an appeal by the Secretary of State for India in Council against a decree of the District Judge in reversal of a decree of the Subordinate Judge, by which an action in ejectment commenced by him against the respondent has been dismissed. On the 11th November 1878, the Collector of Monghyr granted a lease to one John Christian in respect of a parcel of homestead land for a term of 27 years from the 1st April 1876. The lease shows, on the face of it, that this was not the commencement of the tenancy, and it is stated expressly that the grant was made upon the expiry of the term of the former settlement. In 1879, the lessee transferred his interest to one Ambler, who, in the same year, sold the property to Alexander John Forbes, now represented by the defendant. Upon the expiry of the term, the Collector made an offer to the defendant to renew the lease on certain terms specified in a draft. The defendant refused to accept a renewal on the terms proposed and claimed a renewal on the same terms as before, subject to the payment of fair rent. The result was that the negotiations terminated, and the Collector, by a notice served on the 25th September 1906, called upon the defendant to quit the land from the 1st April 1907, and to remove the materials of the house which had been erected thereon. The defendant ignored this demand for possession, and on the 7th September 1907, the Secretary of State commenced this action to eject him as a trespasser. The defendant resisted the claim substantially on the ground that he had acquired a permanent right in the disputed land and was not liable to be evicted therefrom. The Subordinate Judge overruled this contention and decreed the suit. Upon appeal, the District Judge has reversed that decision, and dismissed the suit on the ground that the defendant had practically a permanent interest in the land as the lease contained a stipulation for renewal. In support of the present appeal, it has been argued on behalf of the Secretary of State that, upon the termination of the lease, the defendant ceased to have any interest in the land and is, consequently, liable to be ejected. On behalf of the respondent, it has been contended, in answer to this argument, that the lease contains a covenant for renewal, that he is entitled to renewal on the same terms as before, subject to the payment of fair rent, that he has always been ready and willing to accept a renewal on this footing, and that, consequently, he is in equity entitled to the same protection as if the lease had been properly renewed in his favour. The questions, therefore, which require consideration are, first, whether there is a covenant for renewal in the lease; secondly, if there is a renewal clause, was the defendant offered a renewal on proper terms; and, thirdly, if the defendant is not to blame, is he protected from ejectment.

In so far as the first of these questions is concerned, the answer must plainly depend upon a true construction of the instrument of the 11th November 1878. It recites, in the first place, the prior settlements upon the termination of the last of which the lease was renewed at enhanced rent. It then provides that the lessee would, upon payment of the rent assessed, peacefully dwell on the land, and if he stood in need of constructing any house, he could build on obtaining sanction therefor from the Collector. If the lessee failed to pay rent, the Government might realise the arrear under the laws in force, and further, take possession of the land. During the continuance of the term, the lessee, his heirs and representatives, would have the right to dwell on the land. After the expiry of the term, the Government would have power to re-settle the land with the lessee on a fair rent. The last clause has been construed by the respondent as a covenant for renewal. This has been repudiated on behalf of the Crown, and our attention has been drawn to the fact that no terms are prescribed on which the lease is to be renewed. It has also been suggested, on behalf of the Crown, that if the clause be interpreted as a covenant for renewal, the lessee would practically have a permanent interest in the land, which is inconsistent with the provision for sanction of the Collector, should the lessee build on the land. After careful consideration of all the terms of the lease, some of which are by no means happily worded, I have arrived at the conclusion that the clause in question was intended to be a covenant for renewal. It has not been explained why a contract of tenancy of this character, executed by one Englishman in favour of another, should have been written in what turns out to be a by no means intelligible Indian Vernacular; but this much is plain that, if we accept the construction suggested by the learned Government Pleader, viz., that the clause was intended merely to reserve liberty to the Collector to make a re-settlement with the lessee on fair rent, it would be entirely superfluous. On the other hand, as will presently appear, a renewal clause in a lease does not necessarily import permanency; but even if it did, the clause which requires sanction of the Collector to the erection of a building is not necessarily inconsistent with the theory of a permanent grant; the object of such sanction may be, not so much to prevent the erection of a building as to secure that the building should be of a suitable type from the sanitary or architectural or other similar point of view. It must again be remembered that the tenancy had apparently continued for many years, had been renewed from time to time, and was intended for dwelling purposes, which would necessarily imply the erection of structures of a more or less substantial character. From this point of view, the insertion of a renewal clause would be appropriate and in perfect harmony with the avowed object of the grant. The construction, therefore, suggested by the respondent is reasonable, and I do not hesitate to accept it, because it is well settled that an express covenant to renew in appropriate technical language is not essential, and the habendum may be so framed as to amount in substance to a covenant for even perpetual renewal. Thus in Chambers v. Gaussen (1), Sir Edward Sugden, then Lord Chancellor of Ireland, held, upon a construction of all the terms of a lease, that it was a lease for lives, renewable for ever. He referred to the cases of Taylor v. Pollard (2) and Sheppard v. Doolan (3), where a similar view had been taken. I hold, therefore, that the clause in question embodies a covenant for renewal.

In so far as the second question is concerned; it has been argued on behalf of the Crown that as the instrument does not specify the terms on which the lease was to be renewed, the lessee could not claim renewal on the same terms as before. This contention, in my opinion, is fallacious. In the first place, a lease which creates a tenancy for a term of years, as in the present case, may yet confer on the lessee an option of renewal: Moss v. Barton (4). In the second place, if the lease does not state by whom the option is exercisable, it is exercisable by the lessee only; in other words, a covenant for renewal, if informally expressed, is enforced only in favour of the lessee: Lewis v. Stephenson (5). In the third place, the option is exercisable not merely by the lessee personally, but also by his representative-in-interest, for example, his trustee in bankruptcy: Buckland v. Papillon (6). In the fourth place, if the option does not state the terms of renewal, the new lease will be for the same period and on the same terms as the original lease, in respect of all the essential conditions thereof, except as to the covenant for renewal itself: Lewis v. Stephenson (5), Austin v. Newham (7), Price v. Assheton (8), Rickards v. Rickards (9). The exception just mentioned is of some importance, because it negatives the suggestion made on behalf of the Crown that a covenant for renewal practically implies a permanent lease. Lord Macclesfield said in Hyde v. Skinner (10), that though the lease is to be made on the same covenants, yet that shall not take in a covenant for the renewing of this new lease, for as much as then the lease would never be at an end. To the same effect is the observation of Lord Thurlow in Tritton v. Foote (11), that a covenant in a lease to renew under the same conditions is exclusive of the covenant of renewal. Similarly, Lord Selborne observed in Swinburne v. Milburn (12), that though there is no sort of legal presumption against a right of perpetual renewal, yet the authorities certainly do impose upon any one claiming such a right the burden of strict proof and are strongly against inferring it from any equivocal expressions which may fairly be capable of being otherwise interpreted. The substance of the matter, therefore, is that the covenant will not be construed as a covenant for perpetual renewal, unless the intention in that behalf is clearly shown; for instance, when the convenant expressly states that the lease is to be renewed for ever; otherwise, the agreement is satisfied and exhausted by a single renewal: Job v. Banister (13); Hare v. Burges (14), Davis v. Taylor (15); Moore v. Foley (16), Igguldan v. May (17). It has accordingly been held that a covenant to receive the construction of perpetual renewal must be plain and distinct and such as to bear no other construction without force and violence done to the words and the context: Browne v. Tighe (18). In the present case, therefore, the defendant was entitled to a renewal of the lease on the same terms as in the instrument of the 11th November 1878, subject to the payment of fair rent as expressly stated therein; and this right was not affected by the circumstance that he was a transferee from the original lessee, for, as already stated, a covenant for renewal runs

(1) (1844) 2 Jo. and La To. 99; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 575.
(2) (1827) Lyne on Leases App. 62.
(3) (1842) 3 Dr. & War. 1; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 6.
(4) (1866) L. R. 1 Eq. 174; 35 Beav. 197; 13 L. T. 623.
(5) (1898) 67 L. J. Q. B. 296; 78 L. T. 165.
(6) (1866) 2 Ch. App. 67; 36 L. J. Ch. 81; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92.
(7) (1906) 2 K. B. 167; 75 L. J. K. B. 563; 95 L. T. 490.
(8) (1834) 1 Y. & C. 82; 41 R. R. 222; 4 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. Eq. 3.
(9) (1843) 2 Y. & C. C. C. 419 at p. 427; 7 Jur. 715.
(10) (1723) 2 P. W. 196.
(11) (1789) 2 Brown C. C. 636; 2 Cox. 171.
(12) (1884) 9 App. Cas. 844 at p. 850; 54 L. J. Q. B. 6; 52 L. T. 222; 33 W. R. 325.
(13) (1856) 2 Kay & J. 374; 110 R. R. 273.
(14) (1857) 4 Kay & J. 45; 27 L. J. Ch. 86; 3 Jur. (N. S.) 1294; 6 W. R. 144; 116 R. R. 255.
(15) (1736) 3 Ridgeway P. C. 395.
(16) (1801) 6 Ves. 232; 5 R. R. 270.
(17) (1804) 9 Ves. 325; 7 East 237; 3 Smith 269; 8 R. R. 623; 2 Bos. & P. (N. R.) 449
(18) (1834) 2 Cal. & Fin. 396; 8 Bligh (N. S.) 272; 37 R. R. 150.

with the land. Simpson v. Clayton (19); Roe v. Hayley (20), Brooke v. Bulkeley (21). The renewed lease offered to him, however, was on substantially different terms. Covenants had been inserted which involved restraint against alienation without the written permission of the Collector which could be obtained only upon payment of premium, forfeiture for felling timber without leave, forfeiture for addition to or alteration in building without assent of the Collector, and like clauses, more or less calculated to prejudice seriously the position of the lessee. The lessee was, therefore, clearly entitled to refuse to accept a renewal on conditions so essentially different from the terms of the original grant.

In so far as the third question is concerned, it cannot be seriously doubted that the position of the lessee who has been always ready and willing to accept a renewal on proper terms is the same in equity as if a proper lease has been granted. The covenant for renewal was still specifically enforceable at the commencement of the suit, and the position of the defendant in equity is the same as if it had been specifically enforced: Walsh v. Lonsdale (22); Bibi Jawahir Kumari v. Chatterput Singh (23), Singhee Ram v. Bhagbat Chander Nundi (24), and Sarat Chandra v. Sham Chand Singh (25).

The result, therefore, is that although the reasons assigned by the District Judge may be open to criticism, his decree must be affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs.

BEACHCROFT, J.—I agree and have little to add. It is conceded that the determination of the question depends on the interpretation to be put on the clause, which has been translated, "after the expiry of the term put down in this deed, the Government shall have power to re-settle the land on a fair jama." A more accurate translation of the concluding words would be "the Government shall have the power to bring into operation a new settlement on a fair jama."

If this clause gives an option of renewal, the appellant is faced by this difficulty that the option must be taken to include a renewal of the lease on all the old terms, except such as are excluded other, of course, than the renewal clause itself. It is clear the words "on a fair jama" would be meaningless if applied to any person other than the respondent, for in a contract between A and B., it is of no concern to B. for A. to say, 'I shall have power to renew the contract with C. on a fair rent."

Any difficulty which there is in the case arises from the fact that the lease is loosely worded. It contains other provisions which are unnecessary, e.g., the passage which, after giving Government power to take seer possession in case of default of payment of rent, goes on to give Government authority to keep the property seer or to lease it to some one else. If the clause "after the expiry of the term, Government shall have power to bring into operation a new lease on a fair jama," were merely a clause emphasizing the fact that the termination of the lease in 1902 was to end the contract between the parties, the appellant must succeed. But a meaning must be given to every clause where possible, and if there is ambiguity in a grant, it must be construed in favour of the grantee. Now, if the contract between the parties entirely terminated in 1902, it was quite unnecessary to reserve to Government the power to make a new settlement. Therefore, the reservation of that power to Government appears to indicate that it was considered that the respondent had some right which it was intended to qualify by this clause. And on the terms of the clause that right could only be a right to renewal. This view is borne out by the fact that previous renewals were recited in the patta. And the suggestion that Government had a right to settle the land with any one without giving to respondent the refusal of a lease does not appear to have been the suggestion, at any rate, in the Court of Appeal, for the judgment of the learned District Judge seems to proceed on the lines that there was an option of renewal and that the Government Pleader's contention was not that there was no option, but that the terms of the lease could be varied.

(19) (1838) 4 Bingham (N. S.) 758; 44 R. R. 841; 6 Scott 469; 1 Arn. 299; 8 L. J., C. P. 59; 2 Jur. 892.
(20) (1810) 12 East 464; 11 R. R. 465.
(21) (1754) 2 Ves. Sen. 498.
(22) (1882) 21 Ch. D. 9; 52 L. J., Ch. 2; 46 L. T. 858; 31 W. R. 109.
(23) 2 C. L. J. 343.
(24) 11 C. L. J. 543; 6 Ind. Cas. 632.
(25) 16 C. L. J. 71; 39 C. 663; 14 Ind. Cas. 701.

Therefore, we must take it that an option was reserved to the respondent. That being so, it must be taken that the terms not mentioned as liable to variation were to be renewed. Government was, therefore, entitled only to alter the rent on renewal.

I agree in dismissing the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 54 OF 1912.

October 7, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.

KOTAGIRI VENKATARAMARAYANIM AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

PATIBANDA BASAWAYYA—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 29, 36, 62, 120—Attachment of land and standing crops—Suit to declare attachment illegal—Subsequent suit for damages for loss of crops—Limitation—General Clauses Act (X of 1897).

Per Sundara Aiyar, J., (confirming the judgment of the lower Court)—A suit for damages for the value of standing crops cut and appropriated by the defendant, while such crops were under attachment in execution of decree, brought after the termination of a suit to declare such attachment as illegal, is, for the purposes of limitation, governed either by Article 62 or Article 120 of the Limitation Act, and the cause of action arises on the termination of the suit declaring the attachment to be illegal.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The period of limitation for such a suit is contained in Article 29 or Article 36 of the Limitation Act, and the cause of action arises on the date of the attachment.

Per Curiam.—Standing crops are "immoveable property," according to the General Clauses Act, 1897.

Appeal against the order of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Masulipatam in A. S. No. 177 of 1911, presented against that of the District Munsif of Bezwada, in O. S. No. 588 of 1909.

FACTS.—The facts are clear from the following judgment of the District Munsif:—

"Claim for Rs. 596-9-0, being the value of paddy.

"It is alleged in the plaint that the defendants, in execution of their decree against Maddali Pitchamma in S C. No. 897 of 1906, attached the suit land and the crops thereon on 13th December 1906; that subsequently the attachment of crops alone was kept in force: that the plaintiff on his failure in claim petition brought Original Suit No. 521 of 1907 (Original Suit No. 259 of 1909, Additional District Munsif's Court, Bezwada) for the establishment of his right to the suit land and the crops thereon; that the suit was decreed in his favour; that owing to negligence of the defendants during the time of attachment in force, the crops though well grown became spoiled; that the defendants appropriated the sale-proceeds of the remainder of the crops. Hence the suit.

"The defendants contend that the suit is barred by limitation; that there was no negligence at all on their part during the time of attachment; that the value claimed by the plaintiff is excessive.

"Issues:—

(i) Whether the suit is within time?

(ii) Whether the plaintiff has sustained any and what damages owing to the negligence of the defendants?

(iii) To what relief is plaintiff entitled?

"First issue.—The facts of the case are very simple. This is a suit by a defeated claimant in respect of the value of crops whose out-turn was poor owing to the alleged negligence on the part of the defendants in not harvesting the crops at the proper time. Defendants contend, inter alia, that the suit is barred by limitation as the present suit was brought more than one year from the date of attachment.

"The question for determination in the suit is whether the suit is within time. Admittedly, the suit property was attached on 13th December 1906. The plaintiff put in a claim petition in respect of the paddy crops which was thrown out. Subsequently, plaintiff brought Original Suit No. 521 of 1907 (Original Suit No. 217 of 1909, Additional Munsif's Court) under section 283 of the old Civil Procedure Code now Order XXI, rule 63, to establish his right to the suit land and the crops thereon. The later suit was decreed in his favour. In the meantime, the crops were harvested and the paddy sold and the proceeds distributed to defendants. Plaintiff gives 13th

KOTAGIRI VENKATARAMARAYANIM v. PATIBANDA BASAWAYYA.

December 1906, date of attachment and 22nd September 1909, date of Additional District Munsif's Court decree as the cause of action. The simple question, therefore, is whether the cause of action dated from 13th December 1906, the date of attachment and if so, is the suit barred by time? Defendants' Pleader contends that the cause of action is 13th December 1906 and that as the suit was brought more than one year from the latter date, the suit must be held to have been barred by time. In support of his contention, he relies upon the decision reported in Samaraju Narasimha Rao v. Thadinada Gangaraju (1). I am of opinion that the contention of the defendant's Pleader must prevail. The cause of action arose on 13th December 1906, the date of the seizure of the property. The Article of the Limitation Act applicable to the cases of this kind is 29. Plaintiff's Pleader ingeniously argues that the standing crops are immoveable property and that the Article is not applicable. Even conceding for argument's sake that his contention is a valid one, the standing crops cannot remain the selfsame thing through a number of years. Being perishable article, they were cut and distributed under the legal process. The moment they were cut, they become moveable property. The decision reported as Damaraju Narasimha Rao v. Thadinada Gangaraju (1) is applicable on all fours with the present case.

"Besides, the wording of Article 11, Schedule I of the Limitation Act is quite clear on the point. The only things prescribed in the Code are these (Order XXI, rule 63) :—There must be an attachment. There must be a claim petition preferred. Then there must be an investigation and an order thereon. The Article applicable to cases of the kind is clearly Article 11 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act which prescribes a period of one year. This is a special provision made in the Limitation Act in respect of cases of the kind.

"I, therefore, find the point against the plaintiff.

"In the view I have taken of the first issue, it is unnecessary for me to go into the other issue.

(1) 31 M. 431; 4 M. L. T. 271.

"In the result, I dismiss plaintiff's suit with costs to the defendants."

On appeal by the plaintiff, the Subordinate Judge passed the following judgment :—

"The point for determination is whether the suit is barred under Article 29 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act.

"The Article 29 clearly applies to a case of moveable property wrongfully attached. The facts of the case quoted by the District Munsif show that the property attached was undisputedly treated as moveable property. In the present case, what was attached is land with standing crops thereon. The attachment was raised as regards the land, and the plaintiff had to file a suit for a declaration that the standing crops were his. Standing crops are defined as immoveable property in the General Clauses Act of 1868, vide Pandah Gazi v. Jennuddi (2); Chunilal Fulchand v. Mangaldas Govardhandas (3); Madayya v. Venkata (4) and Cheda Lal v. Mul Chand (5).

"The plaintiff's case is that he sustained loss by reason of the illegal attachment made at the instance of the defendants of the standing crops as the property of their judgment-debtor. The Article applicable is Article 109 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act, if Article 30 of the same Schedule does not apply. In either case, the suit is not barred by limitation. The decree of the lower Court is not sustainable, and it is set aside, and the suit is remanded to be restored to its original file and disposed of on merits. The Court-fee paid in respect of the memo. of appeal will be refunded to the appellant."

"The costs will abide the result."

The defendant appealed to the High Court.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. Prakasam, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

SUNDARA AIYAR, J.—According to the General Clauses Act, 1897, which was in force at the time when the land and the crops were attached, standing crops would be immoveable property. It is urged for the respondent that this would make Article

(2) 4 C. 665; 2 C. L. R. 526.
(3) 6 B. 592.
(4) 11 M. 193.
(5) 14 A. 30; A. W. N. (1891) 174.

29 of the Indian Limitation Act not applicable. According to the view that I have taken in Yellammal v. Aiyappa Naick (6), the plaintiff's cause of action for the value of crops did not arise until his suit establishing his right to the land was decided on 22nd September 1909 and this suit was instituted on the 22nd November 1909. I am of opinion, for the reasons stated in my judgment in Yellammal v. Aiyappa Naick (6), that the proper Article applicable is 62 or 120. I must hold, therefore, that the Subordinate Judge was right in his view that the suit was not barred by limitation. I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

SADASIVA AIYAR, J.—If Article 29 or 36 applies, the cause of action arose on 13th December 1906, the date of attachment of the property. According to the view I have taken in Yellammal v. Aiyappa Naick (6), I would reverse the judgment of the Subordinate Judge and restore that of the Munsif.

SUNDARA AIYAR, J.—The result is that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(6) 12 M. L. T. 458; 23 M. L. J. 519; 16 Ind. Cas. 914.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1033 OF 1910.

November 11, 1912.

Present:—Sir Arthur Reid, KT., Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Rattigan.

Musammat ZAINAB BIBI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BADAR-UD-DIN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

*Custom—Succession—*Arains of Tahsil Sharkpur, District Lahore - Self-acquired property of nephew—Nephew's daughter preferred to his paternal uncle.

Among Arains of Tahsil Sharkpur, District Lahore, a paternal uncle has no right to the self-acquired property of his nephew in preference to that nephew's daughter.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Lahore, dated 10th June 1910, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Lahore, dated 28th July 1908, dismissing plaintiff's claim.

Mian Muhammad Shah Nawaz, for the Appellants.

Khawaja Zia-ud-din, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The question for consideration is whether the plaintiff, who is paternal uncle of the last male owner of land in the Sharakpur Tahsil of Lahore, is entitled to possession of that land in preference to the last owner's daughter.

The parties are Arains and it is admitted that the daughter of an Arain of the Lahore Tahsil inherits all property of her father in preference to any collateral.

The Record of Rights of 1856, which has been cited in the judgment dated the 16th January 1909 of the lower Appellate Court, provides that where the owner leaves a daughter, she inherits, if a gift has been made to her, but that in the absence of a gift, a near collateral will exclude her.

The Riwaj-i-am of 1867 records that the near collaterals inherit, and that it is their duty to provide for the marriage of the daughter.

On page 10 of the Customary Law of the Lahore District, compiled by the Settlement Officer in 1894, the answer recorded to question C, is that Arains say that a daughter or sister succeeds to the property if there is no male collateral nearer related than in the fifth generation.

No specification of ancestral or self-acquired property is made in these records. In the lower Appellate Court, it was assumed that the property in suit was ancestral, but both Courts below found, on remand by this Court, that it was self-acquired, and this finding has not been contested.

In Jaikarn v. Lakhu (1), printed as a foot-note to the case of Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh (2), the following passage occurs, at page 421 :—

"That collaterals have ordinarily no preferential claim to daughters and their issue where the land is not ancestral but is the acquired property of the last owners seems to be a well established proposition of Customary Law. Sir William Rattigan lays this down in paragraph 23 (2) of his Digest, 6th Edition and remark (2) under it. He quotes the decisions relied on by the appellant except Ichhri v. Jowahira (3), in support of his position but it was the same in the 4th Edition which was issued before the earliest of them was published and in the previous editions. Thus, it would seem that this eminent expert in Customary Law did not understand that any new or startling departure from the rule previously understood about the respective rights of agnates and daughters of a deceased proprietor in respect of his acquired land was made by Lokha v. Hari (4)."

(1) 110 P. R. 1906 note at p. 414.

(2) 110 P. R. 1906 (F. B.); 31 P. L. R. 1907; 59 P. W. R. 1907.

(3) 18 P. R. 1896.

The burden of establishing rights superior to those of daughters was, therefore, on the plaintiff-respondent.

Dilsukh Ram v. Nathu Singh (5); Masta v. Pohlu (6); Sham Ram v. Musammat Hem Bai (7); Ghulam Mohy-ud-din v. Faiz Bakhsh (8); Maha Ram v. Ram Mahar (9); Muhamad Umar v. Kirpal Singh (10); Allah Ditta v. Shahna (11); Sawan v. Sahib Khatun (12) and Amir v. Musammat Sharf Nur (13) have been cited on the question of the evidential value of the Riwaj-i am and Records of Rights.

Chiragh Din v. Mamman (14), cited for the plaintiff-respondent, deals specifically with ancestral property, and in connection with the difference between the custom of the Lahore Tahsil and Sharakpur Tahsil the following passage occurs, at page 151:—

"The Wajib-ul-arz suggests that the custom in the village as to daughter's rights in respect to ancestral land is behind that of the Tahsil generally as recorded in the Riwaj-i-am; it does not suggest that, having been on a level with that recorded for the Tahsil, the village has adopted some special custom of its own. On the contrary, the Sharakpur Riwaj-i-am suggests that the Arains in conclave assembled have thought it expedient to adopt a positive rule from the Muhammadan Law for the settlement of a moot point as to what share the daughter ought to receive. It is significant that this provision has not been corroborated by instances."

In Article 23 (2) of Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law, it is laid down that "in regard to the acquired property of her father, the daughter is preferred to collaterals." In remark 2, on page 33 of the 7th Edition, referred to in Jaikarn v. Lakhu (1), cited above, authorities for this rule are collected.

The greater part of the agricultural land dealt with by the Revenue Records is ancestral, and, having regard to the authorities cited above, we are not satisfied that the provisions of the Riwaj-i-am and the Record of Rights cited apply to self-acquired property, while the oral evidence dealt within the judgment of the Court of first instance is against the contention that the rules for the devolution of self-acquired land are those above cited from the Revenue Records. The plaintiff-respondent has not discharged the burden of proof which lay on him of establishing his right to the self-acquired property of his nephew in preference to that nephew's daughter and we decree the appeal with costs.

Appeal allowed.

(4) 64 P. R. 1893.
(5) 98 P. R. 1894 (F. B.).
(6) 52 P. R. 1896.
(7) 73 P. R. 1896.
(8) 97 P. R. 1902; 121 P. L. R. 1902.
(9) 65 P. R. 1903; 139 P. L. R. 1903.
(10) 78 P. R. 1904.
(11) 12 P. R. 1908; 22 P. W. R. 1908; 175 P. L. R. 1908.
(12) 44 P. R. 1909; 67 P. L. R. 1909; 69 P. W. R. 1909; 2 Ind. Cas. 71.
(13) 49 P. R. 1910; 6 Ind. Cas. 929; 87 P. W. R. 1910; 137 P. L. R. 1910.
(14) 28 P. R. 1893.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORDINARY ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 357 OF 1910.

July 8, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chaudhuri.

W. STEWART—PLAINTIFF

versus

NEW ZEALAND INSURANCE Co. LD.—DEFENDANTS.

Insurance—Marine insurance—Policy—Perils of the sea, meaning of—Ordinary action of wind and waves—Wear and tear.

The term "perils of the seas" refers only to fortuitous accidents or casualties of the sea. It does not include the ordinary action of the wind and waves. It is not every loss or damage of which the sea is the immediate cause, that is covered by these words. They do not protect against the natural and inevitable action of the winds and waves, which result in what may be described as wear and tear. There must be some casualty, something which could not be foreseen, as one of the necessary accidents of adventure.

The Xantho, 12 App. Cas. 503 and Hamilton v. Pandorf, 12 App. Cas. 518, relied upon.

Anderson v. Morice, 10 Com. Pleas 58 and

STEWART v. NEW ZEALAND INSURANCE CO. LD.

Blackbury v. Liverpool and Brazil River Plate Steam Navigation Co. (1902) 1 K. B. 290, distinguished.

An insured boat sank suddenly in fair weather and smooth water, without any assignable cause.

It was not proved that the boat had been deliberately scuttled. The boat was in water tight condition up to the night of accident. It appeared that bottom plates had corroded through natural causes, that is, in consequence of ordinary wear and tear:

Held, that the loss was not caused by perils of the sea under the terms of the policy.

Messrs. Langford James, and Pankridge instructed by Messrs. Chunder, Law & Co., Solicitors, for the Plaintiff.

Messers. B. C. Mitter, L. P. E. Pugh and H. G. Pearson, instructed by Messrs. Pugh & Co., for the Defendants.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff is the owner of a Steam Launch named The Fox. It was an old Government boat which the plaintiff purchased. He had it repaired and eventually chartered it to a firm in Chittagong. It was sent to Chittagong where there was some difficulty with the charterers whose creditors appeared to have attached the boat. After some considerable trouble, the plaintiff succeeded in getting the boat away. It apparently started back some time after July 1910 and arrived at Port Canning. The plaintiff states that it met with rough weather on the return voyage and lost two water tanks and a jolly boat, but no damage was done to the boat itself. He himself took charge of the boat at Matla and came to Calcutta on the 8th or 10th October 1909. The delay was due to the crew and want of coal. The boat had been insured for the return voyage with the defendant Company, but when it arrived at Port Canning, the plaintiff wrote to them that having regard to the delay which had taken place, further insurance was necessary. At last, an insurance was effected with the defendant Company on the 17th of September 1909, for one year, for Rs. 15,000, the amount of the policy in suit. Out of the premium payable to the defendant Company, a sum of Rs. 187-8-0 had been paid before the loss of the boat and Rs. 562-8-0 remained unpaid.

The plaintiff alleges that the boat has been totally lost to him. It sank on the other side of the river near Shibpur, and was a total wreck and he claimed the amount of the insurance Rs. 15,000 less the amount of the premium due. He claimed this amount as covered by his insurance as against "perils of the seas."

It appears that after the boat was brought to the Shalimar side, opposite Shibpur, there was a gale on the 17th of October; the ship broke loose and drifted to the Calcutta side. It was towed back by the Port Commissioners to the Shibpur side on the 18th of October. The plaintiff states that no damage was done to the boat except that some portion of the wood work had been washed away. He says he intended to beach the boat in order to give it a coat of paint, and that he left orders with the secunny for that purpose, but his orders were not carried out. The secunny is said to have made various excuses and at last wanted a dinghy to carry ropes from the vesssel to the shore, for the purpose of beaching it and the plaintiff eventually engaged a dinghy two or three days before the accident took place. Even then, his orders were not carried out, upon which he sent his son, Donald Stewart, to the vessel on the 22nd of October to see that it was beached. A friend of this young man of the name of West accompanied him. They went at night and West's account is that they went to sleep, Donald Stewart leaving orders that the men were to wake him up at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning in order to beach the boat. They went to sleep in the same cabin. They were, however, suddenly roused about day dawn on being told that the ship was filling with water. They came down and had just time to get into a dinghy, when the vessel sank. It sank in fair weather and smooth water. According to the plaintiff, there are only two theories possible, namely, that either the boat was deliberately scuttled, or that the bottom plate had corroded and sprung a leak. He said that simple corrosion of the bottom plate would not account for the leak, if any, but there must have been bumps superadded to start the plate leaking, and he stated that he had heard from his son that on the night of the occurrence, he had distinctly felt a bump of what he thought was a country boat. His explanation was that it was possibly due to this collusion, added to the fact that the bottom plate had probably corroded which had started a leak and in consequence of which the vessel sank. He stated that all the plates of this boat had been renewed three years before the accident, except the bottom plates which could not be renewed without the boiler being lifted, and as that involved much expense, they were not changed. Unfortunately, we have not got the evidence of Donald Stewart, who had died since the accident, but the statement of the plaintiff finds no corroboration from that of the secunny. The plaintiff stated that the secunny had corroborated his son shortly after the accident. The secunny, however, stated in the witness-box that he knew nothing of any boat bumping that night. Therefore, so far as the collision theory is concerned, I must reject it as without evidence. It was never suggested at the earlier stages of the case, and seems to have been an after thought. The evidence is that the boat was in a water-tight condition up to the night of the accident and suddenly sank in smooth water and fair weather.

The boat, as I have said, sank in the morning of the 23rd of October. No intimation was given by the plaintiff to the Insurance Company that day or the next. He says 23rd October was a close holiday, 24th October was a Sunday, and he received a letter on the morning of the 25th from the Insurance Company calling his attention to the fact that his boat had sunk. He immediately sent a reply. He promised to see Mr. Legatt of the Insurance Company on the 28th, but did not go to him before the 30th. His explanation is that inasmuch as the secunny was ill, he could get no information from him. So far as the statement of the illness is concerned, it is not supported by the secunny. He was not ill. He was somewhat fatigued and distressed according to his own account. But the plaintiff's description of the illness was somewhat graphic. When stating that the secunny was ill, the plaintiff showed how he shook with fever when he came to him. The secunny denies that he had fever. This seems to be an invention on the part of the plaintiff. There was no protest made by the secunny until the 23rd of November 1909 and it is important to see what is stated there. The secunny's statement on that occasion was that the boat had started a leak in the forehold and in consequence gone down. Now, the plaintiff says the boat could not have started a leak in the forehold. The plates had been changed, and he says it was the secunny's mistake. The leak must have started according to him in the engine hold, which is the centre hold, somewhere under the ash-plate of the boiler. The water must have rushed into the middle hold through the bottom plate and from there forced its way into the forehold, and he stated, as his ground for so saying, that the boat had sunk stern foremost. It is difficult to accept a theory of that kind, when the man who was actually on the boat states that the leak must have sprung in the forehold. The protest also suggests that some of the rivets must have got loose during the storm on the 17th of October. This is not supported by the plaintiff at all. He does not suggest it, the secunny also does not support it, and the statements made in the protest are contradicted by the evidence which has been given. The plaintiff denies he knew what the secunny was going to say in the protest, but the language used does not seem to be the secunny's. He, no doubt, made his statement in Bengali but the way the protest puts the case, I doubt, if the secunny could have put it.

There was considerable evidence given about the finding of a plug, a gland attached to the plug, and some pins. The plug is said to belong to one of the sea-cocks. If the plug was removed from the sea-cock, it is conceded that the boat would have made water and sunk. The evidence of the defendant Company is this, that one Captain Haines was employed by them to raise the boat. The boat was raised on or about the 18th December. On the morning of the 19th, a man of the name of Metcalfe, who was employed on the boat, was there, Captain Haines was there and a coolie who was working on the boat brought up from the bottom of the boat a plug and a gland, the same as produced. At that time, one Mathieson, a Chief Engineer of the River Steam Navigation Company, was there also. These things were brought up in their presence from the hold of the boat. We have the evidence of Captain Haines on this point: Mathieson has been examined and Metcalfe also. So far as Captain Haines is concerned, he was examined on commission. When application was made for the issue of a commission, it was strenuously opposed by the plaintiff on the ground that it would be impossible for him to join in it, as he could not afford the expense, but the learned Judge who heard the matter and ordered the commission, thought that no sufficient ground had been shown by the plaintiff against its issue. Counsel for the plaintiff protested at that time as he said it practically prevented his client from cross-examining Captain Haines. He further stated that his client was not going to join in the commission; but, subsequently, the plaintiff did join in the Commission. His Attorney wrote to the Registrar asking for leave to join in the Commission and such leave was given, and the Commission was sent out to Moulmein on the 23rd of January. The practice in this Court is that when a Commission issues in this way, the parties have to appear before the Commissioner and get a date fixed for the examination of the witness. It appears that a summons in this case was issued on Captain Haines on the 15th of February at the instance of the defendants' lawyers. The plaintiff did not appear on that occasion, or on any other. He was not present, nor was he represented. He made no attempt to appear before the Commissioner. He did not even communicate with him. The examination was fixed for the 19th February and the Commission was returned on the 28th of February 1912. During this time; no attempt was made by the plaintiff to take any steps for the cross-examination of the witness, and although the case was not heard till long afterwards, no application was made by him, either for the purpose of being allowed to cross examine Captain Haines, or for getting an order that his evidence could not be used, as he alleged he had no notice when the Commission had issued. He had joined in the Commission and it was incumbent upon him to communicate with the Commissioner if he intended to appear. I think that the plaintiff allowed this witness to go un-cross-examined in the hope of getting his evidence rejected by not appearing at Moulmein. Having regard to the case, Gregory v. Dooley Chana(1), in which it was held that the opposing party had a right to notice of every proceeding held under a Commission, I was at first inclined not to admit this evidence, but having regard to the facts subsequently elicited, I have allowed it. My conviction is that it was a deliberate omission on the part of the plaintiff not to take any steps for the cross-examination of Captain Haines. The evidence of Captain Haines, if accepted, is almost conclusive. He speaks about the discovery of the plug, and the conclusion one must draw from the facts stated by him is that the boat must have been scuttled. The plug must have been deliberately removed, it could not have been forced out of its place by the water coming in But, although I have admitted the evidence of Captain Haines, I do not think it is safe to rely upon it without corroboration. It is un-cross-examined testimony. I have, therefore, to consider the evidence of Metcalfe and Mathieson. Metcalfe speaks about finding the plug, and I do not see any reason why he should be disbelieved. His account is very clear. He mentions who the persons were who were present on that occasion and how the plug was found and the only ground suggested for disbelieving this witness is the allegation that Captain Haines has some improper relationship with this man's sister, a married sister, with whom he does not correspond. I think it is a cruel suggestion to make, and not at all a worthy one. There is no evidence in support of it except a statement by the plaintiff that Captain Haines at one time lived in a room, which belonged to Mrs. Elder, Metcalfe's sister, in a house which the plaintiff was occupying. With regard to Mathieson also, I see no reason for disbelieving him. His recollection is not quite clear as regards the things found on the occasion he says he was present. He spoke about a spanner, a gland, a plug, etc., being found. His impression is that all the things were found at the same time, one after the other. This does not agree with the version of Metcalfe who speaks to the plug being found in his presence, and the other things later. No reason has been suggested why Mathieson should be disbelieved. He holds a respectable position, under a well known firm in Calcutta and appears to be an independent witness. Except for this discrepancy as to the time when all these articles were found, there is nothing against his evidence. A pencil entry in his log-book is also challenged as suspicious.

(1) 14 W. R. 17.

He says that he wanted to keep a record of what happened, but as it was not official, he made a note in pencil. As to the note, I am not inclined to give it much weight, but I see no reason to doubt his veracity. There is also the evidence of Captain Stewart who did not see any leaks or cracks in the plate, and speaks to the hold being water-tight. Taking all this evidence together, I hold the plug was out of its place, that it was found in the bottom of the boat and had been removed and that the removal of the plug caused the boat to sink. As against this evidence, we have the evidence of a man of the name of Domingo. He was a very unsatisfactory witness, and although he did not show any signs of being drunk, it was suggested by the plaintiff's Counsel in his reply that he must have been drunk. He was for a considerable time in the witness-box and appeared to me to be entirely unreliable and untruthful. He said that he was asked by Captain Haines to find a plug and gland, as they would be necessary for the Insurance Company, suggesting by that, that he had been asked by Captain Haines to remove these things and that they were going to be utilised for making a case that the sea-cocks had been left deliberately open. He says that when he was cleaning the mud out of the boat, after it had been raised, he saw these things in their place. He mentioned the matter to Captain Haines, but to his astonishment next morning these things had disappeared. He informed Captain Haines that they were gone, which made Captain Haines very angry. He stated that he believed that Captain Haines had deliberately caused the disappearance of these things. He subsequently withdrew from that, but came back to it again, and charged Captain Haines with having engineered this incident. It appears to me that the plaintiff felt that some answer should be given about the plug not being found in its proper place and that Domingo was put forward to supply that evidence. He was discovered by a man of the name of Murray who stated that he had at one time been a partner of Captain Haines. His evidence was simply that he went to see this boat after it had been raised, and found Domingo working there. He did not go on the boat, and knew nothing about its condition. One day Domingo casually met him, long after the date of his visit to the boat. Murray took him home, and had a talk with him about the accident and thought that his evidence would be useful for the plaintiff. He sent Domingo with a letter to the plaintiff and the plaintiff sent him on to his Attorney to make a statement. On Domingo being asked if he had mentioned any of the facts stated by him in the witness-box to Murray, he at first said "No," but within a minute afterwards he said he had made a complete statement to Murray. I entirely disbelieve the evidence of Domingo as regards the charges made against Captain Haines and the way he says the plug disappeared from its place.

Upon this evidence, I am inclined to believe that the plaintiff knew how the plug had been removed. It is unnecessary for me to deal with this matter at any length, as I consider that the case is not covered by the terms of the policy. It is an insurance against perils of the seas, and there is abundant authority for holding that a boat sinking under these circumstances in fair weather and smooth water did not sink by a peril of the sea. The term "perils of the seas" refers only to fortuitous accidents or casualties of the sea. It does not include the ordinary action of the wind and waves. It is well settled that it is not every loss or damage of which the sea is the immediate cause, that is covered by these words. They do not protect, for example, against the natural and inevitable action of the winds and waves, which result in what may be described as wear and tear. There must be some casualty, something which could not be foreseen, as one of the necessary accidents of adventure. See Lord Herschell's judgment in The Xantho (2).

Reference was made to the case of Anderson v. Morice (3) and also to the case of Gibson v. Small (4), Thompson v. Hopper (5), Fawcus v. Sarsfield (6) in support of the proposition that there is no implied warranty of seaworthiness in Time policies.

In Anderson v. Morice (3), the boat went

(2) (1887) 12 A. C. 503 at p. 509.

(3) (1874) 10 Com. Pleas. 58.

(4) (1853) 4 H. L. C. 353; 1 C. L. R. 363; 17 Jur. 1131; 94 R. R. 138.

(5) (1856) 6 El. & Bl. 172; 25 L. J. Q. B. 240; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 608; 4 W. R. 360; 26 L. T. (o. s.) 308; 106 R. R. 547.

(6) (1856) 6 El. & Bl. 192; 25 L. J. Q. B. 249; 2 Jur. (N. S.) 665; 26 L. T. (o. s.) 323; 106 R. R. 559.

down in fine weather, but there was a large body of evidence given as to the cause of the accident, and upon that evidence, the Jury came to the conclusion that it was covered by the terms of the policy.

It is unnecessary to deal with the other cases, which were referred to during argument, except Blackburn v. The Liverpool and Brazil River Plate Steam Navigation Company (7). That was a case of injury to goods which were insured. A plug had been left open and water came in, and damaged the goods. The case depended on what is known as the "negligence clause." Lord Halsbury held upon the facts that the injury was covered by the words "perils of the seas." He, however, affirmed the principle laid down in Hamilton v. Pandorf (8), that there must be something fortuitous and unexpected, that wear and tear did not come within the words "perils of the seas.' If the boat was not deliberately scuttled, the only other explanation offered is that the bottom plate had corroded through natural causes.

I hold that the plaintiff's suit fails and dismiss it with costs on scale No. 2.

(7) (1901) 1 K. B. 290; 71 L. J. K. B. 177; 50 W. R. 272; 85 L. T. 783; 18 T. L. R. 121; 7 Com. Cas. 10; 9 Asp. M. C. 263.

(8) (1887) 12 A. C. 518; 57 L. J. Q. B. 24; 57 L. T. 726; 36 W. R. 369; 52 J. P. 196; 6 Asp. M. C. 212.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 37 OF 1911.

SUIT No. 167 OF 1906.

January 11, 1912.

Present:—Sir Basil Scott, KT., Chief Justice, and MR. Justice Russell.

LALJI NENSEY LUDHA—APPELLANT

versus

KESHOWJI PUNJA—RESPONDENT.

Parties—Hindu Law—Joint family business—Suit on business contracts—Necessary parties—Minor members—Plaint—Amendment—Development of original cause of action—Date of institution of suit.

It is not necessary, in the case of a Hindu family, to join in a suit upon a business contract the minor members of the family who in fact take no share in the business which is carried on on behalf of the family.

The only necessary parties are those who actually contracted with the defendant.

Where the allegations introduced in a plaint by amendment are mere development of plaintiff's position and original cause of action and do not introduce any new cause of action, the suit must be taken to have been instituted on the date of the original plaint.

Mr. Strangman, Advocate-General, (with him Mr. Inverarity), for the Appellant.

Mr. Raikes, (with him Mr. Bahadurji), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the dismissal by Mr. Justice Beaman of a suit filed by the plaintiff, as the sole surviving partner of a firm carried on by himself and his father Nensey Ludha in the year 1903, in which year the defendants incurred certain obligations to that firm. The plaintiff alleged that his father died on the 4th of February 1905 and that the plaintiff then became the sole owner of the firm. The defendants put in a written statement in the year 1906, putting in issue the allegation that the present plaintiff was a partner with his father, Nensey Ludha.

The suit came on for hearing on the 8th July 1911, and the first issue raised was whether the plaintiff was a partner with his father, Nensey Ludha, in the firm of that name. Certain evidence was recorded. The plaintiff alleged a partnership and he was cross-examined, and as a result of the hearing on the first day, it was apparently suggested that the plaintiff could not succeed unless the plaint was amended; and on the 15th July, in spite of the objection of the defendants, an amendment was allowed whereby the plaintiff altered his plaint in certain respects. The learned Judge states the circumstances, under which the amendment was allowed, as follows:—"This suit was originally instituted by the plaintiff as the surviving partner in a firm. An objection was taken that the firm, alleged to consist of the plaintiff and his father, was in no real sense a partnership, and the suit as framed was bad on that account. Issues were raised and some evidence was gone into, at the close of which it certainly did appear that the plaintiff would have little chance of establishing the alleged partnership. He was granted an adjournment to amend the plaint. This has now been done and the plaintiff sues as the surviving member of a joint Hindu family originally consisting of his father and himself alone, but at the present day consisting of himself and his two minor children, born after the filing of the suit, and his mother." The amendments in the plaint are as follows:—The first para. as it originally stood was: "In the year 1903 the plaintiff and his late father Nensey Ludha were carrying on business as grocers in Bombay in partnership with each other in the name of firm of Nensey Ludha." By the amendment the words "in partnership with each other" were struck out and the following sentence was added, namely: "The said business was an asset of a joint and undivided Hindu family, the only male members of which were the plaintiff and his said father." In the fourth para. instead of the words, "the plaintiff is now the sole owner of the said firm of Nensey Ludha" is substituted, "the plaintiff thereupon became the sole owner of the said firm of Nensey Ludha by survivorship." And para. 9 (a) was added stating as follows:—"since the filing of this suit, the plaintiff has had two sons born to him. The plaintiff is the manager of the joint and undivided Hindu family consisting of himself, his said two sons and his mother."

There is, therefore, no allegation that the liability of the defendants was incurred to a firm or a business which at that time was being carried on by the plaintiff as manager on behalf of his minor sons. According to the plaint, they were not in existence at the date of the cause of action or at the date of the filing of the plaint. It has been contended on behalf of the respondents that the effect of the amendment of the plaint is to delete the allegation that the plaintiff and his father carried on business in partnership and to substitute a claim based upon the right of the plaintiff to sue on behalf of himself and his minor children as members of a joint Hindu family possessed of a cause of action in which they are all equally entitled, and it is contended that upon that footing, the plaintiff cannot sue alone, and that if his minor sons should be joined, which they have not been, the suit would be barred by limitation. The learned Judge in the lower Court acceded to that argument and, considering himself to be bound by the decision of this Court in Naranji v. Mohi Govanji (1), held that there was a rule that all members of a joint Hindu family in existence at the date of the filing of the plaint were necessary parties and that the same rule extended to the members of a joint family born between the filing of the plaint and the decree.

Now, the report of the case of Naranji v. Mohi Govanji (1) shows clearly, we think, that the ratio decidendi was that the debt sued for was joint family property and, treating the case from that point of view alone, that a minor who was born after the date of the filing of the suit ought to be joined with his co-parceners in the suit. No reference is made in the judgment to the question whether the parties to the suit ought to be regulated according to the parties to the contract at the time the contract was made. It appears to us that this case should be decided with reference to the question who were the parties to the contract and that it is not necessary in the case of a Hindu family to join in a suit upon a business contract minor members of the family who in fact take no share in the business which is carried on on behalf of the family. The cases of Ramsebuk v. Ramlall Koondoo (2) and Kalidas Kevaldas v. Nathu Bhagvan (3) show that those who actually were contracting parties with the defendant must, in the case of a suit by members of a Hindu family, all be joined, but neither of those cases shows that minor members of the family, who take no part in the family business, should be joined in suing for business debts. The contrary has in fact been held by Mr. Justice Sale in Lutchmanen Chetty v. Siva Prokasa Modaliar (4), a case which unfortunately does not appear to have been cited to the learned Judge in the Court below. Mr. Justice Sale had before him a case the facts of which were as follows:—The only original partners of a firm in whose name the note in suit

(1) 9 Bom. L. R. 1126.
(2) 6 C. 815; 8 C. L. R. 457.
(3) 7 B. 217.
(4) 26 C. 349; 3 C. W. N. 190.

was given were the plaintiff and his brother Ramanathen Chetty, and upon the death of the latter and at the date of the note, the plaintiff was the sole surviving partner of the firm. But it was proved that he had four sons living, the eldest of whom was nine or nine and a half, while the youngest was born since the institution of the suit, and the son of the deceased brother Ramanathen Chetty died after the institution of the suit leaving only a daughter. None of the plaintiff's sons were in existence at the time the dealings with the defendent commenced. At the date of the execution of the note in suit, the plaintiff's eldest son was probably in existence, and the plaintiff's brother's son was also in existence, but it did not appear when he was born and the defendant relied mainly in bar of the suit on the plea that all necessary parties to the suit had not been joined as plaintiffs. Mr. Justice Sale, after referring to Ramsebuk's case (2), said: "No authority has been cited to show that infant members of a Hindu co-parcenary must be joined as co-plaintiffs in suits to recover claims arising out of a joint family business managed by adult members of the family. A debtor of a firm carrying on a joint family business is, no doubt, entitled to insist that all his co-contractors should join as plaintiffs in a suit instituted to recover the debt, but on what principle can it be said that infants, possibly of tender years as in this case, who are not shown to have been admitted into the trading partnership or to have taken any part in the business or exercised any control therein, are in any sense co-contractors of the debtor? A trade, like other personal property, is descendible amongst Hindus, but it does not follow that a Hindu infant, who by birth or inheritance becomes entitled to an interest in a joint family business, becomes at the same time a member of the trading partnership which carries on the business." He then refers to the case of Petumdoss v. Ramdhone Doss (5). In that case, it was held that a minor son of a Hindu father could not join in a claim upon a mercantile contract for non-delivery of goods, and the Chief Justice said: "The son is proved to be only three years of age, and it appears that there are other sons of the father. The witness, who said that they were partners, appears to us to have drawn that conclusion merely from the use of the child's name in the firm. The law of joinder of parties is a law of procedure, and is governed by the lex fori. It is desirable that it should be uniform. If we were to decide in this case that the infant son may be joined, it would be equivalent to a decision that he and others, situated as he is, must be joined in all cases as co-plaintiffs, and as this could only proceed on the ground of a real partnership evidenced by the mere use of a name, it would be really equivalent to deciding that such infants might be joined as defendants at the pleasure of a plaintiff." That case was referred to in the earliest of the Bombay cases upon the law relating to infants interested in family businesses: Ramlal Thakursidas v. Lakhmichand Muniram (6). It is also pointed out by Mr. Justice Sale that a dormant partner in England may join in a suit as plaintiff but never need do so. That is stated in Lindley on Partnership, page 313; and in Dicey on Parties, page 151, it is said: "A dormant partner is a person who does not appear to be a partner, but is so, and occupies the position of an undisclosed principal, and, therefore, always may, and never need, join in an action on a contract made with the firm." The case of Ramsebuk v. Ramlall Koondoo (2) has lately been discussed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh (7) and from that judgment it appears that a man can only claim to be sued by the people with whom he contracted.

It appears to us that upon amendment, the plaint has a two-fold aspect. It is based on the allegation that a firm was carried on for the purpose of a grocery business between the plaintiff and his deceased father, of which the plaintiff is the sole surviving partner and also upon the allegation that the plaintiff and his father were joint and that as a necessary consequence, the sons of the plaintiffs born after the institution of the suit are joint with the plaintiff in the family property. It does not follow from that, however, that the defendants can insist upon those sons being joined.

(5) (1848) Taylor 279.

(6) 1 B. H. C. R. App. 51.

(7) 38 I. A. 45 at p. 53; 13 Bom. L. R. 359; 15 C. W. N. 321; 8 A. L. J. 256; 9 M. L. T. 343; 15 C. L. J. 345; 21 M. L. J. 378.

KALLU MAL v. SHAMS-UD-DIN.

We are of opinion that the allegations introduced in the plaint by amendment are mere developments of the plaintiff's position and they do not introduce any new cause of action which can be defeated by applying the law of limitation. The amendments only develop the original cause of action.

We set aside the decree of the lower Court and remand the case for trial to a conclusion. Costs costs in the cause.

Decree set aside.

Attorneys for the Plaintiff: Messrs. Ardeshir, Hormusji, Dinsha & Co.

Attorneys for the Defendants: Messrs. Wadia, Gandhi & Co.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 645 OF 1912.

November 9, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson and Mr. Justice Chevis.

KALLU MAL—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

SHAMS-UD-DIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND Musammat MALKA JAN AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—RESPONDENTS

Declaratory suit—Suit against decree-holder and judgment-debtor that attached property is not liable to attachment—Judgment-debtor also made defendant but not appearing, disputing or admitting plaintiff's claim—Jurisdiction—Value of suit—Value of property.

In execution of his decree, a decree-holder had the property in dispute attached as that of his judgment-debtor. The plaintiff filed an objection against the attachment but without success. Thereupon he brought this regular suit praying for a declaration that the property was his and not of the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder as well as the judgment-debtor were both impleaded as defendants but the latter did not appear and, therefore, so far as he was concerned, there was neither admission nor denial of the plaintiff's claim:

Held, that, as the judgment-debtor was made a party to the suit, the jurisdiction value of the suit was the value of the property, it being quite immaterial that the judgment-debtor did not appear and dispute or admit the claim.

Bishnu Singh v. Lal Singh, 55 P. R. 1906; 71 P. L. R. 1906 and Zorawar Singh v. Deva, 142 P. R. 1906, considered.

Dwarka Das v. Kameshar Prasad, 17 A. 69 and Sher Ali Shah v. Lachman Das, 94 P. R. 1908; 74 P. W. R. 1908, followed.

First appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Delhi, dated the 15th April 1910, decreeing the claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Fazl Ilahi for Lala Chuni Lal, and Lala Gopal Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In execution of his decree against Musammat Malka Jan and Musammat Hiro Jan, Kallu Mal had the property in suit attached and applied for it to be sold. The plaintiffs, having filed an objection without success, brought this regular suit, urging that the property was their own and that Musammat Malka Jan and Musammat Hiro Jan had no power to mortgage it. The lower Court, having given the plaintiffs a decree in part, Kallu Mal appeals to this Court urging that the suit should be dismissed in toto.

A preliminary objection is raised on behalf of the plaintiffs-respondents that the value of the suit is less than Rs. 5,000 and that appeal lies to the Divisional Court. It is admitted that the value of the property in question is over Rs. 5,000 and that the value of the decree, including costs, is under Rs. 5,000. It may also be noted that Musammat Malka Jan and Musammat Hiro Jan, though made defendants in the present suit, have not appeared in Court, and so there is neither admission nor denial of the plaintiffs' claim on the record so far as these two defendants are concerned.

For the plaintiffs-respondents, reliance is placed on Bishnu Singh v. Lal Singh (1) and Zorawar Singh v. Deva (2), while for the appellant Dwarka Das v. Kameshar Prasad (3) is quoted. The Full Bench ruling of this Court, Sher Ali Shah v. Lachman Das(4), has also to be considered.

In Bishnu Singh v. Lal Singh (1), it is held that in such cases where there is no dispute between the plaintiff and the judgment-debtor, the value of the suit is the value of the decree sought to be realized and not the value of the property. In Zorawar Singh v. Deva (2), the same is held. We have called for the records of these cases and find that in both cases the judgment-debtor (or his representative) was a party. In both cases, however, it would appear that the judgment-debtor was siding with, and not opposing, the plaintiff. In fact, as pointed out in Sher Ali Shah v. Lachman Das (4), the judgment-debtor in

(1) 55 P. R. 1906; 71 P. L. R. 1906.
(2) 142 P. R. 1906.
(3) 17 A. 69; A. W. N. (1895) 3.
(4) 94 P. R. 1908; 74 P. W. R. 1908.

KALLU MAL v. SHAMS-UD-DIN.

Zorawar Singh v. Dewa (2) actually gave evidence in favour of the plaintiff. In Dwarka Das v. Kameshar Prasad (3), the test laid down as the criterion in such cases is the making of the judgment-debtor a party to the suit. It is held that where he is not made a party, the value of the suit is the value of the decree sought to be enforced, but that where he is impleaded, the value of the suit is the value of the property. The reason given for the distinction is that when the judgment-debtor is made a party, the decision arrived at is res judicata between him and the plaintiff and so covers the whole of the property and not merely so much of the property as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree. Nothing is here said as to the judgment-debtor disputing the claim of the plaintiff or admitting it; this is a matter which is evidently regarded as immaterial.

We now turn to Sher Ali Shah v. Lachman Das (4). The order referring the case to a Full Bench is one in which the learned Judge divides suits into three classes,

(a) when property attached has been released on objection, and the decree-holder sues for a declaration that the property is liable to attachment,

(b) when property attached has not been released, the objection being disallowed, and a suit is brought by the objector against the decree-holder to declare the property not liable, the judgment-debtor siding with the objector and not claiming the property as his,

(c) when property attached has not been released, the objection being disallowed and the objector brings a suit against the decree-holder and the judgment debtor to declare the property not liable, the judgment-debtor resisting the suit and claiming the property as his, and the plaint asserting that this is the judgment-debtor's attitude.

With class (a) we are not concerned. The learned Judge held that in class (b), the subject-matter of the suit was probably the decretal amount. This, however, was not a definitely expressed opinion. It appears also to us extremely doubtful if the learned Judge intended to include in class (b) any suits brought by the objector against the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. The case then before the Court was one falling under class (c). After reviewing several reported cases, the learned Judge concludes by citing with approval the ruling of Dwarka Das v. Kameshar Prasad (3) pointing out what was the test applied in that case, and saying "the learned Judges make use of arguments that have my entire assent, pointing out, among other things, that the title to the whole of the property in the case put, which is similar to my class (c) above, will become res judicata as between all the parties to the suit." [It may here be noted that in the Allahabad case (3) the representative of the judgment-debtor did not defend the suit].

The judgment of the Full Bench was simply:—"For the reasons given in the referring order, we hold that the proper valuation of this case for purposes of jurisdiction is the value of the property attached and not the decretal amount."

After duly considering the above judgment, we think that the learned Judge who wrote the referring order meant to make a distinction between cases in which the plaintiff sues the decree-holder alone and cases in which the plaintiff joins the judgment-debtor as a co-defendant, and that this judgment cannot be quoted as authority for saying that, unless the judgment-debtor actually contests the claim, the value of the suit must be regarded as the value of the decree sought to be enforced, regardless of the question whether the judgment-debtor is added as a party or not. We take it that the Full Bench of this Court has followed, and in no way dissented from, the Allahabad ruling (3).

In the present case, the judgment-debtors have been made defendants to the suit, and, following the Allahabad ruling (3) and the Full Bench ruling of this Court (4), as we understand it, we hold that the value of the present suit is the value of the property. It follows that the value of the suit is over Rs. 5,000 and that appeal has rightly been preferred to this Court.

[Note.—The rest of the judgment is omitted, as it is not necessary for the purpose of this report—Ed.]

ZULEKABAI v. EBRAHIM.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT NO. 332 OF 1910.
August 17, 1912.
Present:—Sir Dinshaw D. Davar, KT., Judge.
ZULEKABAI—APPELLANT
versus
EBRAHIM HAJI VYEDINA—RESPONDENT.

Letters Patent (Bombay), cl. 12—High Court—Jurisdiction—"Suit for land"—Suit for recovery of title-deeds of immoveable property at Mauritius—Nature of suit.

A suit for the recovery of title-deeds of immoveable properties situate at Mauritius is not triable on the Original Side of the Bombay High Court.

In order to ascertain the true nature of a suit, a Court is bound to look further than the four corners of the plaint.

The words "suit for land" do not mean only suits for the recovery of land. The words include a suit which, having regard to the real object of the suit and the rights and contentions of the respective parties, is substantially a claim in respect of land.

A suit for recovery of title-deeds of land is substantially a suit for land and is in effect and in reality a suit for establishing title to that land and the recovery of possession thereof.

Mr. Bahadurji (with him Mr. Kanga), for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Jardine, acting Advocate-General, (with him Mr. Jinnah), for Defendant No. 2.

JUDGMENT.—Haji Oomer Ebrahim, a Cutchi Memon, died about twenty-eight years ago leaving him surviving his widow Zulekabai, the plaintiff herein, two sons, named Elias and Oomer, and a daughter, named Asibai, also called Amibai. At the time of his death, he was possessed of two immoveable properties situated at Mauritius. Two years after the death of Haji Oomer, his son Elias died and the other son Oomer died in 1899. They were both minors and unmarried at the time of their death. Oomer's daughter Asibai was married to Kaderdina alias Kadu Vyedina, a brother of the defendants herein. Asibai died on the 31st of January 1909 childless and intestate and Kaderdina died on the 26th of December 1908. The plaintiff claims that on the deaths of both her sons, she became entitled to the Mauritius properties "for a Hindu mother's interest therein." She has filed this suit praying, amongst other things, "that the defendants may be ordered to deliver to the plaintiff forthwith the title-deeds of the Mauritius properties."

All the three defendants have filed their written statements. The first defendant did not appear at the hearing. The third defendant appeared in person. Evidently, they have left the fight in the hands of the second defendant, who is admittedly in possession of the title-deeds relating to the Mauritius properties. All the written statements run on very much the same lines except for one or two small differences in details. I propose to confine my attention to the second defendant's written statement. With regard to the Mauritius properties, he denies that the plaintiff took a Hindu mother's interest therein. He says that succession to those properties is governed not by Hindu law but by Muhammadan Law, and contends that on the death of Haji Oomer, the Mauritius properties devolved on his heirs, namely, his widow, his two sons and his daughter, and that on the respective deaths of those two sons, the widow and the daughter of Haji Oomer got by inheritance additions to their original shares in the said properties. He further sets up an agreement between the plaintiff and her daughter Amibai whereby the plaintiff agreed to sell her interest in the Mauritius properties to her daughter Amibai for Rs. 1,062. As one of the heirs of Amibai, he says he is ready and willing to pay to the plaintiff Rs. 1,062 and counter-claims that on payment of this sum to the plaintiff, she may be ordered to execute the necessary conveyance. He has added two of his remaining brothers as parties to the counter-claim.

On behalf of the second defendant, the first two issues raised by the learned Advocate-General are:—

(1) Whether if this suit be regarded as suit for land, this Court has jurisdiction to entertain it as the land in question is situated at Mauritius; and

(2) whether if it be not so regarded, the suit is maintainable so far as it claims possession of title-deeds of the said land?

As these issues raised purely a question of law, they were first argued before me and I reserved judgment. The question involved in the trial of these issues is: Is this a "suit for land or other immoveable property" in so far as it prays that the defendants may be ordered to deliver up the title-deeds of the Mauritius properties to the plaintiff? Clause 12 of the Amended Letters

ZULEKABAI v. EBRAHIM.

Patent deals with the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court. It enacts that: "The High Court of Judicature at Bombay, in the exercise of its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction, shall be empowered to receive, try and determine suits of every description if in the case of suits for land or other immoveable property, such land or property shall be situated within the local limits of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the said High Court."

In this suit, there is no question that the immoveable properties are situated beyond the local limits of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court. The main contention of the learned Counsel for the plaintiff is that this is not a suit for land or other immoveable property within the language and meaning of clause 12. It is true that the plaint asks for no direct relief so far as the properties themselves are concerned, but is that enough to establish that this suit is not for land or other immoveable property? It is transparent on the reading of the plaint that the learned Counsel who drew the plaint was conscious of the difficulty of including the relief in respect of these properties in a suit in the Bombay High Court and he has, therefore, very adroitly left out the proper and necessary prayers which would, and ought to, have been there in order, if possible, to steer clear of the question of jurisdiction. Paragraph 10 of the plaint specifically states that:—

"The defendants have set up the false case that the said properties at Mauritius belonged absolutely to the said Asibai. The plaintiff discovered that the said Kadoo Vyedina when he went to Mauritius had appointed one Mokhi Moosa to recover the rents in future on her own account and had put forward his wife as the owner of the said Mauritius properties."

This establishes that Asibai in her lifetime claimed to be the owner of these properties. Asibai and her husband went to Mauritius in 1906. Plaintiff herself went to Mecca in 1907. According to her own statement in her plaint, she had been trying to recover the accumulated rent which her daughter and son-in-law recovered at Mauritius and the title-deeds which were in their possession ever since her return from Mecca. She has not been in possession of these properties or in the enjoyment of the rents and profits thereof any how since 1906. Under these circumstances, what would one expect in a plaint drawn in the ordinary way? Even an unexperienced draftsman could not omit to pray first that it may be declared that plaintiff is the owner of the properties in question, that she has a Hindu mother's estate in the said properties, that the defendants have no interest in the same, and that she is entitled to receive the rents and profits thereof. The next prayer would be that the defendants may be ordered to hand over possession of the properties to the plaintiff and account to her for the rents and profits received and recovered by them and then would follow the prayer for handing over the title-deeds of the said properties to the plaintiff. The prayer for title-deeds would be merely ancillary to the main prayers for declaration of ownership and for possession of the properties. Prayers such as I have set out would necessarily have been in the plaint if the property in question had been within the jurisdiction of this Court. The plaint is drawn by a member of the Bar whose experience in drafting pleadings is second to none in Bombay, and it appears to me that the learned draftsman has deliberately omitted them in order to steer clear of the difficulties consequent on the properties being outside the jurisdiction of the Court. However that may be, in order to ascertain the true nature of the suit, the Court is bound to look further than the four corners of the plaint. Does a suit fall out of the category of a "suit for land or other immoveable property" because the plaint is so drawn as to enable the plaintiff to say: "I am not suing for the recovery of the land—I am only asking for the delivery to me of title-deeds relating to that land?" The defendants say:—"Plaintiff is not the owner. She had a very small share which she has agreed to sell to the party through whom we claim. We are prepared to carry out the agreement and she is not entitled to the possession or custody of the title-deeds." I cannot decide the question as to who is entitled to the possession of those title-deeds without deciding to whom the properties at the date of the suit belonged. This necessarily involves the investigation of the title to those properties amongst rival claimants. Before I could order the defendants to deliver up the title-deeds to the plaintiffs, I must hold that the devolution of the properties at Mauritius is governed by Hindu law as the plaintiff asserts and not by Muhammadan Law as the defendants contend and ascertain who is now entitled to the ownership and possession thereof. I was told that a Commisson had been issued in this suit and the Commission evidence leads to a third alternative that the devolution of immoveable property in Mauritius takes place according to French Civil Law. Does the clause of the Charter which governs and settles the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdistion permit of my going into these questions when the lands lie in a foreign country?

There has been very considerable conflict of opinion as to the meaning and construction of the words "suits for land and other immoveable property." The Calcutta and other High Courts have taken very different views to those taken by the Bombay High Court till the year 1905. The Bombay High Court in its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction has given to the words in clause 12 of the Letters Patent a very limited and restricted meaning and has for many years entertained suits of all kinds relating to land only stopping short where the suit related directly and specifically to the recovery or disposal of immoveable property outside its jurisdiction. For this, we have the high authority of the judgment of Sir Charles Sargent, Chief Justice, who, sitting with Mr. Justice Scott, held, in the case of Yashvantrav Holkar v. Dadabhai Cursetji (1), that the Court had jurisdiction to try a suit for specific performance of an agreement relating to land situated outside the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court. We have decisions very much to the same effect in earlier cases but the judgment of Sir Charles Sargent settled the practice of entertaining suits for a variety of purposes relating to land outside the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court and this case was followed by Mr. Justice Strachey in Sorabji v. Rattonji (2), though not without great doubt and hesitation, in a suit for foreclosure of land outside the jurisdiction of the Court. Although the Calcutta and Madras High Courts took different views, the decision of Sir Charles Sargent was followed by our Courts till we come to the judgment of Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Vaghoji v. Camaji (3). In that case, the Chief Justice, Sir Lawrence Jenkins, in a considered judgment, sitting with Mr. Justice Batchelor, has reviewed all the authorities and pronounced judgment by which, in the words of Sir R. S. Benson, Chief Justice, Madras, in Sundara Bai Saheba v. Thirumal Rao Sahib (4), the authority of the decision in Yashvantrav Holkar v. Dadabhai Cursetji (1) "is considerably shaken, if not overruled."

I think it would be here useful to consider some of the leading cases on this subject decided by the other High Courts. In The Delhi and London Bank v. Wordie (5), the Chief Justice, Sir Richard Garth, after discussing several English cases as to the jurisdiction of Equity Courts, makes some observations which are very pertinent to the question I am now considering. He says:—

"But those cases are all more or less distinguishable from the present, which depends not so much upon the jurisdiction generally exercised by Courts of Equity, as upon whether this suit is brought substantially 'for land'; that is, for the purpose of acquiring title to, control over, land within the meaning of a particular clause in the Charter; and, we think, having regard to what is the real object of the suit, and to what are the rights and contentions of the respective parties, it is impossible to say that this is not substantially a suit for land."

In Hara Lall Banerjee v. Nitambini Debi (6), which was a suit for construction of a Will and the administration of the testator's estate and wherein possession of properties outside the limits of the Ordinay Original Civil Jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court was one of the prayers, it was held that that was a suit for land within the meaning of clause 12 of the Letters Patent and the suit was dismissed.

Ebrahim Ismail Timol v. Provas Chandra Mitter (7) was a case wherein the plaintiff

(1) 14 B. 353.
(2) 22 B. 701.
(3) 29 B 249;6 Bom. L. R. 958.
(4) 33 M. 131; 6 M. L. T. 263; 20 M. L. J. 108; 3 Ind. Cas. 930.
(5) 1 C. 249 at p. 263; 25 W. R. 272.
(6) 29 C. 315.
(7) 36 C. 59; 1 Ind. Cas. 472.

ZULEKABAI v. EBRAHIM.

sought to recover rents and profits pending termination of the lease of land beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. The learned Judge hearing the suit, in the course of his judgment at page 65, makes these observations:—

"What the plaintiff is seeking to do is to do something which will directly affect the property, namely, to obtain possession of it by receipt of rent. Under these circumstances, I hold that this is a suit for land outside the jurisdiction of this Court and, consequently, that it cannot be brought as far as prayers 3 and 4 are concerned."

In Nalum Lakshimikantham v. Krishnasawmy Mudaliar (8), Mr. Justice Moore goes further and says:—

"I would indeed be prepared to go further and to hold that the phrase 'suit for land or other immoveable property' as used in clause 12 of the Letters Patent includes all suits mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and (f) in section 16 of the present Code of Civil Procedure."

In the case of Sundara Bai Saheba v. Tirumal Rao Sahib (4), to which I have already referred above, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair held that a suit for maintenance by a widow praying that it may be a charge on a specified immoveable property would be a suit for that immoveable property as the decree would operate directly on the land.

The decision of our Court in Vaghoji v. Camaji (3) is in harmony with the decisions of the Calcutta and Madras High Courts to which I have referred, and whether it overrules the decision in Holkar v. Dadabhai (1) or merely distinguishes the case which Sir Lawrence Jenkins had in hand from that case, it is not for me to say, but it lays down in very clear and explicit language that the words "suit for land" do not mean only suits for the recovery of land. Whatever may have been the doubts and difficulties in other cases, it seems to me, however, quite clear that this suit, so far as it relates to the title-deeds of the Mauritius properties, though ostensibly a suit for the recovery of the title-deeds alone is not only substantially a suit for land but is in effect and in reality a suit for establishing title to that land and the recovery of the possession of that land.

(8) 27 M. 157 at p. 161.

The third issue raised by the Advocate-General is whether, in any event, the plaintiff is entitled to possession of the title-deeds as against the second defendant. If I find on the first two issues in favour of the plaintiff, I would have to enter into an inquiry as to what law governs the devolution of immoveable property of a Cutchi Memon situated in Mauritius, whether the title-deeds changed hands in 1906 under the circumstances alleged by the plaintiff or by virtue of the agreement set up by the defendants, who is the present owner of these properties and who is interested in the rents and profits thereof and who is entitled to the present possession of the said properties. Under the guise of a claim to title-deeds, the suit clearly involves the trial of questions of title to land and seeks the recovery of that land. That land is beyond the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of this Court and, under clause 12 of the Letters Patent, I have no jurisdiction to entertain the suit so far as it relates to the title-deeds of the Mauritius properties.

I find the first issue in the negative and for the defendants. In view of this finding, it is unnecessary to find on the second issue.

I will deal with costs of the trial of these issues when I dispose of the rest of the suit.

Suit to be on Board this day week as at part-heard case for hearing on the other issues.

[The suit was subsequently placed on Board and with the plaintiff's consent dismissed with costs.]

Attorneys for the Plaintiff: Messrs. Ardeshir Hormusji, Dinshaw & Co.

Attorneys for the Defendant: Messrs. Jehangir & Seervai.

EASTERN MORTGAGE AND AGENCY CO. LD. v. RAKEA KHATUN.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL APPEALS NOS. 355 AND 356 OF 1912 WITH CIVIL RULE NO. 4031 OF 1912.

August 5, 1912.

Present:—Sir Cecil Brett, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Chapman.

EASTERN MORTGAGE AND AGENCY CO. LD.—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAKEA KHATUN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Receiver—Appointment pendente lite—Discretion of Court—Appointment on application of mortgagee in mortgage suit—Interest left in arrear—Right to nominate Receiver, to whom belongs—Appointment to be made in interests of both mortgagee and mortgagor—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 94 (d), O. XL, r. 1

Though the appointment of a Receiver pendente lite is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Court, it must, in the exercise of that discretion, be guided by the circumstances of each particular case. As a general rule, the appointment of a Receiver will be made as a matter of course on the application of a mortgagee, if the interest payable under the security is in arrear.

As a general rule, the right to propose a person for the appointment of Receiver belongs to the party interested in obtaining the appointment, and effect will be given to his nomination. If the Court appoints a Receiver at the instance of a mortgagee, then the Court exercises its discretion as to who shall be appointed Receiver, and appoints the Receiver, whom, having regard to the interests of both the mortgagee and mortgagor, the Court considers the best person, Appeals from the order of the first Sub-Judge of Backergunge, dated June 10th, 1912.

Mr. B. C. Mitter, Babus Provash Chunder Mitter and Ambica Pada Chowdhury, for the Appellants.

Babus Jogesh Chander Roy and Gunada Charan Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These two Appeals, Nos. 355 and 356 of 1912, are directed against two orders passed by the Subordinate Judge of Backergunge in two mortgage suits brought by the present appellants, the Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, Limited, against the defendants-respondents, Rokea Khatun, widow of the late Tajamal Ali Choudhury, and others to recover the principal and interest due on two mortgage bonds executed by Tajamal Ali Choudhury and others on the 18th September 1896 and the 9th September 1897 respectively. The former bond covered a loan of Rs. 8,800 and the latter a loan of Rs. 3,50,000 and contained a proviso that Rs. 1,00,000 should be afterwards lent if the conditions under which original loan was made were complied with. One of the conditions imposed in the mortgage-deeds was that Messrs. Garth and Weatherall were to be appointed managers on behalf of the mortgagors of the mortgaged properties and that they were to pay off the mortgage-debt with interest out of the profits of the mortgaged properties and also to take their own commission. These two gentlemen were duly appointed managers and the additional Rs. 1,00,000 was afterwards advanced. Obstruction to the management is said to have been offered by the mortgagors with the result that the managers were unable to collect the rents from the mortgaged properties or to pay to the mortgagees any portion of the mortgage-debt or of the interest.

Meanwhile, in consequence of quarrels between the mortgagors and their co-sharers in the properties covered by the mortgages as well as in other properties belonging to the family, on the 14th December 1901, Messrs. Garth and Weatherall applied to the Collector of Backergunge asking that steps should be taken to prevent a breach of the peace and to enable them to obtain possession of the properties covered by the mortgages. The Collector sent on the application to the District Judge in whose Court it was numbered as Miscellaneous Case No. 74 of 1901. The result of the proceedings taken on this application in the Court of the District Judge was that on 27th March 1902, he called on the co-owners in the estate to appoint a common manager. They failed to do so and, on the 1st May 1902, the District Judge passed an order under section 95, clause 2 of the Bengal Tenancy Act directing that the management of the estate should be taken over by the Court of Wards; and as a temporary arrangement, he appointed, on the 12th August 1902, Abdul Ali Chowdhury as common manager of the estate. On the 23rd December 1902, the Court of Wards declined to take over the management and Abdul Ali Chowdhury was allowed to remain on as common manager. On the 8th May 1903, the District Judge removed Abdul Ali Chowdhury from the managership as his management was not satisfactory and as he was related to some of the co-owners. The Judge, on the application of Messrs. Garth and Weatherall, then appointed Babu Nibaran Charan Dass as common manager but, on the 9th September 1903, another application was made by Messrs. Garth and Weatherall that the estate should be placed under the management of the Court of Wards.

On the 16th September 1903, the Court of Wards agreed to take over the management subject to the condition that the Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, Limited, would remit the sum of Rs. 1,50,000 from their debt subject to the condition that the loan was paid off within a certain time. This was agreed to and the estate was under the management of the Court of Wards from the 17th September 1903 to the 15th May 1912. The Court of Wards on the 15th March 1912 gave notice that they would give up the management on that date.

Meanwhile, on the 11th September 1911, no payments having been made up to that date in discharge of the mortgage-debt or the interest, the Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, Limited, instituted the two suits to recover the whole sum due on the mortgage-bonds with interest to date and also another suit on a promissory-note for money advanced by the Company to pay the Government revenue which had fallen due on the mortgaged properties.

After receipt from the Court of Wards of the intimation that it proposed to give up the management on the 15th May 1912, notices were issued by the District Judge to the co-owners of the estate to show cause why a common manager should not be appointed and no cause having been shown, the District Judge, on the 7th May 1912, appointed Babu Debendra Nath Dutt, a Pleader of his Court, as common manager of the Estate.

On the 5th June 1912, application was made by the Eastern Mortgage and Agency Company, Limited, to the District Judge to set aside the order appointing the manager on the ground that it had been made without notice to them though they were co-proprietors having purchased 87 items of property in the estate but on the same date, the District Judge passed an order refusing the application.

On the 28th June 1912, a Rule was obtained from this Court on the mortgagors and other co-owners of the estate to show cause why the order of the District Judge of the 5th June should not be set aside on the ground that it appeared to have been passed without sufficient evidence and without any notice to the petitioners. This Rule is Rule No. 4081 of 1912.

On the 5th June 1912, applications were made to the District Judge in both of the suits (Nos. 442 and 444 of 1911) brought on the mortgages, for the appointment of a Receiver pending the disposal of the two suits. These applications were disallowed by the Subordinate Judge in a long order, recorded on the 10th June 1912.

Appeals from Orders Nos. 355 and 356 of 1912 are against these two orders.

At the request of the parties, the hearing of these two appeals and of the Rule No. 4081 of 1912 has been expedited and all these will be disposed of in this judgment.

Dealing first with the two appeals, we are of opinion that the grounds given by the Subordinate Judge in his order of the 10th June 1912 are not sound and cannot be maintained. It appears from the statements of the learned Counsel for the appellants that the original mortgage-debt of Rs. 4,50,000 has trebled and has now risen to over Rs. 12,00,000. Meanwhile, no interest whatever appears to have been paid to the mortgagees and on the contrary the mortgagees appear to have been compelled to advance money to pay the Government revenue on the mortgaged properties in order to save them from sale for arrears, and to recover the sums so advanced they have been compelled to bring another suit on the promissory-note.

Though the appointment of a Receiver pendente lite is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Court, it must, in the exercise of that discretion, be guided by the circumstances of each particular case; and it has been laid down as a general rule that the appointment of a Receiver will be made as a matter of course on the application of a mortgagee, if the interest payable under the security is in arrear (see Coote's Law of Mortgages, page 946, and the leading cases referred to therein).

Dis-agreeing, therefore, with the Subordinate Judge we hold that in the case of the applications with regard to which these two appeals have been brought, the mortgagees are entitled to have a Receiver of the properties covered by the mortgage appointed pending the disposal of the two suits.

We understand that the Subordinate Judge, who recorded the judgment in which the order was passed disallowing the application, has retired. It is, therefore, not necessary for us to express at any length our opinion on the language and substance of his judgment. We need only observe that the learned Pleader for the respondent has not attempted to support the grounds on which the Subordinate Judge has based his order and, in our opinion, they are altogether insufficient, and many of the suggestions made in his judgment appear to have no foundation in any facts.

We, therefore, decree both the appeals and set aside the order passed by the Subordinate Judge refusing the applications made by the mortgagees.

As to the selection of a Receiver; the parties before us have differed in opinion. Dealing with this question, we have to observe that as a general rule, the right to propose a person for the appointment of a Receiver belongs to the party interested in obtaining the appointment, and effect will be given to his nomination. Also if the Court appoints a Receiver at the instance of a mortgagee, the mortgagee not having, without the assistance of the Court, power to appoint a Receiver, then the Court exercises its discretion as to who shall be appointed Receiver, and appoints the Receiver whom it thinks best to appoint for the interest of the mortgagee and of the mortgagor, a person whom having regard to the interests of both, the Court considers the best person—(Coote, Law of Mortgage, page 958).

Before us, both parties are agreed that it is desirable that the gentleman appointed as Receiver should be one fully acquainted with and experienced in the management of Estates, and that the selection of a member of the Bar who has no such experience or knowledge should not be approved. They are also agreed that in the interest of both parties, it is much to be desired that the offices of common manager and Receiver should be united in one individual.

The learned Counsel for the appellant has suggested on behalf of his clients that Mr. Thomas Cunliffe Tweadie, who has considerable experience and knowledge of zemindari management, should be selected as Receiver of the properties covered by the mortgages, and from the testimonials which have been filed we agree that that gentleman would be a suitable selection.

On behalf of the mortgagors exception to his appointment is taken on the ground that Mr. Tweadie is managing other Estates on behalf of the mortgagees. This, however, does not appear to us to constitute any valid objection to his being appointed as Receiver in the present suits. Certainly, he would be the person best suited for the appointment in the interest of the mortgagees and in these suits the interests of both parties are in fact identical, namely, to secure a careful and firm management of the property and a proper collection and appropriation of the profits.

In our opinion, therefore, the application of the mortgagees should be granted and Mr. Tweadie should be appointed Receiver of the properties covered by the mortgage-bonds pending the disposal of the suits.

We have now to deal with the Rule No. 4081 of 1912, which is directed against the order of the District Judge appointing Babu Debendra Nath Dutt as common manager. Neither party have expressed any opinion against the character and probity of this gentleman but both are agreed that it is desirable in the interests of the Estate that a gentleman, having greater knowledge and experience of the management of Estates than he has, should be appointed as common manager. In these circumstances, we think that the Rule should be made absolute and the order of the District Judge appointing him as common manager should be set aside. We have received from the learned Pleader who represents the respondents in Appeal No. 356 of 1912, a list containing the names of four gentlemen who are suggested for the appointment of common manager. They are M. Najimuddin Ahmed, Babus Benoy Bhusan Gupta, Upendra Nath Sen, Basanta Kumar Guha.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has not offered any objection to the second-named. It must, however, be left to the District Judge to make his own selection from these gentlemen and Mr. Tweadie; and in doing so, we think he should endeavour to make such an appointment as will be best for the interests of the Estate and of both parties.

The appellants are entitled to their costs in these two appeals. We fix the hearing-fees at three gold mohurs in each. Each party will bear their own costs in the Rule.

Let the records be sent down to the lower Court without delay.

Appeals allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 595 OF 1911.

July 5, 1912.

Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, Kt., Ag. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.

SHANKAR VISHNU GOKHALE—APPELLANT

versus

RAGHUNATH HARI DHARAP—RESPONDENT.

Res judicata—Joint decree—Rights inter se of plaintiffs not adjudicated upon—Rights adjusted in subsequent suit—Recovery of share of first decree—Suit by person entitled to this money under second decree—Recovery of money by person with knowledge of cessation of right.

In 1899, A., claiming to be the sole proprietor of a trading firm, sued C. for the recovery of a debt due to the firm. A. joined his uncle B. as a pro forma co-defendant in the suit.

The Court found that A. & B. were co-partners and thus B. was joined as co plaintiff and a joint decree was passed against C.

In 1900, B. sued A. for partition of the joint properties. It was found in this suit that B. was not entitled to any share in the partnership in respect of which the debt was claimed in the previous suit. Two years after the adjudication in the second suit, B. recovered his half share of the decretal debt due from C. A. sued to recover this money on the ground that B.'s interest in the first decree had ceased to exist by virtue of the second decree :

Held, per Chandavarkar, Ag. C.J.,

(1) that the finding in the first suit that A. & B. were jointly entitled to a decree was arrived at only for the purpose of the defendant sued in that litigation ;

(2) that the Court was not called upon in the first suit to decide finally what the respective interests of A. & B were in the decretal debt ;

(3) that the finding in the second suit that B. was not entitled to any share in the partnership must be regarded as the final and decisive finding governing the jural relation of the parties;

(a) first, because it settled the interest between A. and B. which the judgment in the first suit had left undecided;

(b) secondly, even assuming that that judgment had settled what those interests were, B. having failed to plead that settlement as res judicata in the second suit, it was the adjudication in the second suit that must prevail as finally deciding the issue of title as between A. & B.;

(4) that B. having recovered the money while the decree in the second suit against him had come into existence, was liable to restore the money recovered by him knowing that he had no right to it.

Held, per Batchelor, J.—

(i) that there was no real inconsistency between the two decrees, because the later decree and that alone decided the question as to what interest, if any, B. had in the partnership;

(ii) that even supposing that the decision in the second suit could only be arrived at by overriding what was decided in the first suit, the later decision must prevail to govern the present rights of the parties.

The rule laid down in Marriot v. Hampton, 7 T. R. 269, that money recovered under a judgment or decree cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit or action whilst the decree or judgment under which it was recovered remains in force, rests on the ground that the original decree or judgment must be taken to be subsisting and valid until it has been reversed or superseded by some ulterior proceeding. If it has been so reversed or superseded, the money recovered under it ought certainly to be refunded.

Shama Pershad Roy Chowdhry v. Hurro Pershad Roy Chowdhry, 10 M. I. A. 223 at p. 211; 3 W. R. (P.C.), 11, and Jogesh Chunder Dutt v. Kali Churn Dutt, 3 C. 30; 1 C. L. R. 5, relied upon.

In order to bring the principle of the rule mentioned above into force, there must be bona fides on the part of the party, who has got the benefit of his opponent's payment. If a person enforcing a payment under legal process has therein taken an unfair advantage or acted unconscientiously, knowing that he had no right to the money, the principle cannot prevent the other party from recovering the money back.

Second appeal from the decision of the first class Subordinate Judge, at Thana, confirming that passed by the Subordinate Judge at Mahad, in Civil Suit No. 501 of 1908.

Mr. Coyajee (with him Mr. V. B. Virkar), for the Appellant.

Mr. Nadkarni (with him Mr. P. P. Khare), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

CHANDAVARKAR, AG. C. J.—In the suit of 1899, there was, no doubt, an issue framed, raising the question whether the present respondent Hari, who was plaintiff therein, could sue alone to recover the debt in dispute from the defendant in that suit. And the Court trying it found that he could not sue alone and that Damodar, father of respondents Nos. 2 to 5, who was defendant No. 2 in that suit, had the right to be co-plaintiff therein. That finding was recorded upon the ground that the debt sued for was a debt due to a partnership of which Hari, and Damodar were co-partners. That finding, however, was arrived at only for the purpose of the defendant sued in that litigation. But the Court did not, indeed was not, called upon to decide finally what the respective interests of Hari and Damodar inter se were as to the amount recovered from the debtor of the partnership and whether either Hari or Damodar was entitled as between themselves to the whole or any portion of the decretal debt. In the second suit, which was brought in 1900 for partition by Damodar against Hari, the question left undecided in the previous suit was raised in respect of the same partnership and it was found that Damodar was not entitled to any share in the partnership which formed part of the properties alleged by Damodar to be the joint properties of himself and Hari. No doubt, the ground on which the adjudication in the second suit went was that Damodar was not a co-partner of Hari because he was not a co-parcener. This finding must be regarded as the final and decisive finding governing the jural relations of the parties for two reasons: first, it settled the interest between Damodar and Hari, which the judgment in the suit of 1899 had left undecided, and, secondly, even, assuming that that judgment had settled what those interests were, Damodar having failed to plead that settlement as res judicata in the second suit, it is the adjudication in the second suit that must prevail as finally deciding the issue of title as between the parties. From whichever point of view we look at the question, Damodar was not entitled to recover any share in the money paid by the defendant in the suit of 1899 in execution of the decree therein. And having recovered it under compulsion of law, while the decree in the second suit against him had come into existence, he is liable to restore the money recovered by him knowing that he had no right to it.

The decree must, therefore, be confirmed with costs.

BATCHELOR, J.—I am of the same opinion. It is to be observed that the only point which was decided in Suit No. 694 of 1899 was that Damodar was entitled to be brought on the record as a plaintiff. It may be that, for the purpose of deciding that point, the question was entered upon and considered whether Damodar had any interest in the partnership. But the only decision as to what interest Damodar had in the partnership is the decision contained in the decree in the later Suit No. 71 which is a decision that Damodar has no such rights at all. It may be pointed out that this later decision was subsisting, had in fact been subsisting for nearly two years, when this application for execution was made. In the view, therefore, which I take of these two decrees, it would not appear that there is any real inconsistency between them, because the later decree and that alone decided the question now in issue as to what interest, if any, Damodar had in the partnership. But, even supposing that that decision could only be arrived at by overriding what was decided in Suit No. 694, I should still be of opinion that the later decision must prevail to govern the present rights of the parties. Upon this point, the appellant relied upon the case of Marriott v. Hampton (1), which is authority for the position that money recovered under compulsion of legal process cannot ordinarily be recovered back. This case and the extent of its authority in India were noticed by the Privy Council in Shama Pershad Roy Chowdhry v. Hurro Pershad Roy Chowdhry (2). Their Lordships there say:—"There is no doubt that, according to the law of this country—and their Lordships see no reason for holding that it is otherwise in India—money recovered under a decree or judgment cannot be recovered back in a fresh suit or action whilst the decree or judgment under which it was recovered remains in force; but this rule of law rests, as their Lordships apprehend, upon this ground, that the original decree or judgment must be taken to be subsisting and valid until it has been reversed or superseded by some ulterior proceeding. If it has been so reversed or superseded, the money recovered under it ought certainly to be refunded....."

It appears to me that those words are perfectly applicable to the present facts if

(1) (1797) 7 T. R. 269; 2 Esp. 546; 4 R. R. 439.
(2) 10 M. I. A. 203 at p. 211; 3 W. R. (P.C.) 11.

we suppose that the decree in the later suit had the effect of setting aside or superseding the decision in the earlier suit.

Reference may be made also to the case of Jogesh Chunder Dutt v. Kali Churn Dutt (3), where the majority of the Full Bench took a similar view of the effect and operation of Marriott v. Hampton (1) and Ward & Co. v. Wallis (4) is further authority for limiting the extent of the applicability of this latter case. There Mr. Justice Kennedy says :—" that there must be bona fides on the part of the party who has got the benefit of his opponent's payment in order to bring the principle laid down in that case into force, and that if the person enforcing a payment under legal process has therein taken an unfair advantage or acted unconscientiously, knowing that he had no right to the money, the principle laid down in Marriott v. Hampton (1) may not prevent the defendant from recovering the money back."

It seems to me that these words are of application to the present facts where, as I have noticed, the decree denying Damodar any rights in this co-parcenary had been existing for about two years when this application to execute was instituted.

In fine, I base my decision on the view that, whatever authority was by the earlier decree conferred on the appellant for the recovery of the money, was obliterated and superseded by the later decree, which was in force when this application for execution was made.

Decree confirmed.

(3) 3 C. 30; 1 C. L. R. 5.
(4) (1900) 1 Q. B. 675 at p. 678; 69 L. J. Q. B. 423; 82 L. T. 261.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.
CIVIL RULE No. 4601 OF 1911.
May 20, 1912.

Present:—Sir Cecil Brett, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Sharfuddin.

MR. K. B. DUTT AND ANOTHER—DECREE-HOLDERS—PETITIONERS

versus

GOSTHA BEHARY BHUIYA AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Limitation—Decree for rent obtained by co-sharer landlord without joining co-sharers—Money-decree—Execution—Special limitation, if applicable—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 148A, 158A, Sch. III, Art. 6.

A decree obtained by a co-sharer landlord for his share of the rent in a suit, not brought under section 148A or section 158A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and in which the other co-sharers are not joined as parties, is a simple money-decree.

Consequently, to an application for the execution of such a decree, the special limitation prescribed by Article 6 of Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply.

Rule against the order of the District Judge of Hooghly, dated April 26th, 1911, affirming that of the Munsif of Uluberiah, dated September 3rd, 1910.

Mr. S. P. Sinha and Babus Provash Chandra Mittra and Norendra Chandra Bose, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—No one appearing to oppose the Rule, we are of opinion that it should be made absolute and for the reason that the suit in which the decree was obtained by the petitioners was a suit to which the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act did not apply. The suit was not one brought by the present petitioners as co sharer landlords under the provisions of section 148A or section 158B of the Bengal Tenancy Act and, in such circumstances, the decree which they obtained was a simple money-decree and, so far as we can ascertain from the materials before us, there is nothing to indicate that, in that decree, the petitioners invoked the application of the provisions of any section of the Tenancy Act. In our opinion, the present case is distinguishable from the case of Thakurmani Dasi v. Mohendra Nath Dey Sarkar (1), on which the lower Courts relied, so that, even if we were prepared to follow the decision in that case, as to which it is not necessary for us in this case to express any opinion, it would not, in our opinion, be applicable to the facts of the present case. The result, therefore, is that we make the Rule absolute, set aside the orders of the lower Courts and direct that the execution do proceed according to law. As there has been no appearance on the part of the opposite party in this Court, we make no order as to the costs of this Rule; but in the lower Courts, the petitioners will be entitled to recover their costs from the opposite party.

Rule made absolute.

(1) 10 C. L. J. 463; 3 Ind. Cas. 389.

ABDUL KARIM v. ALLAH BAKHSH.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 1043 OF 1910.
July 31, 1912.
Present:—Mr Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Beadon.
ABDUL KARIM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus
Haji ALLAH BAKHSH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS——RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Ground rent—Permanent tenancy—Evidence—Non-liability for enhancement of rent—Rights of permanent tenants—Buildings.

Long possession at uniform rent, erection of expensive buildings without interference for many years by the landlord, transfers by sale, gift, mortgage and succession, execution of several receipts of rent in which it is described as dawami or permanent, are indications to show that the tenure was permanent from the first.

Caspersz v. Kader Nath Sarbadhikari, 28 C. 738; 5 C. W. N. 858, relied upon.

Prosunno Coomaree Debea v. Sheikh Rutton Bepary, 3 C. 696; 1 C. L. R. 557; Secretary of State for India in Council v. Luchmeswar Singh, 16 C. 223; 16 I. A. 6; Beni Ram v. Kundan Lal, 21 A. 496 (P. C.); 26 I. A. 58; 3 C. W. N. 502, distinguished.

In the case of a permanent tenancy at a fixed-rate of rent, no enhancement can be allowed.

Permanent tenants of sites, which are let for building purposes, cannot be restrained from building or re-building their houses thereon in the absence of any express conditions to the contrary.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Delhi, dated 27th June 1910, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Delhi, dated 20th December 1909, dismissing plaintiffs' suit.

Khan Sahib Pestonji Dadabhoy and Mr. Prem Lal, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, and the Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These connected suits (Nos. 48, 49 and 51 of 1908), which were tried together by the Subordinate Judge at Delhi, were the subject of three appeals to the Divisional Court and are now the subject of five further appeals.

This Appeal No. 1043 and Appeal No. 1049 of 1910 are cross-appeals relating to Suit No. 49. Appeals Nos. 1044 and 1048 of 1910 are cross-appeals relating to Suit No. 51 and Appeal No. 1047 relates to Suit No. 48. These five appeals can conveniently be considered together. The plaintiffs, who are the same in all three suits, are the ground landlords of a part of the suburbs of Delhi known as Kishenganj, in which the houses of each set of defendants are situate.

The suits are for ejectment of the defendants from the land occupied by their houses and for recovery of arrears of rent. In case ejectment is not granted, plaintiffs in Suits Nos. 49 and 51 ask for enhancement of rent and in Suit No. 48 they ask for an injunction restraining defendants from re-building.

The first Court held that the defendants in all three cases are permanent tenants—that notices were not properly served on them—and that plaintiffs are not entitled either to eject them or enhance the rent. It accordingly decreed only arrears of rent at the old rate.

The lower Appellate Court has maintained the first Court's decree in Suit No. 48—but in the other two suits, it has allowed enhancement of rent to double the old rate to take effect from the dates on which the suits were instituted.

The first and chief point for decision is whether the defendants are permanent tenants or tenants-at-will.

It appears that in or about 1859, after the Mutiny, certain Punjabis had to vacate their Katra which was situate on the site of the present Railway Station. At that time, the land which is now the site of Kishenganj, was waste land and the then owner, Ladli Das, seeing an opportunity of turning the land to profit, let the land to the Punjabis for building sites at a ground rent of 8 annas per 100 square yards. The tenants duly built upon the land—and they and their successors-in-interest have been in occupation ever since. It is probable that the original houses were kachcha but without objection or protest on the part of the ground landlord, the houses (or at any rate most of them) have been converted into pukka houses of considerable value.

The approximate date of the commencement of the tenancies and the rate of rent then fixed are undisputed facts, but the other conditions are disputed and must be determined chiefly from the conduct of the parties.

According to the defendant's witness, Ghulam Jalani, one Mamur Bakhsh, now dead, acted on behalf of the tenants and obtained a written agreement from Ladli Das. This agreement is not forthcoming and it is urged that this is a good ground for presuming that the agreement did not grant permanent tenure.

If, however, the agreement was reduced to writing, it seems hardly probable that the ground landlord would not have himself taken a document from the tenants, and though Ghulam Jalani may have thought that a document was executed, he has no personal knowledge of the existence of such a document.

In 1883, a tenant named Kalu sued to have it declared that he was neither liable to ejectment nor to have his rent enhanced—and that, if ejected, he was entitled to receive the value of his building.

In this suit, an alleged copy of an agreement was relied on, but, though admitted by the first Court, it was held by the Appellate Court not to have been proved. In second appeal to this Court, the suit was dismissed on the ground that it did not lie, and it was remarked that "all inquiry into the merits of the case is, of course, mere surplusage."

Thus, in the suit of 1883, the agreement was not proved and as no evidence in proof of this document has been produced in the present cases, the document on the record of the suit of 1883 is useless.

In 27 suits decided by Mr. O'Brien, Munsif, 1st class, in 1897, for ejectment of tenants, two related to tenants holding under separate leases—but the remaining 25 suits failed on the ground that the tenants were permanent tenants not liable to ejectment. It is true that these suits related to a quarter known as Shishmahal but Ladli Das, who owned the Kishenganj land and settled tenants on it, was the man who also owned the Shishmahal land and settled tenants thereon—and it may fairly be presumed that in both cases the land was granted on much the same terms.

Receipts for rent have been produced in which the rent is described as "dawami" or permanent. It is alleged that four of these have been tempered with, but, even assuming that there may be ground for suspicion in regard to these, the other receipts relating to other houses do not appear to be open to suspicion and the existence of a permanent rate of rent is an indication of permanent tenure.

In 1883, Allah Bakhsh, plaintiff, who was then an amladar, sold his house to Muhammad Hussain (Exhibit D 4) and it is a significant fact that the word "dawami" appears in this deed.

The rent of the sites in dispute has never been enhanced. There have been transfers by mortgage, gift and sale. In Suit No. 51, at least, Musammat Latifan obtained the house by inheritance—and throughout the tenant's long possession since 1859; the ground landlord has in no way interfered with the erection of pukka buildings. In Prosunno Coomaree Debea v Sheikh Rutton Bepary (1), it was held that a holding-at-will, from year to year, or for a term of years, would not be converted into a permanent tenure merely because the tenant, without any arrangement with his landlord, builds a dwelling house upon the land.

In Secretary of State for India in Council v. Luchmeswar Singh (2), the original purpose of the tenancy was for a stud and the stud having been given up, the land was used for ordinary agricultural purposes. It was held that long possession at a uniform rent was insufficient to establish a permanent tenure.

In Beni Ram v. Kundan Lal (3), a piece of land had been let for a specified period at a specified rent for the construction thereon of a salt-petre factory. It was held that the lessor could evict the tenant after the term of the lease had expired, notwithstanding that the tenant had erected permanent structures without interference on the part of the landlord.

In Civil Appeal No. 1125 of 1905, Exhibit P. 17 C., the rent had been enhanced from time to time and the buildings had been erected only a few years before suit and it was held that the tenancy was not permanent.

The above authorities are relied on by plaintiff's Counsel, but they are distinguishable from the present cases. The defendants do not contend that a holding-at-will has been converted into a permanent tenancy merely by the erection of buildings—or merely by long possession at a uniform rent. The contention is that the land was let originally on a permanent tenure for building purposes—and long possession at a uniform rent, erection of expensive buildings without interference, and transfers by sale, gift and mortgage and by succession, are put forward as indications that from the first the tenure was permanent. It is, we think, beyond doubt that in making his vacant land into the settlement of Kishenganj, Ladli Das intended that the settlers should build their own houses and settle permanently.

(1) 3 C. 696; 1 C. L. R. 577.
(2) 16 C. 223; 16 I. A. 6.
(3) 21 A. 496 (P. C.); 26 I. A. 58; 3 C. W. N. 502.

The present cases, if not on all fours with A. Caspersz v. Kader Nath Sarbhadikari (4), are very similar to it, and we agree with the lower Courts in finding that the defendants are permanent tenants.

The next point for decision has reference to the claim for enhancement of rent—and in this connection we have been referred to section 22 of the Punjab Tenancy Act. The case of occupancy-tenants of agricultural land does not appear to be analogous to that of owners of houses in a town who are permanent tenants of the sites of their houses. Agricultural land is subject to the payment of land revenue of which the amount is altered from time to time—and the rent payable by the occupancy-tenant is regulated by the amount of the land revenue.

It is, of course, possible that a houses in a Municipality may be subject to house-tax, but presumably such a tax would be paid by the owner of the house on the estimated rental of the house and not by the ground landlord. At all events, it has not been shown in the present cases either that the houses in dispute are subject to a tax or that there has been any variation in the rate of rent dependent on a variation in the amount of taxes. Moreover, the plaintiffs have not claimed enhancement of rent on the ground of enhancement of taxation.

No doubt, the rent of a tenant from year to year or for a fixed term, can be enhanced at the end of the year or term—but when the tenancy is for a specified term, the rent cannot be enhanced during that term.

In the present cases, there was a permanent tenancy at a fixed-rate of rent and it is difficult to see how that rate can be enhanced.

No doubt, the land has increased in value but, in securing permanent tenants, the ground landlord fixed the rent for better or worse and if the land had decreased in value, that is no reason to suppose that he would have accepted a lower rate of rent. If the ground landlord could enhance the rent at will, he might enhance it to an extent which would force the tenant to vacate, and hence the enhancement of rent is inconsistent with the permanent nature of the tenancy.

We find, therefore, that the rent cannot be enhanced and, as it has been also held that the defendants are not liable to ejectment, it is unnecessary to consider whether the notices were duly served or not.

There remains the question whether defendants in Suit No. 48 can be restrained from re-building—and our decision on this point follows the decision in respect of the nature of the tenancy. Defendants are permanent tenants of the sites which were let for building purposes and they have a right to re-construct their houses.

The result is that the appeals by the planitiffs, Nos. 1047, 1048 and 1049, fail and that the appeals by defendant in Suit Nos. 49 and 51 (i. e., appeals Nos. 1043 and 1044) must be accepted.

We accordingly accept this appeal No. 1043 and, setting aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court, we restore the decree of the first Court.

Plaintiffs-respondents will pay defendants-appellants' costs in the lower Appellate Court and in this Court.

Tenants' appeals accepted—those of landlords rejected.

(4) 28 C. 738; 5 C. W. N. 858.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 105 OF 1911.
July 16 1912.
Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.
BANDO KRISHNA KANBARGI—APPELLANT
versus
NARSINHA KONHER DESHPANDE—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 179 (4)—"Applying in accordance with law"—Execution of decree—Application when in accordance with law—Relief sought outside decree—Omission to file inventories.

All that Article 179, Schedule II of the Limitation Act, 1877, requires the Court to see, for the purposes of limitation, is whether the darkhast itself, whatever its merits on the evidence, is an application made in due conformity with the requirements of the law relating to execution.

BANDO KRISHNA KANBARGI v. NARSINHA KONHER DESHPANDE.

An application for execution would not be bad in itself even if it seeks relief not strictly claimable.

If a person other than one entitled to apply applies for execution, or if the person entitled applies for execution in a mode and for a relief outside the decree, the application is not in accordance with law for the plain reason that the decree of which execution is sought is not in reality the decree to which the application professes to relate but some other decree, one not existing and, therefore, incapable of execution according to law.

Where, on the other hand, a decree gives certain reliefs, and the application for execution seeks some or all of them, it may be that, after going into the merits of the application, and considering on evidence all the circumstances and equities of the case, the Court comes to the conclusion that the particular relief or reliefs shall not be granted. Such a decision, however, cannot affect the application for the purposes of the question whether it is by itself in accordance with law, provided it meets in substance the requirements of the Code of Civil Procedure or any other law relating to execution.

Because a decree-holder does not ask by his application for execution for that relief to which he is entitled under the decree in a certain event, and asks for a relief given by the decree until the happening of that event, it does not follow that he has applied for relief outside the decree.

The omission to file inventories with the darkhasts is a purely technical defect, which cannot affect the question whether the darkhast itself is substantially in accordance with law.

Per Batchelor, J.—The words "in accordance with law" have no reference to the likelihood of the application succeeding or to the Court's competency to grant any particular relief which has been prayed.

The words are merely an adverbial qualification of the word "applying", and look only to the form or procedure of the application.

If the applying complies with the forms and procedure prescribed in that behalf, the applying is in accordance with law, and not the less so, because, on the merits of the application, whether for one reason or another, the application had to be refused.

First appeal from the decision of the first class Subordinate Judge of Belgaum, in Darkhast No. 443 of 1908.

Mr. Coyajee, (with him Mr. C. A. Rele), for the Appellant.

Mr. G. S. Rao, for Respondent No. 2.

Mr. Nilkanth Atmaram, for Respondent No. 1.

JUDGMENT.

CHANDAVARKAR, J.—This is an appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge, first class, Belgaum, rejecting Darkhast No. 443 of 1908, presented by the appellant for execution of the decree in Suit No. 434 of 1897. The ground of rejection is that the darkhast is barred by time, inasmuch as the previous five darkhasts were not in accordance with law, having each claimed relief or reliefs which it was not competent for the Court to grant.

The decree of which execution was sought by the darkhast in question had been passed originally on the 17th of November 1897; but it was amended on the 20th of January 1899. The amount payable under it was split up into four items. The first was a sum of Rs. 575 for costs made payable at once. The second consisted of two sums of Rs. 6,000 each; the first sum was directed to be paid by the end of January 1908; in case of such non-payment, interest at $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. was made to run on the sum from the 1st of November 1897 up to the date of payment. As to the second sum of Rs. 6,000, the decree directed that interest should run at 4 per cent. from its date to the date of payment. The third item of the decree was a sum of Rs. 44,000, with Rs. 1,980, as interest thereon. The decree made Rs. 44,000 payable in forty-four years by instalments each of Rs. 1,000 a year. For satisfaction of Rs. 1,980, the judgment-debtor was directed to put the decree-holder in possession of certain lands; and it was provided that should the profits thereof fall short of the amount payable, the judgment-debtor should make up the deficiency by payment in cash. It was also provided in the decree that if the judgment-debtor should put the decree-holder in possession of only part of the lands, instead of the whole, the former should place the latter in possession of other lands so as to enable the decree-holder to obtain the full amount of interest. The decree then wound up with a final clause, making the whole of the mortgaged property therein mentioned security for the whole of the decretal amount.

The first darkhast for execution was presented on the 18th of June 1898; the second on the 4th of January 1901; the third on the 13th of August 1901; the fourth on the 4th of August 1904; the fifth on the 26th of July 1907. These were all prima facie sufficient in law to keep the decree alive, because every application after the first was within three years of the last preceding application. And the present darkhast, having been presented on the 2nd of December 1909, is also prima facie in time, being within three years of its immediate predecessor, the darkhast of the 26th of July 1907.

But the Subordinate Judge has disallowed the darkhast now in dispute on the ground that all the previous darkhasts were not "in accordance with law." And they are not "in accordance with law," in the opinion of the Subordinate Judge, because every one of them sought relief or reliefs which, on considering the merits of the darkhast, the Court could not have granted.

In so construing the words "applying in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution," the learned Subordinate Judge has put upon them a construction not warranted by their plain meaning. To apply for the execution of a decree in accordance with law is to apply in the manner provided for by the law relating to execution of decrees. And that law is embodied in the Code of Civil Procedure, which is for its purposes an exhaustive Code. Chapter XIX of the Code of 1882, which was in force when the first five darkhasts in the present case were presented, deals in sub division B of the Chapter with "Application for Execution." The provisions therein point out, first, who may apply for execution, and against whom the application may be made; secondly, what the contents of the application should be; and thirdly, what should accompany the application and in what cases. These are specific provisions and they must be the guide in determining whether, under Article 179 of Schedule II to the Limitation Act, a darkhast is "in accordance with law." Section 235 clause (j) requires the application for execution to state "the mode in which the assistance of the Code is required." The last words of the clause "as the nature of the relief sought may require" show that even if the application seek relief not strictly claimable, yet the application would not be bad in itself. In the present Code (Act V of 1908), for "sought" we have "granted," i. e., granted by the decree. If a person other than one entitled to apply applies for execution, or if the person entitled applies for execution in a mode and for a relief outside the decree, the application is not in accordance with law, for the plain reason that the decree of which execution is sought is not in reality the decree to which the application professes to relate but some other decree, one not existing and, therefore, incapable of execution according to law. The decree in such a case not existing, the application made as to it shares its fate and is treated as non-existent. Where, on the other hand, a decree gives certain reliefs, and the application for execution seeks some or all of them, it may be that, after going into the merits of the application and considering on evidence all the circumstances and equities of the case, the Court comes to the conclusion that the particular relief or reliefs sought shall not be granted. But that decision of the Court on the merits cannot affect the application for the purposes of the question whether it is by itself in accordance with law, provided it meets in substance the requirements of the Code of Civil Procedure or any other law relating to execution.

Where, again, the application asks partly for reliefs granted by the decree and partly for reliefs totally outside the decree, the application may be void as to the latter, but all the same it is good in law as to the former and, therefore, "in accordance with law."

In the present case, the fallacy of the Subordinate Judge's reasoning is that he has held every previous darkhast to be not in accordance with law after examination of the merits and surrounding circumstances of the darkhast. That is going outside the darkhast, whereas all that the law (Article 179 of the Limitation Act) requires the Court to see for the purposes of limitation is whether the darkhast itself, whatever its merits on the evidence, is an application made in due conformity with the requirements of the law relating to execution.

According to the Subordinate Judge, the 2nd darkhast is not in accordance with law because at that point of time the only relief which the decree holder could claim under the decree was to bring the mortgaged property to sale, whereas, instead of seeking that relief, the decree-holder prayed for payment of Rs. 12,575. That might or might not be; that was a question to be determined on a consideration of the circumstances extrinsic to the decree and depending on questions of default, and waiver. But because a decree-holder does not ask by his application for execution for that relief to which he is entitled under the decree in a certain event, and asks for a relief given by the decree until the happening of that event, it does not follow that he has applied for relief outside the decree and that, therefore, his application is not in accordance with law. It is this view which has substantially affected the Subordinate Judge's judgment with reference to each of the darkhasts. In the case of some of them, he has assigned the additional ground that the darkhasts were not accompanied by inventories—a purely technical defect which could not affect the question whether the darkhast itself was substantially in accordance with law.

Each of the first five darkhasts in the present case claimed relief granted by and, therefore, within the decree. Whether on a consideration of all the facts, the Court could, in the events that had happened, grant the relief was a question for trial on the merits. But each application by itself was in order in that it sought relief which was in the decree.

Hence it was "in accordance with law."

On these grounds, the decree appealed from must be reversed and the darkhast remanded to the lower Court for disposal on the merits according to law. The appellant must have the costs of this appeal from the respondent; other costs to be costs in the darkhast. At the fresh hearing in the Court below, it will be open to the respondents to object to execution on any ground such, for instance, as that all or any of the items in the decree are time-barred. Parties will be at liberty to adduce evidence.

BATCHELOR, J.—The question before us is whether limitation in this case is saved by certain previous darkhasts under clause 4 of Article 179 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). That clause provides a period of three years from the date of applying in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution. The only question before us is whether the earlier darkhasts were cases of applying in accordance with law or not. If they were cases of applying in accordance with law, then, admittedly, the present darkhast is saved. If I were free to decide the present question solely upon the authority of the words of the Statute, I should be inclined to think that those words had no reference to the application's likelihood of success, or to the Court's competency to award any particular relief which had been prayed. As I understand the words, they are merely an adverbial qualification of the word "applying," and they seem to me to look only to the form or procedure of the application. I should think, moreover, that the words as they stand receive ample meaning by reference to sections 235 and 236 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882, which sections prescribe the particulars to be furnished with an application for execution. It is worthy of remark that the critical words qualify the word "applying." It is not even an application, but it is the applying which must be in accordance with law, and the meaning seems to me to be wholly distinct from what would be conveyed if the words ran "applying for execution in accordance with law."

On the other hand, if it is to be said that a decree-holder is not applying in accordance with law merely because he asks for something which under the decree the Court cannot grant him, we are, I think, confronted, at least in all cases where the decree is complicated or intricate, with this difficulty that the question whether an applying is made according to law can only be decided by an adjudication of the application on its merits. I venture respectfully to doubt whether that is intended. If the applying complies with the forms and the procedure prescribed in that behalf, I should be disposed to say that the applying was in accordance with law, and not the less so because, on the merits of the application, whether for one reason or another, the application had to be refused; nor do I think that the difficulty which I have mentioned is satisfactorily removed by any distinction between what appears on the face of the application and of the decree and what appears by a more careful consideration of those documents; for, in practice, I should doubt whether it would be possible to maintain any such distinction. If, however, the decisions of this Court oblige us to reject this view of the meaning of the words in clause 4 of Article 179, then, I am of opinion that in this particular case, the appeal should be allowed on the other ground that, as explained in my learned colleague's judgment, the former applications asked for reliefs which were not wholly outside the decree.

Decree reversed.

SAHIB JAN v. AMIRAN.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 985 OF 1910.

July 15, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Beadon.

Musammat SAHIB JAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat AMIRAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Muhammadan Law—Family custom—Succession—Right of representation—Daughter of daughter who died during life-time of her mother—Kanjars of Jagadhari town, Ambala District.

Kanjars of Jagadhri in the Ambala District are not governed by Agricultural Customary Law, nor do they follow strict Muhammadan Law in matters of succession. The right of representation exists among these people.

Second appeal from the decree of the Divisional Judge, Ambala Division, dated the 14th June 1910, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd class, Ambala, dated the 18th December 1909, decreeing the claim.

Mr. Fazal Ellahi, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gokal Chand Narang, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The dispute in this case relates to one-sixth share of certain property which belonged to Musammat Taman by caste kanjar, and is situate at Jagadhri in the Ambala District.

Plaintiffs-appellants, five in number, are sons and daughter of Musammat Taman.

Musammat Amiran, defendantr-espondent No. 1, is daughter of Musammat Allahdi, who was also a child of Musammat Taman, but pre-deceased her mother.

Musammat Taman died in September 1904, and as far as her land was concerned, mutation was effected in the names of the five plaintiffs and Musammat Amiran in six equal shares on 8th June 1905.

In July 1909, Musammat Amiran mortgaged one-sixth of the property in the share which she purports to have inherited to defendant-respondent No. 2 for Rs. 500.

The plaintiffs-appellants then brought the present suit in which they deny Musammat Amiran had any share in the property, and claim a declaration that they are exclusive owners in possession.

The first Court found that Musammat Amiran was not entitled to a share, that plaintiffs by their conduct had led the mortgagees to believe that she had a share, and that consequently the plaintiffs must be held liable to the mortgagee for the actual money advanced which was fixed at Rs. 300.

The lower Appellate Court also held that Musammat Amiran was not entitled to a share as heir, but dismissed the suit on the ground that plaintiffs were estopped from denying the title which the mortgagee had derived from her.

It is obvious that this family is not governed by agricultural Customary Law; but, on the other hand, it is equally obvious that the family does not follow strict Muhammadan Law, as among the plaintiffs-appellants themselves strict Muhammadan Law has not been followed as the daughters have admittedly succeeded equally with the sons.

If the personal law has been modified by a custom allowing an equal right of succession to sons and daughters, it is probable that there has been the further modification (which is not uncommon in the Punjab) giving the right of representation—and, in our opinion, the conduct of the plaintiffs-appellants clearly shows that this right of representation exists in the family.

Plaintiffs-appellants not only did not dispute the mutation by which the land went in six equal shares to themselves and Musammat Amiran but they actually consented to this mutation by putting their thumb marks to the entry made by the Patwari in the mutation register; and they allowed the mutation to be sanctioned without protest. They must have known that Musammat Amiran was entitled to a share, otherwise they would not have acquiesced in this mutation.

For these reasons, we find that under the rule of inheritance applicable to the family, Musammat Amiran became owner of one-sixth share of her mother's estate, and it is unnecessary for us to consider any question of estoppel.

Under the circumstances, too, the amount of the mortgage charge is a question with which the defendants alone are concerned, and it need not be considered in the present case.

We maintain the decree of the lower Appellate Court dismissing the suit, and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

A. MOUNA v. J. E. MOUNA.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
CIVIL REFERENCE No. 1 OF 1912.
July 23, 1912.
Present:—Sir N. G. Chandavarkar, KT., Judge, and Mr. Justice Batchelor.
A. MOUNA—APPELLANT
versus
J. E. MOUNA—RESPONDENT.

Divorce Act (IV of 1869), s. 3—Jurisdiction—Divorce suits—Resident at Aden—District Judge—Aden Courts Act (II of 1864), s. 3.

The Resident at Aden is not a 'District Judge' as defined in section 3 of the Divorce Act, as he has not been appointed a "Commissioner of a Division."

Consequently, the Resident has no jurisdiction to try and pass decrees in cases under the Divorce Act.

Civil Reference made by the Political Resident, Aden, in Civil Suit No. 21 of 1912.

Mr. Ratanlal Ranchhoddas, amicus curiæ, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. N. K. Mehta, amicus curiæ, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.

CHANDAVARKAR, J.—We are indebted to each of the learned Pleaders, Mr. Ratanlal and Mr. N. K. Mehta, for having assisted us with his arguments as amicus curiæ in this reference. The question is whether the Resident at Aden has jurisdiction to try and pass decrees in cases of divorce under the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869). Section 3 of the Aden Act (Bom. Act II of 1864), which is an Act to provide for the administration of Civil and Criminal justice at Aden, enacts that the Resident may hear and determine, in the first instance, all cases instituted in his Court, of whatever nature and whatever may be the amount or value of the property in dispute.

The Resident in making this reference has expressed his opinion that under this section his Court has jurisdiction to try suits under the Indian Divorce Act. But that interpretation of the section gives it a wider effect than could have been intended by the Legislature. The section in substance means that the Resident has jurisdiction to try suits only where he has jurisdiction given to him by law. For instance, if the words "all cases instituted in the Court of Resident" were construed to mean in their literal sense, all suits instituted, without any regard to the question of the jurisdiction of the Resident determinable from extraneous considerations, a suit for property in Bombay might also fall within the jurisdiction of the Resident if instituted in his Court. That would reduce the section to an absurdity. Therefore, the section in question must have a restricted meaning given to it, and that is, that the Resident has jurisdiction over any suit, where the jurisdiction is conferred upon him by any law relating to that suit.

Now, suits under the Indian Divoce Act are triable under a special law. Section 3 of the Indian Divorce Act provides that suits instituted under it shall be tried by the District Judge. 'District Judge' is defined to mean, in the non-regulation Provinces, other than Sindh and Burma, a Commissioner of a Division. Aden is a non-regulation Province, and, therefore, a suit instituted under this Act, (IV of 1869), can be tried only by a Commissioner of a Division, if such an authority exists there. But from information supplied to us by Government, it appears that there is no officer there with that designation. It may be that the Legislature was not aware of the requirements of the Courts in Aden when it enacted Act IV of 1869. The omission of the Resident from the Indian Divorce Act may be due purely to inadvertence on the part of the Legislature. We must hold it is a casus omissus, the rule as to which is that the particular case thus left unprovided for can in no case be supplied by a Court of law, for that would be to make laws. Our decision cannot lead to any practical difficulty because Government can appoint the Resident Commissioner of a Division so as to give him jurisdiction to try suits under the Indian Divorce Act. On these grounds, we must hold that the Resident at Aden has no jurisdiction to try this suit, and, therefore, with this answer the reference must be returned to him.

BATCHELOR, J.—I am of the same opinion. It seems to me no answer to our view to contend that the Resident at Aden is a Commissioner for the purposes of revenue or for any other purposes whatever. He may be a Commissioner in many senses, but he is not a "Commissioner of a Division," and under the Indian Divorce Act, only a "Commissioner of a Division" is given, in non-regulation Provinces, such as Aden, jurisdiction to entertain a suit for divorce.

Answer accordingly.

RAJA RAM v. FATTEH CHAND.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 569 OF 1911.

July 26, 1912.

Present:—Sir Arthur Ried, KT, Chief Judge, and Mr. Justice Robertson.

RAJA RAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Mahta FATTEH CHAND AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Benami purchase—Burden of proof—Shifting of burden—Statement of person as to his rights in property—Not to be lightly set aside.

Where the head of a Hindu joint family makes a purchase in the name of another member of the family, the onus of proving that the purchase was not benami lies upon the person who makes the assertion.

Gopeekrist Gosain v. Ganga Persaud Gosain, 6 M. I. A. 53, followed.

In a particular case, however, there may be other considerations which would shift the burden of proof in regard to the nature of the transaction. Thus, where a transaction is shown to be in the nature of a distribution of property amongst various members of a family, or for the advancement in life of one of them, the initial presumption may cease to exist.

Nawab Azimut Ali Khan v. Hardwari Mull, 13 M. I. A. 395; 14 W. R. (P. C.) 14, referred to.

The statements of a person, who is in the best position of all to know about his property, ought not to be lightly set aside on the mere ground that they were made with a fraudulent purpose. If the heir or representative of such a person alleges that these statements were incorrect, the burden of proving that this is so lies very heavily upon him. The idea that false statements may be lightly made at one time, for the advantage of the person who makes them, and then lightly repudiated when they appear to be to his disadvantage or to the disadvantage of his successor's title, ought not to be encouraged.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jullundur Division, dated the 1st February 1911, reversing that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Jullundur, dated the 14th November 1910, dismissing the plaintiffs' claim.

Rai Sahib Pandit Sheo Narain, for the Appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal, for Plaintiffs-Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is one of a class of cases which are exceedingly common in the Province. The appellants in this case before us obtained a decree in this Court for Rs. 4,000 against Musammat Durga Devi, widow of one Amar Nath, recoverable only from such property of Amar Nath as came to his widow at his death. In execution, the decree-holders sought to attach certain houses and shops. Fateh Chand, brother of Amar Nath, made an objection that the property in fact belonged to him. His objection was rejected. He brought a suit and that suit was rejected by the first Court. On appeal to the lower Appellate Court, the claim was accepted and the property declared to be not liable to attachment.

The sole question before us is, whether the property attached was or was not in fact the property of Amar Nath. This property was purchased by Pandit Bhag Ram, C.I.E., a resident of Jullundur City, who had been in the employment of several Native States, retired on a good pension and had accumulated considerable property. The property was purchased in the name of Amar Nath, son of Bhag Ram.

Great stress has been laid upon the question upon whom did the onus lay of showing that this purchase was or was not benami. It has been laid down clearly that in the case of purchases by the head of a joint Hindu family in the name of some other member of the family, the onus of proving that the purchase was not purely benami, lies upon the person making that assertion. This is laid down by the Privy Council in Gopeekristo Gosain v. Ganga Persaud Gosain (1), and may be taken as settled law.

We note, in the first place, that there is no definite decision here by the learned Divisional Judge that the family was a joint Hindu family, although we find in the decision of the first Court, S. Asad Jan, at page 6 of the paper-book, line 23: "The evidence, and particularly the statement of Rai Bhag Ram in the Income-tax papers, are clear as to the family not being a joint one. The father had clearly stated there that he had distributed his assets among his sons. Thus, if there was a joint family when the disruption took place, the presumption of Hindu Law does not apply. With this finding I dispose of this issue against the plaintiff,"—the issue being, did Amar Nath form a joint Hindu family with his father? We notice that the learned Divisional Judge has nowhere found that that finding of fact was incorrect, and if it is correct, the arguments used as to the burden of proof are not in point. Even assuming the family to have been a joint Hindu one and the initial presumption was, undoubtedly, in favour of that condition of affairs, as is pointed out in Nawab Azimut Ali Khan v. Hurdwaree Mull (2), other considerations may come in which would shift the burden of proof in regard to the nature of the alleged benami transaction, and, as the later judgment points out, where the transaction is shown to be of the nature of a distribution of property amongst various members of the family, or for the advancement in life of one of them, the initial presumption may cease to exist.

(1) 6 M. I. A. 53.

It is admitted in this case that the money came from Bhag Ram. It appears that in 1901, Bhag Ram started several shops in Jullundur. One was started under the name of Amar Nath. It appears that Amar Nath was not a very satisfactory man of business and was a somewhat wild young man. The learned Divisional Judge has found that Amar Nath never really controlled the business, but that he was entirely subordinate to his father. He finds that in December 1901, Bhag Ram drew up certain rules with his own hand. Amar Nath was merely to prepare accounts, and was to make no loan without security, except with his (Bhag Ram's) permission. Amar Nath was not to take money from the business without his permission. If there were differences between Amar Nath and Arjan Mal, the munim, Bhag Ram would decide them, and so on.

In March 1903, the Divisional Judge finds, Bhag Ram changed the rules. All the house expenses would be defrayed by Bhag Ram, and Amar Nath would get Rs. 100 per mensem from the profits of the business. The munim was to inform Bhag Ram of any delinquencies on the part of Amar Nath.

In another entry, dated the 24th May 1901, Bhag Ram remarked on the dishonest removal of money by Amar Nath. He ordered the munim to tell the world at large that Amar Nath had no connection with the shop. He also noted his intention of changing the name of the shop when an auspicious occasion arose.

(2) 13 M. I. A. 395; 14 W. R. (P. C.) 14.

In August 1904, (the Divisional Judge has given a wrong date), he did actually change the name of the shop to his own name, but it was not till August 1906, that he published a notice in The Tribune disowning Amar Nath.

It is now contested in appeal by the learned Advocate for the appellant that these entries, which have been accepted as quite genuine by the learned Divisional Judge, have not been shown to have been made at the time when they purport to have been made, and it is contended, further, that the statement of Amar Nath himself during the Income-tax proceedings shows that they cannot have been made till a much later date. It would appear from the facts of the case, even as put forward by the respondent, that had the assets of the firm been in question, it would have been very difficult to contend that Amar Nath had not, at any rate, been held out to the public as a partner in the firm which bore his own name only. The property in question, however, is not claimed to be the property of the firm, but to have been the property of Bhag Ram himself and not of Amar Nath in whose possession it was, and in regard to this, the learned Advocate for the appellant contends that the matter is absolutely concluded by the statement made by Bhag Ram himself in the grounds of his appeal to the Commissioner during the Income-tax proceedings and dated the 28th November 1903. It appears that Bhag Ram had been assessed by the Collector at a sum which he considered much in excess of what was correct. He made certain objections to the Collector in which he stated that the proceeds of the shop which stood in the name of Amar Nath belonged to Amar Nath, but that the capital belonged to him (Bhag Ram). In his appeal, however, to the Commissioner against the assessment by the Collector, he is very explicit. He begins by saying (para. 1) that owing to machinations of his enemies caused by religious and sectarian differences, his assets have been enormously over-estimated as will be shown from the following facts :—

Para. (2). That the house said to have been built at a cost of Rs. 50,000 is hardly worth Rs. 8,000. It is a small house, which has been built for appellant's younger son,

Pandit Amar Nath, who is carrying on business in the City of Jullundur and is paying a sum of Rs. 130 as income-tax already. The additions now in progress are being made by the aforesaid Pandit Amar Nath at his own expense, vide enclosure 1 A." The enclosure, we may note here, shows an expenditure of Rs. 12,577-15-9. Below this is a note of Bhag Ram himself to the effect that "the above amount has been spent by Amar Nath out of his own capital and I have no concern with it."

The petition then goes to recite, under clause (b) of para. 2, that the petitioner advanced a loan of Rs. 26,000 only, and not Rs. 60,000, to Kunj Lal and Company, on the 3rd January 1902, out of the amount settled by him on his son Pandit Amar Nath and that after a month and 11 days, the said amount together with Rs. 170 on account of interest, etc., was re-paid into Pandit Amar Nath's shop as part of the capital assigned to him. The transaction was practically one carried on by Pandit Amar Nath on his own account and is duly borne on his books (vide extract from Pandit Amar Nath's books, enclosure No. 2, and certificate bearing the signature of the borrowers).

The petition goes on to say that the petitioner did not advance any loans to the mercantile community of Jullundur, as will be seen from the enclosed certificate.

Then, further, in paragraph 4 of the petition we have it stated that the petitioner's account, as has been repeatedly stated by him, is shown in a separate ledger in the account books of his son Pandit Amar Nath, while petty pawns are recorded in a book in the hands of the pawnors themselves. "In his written statement to the assessing officers, petitioner referred to this statement and asked for its examination, but unfortunately he was asked to produce his separate accounts of the large transactions said to have been carried on by him. Petitioner invites attention to the fact that he was merely asked to do an impossibility. Where one has never advanced any loans to the mercantile community it is impossible for him to keep accounts. The Collector was prayed to examine the account in Pandit Amar Nath's books, and the book above-mentioned, but petitioner's Counsel was apparently misunderstood and his request was refused."

Further on he says, that he (Bhag Ram) has made a disposition of his assets between his two sons giving the younger (Pandit Amar Nath) Rs. 50,000 and house property in Jullundur and to the elder Pandit Fateh Chand, who is a practising Barrister in Ajmer, Rs. 23,000, and has kept a small reserve for his personal benefit.

In regard to these very clear statements under Bhag Ram's own signature, the learned Divisional Judge summarily remarks: "They were made with a special object, and all that they show, in my opinion, is that Pandit Bhag Ram was not willing to make false statements to Government regarding his property."

The learned Counsel for the respondent argues that he is entitled to show that these statements were incorrect and quotes a judgment of the Privy Council to the effect that too much stress must not be laid on the mere omission of certain assets from the statement regarding the liability to the payment of Income-tax, Ali Khan Bahadur v. Indar Parshad (3). We do not say that statements of this kind can never be shown to have been erroneous. The statements of Bhag Ram, a person in the best position of all to know about his property, cannot, however, be lightly set aside on the mere ground that they were made with a fraudulent purpose. Fateh Chand succeeds as an heir of Bhag Ram and, without going so far as to say that he was not competent to show that these statements made by his predecessor-in-title were incorrect, false and fraudulent, we certainly do think that the burden of proving them to be so, and of showing that these statements of fact made by the person most competent to know, are false, lies very heavily upon the respondent. Nor do we think it desirable to encourage the idea that false statements may be lightly made at one time, for the advantage of the person making them, and then lightly repudiated when they appear to be to his disadvantage or to the disadvantage of his successor-in-title. In this case we consider Bhag Ram's statement of fact made explicitly and in detail on the 28th November 1903, to be very strong evidence indeed that the house in question was the property of Amar Nath and we do not think that the respondent has succeeded in rebutting that evidence. We accordingly accept the appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the learned Divisional Judge and restore those of the first Court. Costs against the respondent throughout.

(3) 23 C. 950; 23 I. A. 92.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITIONS NOS. 671 AND 936 OF 1912.

May 3, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

VATHIAR RAMANUJA AIYANGAR AND OTHERS—PETITONERS

versus

P. R. AIYANACHARIAR AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code(Act V of 1908), O. XXXIX, r. 1, O. XLI, rr. 5 & 6—Stay of execution, reasons for—Annoyance to feelings, whether a ground for stay—Injunction, when to be granted.

In an application for a stay of execution, the Court has to be satisfied that the appellant is likely to sustain substantial injury by execution being allowed to take place before the disposal of the appeal. It is not usual for the Court to grant stay of execution if the appeal itself does not raise fairly arguable questions. Where no pecuniary or tangible loss is shown, it would not be right to grant stay of execution merely on the ground of annoyance to feelings.

In an application for a temporary injunction, the Court will have to be satisfied that the applicant has a prima facie case and further that the protection of his interest requires that an injunction should issue temporarily.

Quære—Whether when a party goes to Court claiming an injunction against his opponent to restrain him from doing something wrongful, the opponent should have the right, as a matter of interlocutory relief, to restrain him from doing the very act which he claims to be entitled to do and which he asks the Court to be allowed to be done without obstruction from his opponent?

C. M. P. No. 671 of 1912.

Petition praying for a temporary injunction restraining the respondents from taking the idol of Vedantha Desikar or any other through the Uttra, Chitra or Adayavalanjan Street within the seven enclosures of the Srirangam temple in pursuance of the decree of the District Court of Trichinopoly, in Appeal Suit No. 499 of 1911, pending disposal of the Second Appeal No. 451 of 1912, preferred therefrom to the High Court.

C. M. P. No. 936 of 1912.

Petition for suspension of the injunction granted by the District Court of Trichinopoly, in Appeal No. 499 of 1911 (O. S. No. 366 of 1909 on the file of the District Munsif's Court of Srirangam), restraining the petitioners from interfering with the respondents carrying Desikar through any of the said three Streets within the seven enclosures of the Srirangam temple.

Messsrs. T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar and T. Rangachariar, for the Petitioners in C. M. P. No. 671 of 1912, with Mr K. Parthasarathi Iyengar, in C. M. P. No. 936 of 1912.

Messrs. K. Srinivas Aiyengar and C. Padhmanabha Aiyengar, for the Respondants in C. M. P. No. 671 of 1912.

Mr. C. Padhmanabha Aiyengar, for Respondents in C. M. P. No. 936 of 1912.

ORDER.—There are two applications before me for disposal. Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 671 of 1912 is an application by the appellants in the second appeal pending in this Court for a temporary injunction to restrain the respondents from carrying the idol of Desikar in procession through any of the streets within the seven prakarams of the Srirangam temple. Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 926 of 1912 is an application by the appellants to suspend the injunction granted by the lower Courts restraining them from interfering with the Vadagalais carrying Desikar in procession through streets. The Vadagalais of Srirangam instituted a suit against the trustees of the temple and the Thengalais for a declaration of their right to carry the idol of Desikar, which they have apparently recently made, in procession through any of the 5, 6, and the 7th prakarams of the Srirangam temple and for an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with their right to do so. Their case was that the streets were public, streets and that as members of the public they had the right they claimed. The defendants denied that the streets were public streets and contended that they belonged to the temple. They alleged also that even if the public had the right of passage through the streets, such right was a restricted one, and that it was also contrary to the local usage that the Vadagalais should carry the Desikar idol in procession through the streets. Both the lower Courts held that the Vadagalais had the right to carry the idol in procession. With respect to Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 671, I have had considerable doubts whether this Court has jurisdiction to give the appellant an injunction of the sort they claim. The application would admittedly not come within the purview of rule 1, Order XXXIX. The appellants' contention is that it would be allowable under the provisions of rule 1 of Order XXXIX and that, apart from that rule, this Court has inherent jurisdiction to give such an injunction for the protection of the right of a party in a matter in controversy before the Court. It is pretty clear to my mind that the language of the rule would not allow an application of this kind. It cannot be said that there is any proceeding before this Court in which the appellants claim to restrain the respondents from doing a wrongful act, and that till the matter is tried, it is necessary to give an interim relief of the kind which the appellants seek as the result of their appeal. It does also look to me somewhat extraordinary that, when a party goes to Court claiming an injunction against his opponent to restrain him from doing something wrongful, the opponent should have the right, as a matter of interlocutory relief, to restrain him from doing the very act which he claims to be entitled to do and which he asks the Court to be allowed to be done without obstruction from his opponent. No case was cited in which an application of this kind has been allowed nor am I aware of any. I do not wish, however, to express a definite opinion on this point as, in the view I take of the merits of the application, it is not necessary to do so.

The trustees of the temple were defendants in the suit in the Court of first instance. They have not appealed against the decision of the District Court. The appellants here are the representatives of the Thengalai community. Excepting the question of the jurisdiction of the Court, the question for decision in both the petitions may be taken to be substantially the same, though I do not say it would be precisely the same. In an application for a stay of execution, the Court has to be satisfied that the appellant is likely to sustain substantial injury by execution being allowed to take place before the disposal of the appeal. In an application for a temporary injuncaion, the Court will have to be satisfied that the applicant has a prima facie case, and further that the protection of his interests requires that an injunction should issue temporarily. It is not usual for the Court to grant stay of execution if the appeal itself does not raise fairly arguable questions, so that, after all, there is not very much difference between the questions to be decided in either petition. Now, in this case, the lower Courts have both found that the public have a right of way for carrying processions as well as for passing to and fro. I do not wish to express any definite opinion on the question whether the finding may not be open to legal objection. I observe that the District Munsif found that, prior to the introduction of the Municipal Act of 1871, the temple was exercising considerable rights of ownership over the streets within the seven prakarams. The Munsif also observes that even now, the temple exercises the right of shutting the outer gate of the 7th prakaram. The temple is also receiving pala pattarai fees. Whether the fees are received for the use of any of the streets within the seven prakarams or only of particular streets or portions thereof, does not clearly appear. These, no doubt, are questions which might have a bearing on the decision of the second appeal. It is also urged that when the Municipality took charge of the streets, the inconvenience of Municipal control over the streets was recognised and it was expressly stated that regard should be had for the feelings of the people connected with the temple in exercising control. What exactly the effect of the reservation in the Government order allowing the Municipality to take control of the streets would be, it is unecessary to decide at present. There does not then appear to have been any question as between the respective rights of the Thengalais and the Vadagalais or of the trustees and the Vadagalai community of the place. Nor is it necessary to express an opinion on the question whether the reservation in the Government order would make the dedication of the streets for the public use a partial dedication. The lower Courts observe that after the Municipality assumed control of the streets, they have been treated as public streets in all respects. It is, of course, open to the appellants to argue that any act done by the Municipality contrary to the ownership of the temple would not affect their rights as against the Vadagalais. The finding of the Courts, however, is that there is nothing restricting the right of way that Vadagalais have over the streets as compared with the right that any one else has. Mr. Ramachandra Aiyar has argued that if the temple itself is the owner of the street, it would be open to his clients to prove that any grant of lands to the occupiers of houses and any rights of way must be taken to be subject to any reservations which must be implied by the nature of the grant. A difference would, however, have to be made between the temple having ownership of the street and the streets being part of the temple itself. This, again, is a question that it would not be proper to go into at this stage. On the whole, I am not prepared to say that the appellants have not got a fair case to argue in the second appeal. But has it been shown that any substantial loss would be caused? Admittedly, no pecuniary loss would be caused. It is not alleged that the Srirangam temple itself would be desecrated by a Vadagalai idol being carried in procession. Practically, it is admitted that the only injury that could be complained of is that the religious feelings of the Thengalai community would be outraged. It seems to me that where no pecuniary or tangible loss is shown, it would not be right to grant stay of execution merely on the ground of annoyance to the feelings of the appellants. An appellant very often is extremely annoyed that any decree against him should be executed before he has taken the opinion of the final Court of Appeal. He is particularly annoyed if his opponent is an enemy of his. If he belongs to a religious faction, I take it that his annoyance would be still greater. I think it would be a sound rule to act upon that mere annoyance to feelings cannot be a ground to grant stay of execution. There is really nothing before me to show that the idol of Desikar is an object of hatred according to the Thengalai cult, or that Vedantha Desikar is regarded as an enemy of God according to the Thengalai persuasion. It is stated that in the Srirangam temple itself there is a shrine of Vedantha Desikar. I very much doubt whether the outrage would be to the religious feelings of the Thengalais and whether it would not be to their feelings against people whom they hate because they are Vadagalais. At any rate, I am unable to hold that there is any injury that a Court of law can take notice of which would be a sufficient ground for staying execution. It is, no doubt, true that the act of the Vadagalais would be an innovation as they have not had a Desikar idol to carry in procession until now. But I do not think that this would be a sufficient ground for staying the injunction. Moreover, although I may stay the injunction, the declaration of the plaintiff's right would stand uninterfered with by my order. On account of that declaration, the Vadagalais would be entitled to exercise the rights which have been declared. The result then of my staying the injunction would be that the Vadagalais might still attempt to exercise their right to carry the Desikar idol in procession and the injunction being stayed the Thengalais would be at liberty to interfere with them. This is a condition of things which I think this Court ought not to be responsible for by any order that it passes.

In the circumstances, the only course open to me is to dismiss both the petitions.

Petitions dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPLICATION FOR REVIEW OF ORDER REFUSING LEAVE TO APPEAL TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

No. 22 OF 1911.

April 16, 1912.

Present:—Sir Lawrence Jenkins, KT., Chief Justice and Mr. Justice N. Chatterjea.

NAND KISHORE SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

RAM GULAM SAHU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Review—Privy Council, appeal to—Order refusing leave to appeal to Privy Council, if open to review—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLV—Value below Rs. 10,000 even if interest up to date fixed for redemption is added—Value above the sum if interest subsequent to that date is added—Redemption suit, when leave should be granted.

An order of the High Court under Order XLV of the Civil Procedure Code, rejecting an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, may be reviewed by the Court which made the order.

In a redemption suit, even if the interest was calculated up to the six months allowed for redemption, the sum of Rs. 10,000 was not reached. The sum would be reached by the addition of inter-

NAND KISHORE SINGH v. RAM GULAM SAHU.

est subsequent to the date of redemption. The High Court, therefore, refused to grant leave to appeal to the Privy Council. On an application for a review of the order of the High Court:

Held, that there was no error apparent on the face of the record or any sufficient reason for granting a review.

Gooroo Persad v. Juggut Chunder, 8 M. I. A. 166 at p. 169; 3 W. R. 14, referred to.

Application to review an order made by the High Court, under Order XLV of the Civil Procedure Code, refusing leave to appeal to the Privy Council from a decree of the High Court (Woodroffe and Carnduff, JJ.), dated December 10th, 1911, by which Regular Appeal No. 531 of 1908, preferred from a decree of the Sub-Judge of Bhagalpur, dated August 31st, 1908, was allowed.

Mr. Caspersz and Babu Upendra Nath Chatterjee, for the Petitioners.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghosh and Babu Khetra Mohun Sen, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application to review an order made by us under Order XLV of the Code of Civil Procedure. By that order, we rejected an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council and we did so upon this ground. The learned Vakil for the the applicant, one of the most experienced and eminent Vakils of this Court, immediately told us that though the value of the subject-matter on appeal to His Majesty in Council was upwards of Rs. 10,000, still the value of the subject-matter of the suit was not Rs. 10,000 and, consequently, he could not support the application. The result was, it was rejected.

It is now sought to obtain a review of this order under section 114 of the Code and Order XLVII. It is objected on the part of the respondent that no such application can be made and for the purposes of supporting that contention, our attention has been drawn to a number of decisions in which it has been held that no appeal lies under the Letters Patent from the orders of a single Judge, rejecting an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council. Mr. Justice Wilson, in the case of Lutf Ali Khan v. Asgar Reza (1), bases this conclusion on the view that the order was not a judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent. If that be the reason why an appeal does not lie from an order of a single Judge, it affords no answer to an application for review.

Section 114 of the Code provides that a party, who is aggrieved by an order from which no appeal has been preferred or from which no appeal is allowed by the Code, may apply for a review of the judgment to the Court which made the order, and the Court may make such order thereon as it thinks fit. The order of rejection comes within this description and the application for review is, therefore, within the terms of section 114. I fail to see how it can be said the order of rejection was not an order of a Civil Court; it was under Order XLV of the Code, which is an Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature.

Moreover, I would point out, in support of this view, that when an application for review is rejected by a Court, other than a High Court, then, under Order XLIII, rule 1, an appeal lies from such order. I, therefore, can see in the Code itself nothing to support the view that the order of the High Court under Order XLV is not subject to review.

The next question is whether the applicant has made out a case for review.

It is now contended that the value of the subject-matter of the suit in fact was R. 10,000, or upwards, and that there is an error apparent on the face of the record. But when the facts come to be investigated, it is conceded that even if interest be calculated not only up to the decree, but even up to the end of the six months allowed for redemption, the sum of Rs. 10,000 is not reached. In this connection, I would refer to the case in Gooroo Persad v. Juggut Chunder (2), where it was stated that "their Lordships must not, of course, be understood to intimate that the Sudder Courts are to give leave to appeal in cases in which the specified amount of Rs. 10,000 can only be reached by the addition of interest subsequent to the decree. Such cases must, in their Lordships' opinion, rest in their discretion:" that is, in the discretion of the Judicial Committee. There were, therefore, grounds for the conclusion at which the learned Vakil arrived as to the insufficiency of the value of the subject-matter of the suit and it is not made out that there is an error apparent on the face of the record or any sufficient reason for granting the review. If leave to appeal is to be obtained, it must, in the circumstances, be obtained from their Lordships of the Privy Council and not from us.

(1) 17 C. 455.

(2) 8 M. I. A. 166 at p. 169; 3 W. R. (P. C.) 14.

The application must, therefore, be dismissed with costs, three gold mohurs.

Application dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL APPLICATION No. 1287 OF 1911.

May 17, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kensington.

JAWAHRI MAL—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

DHANPAT AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Revision—Denial of justice—Punjab Courts Act (XVIII of 1884 as amended by Act XXV of 1899), s. 70 (b)—Material irregularity—Minor incurring debt—Subsequent conduct in raising another loan from the same creditor—Ratification—Apparent necessity at the time of incurring debt.

Where a person contracts a loan while a minor, and, after attaining majority, takes further advances from the same creditor, this subsequent conduct of his constitutes a ratification on his part of the original debt incurred during minority.

If a creditor knows that his debtor has sufficient justification for requiring money, both being residents of the same village, he acts rightly in advancing it, and is entitled to recover the sum thus advanced with interest.

If a Court bases its decision on a perverse view of the facts and on an arbitrary assumption, it commits a material irregularity, and its order can, therefore, be interfered with by the Chief Court on revision.

Application, under section 70 (a) of Act XVIII of 1884 as amended by Act XXV of 1899, for revision of the order of the Divisional Judge, Ludhiana Division, dated 30th March 1911, reversing that of the District Judge, Ludhiana, dated 29th August 1910, decreeing plaintiff's claim in part, Rs. 316-10 against defendants Nos. 1. and 2. and Rs. 193-4 against defendant No. 1. only with proportionate costs.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioner.

Pandit Rambhaj Datta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This case is before me as a revision on the ground that the lower Appellate Court has committed what amounts to a material irregularity by basing its decision on a perverse view of the facts and upon an arbitrary assumption. This allegation appears to me to be sufficiently established and I feel bound to interfere on revision as the lower Appellate Court's way of looking at the case amounts to a denial of justice to the plaintiff.

The facts are as follows:—

In March 1905, Dhanpat, defendant No. 1, was adopted by one Basawa. A suit was immediately brought against Basawa and Dhanpat and, though the record of this suit is not before me, it is admitted that the case was decided in favour of Dhanpat both in the first Court and on appeal. In September 1905, Dhanpat and his mother, Mussammat Soman, struck a balance for Rs. 316 in the account-book of the plaintiff, who is a money-lender belonging to their village. The account book has been produced and it appears that Rs. 316 includes items of Rs. 31 on account of expenses of the adoption-deed, Rs. 117 for expenses of the case and Rs. 148 as interest on a previous debt on Rs. 1,100, besides some further petty items. There appears to be a certain amount of doubt whether Dhanpat was a major in September 1905, though both the Courts have found as a fact that he had then attained the age of majority. It is possible that his mother's signature was obtained to the balance owing to a doubt about Dhanpat's age.

Subsequently, Dhanpat took further advances from the plaintiff amounting in all to Rs. 193, practically all in cash, and some portion, at any rate, of these sums appears to have been advanced by the plaintiff to enable Dhanpat to meet the further expenses of litigation. There have been no re-payments and the plaintiff has accordingly sued for Rs. 860, made up of Rs. 509, principal, and Rs. 351, interest at 15 per cent. The first Court gave plaintiff a decree for Rs. 316 against Dhanpat and his mother and for Rs. 193 as against Dhanpat alone, disallowing all claim for interest, but the lower Appellate Court has dismissed plaintiff's claim absolutely, holding that, though it cannot be said that the claim is false, it has not been adequately proved.

It is difficult to understand how this conclusion has been reached. The claim is apparently quite straightforward and the lower Appellate Court has itself found that some interest ought probably to have been allowed to the plaintiff if the principal debt is admitted. I can see no reason why the first Court's finding as to the principal should not have been upheld. Even if it be assumed, contrary to the findings of both the Courts, that Dhanpat was a minor in September 1905, his subsequent conduct in taking further advances from the plaintiff constitutes ratification on his part of the original debt incurred on his behalf during his minority. It is quite certain that Dhanpat required money at the time to meet the expenses of litigation and though the whole of the money advanced may not have been required for this purpose, the plaintiff should not be treated too rigorously for having come to the assistance of a young man in a time of need. Dhanpat had a sufficient pretext for requiring money owing to his altered circumstances in consequence of the adoption, which must have been well known to the plaintiff as he belonged to the same village, and I do not consider that the plaintiff acted wrongly in advancing money somewhat freely or even in adding in Rs. 148 as interest on a earlier debt. The first Court seems to me to have come to a correct conclusion as regards the principal sum now claimed.

In regard to interest, I agree with the lower Appellate Court that reasonable interest should be allowed at say 10 per cent. In round figures, the plaintiff's total claim for principal and interest may be taken at Rs. 700. The plaintiff has dealt liberally with Dhanpat and there is no reason why he should lose this considerable sum. In this Court, the plaintiff has given up his claim against Dhanpat's mother and her minor sons, who were also defendants to the suit. The remedy is pressed as against Dhanpat alone, and quite rightly so, seeing that the money appears to have been raised entirely for his personal benefit.

He has admittedly benefited largely by adoption which was the original cause of his requiring ready money to go on with. The revision is accordingly allowed and the decrees of the lower Courts are set aside. In place thereof, plaintiff is given a decree against the defendant, Dhanpat, only for Rs. 700 with costs calculated on that amount in all Courts.

Revision allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 376 OF 1902.

March 31, 1905.

Present:—Sir Francis Maclean, KT., Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Mitra.

HIATUNNESSA BIBI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KAILASH CHANDRA SAHA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Second Appeal—Title suit—Finding of lower Appellate Court that plaintiff's suit is not barred—Sufficiency of finding—Remand by single Judge—Appeal coming on for hearing before Division Bench—Disposal of appeal by Division Bench.

In a suit for possession of land, the lower Appellate Court said on the question of limitation: "It does not appear that the plaintiff's claim for possession is barred." On appeal to the High Court, a single Judge held that a mere statement of this sort was not sufficient, but that the lower Appellate Court was bound to give some reasons for the finding. He, therefore, remanded the issue so that a proper finding might be arrived at on the question of limitation, and the appeal was kept on the file of the High Court. On remand, the lower Appellate Court found that the plaintiff was not in possession within 12 years before the suit. The appeal then came on for hearing before the same learned Judge who referred it to the Division Bench for disposal:

Held, that the first finding of the lower Appellate Court on the question of limitation was sufficient, and that the remand order should not have been made.

Appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Murshidabad, dated the 26th August 1901, reversing that of the first Munsif of Berhampur, dated the 29th March 1901.

The appeal at first came on for hearing before Mr. Justice Geidt sitting singly. He remanded the issue on the question of limitation by the following JUDGMENT.—"This is a suit to recover possession of a parcel of land of which the plaintiff alleges that he was dispossessed by the defendants in the year 1299. The plaintiff's case was that the land formed part of a holding No. 267, which had been settled with him. Some four months after the institution of the suit, the plaintiff put in a petition before the Munsif in which he said that the disputed land was covered by plots Nos. 498, 499 and 500 of the Collectorate Chittas prepared in the year 1268.

"The defence set up was that the disputed land belonged not to the plaintiff's holding but to a holding which the defendants had acquired by purchase from Korban Ali in the year 1291.

S. N. DAR, B. A. LL. B.,
Vakil High Court,
SRINAGAR (Kashmir)

HIATUNNESSA BIBI v. KAILASH CHANDRA SAHA.

"Several issues were drawn up but it is only necessary, for the purposes of this appeal to notice two of them—the third and the fourth. The third is—"Is the claim barred by limitation?" The fourth is—"Whether the plaint land appertains to plaintiff's jama and the defendants have wrongfully dispossessed him?" These issues were tried together and the Munsif found that the disputed land did not belong to the plaintiff's holding and further that the plaintiff had never been in possession of this land within 12 years from the date of institution of the suit. He accordingly dismissed the plaintiff's claim.

"On appeal, the District Judge has reversed both these findings of the Munsif and decreed the plaintiff's suit. The first point taken on appeal is that the District Judge has proceeded on the assumption that holding No. 267 comprises the Chitta dags Nos. 498, 499 and 500. Not only, is it said, is this a pure assumption unwarranted by evidence but it was opposed to the distinct finding of the Munsif that the holding did not consist of those three dags.

"I am, however, unable to discover in the Munsif's judgment any such finding. What the Munsif has said is that the plaintiff had totally failed to prove that Nos. 498, 499 and 500 Chitta dags covered the land in suit. This statement of the Munsif clearly proceeds also on the assumption that the holding No. 267 was covered by the 3 dags specified, for unless that assumption were made, the statement would be wholly irrelevant in reference to the trial of the issue before him.

"Reading the judgments both of the Munsif and of the District Judge, it appears to me that the statement of the plaintiff that the holding No. 267 comprised these three dags was, in no way, disputed by the defendants. Furthermore, the objection that the District Judge had made an assumption unwarranted by evidence is nowhere taken in the grounds of appeal preferred to this Court, and from this fact, it appears to me clear that the defendants not only did not dispute the plaintiff's allegation in this matter but that they were not even in a position to dispute it, and, therefore, acquiesced in it. I am, therefore, of opinion that the objection now under consideration is not one that should prevail. It would be impossible to decide it properly without going into the evidence which is not before me. It was not taken in the grounds of appeal and the appellant has not even put it within my power to decide it as he has not called for the Chittas which have been taken back by the plaintiffs. The second ground of appeal is that the District Judge has come to no proper finding on the issue as to limitation. The Munsif discussed this question very thoroughly on the evidence before him and on that evidence and the circumstances and the probabilities of the case, he found himself unable to believe that the plaintiff was ever in possession of the disputed land or wrongfully dispossessed therefrom. Now, it was for the plaintiff to prove that the dispossession occurred within 12 years before the institution of this suit. But all that the District Judge said on this point is that "it does not appear that the plaintiff's claim for possession is barred." Considering that the District Judge's judgment was one of reversal, it appears to me that a mere statement of this sort was not sufficient. When the Munsif, after a detailed discussion of the evidence, had come to the conclusion that the plaintiff was never in possession of the disputed land or wrongfully dispossessed therefrom, it appears to me that the District Judge was bound to give some reasons for the finding to the contrary at which he arrived.

"The case will, therefore, be remanded to the District Judge that he may come to a proper finding on the question of limitation that was raised in this case. The District Judge will record his finding and return the record with his finding within six weeks.

"The record will be sent down to him at once."

The lower Appellate Court submitted its finding to the High Court, and the appeal came on again before Mr. Justice Geidt, who referred it to a Division Bench.

Babus Sarat Chandra Roy Ghaudhuri and Bepin Chandra Mullick, for the Appellant.

Dr. Rash Behary Ghosh and Babu Hemendra Nath Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

MACLEAN, C. J.—This is an appeal from the decision of the officiating Judge of Murshidabad. It came on appeal before Mr. Justice Geidt sitting alone and he remanded it, because he thought that the District Judge had not sufficiently found whether the plaintiff had been in possession of the property in dispute within twelve years before the institution of the suit. He, therefore, remanded the case for inquiry on that point, keeping the case on the file of this Court. That inquiry has now been made and has resulted in a finding that the plaintiff was not in possession within twelve years before the filing of the suit. Mr. Justice Geidt, acting under the powers given him by the rules of this Court, has sent the case to be disposed of by the Judges taking the Presidency Group, and it, therefore, now comes before us. The whole case, that is to say, the appeal from the District Judge is now before us as it was originally before Mr. Justice Geidt. It is contended, on behalf of the appellant, that we are bound to adopt the second finding on the question of possession and so to dismiss the suit. On the other hand, it is contended that, the whole case being now before us, it is open to us to decide whether the remand order of Mr. Justice Geidt was justified, the contention being that the District Judge had found, as a fact, that upon the question of possession the plaintiff was not barred, and, consequently, that the remand order ought not to have been made. We must either decide the whole matter now, or send the case back to Mr. Justice Geidt. If we were to decide the appeal on the last finding as to possession by the Judge on the remand and so dispose of the whole case, we should deprive the plaintiff of his right to appeal against the propriety of the remand order. If we send the case back to Mr. Justice Geidt, it would, I think, be open to him to re-consider his order for the remand, but, if he did not do that, but dismissed the suit on the last finding as to possession, the plaintiff could appeal and challenge the propriety of the remand order. To adopt this circuitous procedure would only entail further and unnecessary cost on the parties: and, instead of driving the parties to this course, I think we may deal with the whole matter, as Mr. Justice Geidt has asked us so to do and treat the matter as if the propriety of the remand order were now before us, as it would be on an appeal from Mr. Justice Geidt. The appellant asks us to adopt a course which would have the effect of depriving the plaintiff of his right of appeal against the remand order: we ought not to do this. I think, we must regard the substance, and not the technicalities of the case. I do not think the remand order should have been made, looking at the judgment of the District Judge as a whole. He found the title in favour of the plaintiff and his language is, I think, sufficient to warrant us in saying that he found that the plaintiff had been in possession within 12 years before the institution of the suit. If we regard his language at page 13 of the printed paper book, we find that he had clearly directed his mind to this question of possession for this was the only point about possession which resulted in his finding that "it does not appear to me that the plaintiff's claim for possession is barred." To what can these words apply except to the question of whether or not the plaintiff had been out of possession for 12 years before suit? It is difficult for us to say that there is not a sufficient finding that the plaintiff had been in possession within 12 years before suit. I think, our proper course is to dispose of the whole matter and not to drive the parties to further waste of money and time by sending the case back to Mr. Justice Geidt, with the result that if he ultimately decided in the present appellant's favour, a further appeal by the plaintiff would be inevitable.

The appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs.

MITRA, J.—I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No 1478 OF 1910.

August 7, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, KT., Offg. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

TUMMALA NAGABHUSHANAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SRI RAJAH VENKATADRI APPA ROW BAHADUR ZEMINDAR GARU, BEING MINOR, REPRESENTED BY THE COLLECTOR OF KISTNA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Abatement of suit—Death of wrong-doer—Tort—Suit for damages for wrongful distraint—Action commenced against wrong-doer—Actio personalis moritur cum persona—Scope of doctrine—How far applicable to India—Act XII of 1855, s. 2.

The only cases in which, apart from questions of breach of contract, express or implied, a remedy for a wrongful act can be pursued against the estate of a deceased who has done the act, are those in which the property or proceeds or the value of property belonging to another have been appropriated by the deceased person and added to his own estate or moneys.

SARAT CHANDRA ROY v. RATUBUDDIN.

An action for damages for distraint illegally levied by a person on certain moveables belonging to the plaintiff, some of which either perished or deteriorated owing to the negligence of the defendant's servants while the rest were misappropriated by the servants, is not in the nature of a suit for the recovery of specific moveables appropriated by the defendant or their value.

To such an action the maxim 'actio personalis moritur cum persona' applies, in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary.

Phillips v. Homfray, (1883) 24 Ch. D. 439; 52 L. J. Ch. 833; 49 L. T. 5; 32 W. R. 6, relied upon.

Section 2 of Act XII of 1855 has no application to a suit instituted against the wrong-doer himself in his life-time. Such a suit abates on the death of the wrong-doer.

Haridas Ramdas v. Ramdas Mathuradas, 13 B. 677, and Ranchodo Doss v. Rukmany Bhoy, 28 M. 487, relied upon.

Second appeal from the decree of the District Court of Kistna at Masulipatam, in A. S. No. 240 of 1908, presented against that of the Court of the District Munsif at Gudivada, in O. S. No. 380 of 1905.

Mr. T. Prakasam, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Kunjunni Nair, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—When the allegations in the plaint are carefully considered, the suit must in substance be regarded, as held by the District Judge, to be one for recovery of damages for distraint illegally levied by the deceased Zemindar, the original 1st defendant, on certain moveables belonging to the plaintiff, some of which either perished or deteriorated owing to the negligence of the Zemindar's servants, while the rest was misappropriated by those servants. It cannot be regarded as a suit for recovery of specific moveables appropriated by the original 1st defendant or their value. The nature of the action being such as we have stated, the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona would apply in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary. The scope of this doctrine is thus stated by Bowen, L. J., in Phillips v. Homfray (1) :—"The only cases in which, apart from questions of breach of contract, express or implied, a remedy for a wrongful act can be pursued against the estate of a deceased who has done the act, appear to us to be those in which the property or the proceeds or the value of property belonging to another have been appropriated by the deceased person and added to his own estate or moneys." In India, no doubt, this rule of Common Law has been to some extent modified by Act XII of 1855, which enacts that an action may be maintained against the representatives of a deceased person for any wrong committed by him in his life-time for which he would have been subject to an action but, as pointed out in Haridas Ramdas v. Ramdas Mathuradas (2), which has been followed in Ranchodo Doss v. Rukmany Bhoy (3), section 2 of that Act, which provides that no action commenced under the provision of this Act shall abate by reason of the death of either party, has no application to a suit which was instituted against the wrong-doer himself in his life-time as such an action could not be said to have been commenced under the provisions of the Act. Such suits are still governed by the rule enunciated in Phillips v. Homfray (1). The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1883) 24 Ch. D. 439; 52 L. J. Ch. 833; 49 L. T. 5; 32 W. R. 6.

(2) 13 B. 677.

(3) 28 M. 487.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL No. 407 OF 1906.

May 20, 1909.

Present:—Mr. Justice Coxe and Mr. Justice Richardson.

SARAT CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHURY AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RATUBUDDIN MANDAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant, relationship of—Kabuliat executed by one of two brothers—Whether other brother becomes tenant—Intention of parties—Conduct of parties to be considered—Subsequent knowledge of landlord that brothers agreed to share tenancy, effect of—Novation of contract—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 5—Presumption—Tenure-holder—Holding more than 100 bighas—Occupancy-rights before commencement of Act—Whether presumption to be made.

Where one of two brothers executed a kabuliat, the question whether the other brother became a tenant of the landlord depends on what was the intention of the parties. If the landlord knew that he was letting the land to both, but took the kabuliat in the name of one alone merely for the sake of convenience, then the relation of landlord and tenant was constituted between him and the other brother. But if the landlord knew nothing of the arrangements made between the two brothers that they would equally share the tenancy, and believed himself to be contracting with the brother executing the kabuliat only, then those arrangements could not bind him in any way and would not create any relation between him and the other brother.

SARAT CHANDRA ROY v. RATUBUDDIN.

To decide what was the intention and knowledge of the parties, their conduct must be taken into consideration.

If the landlord came to know afterwards that the brother executing the kabuliat had allowed the other brother an interest in the tenancy, that would not amount to a novation of their contract.

Although the presumption referred to in section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that if a man holds more than 100 bighas, he must be supposed prima facie to be a tenure-holder, is not applicable to the rights of occupancy acquired by a raiyat before the Act came into operation, yet when the question is whether a tenant was or was not a raiyat, the area of the land held should be taken into consideration, though it is not necessary to adhere to the exact standard of 100 bighas.

Baboo Dhunput Singh v. Baboo Gooman Singh, W. R. Gap. No. 1864, Act X Rulings, 61 and Gopee Mohun Roy v. Sib Chunder Sen, 1 W. R. 68, referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Rungpur, dated the 16th July 1906.

Babus Kishori Lal Sarcar, Promotho Nath Sen, Debendra Nath Bagchi and Haris Chandra Roy, for the Appellants.

Babus Ram Chandra Majumdar, Kumar Sankar Roy, Debaki Lal Sen Gupta and Debendra Narain Bhattacharjee, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs in the suit out of which this appeal arises are the grandsons of one Imamdi. It is common ground, proved by the patta produced on behalf of the plaintiffs (Exhibit 7) and the kabuliat filed for the defence (Exhibit A), that Imamdi had a tenancy with a rent of Rs. 58 under the landlords whose successors are the principal defendants in the case. Imamdi had two sons, named Yar Mahomed and Gulal, the plaintiffs being the sons of the latter and the pro forma defendants the sons of the former. The landlords, on the strength of the kabuliat above referred to, which was executed by Yar Mahomad alone in 1867, sued to eject the heirs of Yar Mohamad on the ground that their tenancy had come to an end. The decree does not show whether this was because its term had expired or because Yar Mohamad being dead, the tenancy was not heritable. We may, however, take this opportunity of observing that the kabuliat of 1867 was for a term of nine years and that Yar Mohamad and his heirs appear to have occupied the position of tenants holding over on the terms of that document with the exception that the rent payable was subsequently increased by an arrangement to which we shall refer. It has never been contended that the kabuliat operated of itself to create any permanent right in Yar Mohamad or any body else. The plaintiffs asked to be made parties to the ejectment suit on the ground that half the tenancy was theirs. But their prayer was refused; and as Yar Mohamad's heirs did not contest the suit, it was decreed ex parte. The plaintiffs have now brought this suit for a declaration of their right to half the tenancy and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from executing the ejectment decree. The suit has been decreed by the Subordinate Judge of Rangpur and the landlords appeal.

We may remark at the outset that the learned Pleader for the respondents tells us that his clients do not ask that the landlords should be restrained from executing the whole decree but only so far as it affects their share.

The learned Subordinate Judge finds that Imamdi was a raiyat with a right of occupancy and that, therefore, the plaintiffs, who are the heirs of one of his heirs, are entitled to a share in his holding and cannot be ejected. He holds, further, though the grounds given for the finding seem quite inconsistent with it, that the kabuliat of Yar Mohamad was a collusive transaction. Both these findings are attacked in appeal.

It will be convenient to take the second point first as it can be disposed of without difficulty. The Subordinate Judge admits that the evidence of the witnesses, who testify to the so-called fraudulent conduct of Yar Mohamad, is "extremely unsatisfactory and contradictory." He finds that the "fact of the execution of the kabuliat was known to the plaintiffs as appears from their conduct." It is quite clear that Gulal was aware of the kabuliat and that that document has been recognized ever since its execution as the document from which such rights as Gulal or the plaintiffs possessed or have exercised, were derived. As between the two branches of the family, Gulal's branch have held their share of the tenancy at the rate specified in the kabualiat, and have all along allowed Yar Mohamad in whose name the kabuliat was executed and his heirs to take all the rent receipts. It is a curious circumstance in this case that in 1881-82, a new Settlement was made and the rent raised to Rs. 337-8. Both sides have entirely ignored this matter. The landlords in their ejectment suit referred only to the Settlement of 1867, while the plaintiffs have not attempted to show that that Settlement has been superseded. The existence of this Settlement is shown merely by casual references in receipts. It may be that it was not so much a fresh Settlement as a mere subsidiary covenant to pay a little increased rent for some new land gained from the river, and was not regarded as superseding the regular Settlement of 1867. Be that as it may, it is clear that before 1897, the rent had been raised to Rs 337-8, and in that year, the plaintiffs mortgaged their share of the tenancy to a company. The rent is given as Rs. 337-8 and the area as Gaons 8-7-10, precisely as in the kabuliat of 1867. There is not a trace of evidence to show that when the rent was raised by this kabuliat from Rs. 53 to Rs. 300, the father of the plaintiffs made any objection. He must have known that some agreement had been arrived at to justify such an increase. We feel no doubt that the plaintiffs and their predecessor have all along known and assented to this kabuliat, and cannot agree with the Subordinate Judge that it was collusive.

On the question whether plaintiffs are raiyats, we are equally unable to agree with the Subordinate Judge. The test in this matter is the purpose for which the tenancy was created If Imamdi took the land to cultivate himself, he was a raiyat. If he took it to cultivate it by tenants, he was a tenure-holder. The Subordinate Judge rejects the oral evidence. It has been read to us and we cannot say that it is of any real value on either side, and certainly cannot hold that the plaintiffs' oral evidence preponderates over that of the defence. The Subordinate Judge relies on a patta produced by the plaintiffs, from which it appears to him that the land was settled with Imamdi for cultivation. He relies also on the suit against Yar Mohamad which preceded the kabuliat of 1867, which suit, in his opinion, could, under Act X of 1859, which was then in force, have been brought only against a raiyat. He relies also on certain statements in the quinquennial papers and in the Thak map.

It will be convenient to take these points in order. As to the patta; it may be said, in the first place, that it is no evidence against the defence. It purports to be signed by one Kali Nath Das and as it is over 30 years old, it may be assumed that it was so signed. But there is no evidence worth the name to connect Kali Nath Das with the defendants. In the second place, the patta does not show that the land was settled with Imamdi for cultivation and we are at a loss to understand why the learned Subordinate Judge thought that it did. Towards the end of the document, it refers to the tenancy which it attested as an ijara which certainly is a very unusual term to apply to a cultivating lease.

As to the suit, all that we know about it is derived from the following passage in the kabuliat of 1867: "As the term of the patta of the said deceased Mandal has expired and as I have no right of possession thereto, you called me to take fresh settlement. But as I did not come forward to take fresh settlement, you brought a suit against me in No. 187 of 1866-67 in the Collectorate under Act X of 1859, claiming to get a kabuliat from me for a term of two years." There is certainly nothing in Act X of 1859 to bar the institution of a suit of this description against a tenure-holder, and the description itself obviously suggests that the suit was not a suit for enhancement against an occupancy raiyat, such as is referred to in section 17. In this connection, reference may be made to clause (1) of section 23 of Act X of 1859 and to such cases as those of Maharajah Ramnath Singh v. Huro Lal Pandey (1) and Kalam Sheikh v. Panchu Mandal (2).

The quinquennial papers throw no light on the matter. They show that in 1816, there were 11 bishes odd of cultivated land in the village, the rent of which amounted to Rs. 50 less a deduction of 12 per cent. as collection charges. This clearly does not throw much light on the question, whether the tenancy of 6 gaons odd, which Imamdi is said to have held at a rent of Rs. 58 sometime before 1839, was granted for personal cultivation or for cultivation by tenants. Clearly, the state of affairs in 1816 was very different from that in 1839 and there is nothing to show what was the character of the tenancies existing on the land in either year. The thak papers carry us no further. They show that in December 1856, there were 15 cultivators and no "non-cultivators" on the land while the survey map the next year shows 17 agricultural inhabitants and 8 non-agricultural. It is usual for petty tenure-holders to retain a certain amount of land in their own cultivation, and the fact that Imamdi, who was, no doubt, a man of the cultivating class, may have been described as a cultivator does not in the least justify the inference that he took the land to cultivate the bulk of it personally and not to settle tenants on it.

(1) 8 W. R. 188.
(2) 2 B. L. R. A. C. 252.

The evidence, therefore, that Imamdi was a raiyat seems to us quite inconclusive. On the other hand, there is the presumption referred to in section 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act that if a man holds more than 100 bighas, he must be supposed, prima facie, to be a tenure-holder.

This provision of the Act is not applicable to the rights of occupancy acquired by a raiyat before the Act came into operation (section 19). But when the question was whether a tenant was or was not a raiyat, reported cases decided under the old law show that the area of the land held was taken into consideration along with other circumstances: Baboo Dhunput Singh v. Baboo Gooman Singh (3) and Gopee Mohun Roy v. Sib Chunder Sen (4). The provision, therefore, merely incorporates in the law a general principle so reasonable and probable that it would naturally be drawn by a sensible man; and it is, therefore, safe to apply the principle even in cases where the actual section itself may not be strictly applicable, though of course in such cases it might not be necessary to adhere to the exact standard of 100 bighas. The land settled with Imamdi according to the plaintiff was about 2,000 bighas. What man in Eastern Bengal would take an area of that size for the purpose of cultivating it by his own servants? The suggestion is opposed to all experience. There is no doubt that for all the time of which we have any trustworthy record, the bulk of the land has been held by tenants under Imamdi's successors and we have no doubt that it was in order to settle these or other tenants that the land was taken. We differ, therefore, from the learned Subordinate Judge and hold that Imamdi and his successors were and are tenure-holders. Taking this view, much of the learned Subordinate Judge's reasoning falls to the ground. If Imamdi were an occupancy-raiyat, his holding would be heritable and the plaintiff's rights could not be denied. Moreover, the conduct of Yar Mohamad and his heirs in not resisting the ejectment suits would be open to the suspicion of collusion. But if Imamdi and his successors were, as they appear to have been, merely tenure-holders for a period, then these considerations lose all their force.

It remains, therefore, to be ascertained whether the plaintiffs themselves were tenure-holders under the appellants. Now, as between the plaintiffs and Yar Mohammad, there can be little doubt of the plaintiffs' interest; so strong is the tendency to regard all property, however transient, as heritable that it is not likely that Gulal on Imamdi's death would willingly have acquiesced in his total exclusion from the tenancy that had been Imamdi's. It is proved beyond doubt that for many years not only the plaintiffs but also their cousins have been dealing with the property as if half belonged to the one and half to the other side of the family. We have little or no doubt that as between Yar Mohamad and Gulal, the lease of 1867 was taken with the intention that half should belong to the one and half to the other. The question, therefore, whether the latter became a tenant of the landlord depends on what was the intention of the parties to the kabuliat of 1867. If the landlord knew that he was letting the land to both, but took the kabuliat in the name of one alone merely for the sake of convenience, then clearly the relation of landlord and tenant was constituted between him and Gulal. But if the landlord knew nothing of the arrangements that Yar Mohamad and Gulal had made between themselves, and believed himself to be contracting with Yar Mohamad only, then these arrangements could not bind him in any way and would not create any relation between him and Gulal. To decide what was the intention and knowlege of the parties, we must look to their conduct. It is in favour of the plaintiffs that the landlords must have been conscious of that tendency, to which we have alluded, of regarding all property as heritable, which would lead them and all those who were acquainted with Imamdi to expect that all his children should share in what had been his lease. On the other hand, the lease itself tells slightly against the plaintiffs, and it must be borne in mind that from the point of view of the landlords, Imamdi's interest had come entirely to an end. But what tells most strongly against the plaintiffs, in our opinion, is that they produce no rent receipts. Every one knows the value that tenants attach to rent receipts. They do not regard them merely as acknowledgments of money but as documents of title to the property they care most about, showing on what terms they hold it. The kabuliat under which this land is held was given 40 years ago and it seems an extraordinary thing to us that if really the landlords originally or subsequently intended to lease the land to the plaintiffs, they should not be able to produce a single receipt for all that time. Of course, it may be admitted that the receipt would be in the name of Yar Mohamad, but we should expect that if Yar Mohamad's name had been taken merely for convenience, numerous receipts would in the course of these years show the names of Gulal and his sons as marfatdars and would at any rate come from their custody. The fact that not a single receipt has been produced by them seems to us to be very significant and to indicate that the landlords have never entered into any contractual relation with Gulal or his heirs. In this connection, we may refer briefly to Woopendro Mohun Tagore v. Thanla Dossia (5), to the remarks of Garth, C. J., in Jeo Lal Singh v. Gunga Pershad (6) on page 1002 and to the more recent cases of Modhusudun Nath v. Hiru Ram (7) and Nitayi Behari v. Hari Govinda (8).

(3) W. R. Gap. No., 1864 Act X Rulings, 61.
(4) 1 W. R. 68.

Great stress has been laid on Exhibit B, a letter sent by the landlords' agent to the first plaintiff in 1896. It is very confused and ungrammatical and it is impossible to translate it exactly into good English. It runs somewhat as follows: "By way of giving Rs. 100 of the rent of Yar Mohamad you have sent the said rent.* * * It is wrong not to have sent the rest.* * * By sending the remainder, you will receive a dakhila on returning this letter." The document, however, does not seem to us to be as important as the Subordinate Judge holds. It is likely enough that the landlords at some time, or other came to know that Yar Mohamad had allowed Gulal an interest in the tenancy. But that knowledge would not amount to a novation of their contract. The document states as distinctly as it states anything that the rent was Yar Muhamad's rent. If such rent was sent by the first plaintiff, it is likely enough that the landlord's agent should acknowledge receiving the money and complain that no more had been sent. The words "You shall take a dakhila" are doubtless in favour of the plaintiff to some extent but this casual expression in a letter is not a sufficient foundation for holding that the landlord recognized the plaintiff's tenancy. And the plaintiff admits in cross-examination that when he showed this to the landlord himself, the latter at once said it was a mistake.

We need not refer to the other documents, which are said to indicate a recognition of the plaintiff's tenancy, as it is quite clear that they relate to an entirely different tenancy.

It is quite clear in spite of this letter that the landlords never assented to any division of the tenure between Yar Mohamad and Gulal, that in all proceedings in the Courts, the landlords treated Yar Mohamad as their tenant, and that before the suit for ejectment, the plaintiffs' branch of the family never claimed the right to be made a party. In our opinion, there is nothing in Exhibit B which detracts from the effect of the authorities to which we have referred, or justifies us in drawing a distinction between them and the present case.

We, therefore, think that the plaintiffs

(5) 12 W. R. 263.
(6) 10 C. 996.
(7) 25 C. 396; 2 C. W. N. 94.
(8) 26 C. 677.

have failed to prove that the landlords ever entered into the relation of landlord and tenant with them and must accordingly decree the appeal and direct that the suit be dismissed with the costs of both Courts.

Appeal decreed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL NO. 182 OF 1911.

April 9, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.

NATHU MAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUL CHAND, (MINOR)—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Property acquired in the name of one of the members of a joint Hindu family—Pleadings—Appeal—Plea not raised before the first Court—Plea raised but not put in issue by first Court—Point not taken in grounds of appeal.

In the absence of some definite proof of self-acquisition, a purchase of property in the name of one of the members of a joint Hindu family must be presumed to have been made on behalf and for the benefit of that family.

Where the first Court has neither put in issue a plea of a defendant nor has given any finding thereon and the defendant has failed to raise the point in the grounds of his appeal, such plea cannot be allowed to be advanced in argument to attack the judgment under appeal.

A point not raised in the original Court cannot be allowed to be advanced for the first time in appeal.

First appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Amritsar, dated the 4th January 1911, decreeing a portion of the plaintiff's claim

Lala Balwant Rai, for the Appellants.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The following pedigree shows the relationship of the parties:—

NATHU MAL—(Defendant No. 1),

Balmokand, married Musammat Basant Kaur,	Hardial (Defendant No. 2).	Radha Kishen (Defendant No. 3).
Mool Chand (Plaintiff).

Mool Chand brought a suit against his grandfather, Nathu Mal, and his uncles, Hardial and Radha Kishen, for possession by partition of a certain share in some house and shop property situate in the city of Amritsar. The allegations upon which the suit was based are contained in the plaint and it is unnecessary to set them out here. The defence in substance was that except one residential shop No. 1336, all the other shops and houses in suit were the self-acquired property of Nathu Mal; that plaintiff's father Balmokand had separated off from Nathu Mal before the said property was acquired by the latter; that a partition of the joint family property had already taken place, and that in the life-time of Nathu Mal the plaintiff was not entitled to enforce partition of the property in dispute. Upon the pleadings of the parties, several issues were framed by the District Judge, which are fully set forth in the judgment. The District Judge held that the plaintiff's father had not been separated off from Nathu Mal; that the property in suit had been acquired with the funds of the joint family, that there had been no partition of the joint family property, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a one-fourth share in the house and shop property in dispute. A decree was accordingly passed in favour of the plaintiff against the defendants for possession by partition of one-fourth share in the shops and houses specified in the plaint.

From the decree of the District Judge, the defendants have appealed to this Court, and on their behalf, Lala Balwant Rai has contended (1) that plaintiff's father had separated off from the family about 6 to 10 years prior to his death receiving Rs 500 in lieu of his share of the joint family property, namely, the residential shop No. 1336; (2) that the other shops and houses in dispute were acquired by Nathu Mal after Balmokand's separation; (3) that the plaintiff is not entitled to enforce partition of the alleged joint property of the family in the life-time of Nathu Mal, and (4) that, in any case, the plaintiff being a minor cannot ask for partition of the family property. The third and fourth contentions can be disposed of in a few words. Although in their written statements, Nathu Mal and Hardial pleaded, inter alia, that the plaintiff could not enforce partition during the life-time of Nathu Mal, no issue was framed by the District Judge on this point, nor did he record a finding upon it in his final judgment. In the memorandum of appeal, this point has not been raised, and it is now too late for the appellant's Pleader to urge it in argument. The other contention, namely, that the plaintiff being a minor could not enforce partition of the family property, was never raised in the Court below, and it cannot be allowed to be advanced for the first time an this Court. We accordingly overrule the third and fourth contentions.

As regards the first contention, the evidence on the record does not establish the alleged separation of Balmokand from the family several years before his death. The plaintiff's witnesses, namely, Balmokand, Harkishen Das, Moola Mal, Gopal and Faqirya, all say that although the plaintiff's father had been keeping a separate shop for some years before his death, he was joint with Nathu Mal in board and residence and that no partition of the family property ever took place. They add that the separate shop was kept by Balmokand for the benefit of the family, and that all the shops and houses in dispute, other than the ancestral house, were acquired jointly by the father and the son. The evidence produced by the defendants on this point is far from staisfactory. Their witnesses, no doubt, say that plaintiff's father had been separated off from Nathu Mal for some time before his death; but they are not agreed as to the time when the alleged separation took place. Jowahir Shah says, that he had been separate for about 10 years before his death; Lachman Das, Natha Singh and Devi Dial do not say when the separation occured; Nika Mal and Ishar say, that he separated from Nathu Mal 9 or 10 years ago; while Pohlu Mal says that he had been carrying on separate business only for two or three years prior to his death. Such oral evidence on a point of such importance is of little value, and we are not prepared to place any reliance on it. The sale-deed, Exhibits D-I, and D-II, which relate to some of the property in dispute, no doubt, show that that property was purchased in 1896 and 1899 in the name of Nathu Mal alone, but as, in our opinion, plaintiff's father was joint with Nathu Mal at the time of those purchases, in the absence of definite evidence to prove that Nathu Mal acquired the property with his own separate funds, these acquisitions must be held to have been made on behalf and for the benefit of the joint family and the plaintiff's father had, therefore, a share in the same. The whole property in dispute must, therefore, be treated as a joint family property of the parties, and there can be no question that the share of the plaintiff, if he is entitled to enforce partition of the same, is one-fourth. The decree passed by the District Judge is, in our opinion, correct, and we dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1363 OF 1909.

March 29, 1911.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Kt., Judge, and Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

MAHAMED KASIM SAHIB—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

PANCHAPAKESA CHETTI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XL, r. 1—Receiver, functions of—Suit by Receiver to recover value of property sold prior to his appointment.

The functions of a Receiver appointed under Order XL, rule 1 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 (section 503 of the Code of 1882) are to take possession from the parties to the suit of any moveable and immoveable property in respect of which he has been appointed Receiver, to manage it, to realise its income, and to continue in custody of it until removed by the Court.

He cannot recover from a stranger to the suit property which the latter had acquired anterior to his appointment as Receiver; nor does his appointment affect any rights previously acquired by third persons, nor has he the right to recover property sold away by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the sale is voidable under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, or that the sale was not binding on the creditors of the judgment-debtor.

Second appeal against the decree of the District Judge of Tanjore, in Appeal Suit No. 21 of 1909, presented against that of the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam, in Original Suit No. 31 of 1907.

The Advocate-General, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. Guruswami Chetti, for the Rerspondent.

MAHAMED KASIM v. RANCHAPAKESA CHETTI.

JUDGMENT.—The suit in this case was instituted by a Receiver appointed by the Subordinate Court of Negapatam in execution of the decree in Small Cause Suit No. 1210 of 1904 of that Court. The object of the suit was to recover certain goods, which were attached in execution of this small cause decree and of which the plaintiff was appointed Receiver, or the value of the goods. The application for the appointment of a Receiver was made on the 19th August 1907, (Exhibil D) and the order of appointment (Exhibit H) was passed on the 18th September 1907. The defendant was the purchaser of the goods from the judgment-debtor under a sale-deed, dated the 12th September 1904. He contended, inter alia, that the plaintiff had no authority to institute the suit as the order sanctioning the appointment of the Receiver was passed only on the 13th of September 1907, after the institution of the suit by the District Court of Tanjore, that the suit was barred by section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the plaintiff had no right to recover the goods from the defendant to whom they had been sold long before they were attached in execution of the small cause decree. The plaintiff's case was that the alleged sale of the goods was not a bona fide transaction, but that they were removed by Gopichettiar, the judgment-debtor, to the defendant's house on the 30th September 1904 fraudulently with the intention of defeating his creditors. The Subordinate Judge overruled all the pleas referred to above, and held that the transfer to the defendant was made by the judgment-debtor with the fraudulent intention of defeating his creditors, but that there was a debt truly due to the defendant to the extent of Rs. 200. He found that the goods were worth Rs. 500 and passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for that amount as the goods themselves were not in existence. The plaintiff appealed to the District Court contending that the goods were worth more than Rs. 2,500 and the defendant preferred a memorandum of objections objecting to the Subordinate Judge's decree in toto. The District Judge allowed the memorandum of objections and dismissed the suit.

The only question we have to decide is, whether the plaintiff, as the Receiver, was entitled to sue the defendant for the goods or heir value. We have come to the conclusion that he was not entitled to do so, and the judgment appealed from is right. The order appointing the plaintiff (who we may say, by the way, was himself the decree-holder) as Receiver was passed under section 503 of the Civil Procedure Code and it is to the following effect: "Whereas the property sepecified in the annexed schedule has been attached in execution of a decree passed in the above suit on the 12th November 1904, in favour of the plaintiff, you are hereby appointed Receiver of the said property under section 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure with full powers under the provisions of that section. You are required to render a due and proper account of your receipts and disbursements in respect of the said property", etc. Then follows the schedule of the property consisting of 22 items of moveables estimated to be worth Rs. 4,000 and odd. It will be remembered that long before the date of the order, the judgment-debtor had ceased to be in possession of the goods having sold them to the defendant in 1905. The application for the appointment of Receiver brought that fact to the notice of the Court, and the prayer was that a Receiver should be appointed for collecting either the property or the price thereof. The order, however, did not appoint the plaintiff as Receiver for recovering the value of the goods from the defendant but only as Receiver of the moveable property itself. Under section 503 of the old Civil Procedure Code, when a person is appointed receiver of any moveable or immoveable property, he is entitled to take possession of it from the parties to the suit, to manage it, to realise its incomes and to continue in custody of it until discharged by the Court. The title to the property does not rest in him; see Ram Lochun Sircar v. Hogg(1). His rights arise only on the date of his appointment and not before; see Defries v. Creed (2) and Edwards v. Edwards (3). He is not entitled to recover possession from a third party, stranger to the suit, whose rights date prior to his appointment. Nor does his appointment affect any rights previously acquired by third persons—see Alderson on Receivers—section 169. In High on Receivers, the author states (section 359):

(1) 10 W. R. 430.

(2) (1865) 34 L. J. Ch. 607; 11 Jur. (N. S.) 360; 12 L. T. 262; 13 W. R. 632.

(3) (1876) 2 Ch. D. 291; 45 L. J. Ch. 391; 34 L. T. 472; 24 W. R. 713.

"As regards the title acquired by a Receiver of a National Bank thus appointed, the rule is that he holds such estate and title as the bank itself had in its assets, his title being similar in this respect to that of an assignee in bankruptcy. He is not a third person in the sense of commercial transactions, and cannot avoid a pledge of estates of the bank which could not be avoided by the corporation itself. When, therefore, the bank has deposited notes constituting a part of its assets with a creditor as security for advances, the bank itself being concluded by the deposit or pledge, the Receiver is not entitled to such notes, and cannot maintain an action therefor until the creditor or pledgee is made whole for his advances." No authority has been cited to us, nor are we aware of any, in support of the position that a Receiver appointed in the circumstances of this case has any right to recover property which has been already sold away by the judgment debtor on the ground that the sale is voidable as against the creditors on the principle embodied in section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. Mr. Varadachari relied on a passage in paragraph 454 of High on Receivers, where it is laid down that a Receiver, in proceedings supplementary to execution in some of the States of America, may institute actions in his own name to set aside fraudulent assignments or transfers made by a debtor with the view of defeating his creditors, and may recover the property so transferred for the purpose of applying it in satisfaction of the judgments, but the passage has reference to Receivers not of particular property attached by the Court but over all the property and effects of a judgment-debtor and, as laid down in Alderson on Receivers, section 508, the object of the appointment in such cases is to discover all property which belongs to the judgment-debtor for the benefit of his creditors, and the Receiver's right extends not only to all property and rights of property of the debtor, but to property which he has disposed of in fraud of his creditors. In England also, Receivers of the debtor's estate could, formerly at least, be appointed for the benefit of his creditors. "Lord Eldon declared that it was in his day the ancient rule where a judgment-creditor found upon the issue of his execution that the debtor's estate was protected in such a way by circumstances respecting a prior title that the judgment could not be enforced, he might apply for a Receiver and that the fact that the creditor could not at law obtain satisfaction of his judgment was sufficient to entitle him to a Receiver of his debtor's estate" But there is apparently no provision in the Indian Law for the appointment of such a Receiver. We are of opinion, therefore, that the Receiver in this case had no power to maintain the suit against the defendant for the value of the goods sold to him on the ground that his sale was not binding on the creditors of the judgment-debtor.

We may also note that the plaint does not state, nor does it otherwise appear, that the Receiver obtained the permission of the Court to institute this suit. The ordinary rule is that the permission of the Court is necessary to entitle the Receiver to institute suits—see Woodroffe on Receivers, pages 241, 242, Kerr on Receivers, page 202 and High on Receivers, section 208. As, however, no objection was raised by the defendant to the maintainability of the suit on this ground, we do not think it necessary to consider the question further or to rest our decision on it.

We dismiss the second appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 855 OF 1910.

March 29, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Robertson and Mr. Justice Chevis.

YAKUB KHAN AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS APPELLANTS

versus

RAGHPAT RAI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Necessity—Interest in advance—Compound interest—Money required for pre-emption decree—Small sum of money paid as make-weight—Decree passed on book account—Acquiescence—Estoppel—Market-value of land.

Where the principal mortgage-money is shown to have been borrowed for legal necessity, the interest added in advance as well as the compound interest charged under the terms of the mortgage-deed cannot be disallowed. These constitute a valid charge on the mortgaged property.

YAKUB KHAN v. RAGHPAT RAI.

Such an alienation cannot always be regarded as unnecessary merely because the mortgagor has agreed to pay heavy interest thereon.

Interest at 12 per cent. per annum is not excessive.

If interest is not paid when due, there is nothing illegal in charging compound interest.

All that an alienee has to do is to satisfy himself that the alienor wants the money for a necessary purpose but he is not bound to go any further.

It is a valid necessity to raise money for paying in amount fixed for a decree for pre-emption of land.

Where a transaction is in the main for necessity, it cannot be upset merely because the alienor receives as make-weight a comparatively small sum of money even though no particular necessity for that sum may be shown.

Where a decree has been passed on a book-account, apparently for ordinary expenses and interest, strict proof of necessity is not required, particularly where the record of the case has been destroyed.

One hundred times the jama of a land is its fair price.

Where, leaving out of consideration the items overcharged by a vendee, the land has still fetched the price at this rate, the sale is not liable to be disturbed for want of full necessity.

The mere fact of the sons cultivating a part of the alienated land as tenants under the alienee during their father's life-time does not amount to an estoppel, but long delay in suing coupled with several previous unsuccessful attempts of their father to get the sale set aside raises the presumption that the sale was for consideration and necessity.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jullundur Division, dated the 29th April 1910, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, 2nd class, Jullundur, dated the 23rd December 1909, dismissing plaintiff's claim.

Mr. Roshan Lal, for the Appellants.

Rai Sahib Pandit Sheo Narain, Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal and Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiffs, sons of Nawab Khan, sue for a declaration that the sale of 273 kanals, 18 marlas of land sold by their father Nawab Khan to Raghpat Rai on 22nd August 1897 shall not affect their reversionary rights. It may be noted that Nawab Khan has died while the appeal has been pending in this Court. The lower Courts have held the sale binding on the plaintiffs, who have preferred a further appeal to this Court.

Nawab Khan supported his sons in their attempt to prove that he was a drunkard and a profligate, but the evidence on this part of the case has rightly been rejected by he lower Courts, and plaintiff's Counsel has ot addressed us on this part of the case.

The sale price, according to the sale-deed, was Rs. 3,630, made up as follows:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
(1) On account of profits and interest on mortgage-deed, dated 16th February 1891	465	0	0
(2) On account of profits and interest on deed of mortgage, dated 30th August 1895 ...	100	0	0
(3) On account of decree passed by Lala Atma Ram, Munsif	935	0	0
(4) On account of two bonds, bahi account, revenue and malikana of some occupancy land ...	1,635	0	0
(5) To be paid to Chuni Lal, prior mortgagee ...	495	0	0
TOTAL ...	3,630	0	0

But these items do not include the principal sums of Rs. 1,500 and Rs. 175 due by Nawab Khan on the mortgage-deeds of 16th February 1891, and 30th August 1895; these sums were included at time of attestation of mutation, and the full sale price was then acknowledged to be Rs. 5,305.

All the items except that of Rs. 495 are disputed by the appellants. To understand how matters stand, it is necessary to go into the previous transactions between the parties.

On 16th February 1891, Nawab Khan mortgaged 82 kanals to Ralla Ram for Rs. 1,500. This was a mortgage without possession. The sum of Rs. 74-7-0 was paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar, Rs. 165-8-0 were included as interest in advance up to Jeth 1948, (May-June 1891) and the rest was kept to be paid into Court in compliance with a pre-emption decree which Nawab Khan had obtained. As a matter of fact, it was found that Rs. 1,175-12-0 would be sufficient payment to fulfil the requirements of the pre-emption decree, so Rs. 1,175-12 0 were paid into Court by Ralla Ram on Nawab Khan's account on 20th February 1891, and the same day Nawab Khan was paid (as his receipt shows) the balance of Rs. 84-5-0. Thus, the full sum of Rs. 1,500 was made up. The deed provided that after the expiry of the term for which interest in advance had been deducted, the mortgage-debt was to bear interest at the rate of Rs. 90 per harvest and in case of default compound interest was to be charged at the rate of Re. 1-9-0 per cent. Ralla Ram and Raghpat Rai were brothers, and joint, so this mortgage is really equivalent to one in favour of the present alienee. Now, at this very time, Nawab Khan was in debt to one Gande Rai, who had obtained a decree against him, and it would doubtless have been wiser for him to clear off his existing liabilities before he proceeded to encumber his land by raising money to pre-empt the land of others, but all that Ralla Ram had to do was to satisfy himself that Nawab Khan wanted the money for a necessary purpose, and it was sufficient for him to know that Nawab Khan had got a pre-emption decree and he was not bound to go further and to catechize Nawab Khan as to the existence of other liabilities and how he proposed to meet them. As a matter of fact, Nawab Khan failed to get any benefit from his present pre-emption decree, for his creditor, Gande Rai, attached the Rs. 1,175-12-0. Ralla Ram acted as mukhtar in cases for Gande Rai, but deposes that in this particular case he did not so act, but that Gande Rai himself got the money attached. No doubt, the matter looks peculiar, but there is no proof that Ralla Ram, when he paid the money into Court, knew that Gande Rai would attach it. So we think the sum of Rs. 1,175-12-0 must be passed as for necessity. As to the sums of Rs. 84-5-0 and Rs. 74-7-0 paid in cash; these are comparatively small sums, and if a transaction is in the main for necessity, we are not prepared to upset it simply because the alienor receives as make-weight a small sum of money, even though no particular necessity for that sum may be shown. As to the item of Rs. 165-8-0 deducted as interest in advance; this was, no doubt, a very severe charge for interest for only about three months, but Nawab Khan agreed to it, and we do not think an alienation can always be regarded as unnecessary simply because the mortgagor agrees to pay heavy interest. As to the future interest; Rs. 180 per annum is not excessive interest to charge on a sum of Rs. 1,500, being at the rate of 12 per cent., and, of course, if interest is not paid when due, there is nothing illegal in charging compound interest.

Then, on 29th August 1895, Nawab Khan executed two bonds one (registered) for Rs. 1,000, and one (unregistered) for Rs. 123, total, Rs. 1,123. This sum is made up as follows:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Interest on mortgage-deed of 16th February 1891, for 9 harvests at Rs. 90 per harvest	810	0	0
Interest on arrears of interest on same deed ...	303	12	0
Costs of registration, etc., ...	9	4	0
TOTAL ...	1,123	0	0

Counting from Jeth 1948 (=May-June 1891) up to which period interest had been deducted in advance, interest for only 8 harvests was really due at the time, but apparently interest has been charged for 5 rabi and 4 kharif crops, though it certainly seems rather sharp practice to charge for 5 rabi crops for a period from May 1891-August 1895. If no interest had been deducted in advance and interest had been calculated simply from date of execution of the mortgaged-deed (i. e., 16th February 1891) up to date of execution of these bonds, then, no doubt, it would be fair to reckon interest as due for 9 harvests.

Then, on 30th August 1895, comes a mortgage of 37 kanals, 16 marlas to Raghput Rai for Rs. 175, made up as follows:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
Cash before Sub-Registrar for land revenue ...	150	0	0
Interest deducted in advance up to 1952 (=January 1896)	25	0	0
TOTAL ...	175	0	0

This mortgage was without possession, future interest was to be charged at the rate of Rs. 40 per annum, with compound interest on arrears at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

On 11th August 1897, Raghpat Rai obtained a decree against Nawab Khan on book-account for Rs. 869 and Rs. 68 costs, total Rs. 937-0-0.

It is now possible to see how the different items of the consideration for the sale-deed now in dispute are made up.

KALANAND SINGH v. JARAO KUMARI.

Interest on the mortgage-deed of 16th February 1891, had been charged up to date in the bonds of 29th August 1895, and only four more harvests had passed when the sale-deed in question was written, so only Rs. 360-0-0 was due as interest when the sale-deed in question was written. But there is the compound interest to be added, and so the interest is swelled to Rs 465-0-0

Then comes the interest on the deed of Rs. 175-0-0 at Rs. 40-0-0 per annum, i.e., Rs. 80-0-0, and the compound interest swells the amount to Rs. 100 0-0.

Then comes the item of Rs. 935-0-0 due on the decree, and here, for the first time, we find no further interest charged, but a trivial deduction of Rs. 2-0 0. As to this decree, it would be extremely hard on Raghpat Rai to call on him after all these years again to prove his book-debt. The bahis still exist, and as he once got a decree on this debt, we see no sufficient reason to doubt the genuineness of it. All that can be said on an examination of the account is, that it seems to include a very large amount of interest and compound interest but this is inevitable when a baki account goes on for long and fresh balances are struck from time to time.

Then comes the item of Rs. 1,635-0-0, principal and interest, on the bonds for Rs. 1,123-0 0. And, lastly, there is the undisputed item of Rs. 405-0-0. which went to pay off the prior mortgagee. No doubt, the charges on account of interest have throughout the account been very severe, but the circumstances of the whole case must be carefully considered before we can upset the sale. When mutation was effected in January,. 1898, Nawab Khan raised certain objections in vain, and then in April 1898, he set up his wife to claim this land and some other land as having been gifted to her in payment of her dower. This suit failed. Then no steps were taken till the present suit was lodged in August 1909. The long delay cannot be attributed solely to the youth of the plaintiffs, for they have passed their majority by some years. One result of the long delay is that it is much harder now for the defendant to prove exactly what was really due to him at the time of the sale. For instance, the records of the case in which a decree was passed by the Munsif are now destroyed. The mere fact that the plaintiffs cultivated part of the land in dispute as tenants under the defendant during their father's life-time does not, in our opinion, operate as an estoppel. But, having regard to the long delay, we think that the defendant has proved, so far as can now be reasonably expected of him, that the sale was for consideration and necessity Even if we leave out of consideration certain items which seem to have been over-charged in the accounts, we still think the land has been sold for a reasonable price, the area being only 273 kanals and the revenue only Rs. 37-5-9. Taking the price at 100 times the reveune, the sale price would be only Rs. 3,740-0-0 (approximately) and this much at least seems to have been fairly due from Nawab Khan, after making all possible deductions for over-charges. In taking 100 times the jama as a fair sale price, we bear in mind the fact that the land was sold as long ago as 1897, and we do not think 100 times the revenue to be too low an estimate of the sale price existing in 1897.

The appeal fails and is dimissed, but, in consideration of the over-charges which seem to have been made by the vendee in certain cases, we leave the parties bo bear their own costs in this Court.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

REGULAR CIVIL APPEAL NO. 134 OF 1909.

July 31, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, KT., Judge and Mr. Justice Holmwood.

Kumar KALANAND SINGH AND OTHERS DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Bibi JARAO KUMARI AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Patni Regulation (VIII of 1819*), ss.* 9, 13 cl. (3) (4)—Payment of patni rent by darpatnidar—No dar-patni rent due at the time—Payment from private fund —Possession taken by darpatnidar Suit for arrears of dar-patni rent—Set off, whether can be claimed by dar-patnidar without rendering account—Eviction by landlord—Suspension of rent—What is necessary to constitute eviction—Actual physical expulsion, if necessary—Mesne profits, decree for, obtained by evicted tenant, whether revives claims for rent—Defaulting patnidar purchasing tenure—Evicting dar-patnidar—Annulment of dar-patni.

KALANAND SINGH v. JARAO KUMARI.

The plaintiffs were the patnidars and the defendants dar-patnidars under them. The defendants, to preserve their own interest, made certain payments to save the patni from sale for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819, section 13. While making the payments, the defendants stated that the rent due from them had been paid in full and that what was paid was an advance from private funds. They then obtained possession of the patni taluk. The plaintiffs brought a suit for rent in respect of the dar-patni. The defendants did not offer to render an account of the sums collected by them during their possession of the tenure but asked that the amount sought to be recovered by the plaintiffs may be set off against the amount deposited by them:

Held, that the defendants' plea must be overruled, that they could not drive the plaintiffs to a separate suit to determine whether they had or had not by means of their possession already realised the amount advanced by them, and that the defendants were not entitled to claim a set-off.

The principle of law is that a landlord who has evicted his tenant is not entitled to claim rent from him in respect of the period of eviction.

Chandra Kant Das v. Ramanath Barman, 6 Ind. Cas. 478; 11 C. L. J. 591 and Rasseswari Chodhurani v. Raja Sri Sourendra Mohun Tagore, 5 Ind. Cas. 105; 11 C. L. J. 601, relied upon.

To constitute an eviction within the meaning of the above rule, it is not necessary that there should be an actual physical expulsion from any part of the premises; any act of a permanent character done by the landlord with the intention of depriving the tenant of the benefit of the enjoyment of the demised premises or any part thereof will operate as an eviction.

Upton v. Townend, 17 C. B. 30; 25 L. J. C. P. 44; 1 Jur. (N. S.) 1089; 4 W. R. 56 and Hoymobutty Dossee v. Sreekissen Nundy, 14 W. R. 58, followed.

The fact that the evicted tenant has obtained a decree for mesne profits, does not revive the claim for rent which was extinguished by reason of the misconduct of the landlord, the decree for mesne profits in his favour does not necessarily restore him to all the advantages he would have enjoyed, had his possession not been illegally disturbed.

Kadumbinee Dossia v. Kasheenauth Biswas, 13 W. R. 338 and Chandra Kanta Das v. Rama Nath Barman, 6 Ind. Cas. 478; 11 C. L. J. 591, relied upon.

Gobind Chund v. Mun Mohan, 14 W. R. 43, referred to.

A defaulting patnidar purchased in the name of another person, the patni in arrears, in contravention of the express provisions of section 9 of the Patni Regulation, and took possession of the dar-patni tenure in the name of the ostensible purchaser:

Held, that the patnidar was not entitled to annul the dar-patni tenure created by himself and as he, under colour of law, evicted the dar-patnidar, he was not entitled to get any rent from the latter for the period of dispossession.

Appeal from the decree of the Sub-Judge of Purneah, dated December 19th, 1908.

Babus Jogendra Nath Mukerjee and Moulvi Syed Muhammad Tahir, for the Appellants.

Babus Hemendra Nath Sen and Khetra Mohan Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal on behalf of the defendants in a suit for recovery of arrears of rent of a dar-patni tenure. The rent is claimed in respect of three years from the 13th April 1904 to the 13th April 1907, at the rate of Rs. 3,416 a year, with cesses at the annual rate of Rs. 316-9-0. The Subordinate Judge has decreed this claim in full. Upon the present appeal, that decree has been assailed on three grounds, namely, first that as the defendants made payments of patni rent to save the superior tenure from sale under section 13, clause (4), of Regulation VIII of 1819, the sum claimed by the plaintiff ought to be set-off against the sum so paid, with the result that the suit should be dismissed in its entirety; secondly, that the claim in respect of the period from the 14th May 1904 to the 16th September 1905 ought to be disallowed, because the defendants were kept out of possession of the property by reason of the unlawful conduct of the plaintiffs themselves; and thirdly, that credit ought to have been allowed for two payments of Rs. 600 and Rs. 2,000 respectively.

In support of the first contention, our attention has been invited to the fact that on the 17th November 1905 and 15th May 1907, the defendants paid Rs. 7,927 and Rs. 17,707, respectively, in respect of the rent payable by the plaintiffs' patnidars to their superior landlord. With reference to these payments, it has been argued that as the defendants have paid, on account of the plaintiffs, a sum far in excess of the amount now sought to be recovered as arrears of rent, the claim ought to be disallowed in its entirety. In our opinion, there is no foundation for this contention. Under section 13 of Regulation VIII of 1819, an under-tenant is entitled to make a payment to save the patni tenure from sale with a view to the preservation of his own interest, and when he does so, his position is regulated by the provisions of clauses 3 and 4 of the section. If the amount lodged is rent due to the patnidar from the under-tenant, the fact has to be stated at the time of the deposit, and the amount is directed to be carried to the account of the tenant lodging it, to be deducted from any claim of rent that may at the time be pending or be thereafter brought forward against him by the proprietor of the advertised tenure on account of the year or months for which the notice of sale may have been published. If, on the other hand, the amount has been lodged by an under-tenant, who has already paid the whole of the rent due from himself, the amount lodged is an advance from private funds and not a disbursement on account of the rent. In such a contingency, it is expressly directed that the deposit shall not be carried to credit in or set against future demands for rent, but shall be considered as a loan made to the proprietor of the tenure preserved from sale by such means, and the taluk so preserved becomes security to the person making the advance, who is considered to have a lien thereon in the same manner as if the loan had been made upon mortgage; and he further becomes entitled, on applying for the same, to obtain immediate possession of the tenure of the defaulter in order to recover the amount so advanced from any profits belonging thereto. The possession thus obtained is to continue till the debt has been re-paid, and the defaulter is free, by payment of whatever is due, to recover his tenure from the hands of the person who has made the advance and entered into possession in consequence. In the case before us, the appellants pursued the latter course. They stated specifically, when they made the deposits, that the rent due from them had been paid in full and that what was lodged was an advance from private funds. Upon this representation deliberately made, they obtained possession of the patni taluk and have continued in possession up to the present moment. As the appellants are dar-patnidars of a portion only of the lands comprised in the patni tenure, the result has been that, although the landlords are entitled to realise rent from them only in respect of the dar-patni lands, they are now in possession of the entire land of the patni taluk. The appellants have argued before us that upon the facts now disclosed, it is obvious that the statement made on their behalf at the time of the deposits was untrue in part at least, that a portion of the rent payable by them was in arrears, and that consequently they should have proceeded under clause (3) of section 13 of the Regulation. It has been contended that inasmuch as if they had done so, they would have been entitled to deduct the amount deposited from the claim of the rent then pending or thereafter brought forward against them by the patnidar, they should be placed in the same position now. In our opinion, it is not open to them to resile from the position they designedly took up at the time they made the deposits. In fact, the contention of the appellants is manifestly unreasonable. They have, under the colour of clause (4) of section 13 of Regulation VIII of 1819, taken possession of the tenure and enjoyed its profits. They do not offer to render an account in the present litigation of the sums collected by them during their possession of the tenure; they merely ask that the amount sought to be recovered by the plaintiffs, may be set off against the amount deposited by them, with the result that the claim may be dismissed in its entirety, while the plaintiffs are to be driven to a separate suit to determine whether the defendants have or have not, by means of their possession of the putni tenure, already realised the amount advanced by them. This argument has only to be stated to be repudiated as wholly unsound. It is plain that the defendants are not entitled to plead at the stage that clause (4) of section 13 of the Patni Regulation has no application to their case, and under that clause, they cannot obviously claim a set off, The first contention of the appellants, therefore, fails.

In support of the second contention it has been argued that the appellants were deprived of possession of the dar patni tenure by reason of the fraudulent conduct of the plaintiffs, and that, consequently, the latter have lost their claim to rent during the period of dispossession, as ruled in Kadumbinee Dossia v. Kasheenauth Biswas (1) and Chandra Kanta Das v. Rama Nath Barman (2). The facts, in so far as they are material for the decision of this question, are indisputable. The plaintiffs wilfully defaulted to pay patni rent to the superior zemindar. The zemindar thereupon proceeded to bring the tenure to sale under Regulation VIII of 1819. At the sale, the plaintiffs themselves purchased the tenure in the name of one Hukum Chand Boid on the 14th May 1904. The nominal purchaser obtained delivery of the property through the Collectorate. He professed to be a stranger to the proceedings

(1) 13 W. R. 338.
(2) 11 C. L. J. 591; 6 Ind. Cas. 478.

and claimed to have acquired the patni free of the interest of the dar-patnidar. He was, consequently, placed in possession and continued in occupation of the dar-patni till the 16th September 1905, when he was ousted by virtue of a decree in a suit commenced by the present appellants for reversal of the patni sale. In that suit, it was declared on the 24th August 1905 that Hukam Chand Boid was a nominal purchaser for the benefit of the plaintiffs; in other words, that the defaulter had purchased the tenure in contravention of the express provisions of section 9 of Regulation VIII of 1819. There can be no room for controversy that the plaintiffs as purchasers under Regulation VIII of 1819 were not entitled to annul the dar-patni tenure created by themselves or their predecessors; they could not take recourse to the provisions of the Patni Regulation to enable them to effectuate a fraud upon the under-tenure holders. In support of this proposition, reference may be made to the cases of Nawab Sidhee Nuzur Ali Khan v. Oojoodhyaram Khan (3), Mahomed Nasseer v. Kishen Mohun (4), Gouree Kamul v. Raj Kishen (5), Madhub v. Joy Kumaree (6), Gouree Kamul v. Raj Kristo (7), Koylash Chunder Banerjee v. Kalee Prosunno Chowdhry (8), Srinath Ghose v. Haro Nath Dutt (9), Kishore Chunder Sen v. Kally Kinkur (10), Jatendra Mohun Tagore v. Debendra Monee (11), Ram Lall v. Debendra (12), Fakir Chander v. Ram Kumar (13) and Harendra Lal Chowdhury v. Salimullah (14). The Court will in a matter of this description strip off all disguises and look at the transaction in its naked reality. What then is the true character of the events in the case before us? The plaintiffs deliberately brought the patni tenure to sale and, in defiance of statutory provisions, purchased the property themselves; they then took possession of the dar-patni tenure in the name of the ostensible purchaser. The whole transaction was a flagrant abuse of the provisions of the Regulation, and was nothing less than a device, carefully planned and successfully carried out, to dispossess the under-tenure-holders. In essence, therefore, the plaintiff, under colour of law, evicted the defendants. The principle that the landlord who has evicted his tenant is not entitled to claim rent from him in respect of the period of eviction is, consequently, applicable. It cannot be disputed, in view of the decisions analysed in the cases of Chandra Kant Das v. Ramanath Barman (2) and Rasseswari v. Sourendra (15), that the lessee is not liable for rent accruing due after he has been evicted from the premises by the landlord so long as the eviction continues. It is further clear, as laid down in the cases of Upton v. Towrnend (16) and Hoymobutty Dossee v. Sree Kissen Nundy (17), that to constitute an eviction within the meaning of this rule, it is not necessary that there should be an actual physical expulsion from any part of the premises; any act of a permanent character done by the landlord with the intention of depriving the tenant of the enjoyment of the demised premises or any part thereof, will operate as an eviction. There is no controversy in the present case that, as the result of the fraudulent conduct of the plaintiffs, the defendants were actually precluded from enjoying possession of the dar-patni tenure from the 14th May 1904 to the 15th September 1905; they are accordingly, prima facie, not liable for the rent of this period. The learned Vakil for the respondents has, however, very earnestly appealed to us to show some consideration to the plaintiffs. He has pointed out that in the suit commenced by the appellants to set aside the patni sale, they obtained a decree for recovery of possession with mesne profits; and he has argued that as they have obtained a decree for mesne profits, they should, in justice, be made liable for the rent payable. In our opinion, there is no foundation for this

(3) 10 M. I. A. 540; 5 W. R. (P. C.) 83.
(4) W. R. F. B. 92.
(5) 5 W. R. 106.
(6) 5 W. R. 201.
(7) 14 W. R. 369.
(8) 16 W. R. 80.
(9) 9 B. L. R. 220; 18 W. R. 240.
(10) 20 W. R. 333.
(11) 2 C. L. R. 419.
(12) 8 C. 8.
(13) 31 C. 909 (P. C.); 8 C. W. N. 721; 1 A. L. J. 420; 6 Bom. L. R. 741; 31 I. A. 195.
(14) 12 C. L. J. 336; 7 Ind. Cas. 21.
(15) 11 C. L. J. 601; 5 Ind. Cas. 105.
(16) 17 C. B. 30; 25 L. J. C. P. 44; 1 Jur. (N. S.) 1089; 4 W. R. 56.
(17) 4 W. R. 58.

contention. As was pointed out in the cases of Kadanbini Dassee v. Kashi Nath Biswas (1) and Chandra Kanta Das v. Rama Nath Barman (2), the fact that the evicted tenant has obtained a decree for mesne profits does not revive the claim for rent which was extinguished by reason of the misconduct of the landlord; the decree for mesne profits in his favour does not necessarily restore him to all the advantages he would have enjoyed, had his possession not been illegally disturbed: Gobind Chund v. Mun Mohanjha (18). We may further observe that it might possibly have been open to the present respondents, when the mesne profits were assessed, to contend that profits ought to be calculated, not at the gross collections from the tenants, but at that sum reduced by the rent payable to the superior landlord. But no objection of this kind was taken in those proceedings, and the judgment of the Subordinate Judge upon the question of mesne profits was affirmed by this Court on the 13th March 1912. It is, therefore, not open to us to re-investigate that matter; and if we were now to accede to the contention of the respondents, the result would be that they would now be allowed credit for a sum which they might possibly have claimed in the proceedings for assessment of mesne profits. This clearly is not permissible; and in so far as the claim for rent is concerned, it is plainly barred upon the principle already explained. The second ground, therefore, must prevail.

In so far as the third ground is concerned, it is wholly unsubstantial. There was no suggestion in the Court below that any payments had been made by the defendants for which the plaintiffs were bound to allow credit. We are really not concerned with the sums alleged to have been deposited in Court; the deposits were not such as the plaintiffs were bound under the law to recognise and accept. The third ground, therefore, fails.

The result is that this appeal is allowed in part and the decree of the Subordinate Judge modified. The claim for rent in respect of the period from the 14th May 1904 to the 15th September 1905 will stand dismissed. The amount will be calculated on the basis that the annual rent payable together with cesses is Rs. 3,732-9-0. Subject to this variation, the decree of the Court below will be affirmed. As the victory has been a divided one, each party will pay his own costs throughout the litigation.

Appeal allowed in part.

(18) 14 W. R. 43.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST ORDER No. 46 OF 1911.

August 20, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Kt., Offg. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Napier.

ARUNAGIRI MUDALIAR—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

UTHANDO MUDALI—RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 180—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 311, 314—Court sale—Application for delivery, 3 years after confirmation of sale, barred.

A Court sale was confirmed on 28th July 1906 and an application for delivery of the property was not made till the 19th January 1910:

Held, that under section 314, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, the sale became absolute on 28th July 1906 and not on the day on which a petition filed by a third party under section 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, was dismissed.

The application for delivery of the property, having been made after three years from that date, was barred under Article 180, Schedule I, of the Limitation Act.

Appeal against the order of the District Court of South Arcot, dated 10th January 1911, in Appeal Suit No. 191 of 1910, presented against the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Tiruvannamali, dated the 14th April 1910, in Original Petition No. 53 of 1906, Original Suit No. 687 of 1892, on the file of the Court of the District Munsif of Tindivanam.

Mr. C. Padmanabha Iyengar, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. Jagannadha Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The application for delivery of the property was made on the 19th January 1910, i.e., after the Limitation Act of 1908 had come into force. The sale had been confirmed on the 28th July 1906, and thereupon became absolute under section 314 of the RAM DITTA MAL v. KARAM DEVI.

Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. It has been contended before us that the sale did not become absolute until the final dismissal of the petition put in by a third party under section 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, but we are unable to accept this contention. On these facts, we are of opinion that the Article of Limitation Act applicable to the present application is Article 180 of the 2nd Schedule of the Act of 1908, the period of limitation being three years from the date when the sale became absolute.

We, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1017 OF 1910.

July 18, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Rattigan.

RAM DITTA MAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat KARAM DEVI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Pardanashin lady—Hard terms of mortgage—Pleadings—New plea in further appeal not allowed—Compensation for improvements—Costs of defending a suit by third person to establish his right in mortgaged property.

An Indian lady, who does not ordinarily appear in public, but goes about the Bazar to make purchases for the household, can hardly be described as parda nashin in the strict sense of the term.

Such a lady cannot be relieved from a transaction on the ground that its terms are unusually hard, particularly where she had the opportunity of taking independent advice.

A party cannot be allowed to put forward a new case in appeal.

A mortgagee is entitled to get compensation for improving the mortgaged property if allowed to do so by the mortgagor, and the money due to the former is a charge on the latter's interest in the mortgage-property.

When a mortgagee, with knowledge that a third person had an interest in the mortgaged property, accepted a mortgage of the property, he cannot claim from his mortgagor costs incurred by him in the litigation for opposing the claim of that person.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Lahore, dated 10th June 1910, modifying that of the Subordinate Judge, 1st class, Lahore, dated 10th February 1910, decreeing claim in parts.

Mr. C. Bevan Petman, for the Appellant.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sukh Dial and Lala Roshan Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Sub-Judge, who granted plaintiff a decree for the full amount of the principal money claimed by him, and also decreed, though in a modified form, plaintiff's claim for compensation in respect of buildings erected by him and costs incurred by him in the previous litigation with Musammat Gujri, and the full amount of interest for which he prayed.

The Divisional Judge on appeal held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover merely Rs. 300, being half of the alleged principal consideration of the mortgage-deed and varied the decree of the Sub-Judge by transferring it into a simple money-decree for that amount against defendant and he further directed that plaintiff should pay defendant's costs throughout.

I have heard elaborate arguments by Mr. Petman for the plaintiff-appellant and by Mr. Sukh Dial for defendant-respondent, and I have also carefully considered the judgment of the Divisional Judge. I am, as a result, obliged to differ from the findings of the latter. The defendant-mortgagor is, no doubt, an Indian lady who does not ordinarily appear in public, but she can hardly, I think, be described as a parda nashin in the strict sense of the term. She certainly goes about the bazar to make purchases for the household and appeared, though probably in a burqa, before the petition-writer. But, however this may be, it is clear from the evidence that in this transaction, she had the advice of her brother-in law, Radha Kishen, who attested not only the deed of mortgage but also the two receipts that were executed on the same date. Mr. Sukh Dial argues that Radha Kishen had a deep game of his own to play, and that he was endeavouring to rob Musammat Gujri, (the mortgagor's sister) of all rights that she had in the family property, and that it was with this object in view that he was encouraging the mortgagor to pose as the sole owner of the property mortgaged. I confess I am not able to appreciate properly this rather subtle argument, but I fail to see any ground for supposing that Radha Kishen was in collusion with the mortgagee or that he had any object to gain by not giving proper advice to his sister-in law, the defendant. Mr. Sukh Dial also argues that the sum of Rs. 300 (half of the consideration-money), which is said to have been paid to Madho Singh, a prior creditor, for money lent to the mortgagor's deceased mother, and to the mortgagor herself, in order to defray the expenses of a pilgrimage to the Ganges and expenses connected with the mother's funeral, was wholly fictitious, and that no such sum was due to Madho Singh. This, however, is an entirely new plea, and in the original Court, the contention was, that though the debt was due to Madho Singh, the money had not been paid by the plaintiff. I cannot allow the defendant to put forward a new case at this late stage, and the question, therefore, is whether or not Madho Singh received Rs. 300 through the plaintiff. Upon this point, the evidence is, I think, conclusive. There are the two receipts filed in the case and also the evidence of the petition-writer and Madho Singh himself, the latter distinctly stating that he has been duly paid the debt due to him. In face of this statement, it is impossible for defendant to contend that Madho Singh has not been paid.

The general drift of Mr. Sukh Dial's argument was that the mortgage in question was one of an inequitable and unconscionable character and as such not binding upon the defendant, an Indian lady, who could not understand its terms. This, again, is an argument which was not put forward in precisely this form in the first Court, but, apart from that objection, I can find no force in it. Some of the terms were, no doubt, onerous and in all probability could not be enforced if plaintiff was suing to enforce the mortgage in all its strictness. I also agree that the provision as to interest was one that cannot commend itself to a Court of Justice, but, speaking generally, I see no reason to doubt that the mortgagor and Radha Kishen thoroughly understood the terms and conditions of the deed which were read over and explained to the mortgagor by the Sub-Registrar.

In the circumstances, I think the plaintiff is entitled to claim the amount allowed to him by the District Judge as compensation for the building which he put up. As regards interest, however, I think I shall be doing justice to both parties if I direct that the principal amount of Rs. 600 shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum up to the date of suit. I do not think that plaintiff is entitled to any compensation for costs incurred by him in the previous litigation as I find it difficult to believe that he, a neighbour of the defendant, was unaware of the existence of Musammat Gujri and of her rights in the property. He accepted a mortgage from the defendant with knowledge of the risks that he ran and I see no reason why he should not pay the costs incurred by him in contesting Musammat Gujri's claim.

The result is, that I accept this appeal and, setting aside the decree of the Divisional Judge, I grant plaintiff a decree for (a) Rs. 600 principal, (b) interest thereon at the rate above specified up to the date of suit and (c) Rs 233-10-0 as compensation for the building erected by him. The above sum will be a charge on defendant's interests in the mortgaged property

Proportionate costs to be paid by defendant throughout.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL AGAINST APPELLATE ORDER No. 68 OF 1910.

August 13, 1912.

Present:—Sir Ralph Benson, Kt., Offg. Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Napier.

KOMANDUR KAMALAMMAL—PETITIONER—APPELLANT

versus

KOMANDUR NARASIMHACHARLU AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 6—Mortgage suit—Successful party—Personal decree for costs.

KHIDMAT RAI v. ANANT RAM.

Under Order XXXIV, rule 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the successful party in a mortgage suit which is contested is entitled to have a personal decree for costs against the persons who contested the suit, when the mortgage property has been sold and found insufficient.

Kamalammal v. Komandur Narasimhacharlu, 30 M. 464; 17 M. L. J. 317; 2 M. L. T. 359, referred to.

Appeal against the appellate order of the District Court of Nellore, in Appeal Suit No. 173 of 1909, dated 11th March 1910, presented against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Nellore, in M. P. No. 54 of 1909, in Original Suit No. 563 of 1901.

Mr. K. Bhashyam, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. P. Lakshman Row, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—We do not think that the order of the Court below can be supported. The present appellant, who was the successful party in the mortgage suit, which was defended at every stage by the present respondents, was entitled to have a personal decree against the defendants for his costs in that suit. He sought to have the decree amended so as to give him such personal decree, but this Court decided [see report of the case in Kamalammal v. Komandur Narasimhacharlu (1)] that the application was premature and that such a decree could only be given if the sale proceeds should prove insufficient to satisfy the amount due under the mortgage including costs. The property has now been sold and has proved insufficient.

The appellant is, we think, entitled, under Order XXXIV, rule 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to now have a personal decree against the respondents for the amount of costs not covered by the sale-proceeds, viz., Rs. 223-0-11, with costs throughout.

(1) 30 M. 464; 17 M. L. J. 317; 2 M. L. T. 359.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 536 OF 1910.

March 21, 1912

Present:—Mr. Justice Kensington.

KHIDMAT RAI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

ANANT RAM—PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS.

Pre-emption—Deposit of 1/5th of purchase-money plus costs of improvements—Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), s. 19—Court-fee—Value of buildings.

A pre-emptor, who has taken no steps to obtain an injunction against a vendee, who has been carrying on his building operations after the purchase of the pre-empted property and before the institution of the suit, is bound to pay Court-fee on the total value of the property as well as the improvements made thereon, and must deposit one-fifth of such total amount, under section 19 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, II of 1905.

Muhammad Afzal Khan v. Nand Lal, 16 P. R. 1908: 13 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.); 143 P. L. R. 1908 and Abdul Rahman v. Charag Din, 19 P. R. 1908; 38 P. W. R. 1908, relied upon.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jullundur Division, dated the 16th April 1910, reversing that of the Sub-Judge, 2nd class, Jullundur, dated the 16th December 1909, rejecting the plaint.

Rai Sahib Pandit Sheo Narain, for the Appellant.

Lala Rama Nand, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This case is before me as an appeal from an order of remand passed under Order XLI, rule 23, Civil Procedure Code. The circumstances leading up to the appeal are as follows:—

On the 19th September 1908, the appellant bought a house for Rs. 400 and very shortly after he began re-construction on a much larger scale.

On the 10th May 1909, the plaintiff asserted a right of pre-emption and served the vendee with a notice to surrender the property. On the 15th May, the vendee declined to do so saying that he had rebulit the property at an expenditure of Rs. 4,000. Plaintiff had admittedly taken no steps to obtain an injunction while these building operations were in progress.

On the 18th May, plaintiff instituted the present suit for pre-emption claiming the house at Rs. 100 on an allegation that the sale price of Rs. 400 was fictitious.

On the 3rd June, the vendee objected that the house had been re-constructed for Rs. 2,500. A local Commissioner was, thereafter, appointed, apparently by order of 11th November, to ascertain the existing market-value. This was reported to be Rs. 2,512.

On the 3rd December, plaintiff was ordered to pay Court-fee on Rs. 2,512, and he had also been required to deposit 1/5th of the amount under section 19 of the Pre-emption

Act. These orders were to be complied with by the 16th December.

Instead of complying with the instructions of the Court, the plaintiff (or his legal adviser) took the, not uncommon, but very foolish, course of assuming that he knew more about the law than the Court. He deposited Rs. 80 only, as being 1/5th of the sale price of Rs. 400, and paid in no additional Court-fee. The Sub-Judge thereon rejected the plaint, by an order referring to the deposit money only, and saying nothing about the additional Court-fee as he should have done under Order VII, rule 11, Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiff then appealed to the Divisional Court which has overlooked the question of Court-fee altogether, and has treated the matter of deposit under section 19 of the Pre-emption Act as if this was still open to argument. I can see no good reason why the learned Divisional Judge should not have decided this matter at once instead of remanding to the lower Court if he thought it open to doubt, and on this ground alone his decision was improper.

But I am also quite unable to understand why the Divisional Court considered that the plaintiff had given a sufficient excuse for not obeying the orders of the Sub-Judge. He may have thought the orders given to him wrong, but a man, who engages in questionable litigation, should do what he is told and not assume the attitude that he is entitled to treat all orders given to him as open to argument. If he does assume that contentious attitude, he must take the risk of being in the wrong.

I have no difficulty in holding that plaintiff has put himself entirely in the wrong. The Sub-Judge's orders were correct on the questions both of Court-fee and deposit, see the Full Bench rulings, Muhammad Afzal Khan v. Nand Lal (1) and Abdul Rahman v. Charag Din (2), and the wording of section 19 (1), Pre-emption Act. The Sub-Judge's order rejecting the plaint was defective in so far as it dealt with the question of deposit only, but this will not help the plaintiff, who has deliberately avoided obeying orders.

I have considered whether any further opportunity should be given to plaintiff of complying with the Court's orders, and decline to do so. The vendee-defendant is entitled to benefit by plaintiff's refusal to obey orders, and should not be further harrassed by a pre-emption suit after being allowed to re-build his house without timely remonstrance by plaintiff.

The appeal is accepted. The lower Appellate Court's order of remand is set aside, and that of the first Court rejecting the plaint is restored. Plaintiff will pay the costs of the vendee-defendant, Khidmat Rai, in the lower Appellate Court and in this Court. Pleader's fee Rs. 32 in this Court.

Appeal accepted.

(1) 16 P. R. 1908; 73 P. W. R. 1907 (F. B.); 146 P. L. R. 1908.

(2) 19 P. R. 1908; 38 P. W. R. 1908.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 379 OF 1910.

August 23, 1212.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar and Mr. Justice Napier.

PARVATANENI VENKATRAMIAH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

PARVATANENI NARAYUDU AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Minor Inam—Kudivaram right, presumption as to —Right to eject tenant.

The terms of a grant were: "We have granted 2½ kattis of manyam lands..... after having the said land measured and the boundaries marked:"

Held, that the lands themselves were not granted as inam.

If a zemindar himself has no kudivaram rights in land, he cannot grant such land as inam.

In re Gullapalli Bhabrayya, 21 M. L. J. 803; 10 M. L. T. 54; 11 Ind. Cas. 545, followed.

To establish his kudivaram right and necessarily his right to eject the tenants, an inamdar must show that he let in the tenants at the beginning of their occupation.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Temporary Subordinate Judge of Masulipatam, in Appeal Suit No. 104 of 1910, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Gudivada, in Original Suit No. 257 of 1908.

Mr. T. Prakasam, for the Appellants.

Mr. V. Ramadoss, for the Respondents.

HIRA SINGH v. LAHORI MAL.

JUDGMENT.—The only question in this case is whether the plaintiff who is a minor inamdar is also entitled to the kudivaram right in the lands from which he seeks to eject the defendants.

It has been decided in In re Bhabrayya Gulapalli (1) that when a minor inam has been carved out of a zemindari, as in this case, the presumption is that only the melvaram right was granted as an inam (see also Appeal Suit No. 137 of 1908). The inam register and the cazalet's register (Exhibits F and G) do not prove that the lands themselves were granted as inam and it is not probable that the lands themselves were so granted when the zemindar himself had presumably no rights in the kudivaram. In all these cases, the inamdar ought to show that he himself let the defendants as tenants at the beginning of their occupation of the land if he wishes the Court to hold that he owned kudivaram right also and was, therefore, entitled to eject the defendants.

The distinction sought to be drawn by the appellant's learned Counsel, Mr. T. Praksam, between the presumption to be drawn in respect of inam grants by zemindars prior to the Permanent Settlement and of such grants subsequent to the Permanent Settlement, is not borne out by the decided cases, and we are not prepared to hold that zemindars owned any kudivaram rights before the Permanent Settlement, or that rights were taken away at that time or by the decisions of Courts subsequently.

The second appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 21 M. L. J. 803; 10 M. L. T. 54; 11 Ind. Cas. 545.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 922 OF 1910.

July 22, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Shah Din and Mr. Justice Beadon.

HIRA SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

LAHORI MAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—

DIWAN SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—De facto guardian mortgaging minor nephew's property—Suit for possession—Right of nephew and sons of mortgagor to resist claim on the ground of no necessity—Joint and several liability—Necessity—Ground of attack in plaint but not pressed in appeal—Part of consideration for mortgage not for necessity—Incomplete mortgage—Incompetency of mortgagee to get possession.

In a suit for possession as mortgagee against the sons of an agriculturist, before the mortgagee can succeed, he must show that the mortgage was with consideration and for necessity.

A mortgage by the guardian of a minor is not valid unless it is proved that the minor's property was mortgaged for his benefit.

Where a minor's uncles undertake to pay his father's just debt by including it in their own bonds, and afterwards mortgage their share as well as that of the minor in the ancestral land, in consideration of that bond debt, the mortgage cannot be enforced so far as the minor's share is concerned, as such an alienation cannot be considered for his benefit.

Khaira v. Maula, 49 P. R. 1911; 136 P. W. R. 1911, 212 P. L. R. 1911; 11 Ind. Cas. 191, followed.

Where a portion of the consideration for a mortgage by a male proprietor of his ancestral holding is not for necessity, the mortgage is incomplete so far as his reversioners are concerned and on his death the mortgagee cannot maintain a suit for possession of the property on the strength of that mortgage against the reversioners.

A ground of attack, mentioned in the plaint in respect of which no issue was drawn by the first Court and which was not repeated either in the written grounds of 1st or 2nd appeal, cannot be raised at the time of argument before the Chief Court.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Jullundur, dated 21st May 1910, reversing that of the District Judge, Jullundur, dated 13th December 1909, dismissing plaintiffs' suit.

Mr. Kanwar Narain and Rai Sahib Pandit Sheo Narain, for the Appellants.

Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal and the Cross-Appeal No. 1123 of 1910 can be conveniently disposed of by one judgment. The following pedigree-table will help to an understanding of the facts of the case:—

HIRA SINGH v. LAHORI MAL.

By a registered deed, dated the 3rd October 1895, Hira Singh and Waryam Singh for themselves and as guardians of their nephew, Banta, who was then a minor, mortgaged 71 kanals, 5 marlas of their ancestral land to one Bura Mal for Rs. 3,700. The mortgage was one without possession, but it was stipulated that if the mortgagors failed to pay interest on the mortgage-money at the rate of 3 pies per cent. per mensem for two successive harvests, the mortgagee shall be entitled to take possession. It was further agreed that in the event of Banta, minor, on attaining majority, refusing to be bound by the mortgage as regards his share of the mortgaged land, the adult mortgagors shall be bound to make good the deficiency in the mortgaged area out of khasra No. 85 of their other land in the village.

The plaintiffs, as heirs and representatives of the original mortgagee, Bura Mal, brought the present suit on the 5th June 1908, against Hira Singh and Banta and the sons of Waryam Singh for possession of the mortgaged land in lieu of Rs. 3,700 principal and Rs. 135-4-6 interest, alleging that the mortgagors had failed to pay the interest agreed upon for three successive harvests and that according to the terms of the mortgage-deed, the plaintiffs were entitled to possession of the land. They further prayed that in case Banta was held not bound by the mortgage, so far as his share in the land in suit was concerned, the deficiency might be made good out of the other land of the remaining mortgagors as provided for in the deed of mortgage. The defendants plead in substance that the suit was barred by limitation; that the mortgage was bad for want of consideration and legal necessity, and that, at any rate, it was not binding upon Banta as regards his share in the mortgaged area. The District Judge dismissed the suit as barred by limitation but on appeal the Divisional Judge held that it was within time and remanded the suit for decision on the merits. The District Judge again dismissed the suit holding that it was not proved that the mortgage had been effected for consideration and legal necessity. On appeal by the plaintiffs, the Divisional Judge decreed their claim in respect of Hira Singh's one-third share of the mortgaged land, but dismissed it as regards the two-third share of Banta and Waryam Singh's sons, and he further directed the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the defendants throughout.

Cross-appeals have been preferred by the parties to this Court, one by the defendant Hira Singh (No. 922) and the other by the plaintiffs (No. 1123). It would be convenient to deal first with the plaintiffs appeal. On their behalf, Bakhshi Sohan Lal has contended (1) that the Courts below ought to have decreed in favour of the plaintiffs' possession of the whole mortgaged land against all the defendants inasmuch as it was fully proved that the mortgage in dispute had been effected for consideration, and legal necessity; (2) that since the mortgage was an old one and full consideration was proved to have passed, legal necessity must be presumed to have existed for the transfer, and the onus lay upon defendants Nos. 2 to 4 to prove want of necessity; (3) that if it be held that Banta, defendant No. 2, is not bound by the mortgage, the other defendants must make good the deficiency in the mortgaged area out of their other land as provided for in the deed of mortgage.

The last contention can be disposed of in a few words. Although the question of the liability of Hira Singh and the sons of Waryam Singh to make good the deficiency out of their other land in case it was held that Banta was not bound by the mortgage as regards his share, was raised in the plaint, no issue was drawn on the point by the District Judge; and when the District Judge dismissed the plaintiffs' suit on the merits, this question was not raised by them in their grounds of appeal filed in the Divisional Court. Even in this Court the point was not taken in the written grounds of appeal and it would be obviously unfair to the respondents, who appear in person, to allow the plaintiffs' Pleader to raise it at this late stage of the case. We, therefore, disallow the last contention set out above.

The first two contentions can be dealt with together. Although the mortgage was an old one, the mortgagors have been in possession of the mortgaged land throughout, and since the mortgagees seek to recover possession from them, it is for the mortgagees to prove a prima facie title to such possession. As regards Hira Singh, who is a party to the deed of mortgage which is a registered one and contains a formal acknowledgment of the receipt of the mortgage-money, there is a legal presumption in favour of the passing of consideration, and the onus of non-receipt of consideration clearly lies upon him; and obviously no question of legal necessity for the mortgage can arise in his case. As against him, therefore, the prima facie title of the plaintiffs to recover possession of the mortgaged property on breach of the condition of the mortgage is complete. As regards Banta and the sons of Waryam Singh, however, the case stands upon an entirely different footing. Banta was a minor at the time when his share in the land in suit was mortgaged by Hira Singh and Waryam Singh to Bura Mal, and the plaintiffs in order to succeed against him must show that the mortgage was for his benefit. Again although Waryam Singh was a party to the mortgage deed, his sons, defendants Nos. 3 and 4, are not bound by the mortgage, (the land in suit being admittedly Waryam Singh's ancestor's property) unless both consideration and legal necessity are shown to have existed for the mortgage in question so far as their share in the land in suit is concerned. Defendants Nos. 2, 3 and 4 are not seeking as plaintiffs to have the mortgage-deed in suit set aside; they are in possession of the land, and the mortgagees, who are the plaintiffs in this suit, must affirmatively prove that the mortgage, on the strength of which they are seeking to oust the defendants from possession of the land, is a valid one as against the latter, and that their right to possession was determined under the mortgage-deed. We now proceed to deal with the question of consideration and legal necessity for the mortgage in dispute.

The details of the mortgage-money as given in the deed are:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
(1) On account of bond, dated the 28th January 1892, executed by Waryam Singh (Exhibit P 3) ...	1,050	0	0
(2) On account of bond, dated the 29th November 1894, executed by Hira Singh (Exhibit P 3) ...	2,550	0	0
(3) Received in cash before registration ...	75	0	0
(5) Registration expenses ...	25	0	0
TOTAL ...	3,700	0	0

A copy of the transliteration of the book accounts filed by the plaintiffs shows that the dealings between Bura Mal and Kehr Singh began as early as Sambat 1934, and that balances were struck from time to time and bonds executed in lieu of the amounts found due to Bura Mal on those balances. The balances of 5th Har, Sambat 1935, 5th Har, Sambat 1936, 4th Poh, Sambat 1937 and 10th Har, Sambat 1940, have been referred to by the plaintiffs' Pleader, and he has called our attention to several bonds executed separately by Kehr Singh and his three sons on different dates in respect of the debts due to Bura Mal on bahi account.

On the 10th Har, Sambat 1944, a balance of Rs. 1,273 was struck, and three separate bonds were executed on the 11th July 1833, the details of which are—(1) bond (Exhibit P 14) executed by Hira Singh for Rs. 433; (2) bond (Exhibit P 23) executed by Hakam Singh for Rs. 433; (3) bond (Exhibit 7) executed by Waryam Singh for Rs. 399. The dealings between the parties continued, until on the 28th January 1892, the amount of the debt found due by Hakam Singh to Bura Mal was Rs. 528, that due by Waryam Singh was Rs. 634 and that due by Hira Singh was Rs. 1,110. As Hakam Singh had meanwhile died, the liability for his debt was undertaken in equal shares by Waryam

Singh and Hira Singh, and on the above-mentioned date, they both executed separate bonds in favour of Bura Mal for Rs. 898-13-6 and Rs. 1,374-0-0 respectively, which sums included the amount of Rs. 264, i.e., half of Rs. 528, which each brother had undertaken to pay in liquidation of Hakam Singh's debt. Waryam Singh did not execute any other bond after January 1892, but Hira Singh executed another bond in favour of Bura Mal on the 29th November 1894, for Rs. 393. On the 3rd October 1895, when the mortgage-deed in dispute was executed, Waryam Singh owed Bura Mal, on the bond of 28th January 1892, Rs. 1,050 made up of Rs. 898 principal and Rs. 152 interest; while on the same date, Hira Singh owed him, on the bond of the 29th November 1894, Rs. 2,550, which consisted of Rs. 2,393 principal and Rs. 157 interest.

Now, as regards Banta's alleged liability under the mortgage-deed of 3rd October 1895, it is clear that since Hira Singh and Waryam Singh had, in January 1892, executed bonds in favour of Bura Mal agreeing to pay between them the sum of Rs. 528, which was then due by Hakam Singh to Bura Mal, Hakam Singh's debt was wholly wiped off and nothing was due by Banta to Bura Mal in October 1895. Whatever claims Hira Singh and Waryam Singh may have had against Banta in respect of the payment made by them towards Hakam Singh's debt, they had no power, assuming that they were Banta's de facto guardians, to mortgage on his behalf the one-third share of the land in suit, together with their own two-thirds share, to Bura Mal for a total amount of Rs. 3,700 by far the largest portion of which was due to Bura by themselves. This part of the appeal was not very seriously pressed by the plaintiffs' Pleader, and we have no hesitation in holding that the decision of the Divisional Judge as regards the non-liability of Banta's one-third share of the land is correct.

Coming now to the case of Waryam Singh's sons, it seems to us that, however praiseworthy it may have been for Waryam Singh to have undertaken the liability in respect of a half share of the debt due by Hakam Singh to Bura Mal on the 28th January 1892, his sons, defendants Nos. 3 and 4, are justified in urging that the payment of Rs. 264 by their father, by execution of a bond in liquidation of Hakam Singh's debt, did not constitute legal necessity, and that as the bond of 1892 formed the consideration for the mortgage of 1895, so far as their father was concerned, legal necessity for the sum of Rs. 410 (i.e., half of the debt due by Hakam Singh in January 1892, plus interest thereon up to the date of mortgage—see page 6 of the paper-book) out of Rs. 1,050 is not established. In our opinion, this position is unassailable; and as the bond of 28th January 1892 had been executed by Waryam Singh in favour of Bura Mal, the mortgagee, the latter, as an antecedent creditor of the mortgagor, was fixed with knowledge of the nature of the debts included in the aforesaid bond, and which formed the consideration for the subsequent mortgage. Upon this view of the case, the recent ruling of this Court in Khaira v. Maula (1), is in favour of Waryam Singh's sons; and on the authority of that case, we hold that the plaintiffs have no right to the possession of the said defendant's share of the mortgaged land. The net result of the above findings is that the decision of the Divisional Judge, dismissing the plaintiff's suit as regards the two-thirds share of the land in dispute owned by Banta and the sons of Waryam Singh, is maintained, and Appeal No. 1123 of 1910, therefore, fails and is dismissed.

Coming now to Appeal No. 922, we do not see our way to accept the argument of the defendant's Counsel that since the plaintiffs' suit has failed against Banta and the sons of Waryam Singh, it ought to be dismissed against his client Hira Singh as well. The considerations which apply in ths case of Banta and in that of Waryam Singh's sons, obviously do not operate to absolve Hira Singh from the contract of mortgage so far as his share is concerned. The full consideration for the mortgage is, in our opinion, proved to have passed and according to the terms of the mortgage-deed, Hira Singh made himself jointly and severally liable with Waryam Singh for the entire mortgage-debt, and his one-third share of the land is validly chargeable with that amount. Because the plaintiffs have been held not entitled to the possession of the share of Banta and the sons of Waryam Singh on the ground of want of necessity for the mortgage so far as they are concerned, it does not follow that Hira Singh could also resist the plaintiffs' suit for possession as regards his share of the land. The contract of mortgage as between him and the plaintiffs is perfectly valid, and it can be enforced according to its terms against his share of the mortgaged land. The further contention that the share of Hira Singh could not be charged with more than one-third share of the mortgage money is untenable, inasmuch as his share of the mortgage-money was more than two-thirds of the total amount and the deed does not, expressly or by necessary implication, limit his liability to an amount less than Rs. 3,700. The appeal of Hira Singh is, therefore, also dismissed.

(1) 49 P. R. 1911; 136 P. W. R. 1911; 212 P. L. R. 1911; 11 Ind. Cas. 191.

As regards costs, we think that as the plaintiffs had succeeded in part in his Court, the Divisional Judge was wrong in directing them to bear the costs of the defendants throughout. The most equitable order to pass, in the cirumstances, is to make the parties pay their own costs in both the lower Courts, and to dismiss both the cross-appeals in this Court with costs, and we direct accordingly.

Both appeals dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 353 OF 1911.

August 16, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wallis.

In re SOMAYAJULU RAMAMURTHI—COUNTER-PETITIONER.

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 36—Tout—Legal evidence necessary.

Before a person can be declared a tout under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, there should be legal evidence to show that he is a tout or that he is reported as such. The mere report of a Bar Association is insufficient.

Petition, under section 115 of Act V of 1908, praying the High Court to revise the order of the District Court of Ganjam, dated 1st day of December 1910, in Law Touts Enquiry as regards No. 6 Somayajulu Ramamurthi.

Mr. T. Ethiraja Mudaliar, for the Petitioner.

JUDGMENT.—Under section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, I think there should be legal evidence that the individual in question is a tout or that he is reported such and that a mere report of the Bar Association will not do. The order is set aside and remanded to lower Court for disposal according of law.

Order set aside.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 870 OF 1911.

July 30, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

NABI BAKHSH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

BHAGAT SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Alienation—Necessity—Sale of whole ancestral holding for liquidating mortgage-money and purchasing a mare to acquire some squares of land on some canal.

The sale of the whole of chahi ancestral land, which, owing to its insufficiency to maintain the holders and their families, was under mortgage, in order to pay the mortgage-debt, and to purchase a mare by means of which a tenancy of two squares of land on the Jhelum Canal was acquired, is justifiable, and the transaction is not open to question at the instance of the sons and reversioners of the holders on the ground of absence of necessity.

Shah Nawaz v. Azamat Ali, 40 P. R. 1907; 163 P. W. R. 1907; Sobha Singh v. Kishore Chand, 65 P. R. 1907; 146 P. W. R. 1907; 10 P. L. R. 1908; Nihal Singh v. Jawala, 26 P. W. R. 1907 and Gurbachan Singh v. Kura Mal, Civil Appeal No. 486 of 1899, distinguished.

Pal Singh v. Bur Singh, 65 P. R. 1910; 111 P. W. R. 1910, 7 Ind. Cas. 480; 115 P. L. R. 1910, referred to.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Sialkot Division, dated the 16th February 1911, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Sialkot, dated the 15th February 1910, dismissing plaintiffs' claim.

The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi, for the Appellants.

Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal, for the Respondents.

NABI BAKHSH v. BHAGAT SINGH.

JUDGMENT.—On 24th February 1903, Jhanda and his four brothers sold their land in Mauza Begowala, 41 kanals, 6 marlas, 6 sarsahis, for Rs. 2,000 0 0. In this suit, plaintiffs, sons of Jhanda, sue for a declaration that the sale shall not affect their reversionary rights. The lower Courts have dismissed the suit, holding the sale to be for consideration and necessity. Plaintiffs applied to this Court for revision, and as I saw no sufficient reason for holding the decision of the lower Courts to be incorrect except perhaps as regards the item of Rs. 936-0 0 paid in cash at time of registration, I admitted this case as an appeal under section 70 (1) (b) solely with regard to this item. The finding of the lower Courts is that the main portion of this sum of Rs. 936-0-0 was spent in purchasing a mare, by means of which Jhanda acquired the tenancy of two squares of land on the Jhelum Canal.

For the plaintiffs, it is urged that custom does not warrant the selling of proprietary rights in ancestral land in order to obtain the land as a tenant. Mr. Muhammed Shafi urges that Jhanda can never become full owner of the squares, that if the mare dies or is not kept in good condition, the tenancy may be forfeited ; also that Jhanda can sell the land with consent of the Collector, and so the sons are at the mercy of the father and have lost their right to control his actions. He urges that a sale of ancestral land has been held not to be justifiable in the following cases:—

(1) to take other land in mortgage [Shah Nawaz v. Azamat Ali (1)].

(2) to pre-empt other land [Sobha Singh v. Kishore Chand (2)].

(3) to take up a ferry contract [Gurbachan Singh v. Kura Mal (3)].

(4) to purchase land from a widow [Nihal Singh v. Jawala Singh (4)].

On the other hand, Mr. Sohan Lal defends the alienation as an act of good management, fully warranted by the circumstances in which the alienors found themselves. He refers to Pal Singh v. Bur Singh (5) in which a mortgage of ancestral land to raise funds for the alienor's wedding and to enable him to enlist in a Cavalry Regiment was upheld.

After considering the cases cited, I am of opinion that no hard and fast rules can be laid down to cover all cases, and that the facts of each particular case must be considered. No doubt, it may be said, as a general rule, that proprietary rights are superior to rights of occupancy, and that reversioners have a right to object to unnecessary alienations, the effect of which is to take away from them the power of controlling the dealings of the present holder of the estate. But, still, the main point to consider in each case is how far the circumstances justify the alienation. In the present case, it appears that the alienors, and their father before them, had been in debt for some time, and their financial position seems to have been getting worse and worse as time went on. The five brothers held 41 kanals of land, not a large holding; though it was nearly all chahi, but they had been reduced to mortgaging it. It is not alleged that any of the brothers was profligate or recklessly extravagant, or that they had any object in spiting their successors (two out of the five had children). Their chance of ever redeeming the land, so long as they stayed on in the village, seems to have been small indeed. Something had to be done, and the sale of a portion of the land to redeem the rest would probably have left too little land for the family to live on, which would have meant more debt and mortgage in the near future.

The arrangement come to by the family resulted in the acquisition of occupancy rights in two squares of land (a considerable area) on the Jhelum Canal, and I think the brothers were well advised in their action. As to the argument that the plaintiffs are at the mercy of their father, I note that, so far as I can see, it does not appear that Jhanda is at all likely to wish to deprive his sons of succession to him as tenant of the squares. Nor does it seem to me that Jhanda is in much danger of involuntarily losing his tenancy. The mare, no doubt, may die, at all events she will become old. But the land must yield a considerable

(1) 40 P. R. 1907; 163 P. W. R. 1907; 10 P. L. R. 1908.

(2) 65 P. R. 1907; 146 P. W. R. 1907.

(3) Civil Appeal No. 486 of 1899 decided on 14th October 1910.

(4) 26 P. W. R. 1907.

(5) 65 P. R. 1910; 111 P. W. R. 1910; 7 Ind. Cas. 480; 115 P. L. R. 1910.

income, and a new mare can be purchased. I do not believe that the Government is at all anxious to pounce down on respectable tenants, and seize the first possible opportunity of forfeiting the tenancy. Viewing all the circumstances, I agree with the lower Courts in regarding the transaction as justified by the circumstances, and I uphold the decision of the lower Courts dismissing the suit, and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.
SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 60 OF 1911.
August 7, 1912.
Present:—Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar and Mr. Justice Sadasiva Aiyar.
MOOLINTI VEERANA GOWD—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus
DEVARINTI BHIMA REDDY—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Pattadar, mortgage by—Relinquishment—Decree and sale by mortgagee after relinquishment, whether binds new pattadar—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 70—Assessment paid by mortgagee—Right to recover.

A., to whom the Government granted a patta, executed a mortgage to plaintiff and later on relinquished the land to the Government, who subsequently granted a patta to the defendant. After this, the plaintiff sued on the mortgage after the relinquishment by A., got a decree, purchased the land covered by the patta in execution and obtained a patta from the Revenue Authorities.

In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the land from the defendant on the strength of the patta granted to him:

Held, (1) that as A. relinquished in favour of Government before the plaintiff instituted the suit on the mortgage, the plaintiff's decree and sale could give him no right to recover the land against the defendant, who claimed under a title granted by Government;

(2) that the plaintiff could not recover from the defendant the assessment paid by him after he got his patta, because he did not make the payment on defendant's behalf.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bellary, in Appeal Suit No. 130 of 1908, presented against that of the Court of the District Munsif of Bellary, in Original Suit No. 69 of 1907.

Mr. S. Ranganadha Aiyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. Prakasam, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit in ejectment. The Government granted a patta to one Veerappa. The pattadar, together with a brother of his, executed a mortgage in favour of the plaintiff in March 1893. On the 5th July, the pattadar relinquished the land to the Government. It lay waste for some time and the Government afterwards granted a patta to the defendant. The plaintiff instituted a suit on his mortgage after the land had been relinquished by Veerappa, got a decree and brought the land to sale in 1900 and was afterwards able to induce the Revenue Authorities to grant him a patta. He claims to be entitled to recover the land from the defendant on the strength of the patta granted to him. The District Munsif and the Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit. The Subordinate Judge observes that the relinquishment put an end to the plaintiff's right under the mortgage. It is not necessary to decide whether the opinion is sound. Assuming that the mortgage was unaffected by the relinquishment by Veerappa, this fact would be of no use to the plaintiff. Veerappa had executed a relinquishment in favour of Government before the plaintiff instituted the suit. The plaintiff's decree and sale can give him no right to recover the land against an individual, who claims under a title granted by Government. On this ground, we uphold the decree of the lower Courts.

The plaintiff claims also to recover the assessment he paid after he got his patta. He has no cause of action against the defendant. He did not make the payment on defendant's behalf. He paid the assessment voluntarily. The second appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

RADHE KISHEN v. BHOLU MAL.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 1583 OF 1910.

July 24, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chevis.

RADHE KISHEN—PLAINTIFF—PETITIONER

versus

BHOLU MAL—DECREE-HOLDER—RESPONDENT.

Revision—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 73 (2)—Order of rateable distribution of judgment-debtor's assets among rival decree-holders in execution of decree.

An order under section 73 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, that a certain decree-holder is or is not entitled to share rateably in the assets realized from the judgment-debtor's property is not open to revision; it is immaterial whether the order has been actually carried out or not at the time of filing or hearing the revision.

Parma Nand v. Municipal Committee Lahore, 65 P. R. 1905; 130 P. L. R. 1905; Punjab National Bank v. Salamat Singh, 82 P. R. 1905; 199 P. L. R. 1905 and Fazal Din v. Narain Singh, 128 P. R. 1906; 153 P. W. R. 1906, followed.

The general policy of the law and the usual practice of the Superior Courts is not to interfere on the revision side except in cases where the petitioner has no other remedy or his only alternative remedy is so cumbrous or expensive that to refer him to it would be tantamount to denying him relief.

Abdulla v. Amir-ud-Din, 76 P. R. 1902, relied upon.

Petition, under section 70 (1) (a) and (b) of Act XVIII of 1884, as amended by Act XXV of 1899, for revision of the order of the District Judge, Amritsar, dated 2nd April 1910, ordering the rateable distribution of the sale money.

Mr. Nand Lal, for the Petitioner.

Rai Bahadur Lala Sukh Dial, for Bholu Mal, and Lala Hukam Chand, for Jagan Nath, Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts are fully stated in the order of the learned District Judge. Rai Bahadur Sukh Dyal raises a preliminary objection that this Court should not interfere on revision because the petitioner will have a separate remedy under section 73. He quotes Parma Nand v. Municipal Committee, Lahore (1) and Panjab National Bank v. Salamat Singh (2) and Fazal Din v. Narain Singh (3).

Mr. Nand Lal objects that section 73 (2) is not applicable because the money has not yet been paid out to the various claimants. He attempts to distinguish Fazal Din v. Narain Singh (3) on the ground that the District Judge in the present case has not yet calculated and specified what sum each of the rival decree-holders should receive. This is only because proceedings have been stayed by this Court pending decision of this application. As soon as the records go back, the money will, no doubt, be distributed and then petitioner can pursue the remedy afforded by section 70 (2), i.e., sue the respondents for refund.

Mr. Nand Lal also urges that the District Judge has acted with material irregularity and also without jurisdiction. Granting that this is so, this application for revision might succeed on the merits if I were to entertain it, but this does not touch the preliminary objection, which is that this Court should not interfere on revision because the petitioner has another remedy. As has been pointed out in Abdulla v. Amir-ud-Din (4), the general policy of the law and the usual practice of the Superior Courts is not to interfere on the revision side, except in cases where the petitioner has no other remedy or where his only alternative remedy is so cumbrous or expensive that to refer him to it would be tantamount to denying him relief. In the present case, I also note that any decision of this application on the merits would still, so far as I can see, leave it open to the party aggrieved to bring a regular suit.

I dismiss this application, but as it has not been heard on the merits, I pass no order as to costs.

Petition dismissed.

(1) 65 P. R. 1905;130 P. L. R. 1905.
(2) 82 P. R. 1905; 199 P. L. R. 105.
(3) 153 P. W. R. 1906; 128 P. R. 1906.
(4) 76 P. R. 1902.

KALAWANTI v. BUKHAN.

PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1254 OF 1911.

February 20, 1912.

Present:—Mr. Justice Johnstone.

Musammat KALAWATI—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BUKHAN—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Restitution of conjugal rights—Hindu girl married during minority—Refusal to consummate marriage.

KALAWANTI v. BUKHAN.

A Hindu girl was married while under the age of puberty, but did not accompany her husband to his house and there was no cohabitation between the parties. On arriving at puberty, the girl refused to consummate the marriage:

Held, that the girl should be allowed freedom of choice and the husband was not entitled to a decree for restitution of conjugal rights.

Second appeal from the order of the Divisional Judge, Hoshiarpur Division, dated the 4th August 1911, reversing that of the District Judge, Kangra District dated the 8th May 1911, dismissing plaintiff's claim.

Rai Bahadur Bakhshi Sohan Lal, for the Appellant.

Bakhshi Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Neither party comes very well out of this case. The suit was one for restitution of conjugal rights as regards defendant No. 1 and an injunction as regards the other two defendants. The first Court held that the plaintiff's story was highly unsatisfactory; that he had not produced evidence which really elucidates facts; and that it is not definitely proved that plaintiff was married to defendant No. 1. The lower Appellate Court, however, decided that the factum of marriage was clear and that there was no sufficient reason for refusing a decree on the ground that there might have been some bad faith in connection with the reciprocal marriage spoken of by the parties. A decree having been thus passed in favour of plaintiff, defendant No. 1 again comes up to this Court, and, in my opinion, her appeal must succeed.

